PREFACE

To the Fourth Part of Hiſtorical Collections.

THE good Reception that Mr. Ruſhworth*'s former Volumes met with, gives the Publiſhers ground to think that theſe two laſt will fare no worſe; his Method is the ſame, his Materials as good, and the like continued Thread of Impartiality runs through the whole. The Period of Time, of which theſe two Volumes contain the Hiſtory, was one of the moſt remarkable for Tranſactions Eccleſiaſtical, Civil and Military, that ever this Nation ſaw; and the account of thoſe Tranſactions here exhibited, is more large, more particular, and more authentick, than any thing on that ſubject which hath yet appeared in publick. Our Author tells us in the beginning of this fourth part, "That the province he had undertaken, "was to conſign to Poſterity overt-acts, without either judging of their "qualities, or diving after the ſecret Reaſons of them, in aſſigning which, "Authors many times relate their own* Conceits*, rather than the true Mo-"tives which induced the Actors to ſuch Revolutions. Therefore we are not to wonder, nor to look upon our ſelves as diſappointed when we find him thus ſparing of his Reflexions and Conjectures. This want (if it may be properly call'd by that name in an impartial Hiſtorian) is ſufficiently made up by our Author's diligence in collecting the publick Papers and Debates on all ſides, and his faithfulneſs in giving true Tranſcripts of them. As this is the faireſt way of conveying Hiſtory to Poſterity, it is alſo one of the beſt helps a Reader can have, either to make juſt Reflexions, or to dive into the Cauſes of action.*

As to the Nature of the following Collections, they conſiſt not only of many valuable things printed in thoſe times, that are now only to be found in the Cloſets of the curious, but alſo of many important Papers that were never hitherto publiſhed, which Mr. Ruſhworth*'s poſt, as Secretary to Sir* Thomas Fairfax*, gave him the opportunity of having* and inſerting in his Collections. Beſides ſuch Papers, there are many remarkable Circumſtances, relating to Battels and Sieges, that the publick know little or nothing of, which are here related at large. The like is to be ſaid as to many Debates in the Armies, Parliament, Treaties, and other publick Tranſactions in the three Nations; of which our Author many times gives us the accounts of both Parties, from perſons who moved in the higheſt Spheres, and had the greateſt concern in the things related.

The diligence of our Author is demonſtrable from the bulk of his Collections, and the multitude of things that are hardly to be found any where elſe; his faithfulneſs and integrity are ſufficiently apparent, by the concurring teſtimonies of the Memorials of others, which have been publiſhed about the affairs of thoſe times: And who ever will give himſelf the trouble to peruſe what Mr. May hath writ in his Hiſtory of the Long Parliament, Mr. Whitlock and the Lord Hollis in their Memoirs, will find the moſt material Tranſactions as related in this Collection to be vouch'd by them, the two laſt having had a large ſhare in many of the moſt important affairs they write of. And tho' the Lord Hollis*, his Memoirs appear to ſome to have more of the nature of a Philippick, and declamation, full of reſentments againſt ſome perſons and things, than of an Hiſtorical Relation of matters, yet they are the more to be valued, in regard they give great light into many conſiderable actions; that noble Lord making ſuch a figure then, and being imploy'd in the management of the greateſt affairs of the times, could not but be well inform'd, and have opportunities of knowing and diſ-* covering moſt of the ſecret Springs of Reſolutions and Actions; beſides falling in with thoſe of the moderate Party, who in all Controverſies are generally moſt in the right, and fitteſt to be relyed upon, cannot be ſo liable to be ſuſpected of partiality as the high flown Cavaleer, or hot-headed Cromwellian. His Lordſhip was for reforming Abuſes, and reſtraining Arbitrary Power, not for overturning the old Engliſh Conſtitution, which made him an Enemy to thoſe who followed the contrary extreams, and provok'd him to make ſuch ſmart and ſevere reflections upon them, and their bold and unjuſtifiable deviations from their Engagements and their Duty, which being a man of Honour, Spirit, and Integrity, he could not brook. Upon this account it may juſtly be ſaid, that the beſt way to arrive at a true knowledge of the Hiſtory of that Period, is to joyn the Lord Hollis's Memoirs with theſe laſt two Volumes of Ruſhworth's Collections: The latter giving a juſt view of the Actions of thoſe times, and the former the ſecret Cauſes and Springs of them.

We come now to give a more particular account of the following Volumes, and a ſhort view of that Thread of Hiſtory which runs through the whole work, which is not ſo obvious to every eye, becauſe a multiplicity of Papers, Debates, Reſolutions, Letters, &c. interrupt or at leaſt perplex the ſeries, by diverting the thoughts and attention of ordinary Readers. This was judged ſo much the more neceſſary, becauſe the defect could not be ſupply'd by an Alphabetical Table, which only directs to particulars without any order of time.

Chap. I. The FIRST VOLUME Commences with the accompliſhment of the Deſign of new-modelling the Army, and of paſſing of the ſelf-denying Ordinance. This quite alter'd the Scene, and put the Adminiſtration of Military Affairs into new hands. In proceſs of time it brought forth likewiſe a new-modelling of the Parliament, and at laſt their total diſſolution. The ſtanding Army, which from time to time they were induced by ſpecious reaſons to continue, became their Maſters at long run, and were nothing ſo tender of invading the Priviledges of Parliament, as the Houſes were of Disbanding them; the reſult whereof was the Subverſion of the Government. The Debates in Parliament about new-modelling the Army, are entertaining and uſeful; the ſtate of the King's affairs and his ſtrength, as alſo that of the Parliament at that time, make the great Changes that afterwards happened ſo much the more obſervable. Cromwell's dextrous management to bring this Deſign about, and to baffle that of his Adverſaries, who were for laying him aſide, and Proſecuting him as an Incendiary, is here diſtinctly related. This is ſo much the more remarkable, that the Lord General, the Earl of Eſſex, the Commiſſioners of Scotland, and many others, did clearly foreſee, and as plainly foretel, that he would overturn all the meaſures then on foot to ſettle the peace and quiet of the Nations, and yet they had not Intereſt nor Credit enough to prevail againſt him in Parliament or Army. This gives us likewiſe a diſcovery of one of the Original Cauſes of Oliver's hatred to the Scottiſh Nation, under which they afterward ſmarted ſo ſeverely; and by comparing this Tranſaction with the Lord Hollis his account of it, we ſhall find that the deſtruction of the King and Government was the principal thing intended by this new Model. This appears plain from the Earl of Mancheſter's Accuſation lodged againſt Cromwel in the Houſe of Lords, which the Lord Hollis refers to as an undeniable Voucher, becauſe Oliver himſelf had imparted it to the Earl when he took him to be one of his own Party.

Chap. II. In the Second Chapter, we have an account of the actions betwixt his Majeſty's Forces, and the new-modell'd Army, from the beginning of the Year 1645. till after the Battel of Naſeby, wherein our Author, tho' of the contrary ſide, does King Charles I. Juſtice, and fairly owns that he there acted the part of a Gallant General, both for Courage and Conduct.

duct. Here alſo, as in other places, our Author entertains the Reader with the ſeveral relations of that Battel, from both the General Officers, and the Committee attending the Army. There is one remarkable Inſtance he gives us of General Fairfax*'s modeſty in refuſing to open the King's Letters that were taken after the Fight, but that* Cromwel and Ireton preſs'd him to it. The way how thoſe Letters came to be taken, is no leſs obſervable. One of the Scout-Maſter-General's Spies, being ſent by him to Oxford, to acquaint Secretary Nicholas, that the Parliament Army would riſe from before that City ſuch a day, the Secretary who thought the fellow came of his own accord, ſent him with the account of their being actually gone, to General Goring, who commanded for the King about Taunton. The General received him kindly, and thinking him a fit and truſty Meſſenger, preſs'd him to carry that Packet to the King. The Fellow ſeem'd unwilling to undertake it, (tho' nothing could have fallen out more ſuitable to his deſign) for by this means he had an opportunity of bringing them to General Fairfax. This ſingle misfortune proved fatal to his Majeſty's Intereſt, for had thoſe Letters been ſent by a faithful hand, they would have arrived in time to have prevented the Battel; for General Goring by ſtrong Arguments, adviſed the King to keep on the defenſive till he joyn'd him, which he intended ſpeedily to have done. This was not the only inconvenience that attended the miſcarriage of thoſe Letters, for they quickned General Fairfax in his Reſolutions of taking Leiceſter, and of marching to the relief of Taunton. Here you have likewiſe the account of the Weſterly Club-men, and what paſt betwixt the General and them.

Chap. III.

The Third Chapter, contains the remarkable and tedious Siege of Briſtol, with all the Circumſtances relating thereunto, and the particulars of the long Treaty betwixt Prince Rupert and the General, and the Conſequence of the ſurrender of it; his defence of his Conduct there, and the King's approbation of the ſame, againſt the inſinuations of ſome of the Royaliſts, who were diſſatisfied with the Prince's management; you have there alſo Cromwel*'s account of his taking* Baſing-Houſe; the General's account of his actions in the Weſt, taking of Dartmouth, intercepting a Packet of Letters of great importance from the Queen; of his Victory over the Lord Hopton at Torrington, which proved ſo fatal to the Kings affairs in thoſe parts; and the Treaty concluded with the ſaid Lord, for Diſbanding the remainder of his Army, which put an end to the King's Intereſt in the Weſt. At the ſame time a Packet was intercepted from Ireland, the publiſhing whereof proved very prejudicial to the King's affairs.

Chap. IV.

In the Fourth Chapter, we have an account of his Majeſty's Marches after the Battel of Naſeby, the proceedings of the Scots Army in England, and other Military Tranſactions to the end of the year 1645. The moſt remarkable of them are, his Majeſty's, being defeated by Major General Poyntz near Cheſter, the Surrender of Carliſle to the Scots, by Sir Thomas Glenham, the Surrender of Pontefract and Scarborough Caſtles to the Parliament, and the Siege of Hereford by the Scots, and why they raiſed the Siege under General Leven*'s hand. This misfortune was laid hold on as a plauſible ground of quarrelling with them, by thoſe who were enemies to them and their Cauſe, in Parliament and elſewhere; of which a particular account is given by our Author in this place. Here is alſo an account of the King's ſending the Lord* Digby with a conſiderable body of Horſe to aſſiſt the Earl of Montroſe in Scotland, who had obtained ſeveral Victories over the Parliament Forces there; and of defeating the Lord Digby by Sir John Brown the Scots Governour of Carliſle, as alſo of the total defeat given to Montroſe at Philiphaugh not long after, which gave the laſt fatal blow to the King's affairs in Scotland; here we have ſome intercepted Letters of Lord Digby to Sir Edward Hide and Lord Jermin, and one from the King to Prince Rupert, which ſet the buſineſs of the Lord Digby's Intentions towards Scotland, with the Condition of the King's Affairs, and his Reſolutions at that time in a clear light. The next conſiderable thing that offers, is the ſurpriſing of Hereford by a Stratagem, and the taking of Weſt-Cheſter on Terms, by the Parliament Forces commanded by Sir William Brereton; after this comes the defeat of the Lord Aſtley near Stow, which was the only ſtanding Force the King had left him in England; this we have an account of by Colonel Morgan, who Commanded in chief for the Parliament at that time in theſe parts.

Chap. V. The Fifth Chapter gives us an account of the moſt remarkable Parlimentary, and Civil Occurrences of the year 1645. One of thoſe that deſerves to be notic'd is the Lord Savil's Accuſation in Parliament againſt Mr. Hollis (afterwards Lord Hollis) and Mr. Whitlock, as having had private Intrigues with the King, contrary to the Truſt repoſed in them by the Parliament, when they were ſent to Treat with the King at Oxford; of which they were cleared by both Houſes. This is ſo much the more remarkable, becauſe the Lord Hollis in his Memoirs charges Cromwel and Mr. St. John, as the Contrivers of this Accuſation. We have here the Declaration of Parliament to the States of Holland, concerning their Ambaſſadours Extraordinary, whom they charge with indirect dealings, and miſrepreſenting their Proceedings to the States, of which the Parliament gives them a true account, and complain of the ſaid Ambaſſadors for making themſelves Judges of the Propoſitions treated upon with the King, when they had heard only one ſide. It is obſervable, that in this Declaration to the States, the Parliament takes notice of Endeavours that had been uſed by the Court, to engage both Armies againſt the Parliament by large promiſes, and that the Scots Army in particular had rejected the great offers of the Court with diſdain, tho' at the ſame time Cromwel and his Party did all they could (as is obſerved by the Lord Hollis,) to render the Scots ſuſpected of falling in with the King contrary to their Ingagement to the Parliament of England.

After this our Author gives us a ſecond Declaration of Parliament, concerning their proceedings with the Dutch Ambaſſadors, and complains of damage: done to Shipping and Trade by both Nations. Here we have alſo the proceedings in the Houſe about Eccleſiaſtical matters, and his Majeſties Proclamations in oppoſition thereunto; as alſo the Votes of the Houſe for ſending Propoſals of Peace to the King, and of Treating no more with him by Commiſſioners, and the King's repeated Meſſages deſiring a Perſonal Treaty, with their Reaſons againſt it, and his Majeſties Anſwers.

Chap. VI. The Sixth Chapter treats of Affairs relating to Scotland, where we have an account of Montroſe's Exploits, and his total defeat at laſt; of a Remonſtrance ſent the King by the General Aſſembly of the Church of Scotland, wherein they deal very freely and plainly with him, and of Letters from the Parliament and General Aſſembly of Scotland to the Parliament of England and the Aſſembly of Divines, their preſſing the fulfilling of Treaties, and Settlement of Religion.

Chap. VII. The Seventh Chapter Treats of Iriſh Occurrences, and of Affairs relating thereunto in the year 1645. particularly of the defeat of the Rebels in Ulſter by Sir Robert Hamilton, and the killing of the Popiſh Arch-Biſhop of Tuam, whoſe Papers being ſeiz'd, they diſcovered his Correſpondence at Rome and Paris, and the Articles agreed upon by the Earl of Glanmorgan, and the chief of the Iriſh Rebels, whereof our Author gives us a Copy at large. This is ſo much the more obſervable, becauſe that Earl pretended the Kings Authority, and was committed on that account by the Lord Digby. We have here likewiſe a Copy of that Paper which the Earl call'd his Majeſty's Authority, and a Letter from him to the King, wherein he promiſes his Majeſty ten thouſand men.

Chap. VIII.

The Eighth Chapter, contains Civil and Military Tranſactions from the beginning of the year 1646. till the King's coming to the Scots Army, and ſome paſſages depending thereupon. The firſt thing is the ſevere Vote paſt in Parliament upon a rumour, that the King intended to come privately to London. The next is the Parliamentary Debates with the Commiſſioners of Scotland, about the Propoſitions to be ſent to the King. The Papers delivered in by the Scots on that head, incenſed the Houſes to that degree, that they ordered the Preface before them, written by another hand, to be burnt by the Hangman; and iſſued out a Declaration of their Intentions to maintain the fundamental Government. Here we have an account of the Surrender of Bridgewater, Exeter, and Barnſtable to the Parliament; of the King's Letter to the Marqueſs of Ormond, about his going to the Scotch Army, and his Reaſons for ſo doing. Of the Parliaments Votes, making it Death and Confiſcation for any perſon to conceal the King; alſo their Votes upon hearing he was come to the Scotch Army; The Scotch General's Letter to the Parliament concerning it, declaring the ſurpriſe of the Army at it, and that there had been no Treaty betwixt his Majeſty and them in order thereunto. We have likewiſe the Declaration of the Scotch Commiſſioners, in behalf of their Nation to the ſame purpoſe, wherein they give Reaſons to prove the falſhood of what is alledged concerning the ſame, from the King's Letter to the Marqueſs of Ormond. After this we have the King's Meſſage from the Scots Army to the Parliament of England.

Chap. IX.

The Ninth Chapter, gives an account of the Siege and Surrender of Oxford, the Surrender of Banbury, Worceſter, Wallingford, Ragland Caſtle, Pendennis, and the taking of Conway. With many material Circumſtances relating thereunto.

Chap. X.

The Tenth Chapter, gives the Tranſactions after his Majeſty's being at Newcaſtle, betwixt him and the two Houſes and the Scots. Here we have the Marqueſs of Argyle*'s Speech to both Houſes, upon the conſent of the* Scots to the Propoſitions of Peace; the deſires of the Scots concerning their Armies in England and Ireland, and that all Armies be diſbanded; the Declaration of the Scots Army as to their Integrity; their Petition to the King, and his Majeſty's Anſwer; his Majeſty's Letter to the Marqueſs of Ormond, to treat no more with the Iriſh Rebels; the Votes of the Commons, that there was no further need of the Scots Army; Letters from the General Aſſembly of Scotland to the Parliament of England, to the City of London, and to the Aſſembly of Divines. Next the Propoſals of Peace to his Majeſty from both Houſes, the King's Anſwer to their demands; namely, that he ſhould Surrender to them the Garriſons in Ireland; the Parliaments rejecting of the French King's offers of Mediation betwixt the King and them: The carrying off the Princeſs Henrietta to France. The Lord Chancellour of Scotland*'s Speech to the King, about the Propoſitions of Peace, and his Majeſty's Anſwer to the ſaid Propoſitions.*

Chap. XI.

The Eleventh Chapter, acquaints us with the Tranſactions with the Scots, concerning the removal of their Forces out of England, the diſpoſal of his Majeſty's Perſon, and other Intervening Occurrences to the bringing of the King to Holmby Houſe. Here we have the Scots

Papers to the Parliament upon thoſe heads, their Account of the Arrears due to their Army, the Exceptions made to their Accompts, the Debates upon't, and the agreement at laſt concluded upon. This Tranſaction deſerves particular notice, becauſe it was the Subject of many differing Reflections, and the occaſion of many Invectives againſt the Scottiſh Nation, of whoſe Integrity and Reputation in the whole Management and Conduct of that affair, there ſeems to need no greater proof, than what is evident by theſe Papers, and what the Lord Hollis ſays in their vindication, “Who charges “Cromwell and his Faction with being the Authors of much Injuſtice, “Treachery, and Diſ-ingenuity towards the Scots, and Promoters of all “thoſe Slanders that were raiſed againſt them, and the occaſion of the “Country's ſuffering ſo much by their Army, which was forc'd to take “free-quarter, and levy Contributions, becauſe the Proviſions and Mony “that they ought to have had by agreement, were by means of that Faction “fraudulently detain'd from them. The deſign of the Party in treating “the Scots thus was, that they ſhould either Disband and go home, or “to provoke the Country to riſe and fall upon them, that ſo the Nations “might have been engaged in a War againſt one another, and all poſſibility of Accommodation with the King fruſtrated; all this is to be ſeen “at large in the Lord Hollis's Memoirs, pag. 66, &c. The next remarkable thing in this Chapter, is the Debates betwixt the Parliament and the Scots, about Diſpoſing of the King's Perſon; the Papers Pro and Con are inſerted; there you have the Arguments made uſe of by the Scots Commiſſioners, to perſwade the King to ſign the Propoſitions of Peace ſent him by the Parliament; His Majeſty's Anſwers; The Letter to the Duke of Hamilton; The Votes of the Houſe upon the Scots Papers; The ſeveral Speeches of the Lord Chancellour of Scotland, to the Committee of both Houſes upon that Head; The ſeiſing of the Scots Papers at the Preſs by order of both Houſes; The Anſwer of the Commons to thoſe Papers; Speeches on that Subject; The Ordinance of both Houſes for ſelling the Biſhops Lands, and the Conditions on which the Scots were to leave England. Our Author is very particular on this head, and makes it evident, that the four hundred thouſand Pounds agreed to be paid the Scots for their Arrears, had no Relation at all to any bargain or agreement about the diſpoſal of the King's Perſon, as hath been aſſerted by ſome ignorant and miſtaken Perſons, but only that upon payment of one half of that Sum, they ſhould deliver up the Garriſons they had in England and march home; and for the payment of the other half, they ſhould have the publick Faith of the Nation. Mr. Ruſhworth aſſures us, that hitherto nothing was agreed upon touching the diſpoſal of the King's Perſon, but that it was concluded on as the Commons had Voted before; that the ſame ſhould be no hinderance to the marching away of the Scots Army. This, with what the Lord Hollis ſays in his Memoirs, page 67, &c. ſets that great Tranſaction in a clear light, where he ſays expreſly, “That the Boutefeus had one hope left, “which was to quarrel at laſt about the Perſon of the King, believing “the Scots would certainly have taken his Majeſty with them into Scotland; this they knew had been ground ſufficient, and would have engaged all England againſt them, giving a Confirmation to all the Jealouſies formerly raiſed, and occaſion'd a thouſand more, and had certainly more advantaged the deſign of thoſe who thirſted after the deſtruction of the King firſt, the Scots next, and then all ſuch as deſired Peace within this Kingdom, and had made them a ſmoother way “to their damnable ends; the altering of the Government, and bringing “in a confuſion both in Church and State, than any thing that could have “happened. And a little further he adds. “But the Wiſdom of the

"Scottiſh Nation foreſaw the Inconveniencies which muſt have neceſſarily followed, had they been poſitive at that time; how they had plaid their Enemies game to their own ruin, and even ruin to his Majeſty; therefore they made for him the beſt Conditions they could, that is, for the Safety and Honour of his Perſon, and to avoid greater miſchiefs, were neceſſitated to leave him in England, and ſo march away; which they did in Feb. 1646. Then afterwards he ſays, "This gave ſuch a reputation to them, and to thoſe that appear'd for them (that is, ſo far for them, as to endeavour the doing of them right, and prevent the Practices of thoſe who ſought all means of doing them wrong) and gave ſuch a blow to the other violent Party, ſo broke their Power, and leſſen'd their Authority in Parliament, as it made way for obtaining thoſe Reſolutions which were preſently taken for Disbanding Sir Thomas Fairfax his Army.

There is another Author that had great opportunities of knowing many of the Intrigues of thoſe times, who gives further light in this matter, and plainly diſcovers how the King was impoſed upon by Cromwel and the Army, and deluded into an obſtinate Refuſal of complying with the Propoſals of the Parliament, and the Deſires of the Scots whilſt he was with them at Newcaſtle; that is Col. Joſeph Bamfeild, in his Apology Publiſhed An. 1685. who, page 16, &c. ſays, "That Cromwell, Ireton, and their Party, impoſed a Belief upon ſome of the greateſt and beſt of the King's Friends, that the Army would reſtore him upon his rejecting the Parliaments Propoſitions, &c. And that they might poſſeſs his Majeſty with the ſame opinion, they conniv'd at the eſcape of a Clergy-man (who by the circumſtances muſt be Mr. Hudſon) out of the Tower, who had credit with the King, and was an irreconcileable Enemy to the Presbyterians and Scots; This Clergyman having inſtructions from ſome of the greateſt and wiſeſt of the King's Friends, that were impoſed upon by Oliver, as before mention'd, came ſecretly to his Majeſty at Newcaſtle, prevail'd with him to reject the Parliaments Propoſals, and poſſeſt his Majeſty with hopes of being reſtored by the Army; Which makes it Evident, that he was delivered by the Scots to the Committee of the Parliament of England, by the underhand procurement of the King himſelf and his Friends, without the Scots knowing any thing of thoſe ſecret managements betwixt the King and the Army. Col. Bamfeild was ſo ſenſible of the cheat contrived by Oliver and his Party in this matter, that he acquainted the Marqueſs of Hartford, one of his Majeſty's chief Friends, with it; but the Marqueſs himſelf was ſo far deluded by Oliver's falſe promiſes, that he adviſed Col. Bamfeild to forbear oppoſing it, and told him he was ſuſpected by the Clergy to favour the Presbyterians more than the King, &c. So that all the Colonel could ſay in his own vindication, or for the King's ſafety, was to no purpoſe. But to return to our Author; the other remarkable things in this Chapter, are the Parliament of Scotland's Inſtructions reſolved on, to their Commiſſioners; The ſolemn and ſeaſonable warning of their general Aſſembly, which occaſioned an alteration in thoſe Inſtructions, the King's Meſſage to both Houſes, and the Commiſſioners of Scotland for a perſonal Treaty; The Votes of both Houſes about the King; Their appointing Commiſſioners to receive him from the Scots; His Majeſty's Queries to the Scots Commiſſioners upon that head, with their Anſwers; The Parliament of Scotland's Letter to the Parliament of England about delivering his Majeſty, and the Declaration of the Kingdom of Scotland, ſhewing on what terms their Army received his Majeſty, and for what reaſons, and on what terms they delivered him to the Commiſſioners of the Parliament

ment of England: The Reaſons of their delivering him, were his not giving a ſatisfactory anſwer to their Propoſitions, their earneſt deſire to keep a good underſtanding betwixt the two Kingdoms, to prevent new troubles within the ſame, to ſatisfie the deſire of his Majeſty, of the two Houſes of Parliament in England, and of the Parliament of Scotland, for his reſidence in ſome of his Houſes, near the Parliament of England; the Terms on which they deliver'd him, were that he ſhould go to Holmby-Houſe or ſome other of his Majeſty's Houſes as ſhould be thought fit, there to remain till he give ſatisfaction to both Kingdoms in the Propoſitions of Peace, and that in the mean time there be no harm, prejudice, injury or violence done to the Royal Perſon of the King; that there be no change of Government, other than hath been thoſe three years paſt, and that his Poſterity be no ways prejudic'd in their lawful Succeſſion. To this the Kingdom of Scotland added ſome other deſires, as to which we have the Parliament of England's Anſwer, with the account of the delivering of the King, and the marching of the Scots Army out of the Kingdom.

Chap. XII.

The Twelfth Chapter, gives us the ſtate of Affairs in Ireland, during the Year 1646. in which we have an account of the defeat given by the Iriſh Rebels, to a Party of the Scots Army in the North of Ireland, Commanded by Major General Munroe, whoſe Letter with the account of the Action is laid before us, as alſo an account of a Victory obtain'd by a Party of the Scots over the Iriſh in Connaught. The next thing is the Marqueſs of Ormond's Negotiation and Proclamation of Peace with the Iriſh Rebels, and the Articles agreed on with them after a long Treaty. This is ſo much the more obſervable, that ſuch advantagious Conditions were ſo eaſily granted to the Iriſh Papiſts in that Kingdom, when his Majeſty made ſo much difficulty to agree to the Propoſitions of Peace, preſented to him from the Parliament of England and Scotland; and that the Iriſh Popiſh Biſhops and their Clergy Congratulated the Marqueſs of Ormond, upon the concluſion of that Peace, while at the ſame time, they endeavoured to incenſe him againſt the Proteſtant Party, as deſerving no ſhare of his favour. The next thing is the Lord Digby's Letter, inviting the Lord Inchiqueen to come over to the King's Intereſt, with his Anſwer; wherein the Earl complains of the Peace made with the Iriſh Rebels, as deſtructive to the Proteſtant Religion and the King's Intereſt. The Popiſh Layety were pleaſed with this Peace, but moſt of the Clergy diſliked it, Excommunicated thoſe who were for't, and the Pope's Nuncio at the head of them, declared War againſt the Marqueſs of Ormond about it. The Marqueſs came afterwards to a Treaty with the Parliament of England, which after a great deal of time ſpent about it had no ſucceſs. Our Author gives the whole Proceedings of the Treaty at large.

Chap. XIII.

The Thirteenth Chapter, contains the Proceedings of Parliament from April 1. to May 1. 1647. They took order for the Civil and Military Government of Ireland, and to raiſe Money for their relief; Col. Hammond and Pride are queſtion'd for ſeditious Petitions in the Army againſt Disbanding, and order General Fairfax to diſcharge and hinder thoſe Petitions. About this time the Earl of* Antrim and ſome of the Iriſh Rebels, the Earl of Hantley and others of 'em were defeated in Scotland. Then an account is given of ſeveral Petitions from the Country for Disbanding the Army, and the Orders of the Houſe upon them, and accordingly they Vote what Forces ſhould be continued, and what not; they order Col. Boſwell to be taken into Cuſtody, for delivering a Packet of Letters from France to the King at Holmby. Commiſſioners are ſent to the Army, to propoſe that a part of them ſhould go for Ireland, but moſt of 'em refuſed, and others inſiſted on high Conditions: The Houſe reſolve on Disbanding the Army, which they Petition againſt, appoint ſome of their own Number to give an account of their Affairs to the Parliament, and grow more and more inſolent and mutinous. Commiſſioners were afterwards ſent down to pacifie the Army, and to acquaint them that they ſhould have Money paid, their Accompts adjuſted, and an Indempnity granted before they were Disbanded.

* The Lord Hollis in his Memoirs gives a particular account of the General's and his Officers, their prevarication in this Matter.

The Lord Hollis gives a particular account of their inſolence and diſſimulation on this occaſion, and of the chief promoters of it.

Chap. XIV.

The Fourteenth Chapter, gives us an account of the Proceedings in Parliament from May to June, 1647. The Officers of the Army are ordered to return to their Commands on ſevere Penalties; ſome ſuſpicions were about this time ſpread abroad, as if the Army deſign'd to comply with the King: A Petition was preſented from ſome Citizens directed to the Commons, as the Supream Authority of Parliament, was diſliked by the Houſe: a Breef was appointed for the Relief of poor Proteſtants fled from Ireland. Falſe intelligence was ſpread abroad concerning the Army, by a Servant belonging to the Duke of Buckingham. The Scots Forces were ordered to leave Ireland. The Houſe ordered an Additional Pay to the Souldiers, before Disbanding of the Engliſh Army: The King ſends a Meſſage from Holmby to both Houſes, ſignifying that he had waited long for the Propoſitions, and had prepared an Anſwer to them. Conferences were continued at Saffron-walden, betwixt the Commiſſioners of Parliament and thoſe of the Army, who choſe common Troopers for Agitators to repreſent their Grievances to the General Officers, who were to contract them. The Lord Inchiqueen was ſucceſsful in Ireland againſt the Rebels; The King's Letter in Anſwer to the Propoſitions ſent him, was read in the Houſe. Upon advice from the Commiſſioners of the ſtubbornneſs of the Army, the Houſe Voted that all the Forces that would not go for Ireland ſhould be Disbanded, except Garriſons. Another Petition from ſome Citizens, calling the Houſe the Supream Authority, was ordered to be burnt. Upon the King's deſire to come nearer London, the Houſe of Lords Voted his coming to Oatlands. The Houſes paſs'd an Ordinance for Indempnity to the Army. A Letter was Intercepted from Mr. Aſhburnham to the King, adviſing him to forbear coming to an abſolute agreement with the Parliament, and putting him in hopes of an Army of fifty thouſand Foreigners: Farther orders were made about Disbanding of the Army, which did not pleaſe the Souldiers; ſeveral Debates follow betwixt the Parliament and the Army on that head.

Lord Hollis on this occaſion gives an account of the unfair dealings of Cromwell and other General Officers in this matter.

Chap. XV.

The Fifteenth Chapter, contains the Proceedings in Parliament from June to July, 1647. where we have the Debates betwixt them and the Army continued; The Army's refuſal to Disband, and the carrying away of the King from Holmby by a Party Commanded by Cornet Joyce, formerly a Tayler. Our Author is very particular in all thoſe Debates and Tranſactions; and of what paſs'd betwixt the Commiſſioners of Parliament that attended the King, and the Party that took him from Holmby-Houſe, and the Army's Reaſons for doing ſo: The General's account of it to the Parliament. “But the Lord Hollis in his Memoirs, and Col. Bamfeild in his Apology, charge Oliver “directly with contriving it; the latter gives great light into that matter, and a very diſtinct account of what he himſelf did to prevent it, “by acquainting the King with it, and endeavouring to effect his eſcape, “but found it unpracticable: He diſcovers likewiſe the fraudulent promiſes of Oliver and his Party to the King; their Propoſals for reſtoring him to his Throne on eaſier terms than thoſe demanded by the Parliament, with which his Majeſty and his Friends being deceived, they concurr'd with Oliver and the Army to prevent and fruſtrate all the Endeavours of Parliament and City, to compel the Army to Diſband, and to reſtore his Majeſty to the Exerciſe of his Government on ſolid Foundations.

But to return to our Author, who in the next place gives us a repreſentation of the diſſatisfactions of the Army, in relation to the Parliament's order for Disbanding them. The ſolemn Engagement of the Army the day before Joyce ſeis'd the King, and a frantic Narrative, call'd A True Impartial Narration concerning the Army's Preſervation of the King, the Author whereof ſeems to be the firſt who Publiſhed in Print that malicious Lye againſt the Scots, as if they had ſold the King. Then we have an account of Petitions from ſeveral Counties againſt Disbanding the Army, which the Lord Hollis imputes alſo to Oliver's Contrivance. The reſt is taken up in farther Debates betwixt the Houſes and the Army about Disbanding, and the force put upon them by the Army, in making them recall their Orders and Declarations, &c. concerning the Forces, the Militia of London, and raiſing Troops for the defence of themſelves and the City; their diſobeying the Orders of Parliament and deſires of the City, that they ſhould come no nearer London than twenty Miles; after this they proceed to higher degrees of Inſolence, in Demanding the Parliament to be purg'd and new-modell'd, and contrary to their former Declarations, as the Lord Hollis obſerves, they bring in a Charge againſt the eleven Members, and Demand they ſhould be Diſcharged from ſitting in the Houſe; then the Debates betwixt the Houſe and them on that head, and about the King's coming no nearer London than the Army, concluding with a Treaty betwixt the Parliament and the Army.

Chap. XVI. The Sixteenth Chapter, contains the Proceedings in Parliament from July 5. to Auguſt 1. 1647. It begins with the Treaty betwixt the Parliament and the Army, and the continued diſobedience of the latter. The King deſires to ſee his Children, which was granted; with all the Circumſtances relating thereunto. Petitions of contrary Tendencies were at this time promoted, and preſented to the Houſe from different Parties and Intereſts of London Apprentices. The buſineſs of the eleven Members was again Debated, and at laſt they deſire leave to withdraw, which was granted them. Petitions and Engagements were form'd in the City againſt the Army, who forc'd the Houſe and City to declare againſt ſuch Practices, tho' they had Voted the King ſhould come to the City, and ordered Forces to be raiſed, and the Train-bands to be arm'd, &c. About the ſame time there was a Treaty on Foot betwixt the Commiſſioners of Scotland and the Parliament, for ſetling what ſtill remain'd to be done, but it came to no effect. This Volume concludes with an account of the General's advance with his Army towards London, contrary to their former Declarations; what followed thereupon is related at large in the laſt Volume of this work.

Chap. XVII. The SECOND VOLUME, begins with the Year 1647. and comes down to the Death of King Charles I. in An. 1648. The Firſt Chapter of this Volume, is the Seventeenth in Number, and gives account of Tranſactions betwixt the Parliament and Army, with the Papers relating thereunto at large, which gives us a clear view of the Pretenſions on both ſides, and a plain Demonſtration, that no Authority is able to withſtand the Deſign of a Standing Army, under the Conduct of a Crafty General. We have an account here of the Army's March to London, and their obliging both Parliament and City to recall their former Declarations againſt it: The King thought fit to diſown his having any hand in what had been done in the City againſt the Army, and that part of the Parliament that adhered to them, which joyn'd to Col. Bamfeild's Account of this Tranſaction, ſhews how his Majeſty was trick'd into this by the Army, to the irrecoverable loſs of his Intereſt, and life at laſt. The Army having thus trod under foot the Laws of England, did the like as to the Laws of Nations, and by violence forc'd the Scots Commiſſioners to go from his Majeſty's Quarters, without ſuffering them to ſpeak to the King, which the Earl of Lauderdale one of their Number proteſted againſt, but to no purpoſe, tho' the Commiſſioners that attended the King from the Parliament of England, told the Souldiers what might be the dangerous Conſequence of ſuch a Practice. The Army march'd up to London, and brought thoſe Members of both Houſes along with them, that had retired to them upon their approach. Our Author gives us the Engagement ſign'd by thoſe Lords and Commons, the Declaration of the Army, the General's Letter to the City, &c. and an account how the Parliament and Army flattered one another at this juncture, how the General was brought to both Houſes in great ſtate, and the Votes that enſu'd upon't, declaring all to be void that the Parliament had done during the abſence of thoſe Members. Maſſey and Poyntz that were to have Commanded the City Forces, &c. againſt the Army, were forc'd to retire, and left a Declaration behind them, which our Author exhibits. In the next place he gives us an account of the Proceedings in Scotland, and Duke Hamilton's Engagement to relieve the King, vindicate the Members of Parliament unjuſtly impeach'd, and to ſettle the Presbyterian Government according to the Covenant. About this time Col. Jones obtain'd a Victory over the Rebels in Ireland: Sir John Cheeſely Secretary to the Scots Commiſſioners, was ſtop'd at Newcaſtle, of which, complaint being made to the Parliament, they ordered him to be releaſed. The Army Remonſtrates for purging the Houſe, and enquiry is made after thoſe that were to Command the Forces deſign'd to oppoſe them, and ſeveral Members of both Houſes queſtion'd for Countenancing that affair.

The Eighteenth Chapter, contains Proceedings in Parliament, from Sept. 6. to Octob. 2. 1647. The moſt remarkable of which was the Concurrence of the Scots Commiſſioners to the Propoſitions of Peace ſent to the King; The deſire of the Parliament of England that the Scotch Forces in Ireland ſhould be recall'd from thence; The Proceedings againſt ſeveral Lords, Sir John Maynard and others on an accuſation that they had deſign'd to have raiſed a new War; The Regulating of the City Militia; The King's Anſwer to the Propoſitions; Petitions for farther purging the Houſe; Debates upon information from Ireland, that the Lord Inchiqueen and the Scots deſign'd to join againſt the Army in England; The Army makes a new Declaration to the Houſe concerning their Pay, and matters of Government; The Houſes Voted the King's Anſwer a flat denial; They Impriſon the Lord Mayor, and many other Perſons on account of the force put upon the Houſe by Tumults, and ordered ſome of them to be Proſecuted for High-Treaſon. The Army move to have their Arrears levy'd on the City by way of diſtreſs.

Chap. XIX. The Nineteenth Chapter, contains the Proceedings in Parliament to the end of October, 1647. They were now about the eſtabliſhing the Army in England and Ireland, and ſetling the Government of the Church by Presbytery; The Army would not ſuffer the Duke of Richmond, and others whom the King ſent for as Privy Councellors to adviſe with, to ſtay about him; They preſs for their Pay and Arrears. The Agitators of Cromwell's and other Regiments in the Army, preſented a Paper to the General about this time, wherein they ſpeak very high, and declar'd they would part with their lives ſooner than their Liberties. Col. Jones is ſucceſsful in Ireland; Commiſſioners from Scotland attend his Majeſty at Hampton-Court; The States of Scotland reſolve to keep up their Army, becauſe of the dangers that threaten Religion, the King's Perſon, and the Union and Peace of the Nations; The Houſes Debate the Propoſitions to be ſent to the King.

Chap. XX. The Twentieth Chapter, contains the Proceedings of Parliament, and other remarkable Occurrences in November 1647. namely, Debates about providing the Army in Ireland; farther Papers from the Diſſenting Agitators of the Army in England; Their agreement together at laſt, and bold Declaration to the Parliameut, concerning the time they ſhould ſit, and the manner of Elections, &c. The alteration they demanded to be made in the Propoſitions to be ſent to the King: The Scots Commiſſioners in name of the Kingdom of Scotland, demand that a perſonal Treaty be had with the King, and that he may not be carry'd about by the Army, but have leave to come to London with Honour and Safety. Col. Jones farther ſucceſs in Ireland; The Agitators preſent a Petition to the Commons, whom they call the Supream Authority of the Nation; this the Commons Vote to be ſubverſive of the Government; The King makes his eſcape from Hampton-Court, and leaves a Letter behind him for the Parliament.

[Col. Bamfeild in his Apology, charges this upon Oliver and his Party as their Contrivance, which his Majeſty's Letter makes very probable, conſidering that he inſiſts too much upon ſatisfaction to the Army.]

The Houſe Votes it Death and Confiſcation for any Man to detain his Majeſty, and not deliver him to the Parliament; Col. Hammond ſends a Letter to the Lords, acquainting them that his Majeſty was come to the Iſle of Wight, and put himſelf under his Protection. The Parliament takes care that his Majeſty ſhould be provided for, and Diſſolves his Houſhold; The Army continues mutinous; His Majeſty ſends a Letter to both Houſes, deſiring a perſonal Treaty; then follows the account of Col. Hammond's Letters to the Parliament about the King; the reſt is taken up about the Propoſitions to be ſent to his Majeſty; the Demands of the Army; the Lord Inchiqueen's Victory in Ireland, and Intercepting of Letters from the Lord Digby to the Lord Taaf, which diſcover ſome Intrigues at Court.

Chap. XXI. The Twenty firſt Chapter, contains the Proceedings in Parliament from December 6. to January 1. and other Occurrences during that time; the chief of which, is a mutinous Repreſentation from the Army to the Parliament, Reflecting upon their Proceedings; a Letter from the the King to the Parliament, urging a Perſonal Treaty; The diſcovery of a new Plot againſt the Parliament; The Declaration of the Scots Commiſſioners againſt ſending the four Bills to the King; The Anſwer of both Houſes to the ſaid Declaration, and their ordering that the Printer of it be committed; Mr. Saltmarſh his Prophecy againſt the Army, and his Death ſoon after; the Diſſent of the Scots Commiſſioners againſt the four Bills preſented to the King, and a meeting in the Iſle of Wight for his reſcue.

Chap. XXII. The Twenty Second Chapter, gives an account of Proceedings in Parliament, &c. during the Month of January, 1647. The Parliament being new purged according to the deſire of the Army, they quickly come to an Agreement, and Votes paſs that no more Addreſſes ſhould be made to the King, nor no more Meſſages received from him; and in the mean time his Majeſty is ſtrictly guarded in Cariſbrook-Caſtle. They order ſuch Papers as had been taken during the War, and tending to juſtifie the Proceedings of the Parliament ſhould be Printed, particularly a Warrant in his Majeſty's own hand, for diverting the Ships deſign'd for the relief of Rochel; The Army Publiſhes a Declaration, to adhere to the Parliament in their Proceedings concerning the King, and for ſetling the Kingdom, without and againſt him, which was approved by Parliament; Ten of the Eleven Members, and Seven Lords are ordered to be proceeded againſt by Impeachment of High-Treaſon.

PART IV. VOL. I.
Beginning in 1645.

Chap. I.

Containing the Propoſals, Debates, and perfecting of the New Model of the Parliament's Army under Sir Thomas Fairfax, Commander in Chief: And the State of the King's Affairs and Strength, as alſo the Parliament's, at that time.

THE firſt Remarkable Affair which preſents it ſelf to Conſideration in the Year 1645, is the Matter of the Self-denying Ordinance (as it was called) and New-Model of the Parliament's Army; which,they deſigned and ſtruggled for,during ſome Months before; but was not compleatly agreed upon and conſented unto by both Houſes, till about the beginning of this Year. And to give the Reader a perfect deduction of this Buſineſs, we muſt look back to the 9th. of Decemb. 1644. (when it was firſt ſtarted in the Houſe) and thenceforth ſum up the particular proceedings therein.

The Author begins this Year 1645, with an Account of the Self-denying Ordinance and New Model of the Army.

The Province I have undertaken is to conſign to Poſterity Overt-Acts, (Facta, Scripta, Dicta, prout facta, ſcripta vel dicta ſunt) without either judging of their Qualities, or diving after the ſecret Reaſons of them, in aſſigning which, Authors many times relate their own Conceits, rather than the true motives which induced the Actors to ſuch Reſolutions. Yet it appears in our Collections before going, that the Two Houſes had taken notice of the bad ſucceſs of their Armies on ſeveral occaſions, and at divers places; more eſpecially of late at Dennington-Caſtle, which was generally attributed to the ill Conduct of certain Eminent Commanders, (the General Eſſex not being then preſent) of whom ſome were thought too fond of a Peace, and others over-deſirous to ſpin out the War, and others engaged in ſuch particular Feuds, that there was little vigorous Action to be expected from ſuch diſagreeing Inſtruments. And yet to ſearch too deep into paſt Miſcarriages, or determine in favour of either of thoſe that mutually Recriminated each other, might (under their then preſent Circumſtances) prove the next danger to ſuffering a Continuance of the ſame Inconveniencies. Beſides, there were of the Army-Officers (eſpecially ſince the coming in of the Scots) two apparent Parties, the firſt zealous for ſetting up Presbytery, the other (called Independents) endeavoured to decline that Eſtabliſhment; and of this latter party Lieutenant General Cromwell was eſteemed one of the Chief; and as on that ſcore he was little beloved by the Scots, ſo by reaſon of his Popularity, General Eſſex began to Entertain ſome Jealouſies of him, and therefore with the Scotch Commiſſioners had a Conſultation (about the end of November or beginning of Decemb. 1644) touching the means how to remove him. Which by Mr. Whitlock (a perſon preſent and concern'd) is related to this effect.

Jealouſies and Differences amongſt the Parliament's Commanders.

A conſult about accuſing Cromwell for an Incendiary. Whitlock's Memorials, fol. 111.

One Evening very late Maynard and Whitlock were ſent for by the Lord General to Eſſex-Houſe, where they found with him the Scot's Commiſſioners, and Mr. Hollis, Sir Philip Stapleton, Sir J. Meyrick, and divers others of his ſpecial Friends. After Civilities paſs'd, the Lord Loudon Chancellor of Scotland ſpake to them, as followeth.

The Chancellor of Scotland's Diſcourſe concerning the ſame.

Mr. Maynard, and Mr. Whitlock,

I Can aſſure you of the great opinion both my Brethren and my ſelf have of your Worth and Abilities, elſe we ſhould not have deſired this meeting with you; and ſince it is his Excellency's pleaſure, that I ſhould acquaint you with the matter upon whilke your Counſel is deſired, I ſhall obey his Commands, and briefly recite the Buſineſs to you.

You ken vary weele that General Lieutenant Cromwell is no Friend of ours, and ſince the Advance of our Army into England, he hath uſed all underhand and cunning means to take off from our Honour and Merit towards this Kingdom; an evil Requital of all our Hazards and Services: But ſo it is, and we are nevertheleſs fully ſatisfied of the Affections and Gratitude of the gude People of this Nation in the General.

It is thought requiſite for us, and for the carrying on of the Cauſe of the Tway Kingdoms, that this Obſtacle or Remora may be removed out of the way, whom we foreſee will otherwiſe be no ſmall Impediment to us, and the gude deſign we have undertaken. For he not only is no Friend to us, and to the Government of our Church, but he is alſo no well-willer to his Excellency, whom you and we all have cauſe to love and honour; and if he be permitted to go on in his ways, it may, I fear, endanger the whole Buſineſs; Therefore we are to adviſe of ſome Courſe to be taken for prevention of that miſchief.

You ken vary weele the Accord 'twixt the Twa Kingdoms, and the Union by the Solemn League and Covenant, and if any be an Incendiary between the Twa Nations, how he is to be proceeded againſt: Now the matter is, (wherein we deſire your Opinions,) what you take the meaning of this word Incendiary to be? and whether Lieutenant General Cromwell be not like an Incendiary as is meant thereby? and whilk way wud be beſt to tak to proceed againſt him, if he be proved to be ſike an Incendiary, and that will clepe his Wings from ſoaring to the prejudice of our Cauſe. Now you may ken, that by our Law in Scotland we clepe him an Incendiary, whay kindleth Coals of Contention, and raiſeth Differences in the State to the publick damage, and he is tanquam publicus Hoſtis Patriæ: Whether your Law be the ſame, or not, you ken beſt who are Mickle Learned therein, and therefore with the favour of his Excellence, we deſire your Judgments in theſe Points.

To which Whitlock and Maynard ſeverally Anſwer'd, both to the ſame Effect, viz.

“That

Whitlock* and Maynard's Anſwer and Advice thereupon.

“That the word Incendiary is not much converſant in our Law, nor often met with in our Books, but more a term of the Civil Law, or of State, and ſo is to be conſidered in this Caſe: For the ſenſe of the word it was the ſame with us as his Lordſhip had expreſſed to be by the Law of Scotland, and which ex vi Termini it beareth, viz. one that raiſeth the fire of Contention in a State, or that kindles the Coals of Contention, and ſo it is taken in the Accord between the Two Kingdoms. Whether Lieut. General Cromwell be ſuch an Incendiary between theſe Two Kingdoms cannot be known but by proofs of his particular words or actions tending to the kindling this fire of Contention betwixt the Two Nations, and raiſing of Differences between us. If it can be made out by proofs, that he hath done this, then he is an Incendiary, and to be proceeded againſt for it by the Parliament, upon his being there accuſed for thoſe things: That it was not fit Perſons of ſo great Honour and Authority as the Lord General and Commiſſioners of Scotland, ſhould appear in any Buſineſs, eſpecially of an Accuſation, but ſuch as they ſhould ſee before-hand will be clearly made out, and brought to the effect intended, ſince if they ſhould be foil'd in a buſineſs of this weight, it would reflect upon their Honour and Wiſdom: That the Perſon againſt whom this Accuſation is, was to be conſidered in his preſent Condition and Parts, and Intereſt, touching which as to the Parliament, they were the more able to give their Lordſhips an Account by their conſtant attendance in the Houſe of Commons; and as for his Intereſt in the Army, his Excellency and other Gentlemen preſent, could beſt judge: That for their own parts they take Lieutenant General Cromwell to be a Gentleman of quick and ſubtle parts, and one who hath (eſpecially of late) gained no ſmall Intereſt in the Houſe of Commons; nor is he wanting of Friends in the Houſe of Peers, nor of Abilities in himſelf to manage his own part or defence to the beſt Advantage, therefore it would be requiſite to be well prepared againſt him before he be brought upon the Stage. That in their private Obſervations they do not know of any Particulars as will amount to ſo a clear proof as will ſatisfie the Houſe of Commons in the Caſe of Lieutenant General Cromwell (according to our Law, and in the courſe of proceedings in Parliament) that he is an Incendiary, and to be puniſhed accordingly. And therefore they adviſed to defer the Accuſation, and in the mean time collect what proof might be had of Particulars, and when the ſame were prepared they ſhould be the better able to adviſe, and their Lordſhips to judge, what will be fit to be done in this matter.

Which Advice, after ſome Debate, was followed, and the buſineſs laid by. But Mr. Whitlock adds, That there was cauſe to believe, that ſome preſent at this Debate were falſe Brethren, and informed Cromwell of all that paſſed, which might make him carry on his deſigns more actively for his own Advancement. And indeed it may well be preſumed he was not like to be behind-hand in Artifices for removing of thoſe that would have removed him.

The Houſe in a Grand Committee to conſider of the ſad Condition of the Kingdom by Continuance of the War, Decemb. 9th.

But from whatever Grounds or Motives it ſprang, ſo it was that on the Ninth of Decemb. 1644, (the Parliament's Forces being then ſetled in their Winter Quarters, and moſt of the Commanders in Chief, who were Members of either Houſe of Parliament, being in Town) the Houſe of Commons took into Conſideration the ſad Condition of the Kingdom in reference to its Grievances by the Burthen of the War in caſe the Treaty for a Peace, which was then propounded (and of the ſucceſsleſs iſſue of which we have before in the former Volume given an Account) ſhould not take effect, nor the War be effectually proſecuted. After a long Debate of this matter, the Houſe Voted themſelves into a Grand Committee, where there was a general ſilence for a good ſpace of time, many looking one upon another, to ſee who would break the Ice, and ſpeak firſt in ſo tender and ſharp a Point: Amongſt whom Oliver Cromwell ſtood up, and ſpake ſhortly to this effect.

Cromwell's Speech, Dec. 9*th.*

THAT it was now a time to ſpeak, or for ever to hold the tongue: The important occaſion being no leſs than to ſave a Nation out of a Bleeding, nay, almoſt dying condition, which the long continuance of the War had already brought it into; ſo that without a more ſpeedy vigorous and effectual proſecution of the War, caſting off all lingering proceedings like Soldiers of Fortune beyond Sea, to ſpin out a War, we ſhall make the Kingdom weary of us, and hate the Name of a Parliament. For what do the Enemy ſay? Nay, what do many ſay that were Friends at the beginning of the Parliament? even this, That the Members of both Houſes have got great Places and Commands, and the Sword into their hands, and what by Intereſt in Parliament, and what by power in the Army, will perpetually continue themſelves in Grandeur, and not permit the War ſpeedily to end, leſt their own power ſhould determine with it. This I ſpeak here to our own Faces, is but what others do utter abroad behind our Backs. I am far from reflecting on any, I know the worth of thoſe Commanders, Members of both Houſes who are yet in power; but if I may ſpeak my Conſcience without reflection upon any, I do conceive if the Army be not put into another Method, and the War more vigorouſly proſecuted, the People can bear the War no longer, and will enforce you to a diſhonourable Peace. But this I would recommend to your Prudence not to inſiſt upon any Complaint or over-ſight of any Commander in Chief upon any occaſion whatſoever; for as I muſt acknowledge my ſelf Guilty of Over-ſights, ſo I know they can rarely be avoided in Military Affairs; therefore waving a ſtrict inquiry into the Cauſes of theſe things, let us apply our ſelves to the Remedy which is moſt neceſſary: And I hope, we have ſuch true Engliſh Hearts, and zealous Affections towards the General Weal of our Mother-Country, as no Members of either Houſe will ſcruple to deny themſelves and their own private Intereſts for the publick Good, nor account it to be a diſhonour done to them whatever the Parliament ſhall reſolve upon in this weighty matter.

Another ſpake to this purpoſe.

The Subſtance of another Speech at the ſame time.

WHatever is the matter (which I liſt not ſo much to inquire after) two Summers are paſt over, and we are not ſaved: Our Victories (the price of Blood invaluable) ſo gallantly gotten, and (which is more pity) ſo Graciouſly beſtowed, ſeem to have been put into a Bag with holes; what we won one time, we loſt another: The Treaſure is Exhauſted, the Country's Waſted: A Summer's Victory has proved but a Winter's Story; the Game however ſhut up with Autumn, was to be new play'd again the next Spring; as if the Blood that has been ſhed, were only to manure the Field of War for a more plentiful Crop of Contention. Mens hearts have failed them with the Obſervation of theſe things; The Cauſe whereof the Parliament has been tender of Ravelling into. But Men cannot be hindred from venting their Opinions privately, and their Fears, which are various, and no leſs variouſly expreſs'd; concerning which I determine nothing, but this I would ſay, 'tis apparent that the Forces being under ſeveral great Commanders, want of good Correſpondency amongſt the Chieftains, has oftentimes hindred the Publick Service.

Vote that no Member ſhall Enjoy any Office Military or Civil, Dec. 5*th.*

But the firſt that moved expreſly to have all Members of Parliament Excluded from Commands and Offices was Mr. Zouch Tate; wherein he was ſeconded by Sir Henry Vane Jun. and others. The Debate laſted long, but in concluſion the Grand Committee came to this Reſolution, "That no Member of either Houſe of Parlia-"ment ſhall during the War Enjoy or Execute any Office or Com"mand Military or Civil, and that an Ordinance be brought in to "that purpoſe.

A Faſt Dec. 18.

Decemb. the 11*th* the ſaid Ordinance was Reported to the Houſe by the Committee appointed to draw up the ſame: And the ſame day a Faſt for imploring a Bleſſing on the intended New Model of the Army, appointed by the Commons (and next day agreed unto by the Lords) to be held on the Eighteenth of that Month, by both Houſes in Lincolns-Inn Chappel; no Strangers, nor ſo much as their own Attendants to be admitted. And in further relation to this Buſineſs of New Moulding the Armies, the Houſe of Commons Ordered, That Letters be ſent from that Houſe to all the Aſſociated Counties forthwith to make payment of their Forces, and to give an Account of what Moneys have come into the hands of their reſpective Treaſurers, and how diſburſed.

The 12*th* of Decemb. a Petition was preſented to the Commons from many that ſtiled themſelves, Well-affected Citizens and Inhabitants within the Lines of Communication, London, taking notice of the great Care that Houſe had of the Commonwealth, and of the City in particular, expreſſing their Reſolution to aſſiſt them to the utmoſt of their power in proſecution of the Vote of Monday, Decemb. 9*th*.

The Houſe of Commons on the 14*th* took again the aforeſaid Ordinance into Conſideration, and for the freer Debate turn'd themſelves into a Grand Committee, wherein the ſame was canvaſſed very ſeriouſly on both ſides: The ſeveral Speeches of thoſe who were for promoting it, centring in the following Reaſons.

Reaſons given for this Vote and Self-denying Ordinance.

1. That upon paſſing this Ordinance the proceedings of their Armies would be more quick both in Determination and Action, when Commanders upon any diſcontent ariſing, ſhall have the leſs power to Sway and Bandy one againſt another.

2. If there be at preſent Differences between Commanders that are Parliament-men, and perhaps of ſeveral Houſes, by this Ordinance equal Juſtice is done, they are both recalled from Command, and by conſequence from further diſpute or difference, thereby preventing Diviſions in the Army, adminiſtring Advantages to the Enemy.

3. The Commanders will be the leſs able to make parties to ſecure themſelves when they have no Intereſt in the Houſes, and ſo become more eaſily removable or puniſhable, for their Neglects and Offences committed in the Army.

4. His Majeſty by his late Meſſage having acknowledged this to be the Parliament of England, both Houſes had need to be as full as they can; and by this Vote the Members taken off from other Imploys will be better able to attend the Publick Affairs in Parliament, to which they are called by Writ; and ſo the frequent Objection of the Paucity of Members at the paſſing of Votes will be prevented.

5. That by the New Model deſigned, the former Weights that obſtructed being taken off, the progreſs of the Army upon new Wheels will be more ſwift, and a ſpeedy period put to the War, which is the general deſire of the Nation.

6. Hereby the Objection, That the Members ſeek their own Profit, Honour and Power, will be prevented; when the World ſhall ſee them ſo ready to exclude themſelves from all Commands and Offices.

But

Ann. 1645.

But theſe Arguments did not ſatisfie divers Members, amongſt whom was Mr. Whitlock, who oppoſed the paſſing of the Ordinance in the Speech following.

Mr. Whitlock's Speech upon the Debate of the Self-denying Ordinance, 44.

Mr. Speaker,

I Am one of that Number of your Servants, who have no Office or Imployment but ſuch as you are about to except out of this Ordinance, nor have ambition for any; and therefore may the more freely and indifferently, yet with all Submiſſion, humbly offer my Reaſons againſt it, as that which I apprehend may prove prejudicial to your Service.

It hath been Objected that your Houſe, and the Houſe of Lords is thin and empty, and you the leſs eſteemed having ſo few Members here, many of them being imployed in Offices that they cannot attend the Houſes; but that by this Ordinance they will be at leiſure and liberty to attend the Service of the Parliament here, and the Houſes be much fuller than now they are.

I confeſs, Sir, this is fit to be remedied; but I apprehend you have a fitter way, than by this Ordinance to do it; that is, by iſſuing out new Writs for Electing new Members in the Places of thoſe who are dead, or expelled, and this will ſatisfie the Objection, and engage divers of Intereſt and Quality, the more immediately in your Service; whereas this Ordinance will diſcontent many, and the Houſes will be little the fuller by the paſſing of it.

Another Objection is, that if this Ordinance doth not paſs, the Treaty of Peace will not ſo well proceed, but the particular Intereſts of Members of Parliament may retard the ſame, but will all be taken away by this Ordinance.

I am to ſeek how this can be materially objected, when I ſuppoſe, whether this Ordinance paſs or not, yet you intend Members of Parliament to be your Commiſſioners for that Treaty, and in caſe ſome of them be Officers, they will the better underſtand your Buſineſſes, on which the Treaty will be grounded.

Another Objection is, That unleſs this Ordinance paſs, the great Work intended of New Modelling your Armies will not be ſo well carried on, for that by putting all out there will remain no exception.

I ſhould rather have argued, that by putting out all Members out of their Imployment, the exception and diſcontent would be the more General, and by leaving them ſtill in their Imployments, there would be the leſs Competition and Sollicitation for new Officers in their Rooms.

Another Objection or Argument is that the Members of Parliament, who are Officers, being of equal Power in Parliament will not be ſo obedient to your Commands as others who have ſmaller Intereſts, and would not ſo much diſpute one with another.

Surely, Sir, thoſe whoſe Intereſt is the ſame with yours, have the more reaſon to obey your Commands than others, and have more to hazard by diſobedience, than others can have, and in your Commands all your Members are involved, and it is ſtrange if they ſhould be backward to obey their own Orders.

Nor will the conteſts be ſo frequent and high between them and other Officers, as it will be between thoſe who will be of a more equal Condition.

But, Mr. Speaker, as you conſider the Inconveniencies, if this Ordinance do not paſs, ſo you will be pleaſed to conſider the Inconveniencies if it do paſs.

You will lay aſide, as brave Men, and who have ſerved you with as much Courage, Wiſdom, Faithfulneſs and Succeſs as ever Men ſerved their Country.

Our Noble Generals, the Earls of Denbigh, Warwick, Mancheſter, the Lords Roberts, Willoughby, and other Lords in your Armies, beſides thoſe in Civil Offices not excepted; and of your Members the Lord Grey, Lord Fairfax, Sir William Waller, Lieutenant General Cromwell, Mr. Hollis, Sir

Philip Stapleton, Sir William Brerton, Sir John Meyrick, and many others muſt be layed aſide if you paſs this Ordinance.

And I am to ſeek, and doubt ſo will they be, to whom you ſhall refer the New Modelling of your Armies, where to find Officers that ſhall excel, if equal theſe.

If your Judgments are that for the Publick Service it will be expedient to remove any of them from their Commands, let the ſame (if you pleaſe) be plainly made known to them from you.

Let them have what they deſerve, your Thanks for their former good Services, and they will not be offended, that you having no more Work for them, do lay them aſide with Honour.

But to do a Buſineſs of this nature (as hath been well ſaid) by a ſide-wind, is in my humble opinion, not ſo becoming your Honour and Wiſdom, as Plainneſs and Gravity, which are Ornaments to your Actions.

I ſhall conclude with the Example of the Grecians and Romans, amongſt whom, Sir, you know that the greateſt Offices of War and Peace were conferred upon their Senators, and their Reaſons were becauſe they having greater Intereſts than others, were the more capable to do them the greateſt Service. And having the ſame Intereſt with the Senate, and preſent at their Debates, they underſtood their Buſineſs the better, and were leſs apt to break that Truſt, which ſo nearly concerned their private Intereſts which was involved with the Publick, and the better they underſtood their Buſineſs the better Service might be expected from them.

Sir, I humbly ſubmit the Application to your Judgment. Your Anceſtors did the ſame, they thought the Members of Parliament fitteſt to be imployed in the greateſt Offices: I hope you will be of the ſame Judgment, and not at this time to paſs this Ordinance, and thereby to diſcourage your faithful Servants.

The Ordinance paſs'd Decemb. 19. and ſent up to the Lords.

A Conference about it Jan. 7. 1645.

The Lords reject it, Jan. 15.

But after ſeveral Debates the Ordinance paſs'd the Houſe of Commons Decemb. 19. and on the 21*th* the ſame was ſent up to the Lords by Mr. Pierpont. But there it met with many delays, and much oppoſition, for their Lordſhips fell not into Debate of it till Decemb. 30. and then committed the Conſideration thereof to Eight Lords to Report their opinion thereof, and their Reaſons for the ſame; which being Reported to that Houſe, they on the 7*th* of January had a Conference with the Commons, and delivered in Reaſons in Writing againſt the paſſing that Ordinance, eſpecially for that the Honour of Peerage was (as they conceived) ſo much concerned therein; upon which the Commons appointed a Committee to prepare Reaſons to ſatisfie their Lordſhips concerning the ſame. And Jan. the 13*th* the whole Houſe of Commons with their Speaker went up to the Lords about the ſame Buſineſs. But the Lords the ſame day taking it into Debate, Rejected the Ordinance.

The Strength of the Army according to the New Model.

The Charge thereof.

Sir Tho. Fairfax named General, Jan. 21.

In the mean time, the Commons went on in forming a New Model of the Army, which they agreed ſhould conſiſt in the whole of One and twenty thouſand Men effective, viz. 6000 Horſe, 1000 Dragoons, and 14000 Foot: That the 6000 Horſe be divided into Ten Regiments: The Dragoons into Ten ſingle Companies: Every Regiment of Foot to conſiſt of at leaſt 1200 Men, and the whole Charge of this Army to be 44955 l. per Month, to be raiſed by Aſſeſſment proportionably throughout the Kingdom. On the 21*th* of January, the Commons proceeded to Nominate Commanders for their New Army, and appointed Sir Tho. Fairfax to be General, and Major Skippon to be Major-General. And on the 28*th* of January the Ordinance for Raiſing and maintaining of Forces under the Command of Sir Tho. Fairfax being compleated and paſſed by the Commons, mons, was ſent up to the Lords for their Concurrence; who read it twice and Committed it, Febr. 1. and on the 4*th* of the ſame Month returned; It paſſed their Houſes, but not without Additions, viz. That all Colonels, Majors, Captains, and other Officers in the Army be Nominated and approved of by both Houſes of Parliament: That all Officers and Soldiers ſhall take the National Covenant, and upon refuſal thereof to be for ever incapacitated: That the Lord Lieutenant of every County be of the Committee of that County as to this Ordinance, &c. Theſe Proviſo's occaſioned ſeveral Conferences between the Houſes, the Commons conſented, That Sir Tho. Fairfax ſhould nominate all the Officers in his Army to be taken out of any the Armies under the Command of the Parliament, and to be approved by both Houſes. As alſo that no Commanders ſhould be admitted, but ſuch as ſhould within twenty days take the Covenant. But could not agree with the Lords, That thoſe Perſons in the Army that make a ſcruple of Conſcience to take the Covenant (not out of any diſaffection to it, or to the Parliament) ſhould therefore by a Law be for ever made Incapable of ſerving in this Army, ſince it may happen they may hereafter be ſatisfied and take the ſaid Covenant. Whereupon the word Incapable was left out, and that Ordinance on the 15*th* of February was paſs'd as followeth.

An Ordinance of the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, for raiſing and maintaining of Forces for the Defence of the Kingdom, under the Command of Sir Tho. Fairfax, Knight.

VII. And the ſaid ſeveral Committees, or any two of them are hereby reſpectively authorized from time to time to nominate one or more ſufficient and honeſt Perſons in every Diviſion or Allotment, to be Collectors of the ſaid Moneys ſo Aſſeſſed and Rated, which ſaid Collectors are hereby authorized and required to collect the ſaid Moneys ſo Aſſeſſed, and the ſaid Committee or any Six of them are hereby authorized to allow and pay to the ſaid reſpective Collectors, and their Sub-Collectors, one Peny apiece in the Pound for their pains in Collecting the ſaid Moneys, and one half Peny in the Pound to their Clerks for their pains in fair Writing the ſaid Aſſeſſments. And if any Perſon ſhall refuſe or neglect to pay any Sum of Money whereat he ſhould be Rated or Aſſeſſed, that then it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the ſaid Collectors or any of them to Levy the Sum ſo Aſſeſſed by Diſtreſs and Sale of the Goods of ſuch Perſons ſo refuſing or neglecting to pay, deducting the Sum Aſſeſſed, and the reaſonable Charges of Diſtraining, and reſtore the overplus to the Owners thereof; and to break open any Houſe, Cheſt, Trunk, Box, or other Thing, where any ſuch Goods are, and to call to their aſſiſtance any of the Trained Bands, or any other Forces within the Cities, Counties or Places where any reſiſtance ſhall be made, or any other Perſon or Perſons whatſoever; which ſaid Forces and Perſons are hereby required to be aiding and aſſiſting in the Premiſſes as they ſhall anſwer the contrary at their Perils. An Expreſs being ſent to Sir Tho. Fairfax to invite him to come up to the Parliament; He on Febr. 18. came to London in a private manner, accompanied only with Col. Sir William Conſtable, Col. Rigby, Col. Sandys, Col. Alured, and ſome few other Officers. And next day the Houſe of Commons ſending Four of their Members to him, he was by them Conducted into the Houſe, where a Chair was placed for him, but he modeſtly refuſed it, and ſtood bare whilſt the Speaker told him what he had in Command from the Houſe to deliver unto him, which was,

But in the approving the Liſt of Sir Thomas's Officers there was like to be a difference between the Two Houſes, but after ſeveral Conferences the Peers, March 18. concurred without making any Alteration at all, which was ſo acceptable to the Commons, that they ſent a Congratulatory Meſſage to the Lords, and to aſſure them of the real Affection and Endeavours of the Houſe of Commons to ſupport their Lordſhips in their Honours and Priviledges.

Ann. 1645.

Ordinance for Fairfax's Commiſſion paſs'd the Commons, March 24.

The ſame day they took into Conſideration the Commiſſion to be given to Sir Tho. Fairfax, and to that purpoſe an Ordinance in the nature of a Commiſſion was alſo read the firſt and ſecond time, and Ordered, That ſome Members of the Houſe ſhould preſently withdraw, and make ſome Alterations in a Clauſe therein, and to Report before the Riſing of the Houſe, which being done accordingly, it was Read the third time, and paſſed the ſame Morning, and ordered to be ſent up to the Lords for their Concurrence.

A Conference for puniſhment on ſuch as raiſe falſe Reports to ſet Variance between the Two Houſes.

Likewiſe a Meſſage was ſent to the Lords to deſire a Conference, which being agreed to, Sir John Evelyn Jun. in the Name of the Commons Houſe declared to their Lordſhips to this effect: That when the Commons received the laſt Meſſage, and Satisfaction from their Lordſhips, in paſſing the Liſt of the Officers for Sir Thomas Fairfax's Army, the Houſe of Commons took ſpecial notice, that their Lordſhips deſired that all united Correſpondency might be between both Houſes, and that he was now commanded by the Houſe of Commons to expreſs their deſire of an happy Concurrence, being very ſenſible, that it was the greateſt Endeavour of ſome Perſons ill affected to foment diſcontents, and to Report that the Houſe of Commons aimed to undermine their Lordſhips Priviledges, which Intention they diſclaimed and abhorred: Alſo that they did acknowledge the many Noble and Renowned Actions performed by their Lordſhips Anceſtors in defence of the Liberty of the Commons, and did take notice of the Labours and unwearied Endeavours of their Lordſhips in aſſiſting them in the preſent great Affairs of the Kingdom, for the ſafety of it, without reſpect to themſelves, or their particular Safeties, and wiſhed that puniſhment might be inflicted on thoſe that endeavoured to raiſe up ſuch a confuſion as muſt enſue the disjoining or putting variance between the Two Houſes, againſt which the Commons did proteſt, and therefore deſired, That their Lordſhips would concur with them to find out the Raiſers and Spreaders of ſuch falſe and miſchievous Reports.

Then a Declaration of the Houſe of Commons was Read to this effect:

Commons Declaration of their reſpects to the Lords.

That whereas many diſaffected Perſons had endeavoured to foment Jealouſies and Diviſions, by raiſing a Report, That the Houſe of Commons had an intention to ſubvert the Peerage of England; The Houſe of Commons do declare, that they do ſo far deteſt any ſuch deſign or intention, that they will uſe all poſſible means for the diſcovery of the Authors of ſuch Report, and to bring them to condign puniſhment. And do further declare, That as they have bound themſelves by ſeveral Proteſtations, ſo they will ever be as tender and careful to maintain the Honour and Rights of the Peerage of England, as their own.

Which Declaration being read was left with their Lordſhips.

March 31. The Ordinance for calling in of the Members from all their Military and Civil Offices, being read a third time, was ſent up to the Lords.

The Lords paſs the Ordinance Commiſſionating Sir Tho. Fairfax, Apr. 1.

Apr. 1. At a free Conference of both Houſes, Reaſons being given by the Commons for the ſpeedy paſſing the Ordinance Commiſſionating Sir Thomas Fairfax, the Lords returned to their Houſe, and paſſed the ſame without any Alterations: The purport of which Ordinance was to Conſtitute Sir Thomas Fairfax Commander in Chief of the Army, and them to lead againſt all Rebels, Traytors, and other common Enemies, and them to kill and ſlay, &c. Alſo giving him power to Exerciſe Martial Law, according to the Rules of War, and the Laws and Ordinances confirm'd this preſent Parliament, which were to be read in the Head of his Army. Likewiſe that he ſhould have Command over all Caſtles, Gariſons, or Towns Fortified, or to be Fortified, not removing or diſplacing the Governours. That he ſhould have power to nominate a Provoſt Marſhal, or Marſhals for the Executing his Commands, and to Command Waggons, Carts, or Boats, for the Carriage of his Ordinance, Ammunition, or Proviſions as there ſhall be occaſion, &c.

Officers not Imployed to have their Arrears.

Furthermore the Commons took into Conſideration the Officers not Imployed under Sir Thomas Fairfax, and Ordered that all ſuch Officers, upon Certificate of their good Carriage from Major-General Skippon ſhall have their Arrears Audited, allowed and paid.

General Eſſex, the Earl of Mancheſter, and the Earl of Denbigh, Surrender their Commiſſions, Apr. 2.

A Paper of the Earl of Eſſex's read.

Apr. 2. The Lord General Eſſex, the Earl of Mancheſter, and the Earl of Denbigh in the Houſe of Peers offered to Surrender their reſpective Commiſſions, which was accepted and approved of by that Houſe, who thereupon deſired a Conference with the Commons, where a Paper was read preſented by the Earl of Eſſex to this effect: That he having been imployed for almoſt three years paſt as Lord General of all the Parliament's Forces raiſed for the defence of the King, Parliament, and Kingdom; which Charge he had endeavoured to perform with all fidelity and ſedulity; yet conſidering by the Ordinances lately brought up to the Houſe of Peers, that it would be advantagious to the Publick, he deſired to lay down his Commiſſion, and freely to render it into the hands of thoſe from whom he received it, and deſired that ſuch of his Officers as have been faithful in their Places, and ſhould now be left out, might have a conſiderable part of their Arrearages paid unto them in as convenient time as both Houſes of Parliament ſhould think fit, and Security by the Publick Faith for the Payment of the reſt. And whereas there were three of the Officers fallen into the ill opinion of the Honourable Houſes, he moved that they might be brought to a ſpeedy Trial, that ſo either their Innocency might be manifeſted, or they might ſuffer condign puniſhment according to their Demerits.

Likewiſe at the ſaid Conference there was read and left with the Commons a Declaration of this Import, Viz.

A Declaration of the Lords that this Surrender is an acceptable Service, and a Demonſtration of the Fidelity of thoſe three Lords.

THAT whereas the Earl of Eſſex, Earl of Mancheſter, and the Earl of Denbigh, had this day in the Houſe of Peers laid down their Commiſſions, the ſaid Houſe doth declare, That they do eſteem it an acceptable Service in this Conjuncture, and an evident Demonſtration of the Fidelity and Care theſe three Honourable Lords have to the Publick, and therefore this Houſe does deſire the Houſe of Commons to concur with them therein, for that as they had received their Commiſſions from both Houſes of Parliament, ſo they laid down their Power into thoſe hands from which they received it: And they likewiſe moved, That a courſe may be taken for the Payment of their Officers Arrears.

The Self-denying Ordinance paſs'd the Lords.

Eſſex and theſe other Lords being thus by their own Conſent laid aſide from the Army, the Self-denying Ordinance was next day freely paſs'd by the Peers, as follows.

Die Jovis 3. Aprilis, 1645.

An Ordinance of the Lords and Commons Aſſembled in Parliament, for the Diſcharging of the Members of both Houſes from all Offices both Military and Civil.

The Self-denying Ordinance, Apr. 3. 1645.

BE it Ordained by the Lords and Commons Aſſembled in Parliament, That all and every of the Members of either Houſe of Parliament ſhall be, and by Authority of this Ordinance are Diſcharged at the end of forty days after the paſſing of this Ordinance, of and from all and every Office or Command Military or Civil, granted or conferred by both or either of the ſaid Houſes of this preſent Parliament. Or by any Authority derived from both or either of them ſince the 20*th* day of Novemb. 1640.

And be it further Ordained, That all other Governours and Commanders of any Iſland, Town, Caſtle, or Fort, and all other Colonels and Officers inferior to Colonels in the ſeveral Armies, not being Members of either of the Houſes of Parliament, ſhall according to their reſpective Commiſſions continue in their ſeveral Places and Commands, wherein they were imployed and intruſted the 20*th* day of March 1644, as if this Ordinance had not been made. And that the Vice-Admiral, Rear-Admiral, and all other Captains, and other inferior Officers in the Fleet, ſhall according to their ſeveral and reſpective Commiſſions continue in their ſeveral Places and Commands, wherein they were imployed and intruſted the ſaid 20*th* day of March, as if this Ordinance had not been made.

Provided always, and it is further Ordained and Declared, That during this War, the Benefit of all Offices, being neither Military nor Judicial, hereafter to be granted, or any way to be appointed to any Perſon or Perſons by both or either Houſe of Parliament, or by Authority derived from thence, ſhall go and inure to ſuch Publick Uſes as both Houſes of Parliament ſhall appoint. And the Grantees and Perſons executing all ſuch Offices ſhall be accountable to the Parliament for all the Profits and Perquiſites thereof, and ſhall have no profit out of any ſuch Office, other than a Competent Salary for the Execution of the ſame in ſuch manner as both Houſes of Parliament ſhall Order and Ordain.

Provided that this Ordinance ſhall not extend to take away the Power and Authority of any Lieutenancy or Deputy-Lieutenancy in the ſeveral Counties, Cities, or Places, or of any Cuſtos Rotulorum, or of any Commiſſion for Juſtices of Peace, or Sewers, or any Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, or Goal-delivery.

Provided always, and it is hereby declared, That thoſe Members of either Houſe, who had Offices by Grant from his Majeſty before this Parliament, and were by his Majeſty diſplaced ſitting this Parliament, and have ſince by Authority of both Houſes been reſtored, ſhall not by this Ordinance be Diſcharged from their ſaid Offices or Profits thereof, but ſhall enjoy the ſame; Any thing in this Ordinance to the contrary thereof notwithſtanding.

Fairfax to Windſor, Apr. 3.

The ſame third of April Sir Thomas Fairfax went from London to Windſor, where he appointed his General Rendezvous, having cauſed Proclamation to be made throughout London, for all Officers and Soldiers under his Command to give their Attendance there on Monday the 7*th*; and there he continued till the laſt of that Month, diligently buſie in Modelling his Army, wherein he was to Encounter the Diſcontents of thoſe that were reduced under New Commanders, and of thoſe that wholly went off from Imployment. And beſides fitting the Train for the Field, and the Attendance of the Recruits from London, an intire New Form was to be Introduced into the whole Army, the Forces that remained of the Old Army being not only to be Recruited but reduced into New Companies and Regiments, as if they had been newly raiſed.

In this work Major General Skippon did much aſſiſt him, who on Saturday the ſixth of April, being come to Reading, where were Quartered five Regiments of the Earl of Eſſex's Forces, late Lord General, and five Companies of the Lord Roberts's, he cauſed them to be drawn out into the Field, and in the Head of that which had been his Excellency's Regiment, firſt made the Speech following, Skippon's Speech to the Soldiers, Apr. 6th.

Gentlemen and Fellow-Soldiers all,

I Am now to acquaint you with the Commands of Parliament, to which in Conſcience to God, and Love to our Country, we are bound to give all chearful and ready Obedience. There is a neceſſity lyes upon us (ſince three Armies are to be reduced into one) that ſome Commanders and Officers muſt go out of their Imployments wherein they now are; it is not out of any Perſonal diſreſpect to any of you that ſhall now go off, therefore I hope you will behave your ſelves accordingly. I have received order from the Houſe of Commons to take notice what the Comportment ſhall be of thoſe who muſt now go off, and to certifie unto them: I know you will behave your ſelves like Men of Honour and Honeſty (as indeed you are) and that I ſhall have no cauſe, but to make a good Report of you, which I ſhall do according to your Carriage in this Reducement, both to the Speaker of the Honourable Houſe of Commons, and the Committee of both Kingdoms, and that particular Committee which are appointed to take you into Conſideration, and to take in your Accompts, and pay you part of your Arrears at preſent, and for the reſt, you are to have a Debentur upon the Publick Faith of the Kingdom. But if there ſhall be any among you, who out of any Perſonal reſpect, or private diſcontent ſhall make any diſturbance in this reducement, ſo as to obſtruct or hinder a work of ſo publick Concernment, I ſhall not fail to give him his true Character to the State, without Perſonal reſpect to any: And therefore let no Man deceive himſelf, for although he may perhaps occaſion ſome trouble in the preſent Buſineſs, yet in the iſſue, the greateſt miſchief will fall upon him himſelf: But I hope I ſhall find none ſuch here. There is (at preſent) a Fortnight's Pay to be paid to ſuch Officers as ſhall go off, which they ſhall preſently have upon their Muſter: And as for the Officers and Soldiers that are continued, (as ſoon as they ſhall be Muſtered and Liſted) they alſo ſhall have a Fortnight's Pay; and there are Clothes come down for the Soldiers already in part, and I aſſure you, that upon my Life and Honour there are more providing, and you ſhall be all furniſhed with Coats, Breeches, Stockings, Shoos, and ſuch Arms as you ſhall ſtand in need of, with all good uſage and conſtant Pay. And that as I have been with you hitherto, ſo upon all occaſion of Service to my God and Country, I ſhall by the help of God, be willing to live and die with you.

This Speech, and the great Eſteem the Officers and Soldiers in general had for Skippon, had ſuch Influence, that all freely ſubmitted, and thoſe five Regiments, and five Companies, were reduced into three Regiments; which work being happily effected on that Regiment which was the late General's, and ſo like to prove moſt refractory, eſpecially for that they were Quartered in a Frontier Garriſon ſo near the King's Quarters, which made the matter more hazardous; they, I ſay, being ſo quietly reduced, ſet an Example to the reſt in other Places, ſo that in a ſhort time the whole Army was brought into the New deſigned Model, notwithſtanding that at this time Dalbeer with eight Troops of Horſe, ſtood at a di-

Actions between his Majeſty's Forces and the Parliament's New Modell'd Army from the beginning of the Year 1645, untill after the Battel at Naſeby, June 14*th*.

The firſt Action of the New Model.

THE firſt Action entred upon by any of the Forces of this New-modell'd Army was on the 24*th* of April at Iſlip-Bridge in Oxfordſhire; the occaſion and manner thus.

Whilſt the Parliament's Army lay Quarter'd about Windſor, waiting for their Train of Artillery, and fitting themſelves to take the Field, Prince Rupert with a conſiderable Force, reputed 6000 Horſe and Foot, lay about Worceſter, and the Frontiers of Wales, and ſometimes made Incurſions into the Neighbouring Parts, and ſeemed to endeavour Northward; to attend whoſe motions, or fall upon their Rear if there were opportunity, Col. Maſſey advanced from his Government at Gloceſter with 400 Horſe, and 500 Foot to Lidbury; which Prince Rupert having notice of, reſolved if he could to ſurprize and cut him off, and therefore marching all Night on Monday Apr. 21*th*, came early on the 22*th* in the Morning within half a Mile of Ledbury, before any diſcovery was made to Maſſey, who inſtantly cauſed his Horſe to Mount, and drew up the Foot as well as he could; the Prince and the Lord Loughborough Charged into the Town ſeveral ways with great fury, and Maſſey fearing to be Hemm'd in, order'd his Foot to March away through the Encloſures with all the ſpeed they could, and he himſelf with the Field-Officers and ſome Horſe entertain'd the Prince, and ſecured the Retreat as well as he could for three or four Miles, yet at one place, ſome of the Princes Horſe forced their way and fell into the Rear of Maſſey's Foot, and took near 200 Priſoners in the whole Action, amongſt whom were two Captains, and Serjeant Major Bacchus, who died ſoon after of his Wounds: On the other ſide the Prince loſt ſome Commanders, and many Common Soldiers, and was diſappointed of his main End, which was utterly to have ruined Maſſey, and therefore not thinking it fit to advance Northward, retired back between Worceſter and Hereford, and vigorouſly endeavour'd to ſupply his Army with large Recruits out of thoſe Parts. But his Majeſty in Perſon, with moſt of the Train, and a conſiderable party of Foot being then in Oxford, a Convoy of Horſe, reputed about 2000, was ordered from Worceſter and thoſe Parts, to fetch them off from Oxford, that being joined they might take the Field together. Upon Advertiſement whereof the Committee of both Kingdoms at Weſtminſter (from whom the Parliament's Army was generally to receive its Orders) wrote to their General Sir Tho. Fairfax, immediately to diſpatch ſome Horſe beyond Oxford, to lye on the further ſide thereof towards Worceſter to Intercept that Convoy, and hinder the King and his Train from paſſing out to meet them; and the Charge of this Service they in their Letter particularly recommended to Lieutenant General Cromwell, who was come but the Night before from Salisbury, or thoſe Parts, to Windſor to take his Leave of the General, as ſeeming now to be as good as diſcharged of all Military Imployment by the New Ordinance, nance, which was to take effect within few days; but receiving theſe Commands, and a party of Horſe and Dragons being by the General ordered to March under his Command into Oxfordſhire, near Iſlip-Bridge he met with a Brigade of the King's Horſe conſiſting of the Queen's, the Earl of Northampton's, the Lord Wilmot's, and Col. Palmer's Regiments, who Engaged him, but in concluſion the Royaliſts were worſted, and in the purſuit many ſlain, and about 200 taken Priſoners, whereof ſeveral were Officers; alſo her Majeſty's Standard, being a Crown in the midſt, incircled with divers Flower-de-Luces wrought in Gold, with a Golden Croſs on the top, was here taken. Some of theſe ſcatter'd Troops making their way to Sir Tho. Coggins Houſe at Blechington, where Colonel Windebank (Secretary Windebank's Son) kept a Gariſon for the King with about 200 Horſe and Foot therein; Cromwell came up and faced that Houſe with Horſe and Dragoons, and Summoned the Governour with a ſharp Meſſage, (Cromwell's Troops crying out for the Foot to advance and fall on, as if there had been a Body of Foot in readineſs, whereas in truth there was none) and an Anſwer being required to be inſtantly given, or elſe the utmoſt Severity to be expected, the Governour being ſurprized, and having no Intelligence of, or elſe doubting Relief from Oxford in time, ſubmitted to a Parley, and conſented to Surrender the Houſe upon the following Articles.

Articles of Agreement upon the Surrender of Blechington Houſe between Lieutenant General Cromwell and Col. Windebank Apr. 24. Anno 1645.

Articles for Surrender of *Blechington-*Houſe, April 24*th*.

1. It is agreed that all Commiſſion-Officers of Horſe of the Gariſon, ſhall march away with their Horſe, Swords and Piſtols.

2. That the Colonel of the Gariſon, and the Major, march away with their Horſe, Sword and Piſtols, and the Captains of the Foot with Horſe and Swords only.

3. That all Soldiers in the Gariſon march away, leaving their Arms, Colours and Drums behind them; and for ſuch Officers of Horſe as retreated thither for ſafety, to march away with their Swords.

4. That Mr. Hutchinſon, Mr. Ernly, Mr. Eddes, and Mr. Pitts, being Gentlemen that came to Viſit the Governour, and not Engaged, ſhall march away with their Horſes, Swords and Piſtols.

5. That all the other Arms and Ammunition ſhall be delivered up immediately to Lieutenant General Cromwell, without Imbezilling, except as above mentioned.

6. That Safe Conduct be granted by the Lieutenant General for all above mentioned to Oxford.

7. That the Colonel's Wife, her two Servants and Chaplain, with their Horſes, march along with the Colonel.

8. That the Lady of the Houſe ſhall enjoy her Goods without Plunder, and all her Family.

There were taken in this Houſe between two and three hundred Muſquets, ſeventy Horſes, and ſome other Arms and Ammunition, which Cromwell ſent away to Aliſbury, and not having Foot with him to Gariſon the Houſe, quitted it.

Windebank Governour of Blechington-Houſe ſhot to Death.

But his Majeſty highly reſented the Surrender of this Gariſon ſo near Oxford in this manner, and Col. Windebank was for the ſame called before a Council of War, and Condemned, and tho' by the Intereſt of his Father and Friends great Applications were made for ſaving his Life, he was ſhot to death, and his Brother a Lieutenant Colonel laid down his Commiſſion.

Another Skirmiſh near Witney.

Cromwel beats up Quarters at Brampton-Buſh.

Cromwell marching from Blechington towards Witney, having notice Apr. 26. of a party of the King's Horſe that had a few hours before croſſed his way, ſent Col. John Fiennes after them, who overtook them, and after a brisk Skirmiſh took from them above one hundred Horſes, ſome Colours, and about forty Priſoners, and the next day underſtanding that a party of about 350 Foot, were marching under Command of Col. Sir William Vaughan (a Member of the Houſe of Commons) towards Radcot-Bridge, Cromwell with a ſilent March, beat up their Quarters at Brampton-Buſh, and took the ſaid Sir William the Commander in Chief, and Lieutenant Col. Littleton, Serjeant Major Lee, Five Captains, a Doctor of Divinity that was Sir William Vaughan's Chaplain, and about two hundred Common Soldiers Priſoners, whom he ſent with a Convoy to Abington.

By this time the Parliament's General Sir Thomas Fairfax was got ready to march with his Army. And on Monday, Apr. 28. the Commons paſs'd this Order:

Order for Prayers for Fairfax's Army, Apr. 28.

It is this day Ordered by the Commons Aſſembled in Parliament, That the Miniſters be deſired at the next day of Publick Humiliation, [Which was the next day] to Recommend the Army under Sir Thomas Fairfax his Command to the Protection of the Almighty, and earneſtly to ſeek to Him for a Bleſſing upon their Endeavours, and for his Merciful Aſſiſtance to them, they being now upon their March. And that this Order be ſent to the Lord Mayor of the City of London, with deſire to him to take care for the ſpeedy publiſhing thereof in all Churches and Chappels in the City of London, and within the Lines of Communication.

Fairfax to relieve Taunton.

But before this Army ſet forth, it was debated in the two Houſes, Whither they ſhould firſt bend their March? Some were for Beleaguering Oxford as being the King's Head-Quarter, a Midland Gariſon of great Importance in the heart of the Kingdom, and wherein was at preſent the King's Train of Artillery. But others repreſented an Expedition into the Weſt was more advantageous or neceſſary, eſpecially becauſe there the Parliament's Gariſon of Taunton which had long been Beſieged by Sir Richard Greenvil, and others, with conſiderable Forces, and had ſtoutly defended themſelves, and was the only Inland Gariſon which the Parliament had in all the Weſt of England, was now reduced to great Extremity, and without ſpeedy Relief muſt inevitably be loſt: And this latter Advice prevailed, the rather for that Col. Popham's Houſe a near Gariſon at Wellington was lately taken, about fifty put to the Sword, and 150 made Priſoners. And an Order paſs'd Apr. 28. for their marching thither accordingly.

And that the Army might be compleated, a Proclamation was made Apr. 29. by Beat of Drum, and Sound of Trumpet, throughout London according to an Order, of this Tenour.

Proclamation for all Soldiers to repair to their Colours.

It is this day Ordered by the Commons Aſſembled in Parliament, That upon publick Notice given by Beat of Drum, and Sound of Trumpet, all Officers and Soldiers whatſoever under the Command of

Ann. 1645.

Sir Tho. Fairfax, all Excuſes laid aſide, and notwithſtanding any Leave or pretences whatſoever, do repair to their Colours by Wedneſday the 30*th* Inſtant at Noon, at the furtheſt upon pain of Caſheering for the Officers, and the Common Soldiers death without mercy. And that the Committee for the Militia of London, and Lines of Communication, and the Committees, and Deputy Lieutenants of the Counties of Middleſex, Hartford, Eſſex, Kent and Surry, do take care for the publiſhing of this Order by Beat of Drum, and Sound of Trumpet.

He thence marched over the River to Farrington, hoping to have reduced that Place where a Gariſon was kept for the King by Lieut. Col. Burges (as Deputy-Governour under Col. Owen) but wanting Foot for that Service, ſent to Maj. Gen. Brown at Abington, who diſpatch'd thither about five or ſix hundred, whilſt in the mean time Cromwell ſent in this Summons.

Summons to Farrington.

SIR,

I Summon you to deliver into my Hands the Houſe wherein you are, and your Ammunition, with all things elſe there, together with your Perſons to be diſpoſed of as the Parliament ſhall appoint: Which if you refuſe to do, you are to expect the utmoſt Extremity of War, I reſt

Your Servant,

Oliver Cromwell.

in Farrington.

To which Anſwer was return'd,

Anſwer.

That the King had intruſted them to keep that Gariſon, and without ſpecial Order from His Majeſty Himſelf, they would not deliver it.

Cromwell then drew unto the Town of Farrington, and ſent this ſecond Summons.

Second Summons.

SIR,

I Underſtand by forty or fifty poor Men whom you forced into your Houſe, that you have many there whom you cannot Arm, and who are not ſerviceable to you: If theſe Men ſhould periſh by your means it were great Inhumanity ſurely. Honour and Honeſty requires this, that tho you be prodigal of your own Lives, yet not to be ſo of theirs. If God give you into my hands, I will not ſpare a Man of you, if you put me to a Storm.

Oliver Cromwell.

But the Deputy-Governour return'd this reſolute Anſwer:

Anſwer.

SIR,

WE have forced none into our Gariſon: We would have you know you are not now at Blechington. The Guiltleſs Blood that ſhall be ſpilt God will require at your hands that have cauſed this Unnatural War. We fear not your Storming, nor will have any more Parlies.

Your Servant,

Roger Burges.

Cromwell repulſed.

About Three of the Clock next Morning (the Abington Foot being come up) Cromwell (with them and his Dragoons) began to Aſſault, but were repuls'd with the loſs of fourteen Men kill'd, and Capt. Canon (who rear'd the firſt Scaling-Ladder and aſcended himſelf) ſelf) taken Priſoner, with an Enſign, and eight Common Soldiers, and divers Wounded.

Fairfax begins his March, Apr. 30*th.*

On Wedneſday the 30*th* of April, Fairfax's Army marched from Windſor (hitherto his Head-Quarters) to Reading, (twelve Miles); from thence on May-day to Theale, (four Miles); and on May the ſecond to Newbery, (eleven Miles); whither Cromwell went to wait upon the General. And that Night ſome Parties of Horſe being ſent out towards Hungerford and Marlborough, whereabouts General Goring was with a great Body of Horſe and Dragoons coming out of the Weſt, they took one Lieut. Col. Hacket, and ſome other Priſoners. By whoſe Examinations and other Intelligence, they diſcovered that General Goring had a deſign that Night or next Morning early to Beat up Cromwell's Quarters, whoſe Troops continued ſtill near Farringdon; whereupon Cromwell immediately haſten'd back to his Charge, and had betimes put his Men into a poſture to receive them; yet not ſo ſoon but that General Goring with a ſpeedy March came upon the Weſt of Farringdon, and recovered Radcot-Bridge. Cromwell ſent a Party of Horſe over the River to obſerve their Motions, whom the Earl of Brainford's Regiment, (under the Command of Lieut. Col. Scroop) fell upon, and repulſed them, but they being then reinforced with greater Numbers from Cromwell, forced Scroop to retire, as alſo a ſmall Party of the Prince of Wales's Regiment beat back by Major Bethel. To whoſe Relief the Lord Goring brought part of his Regiment, and of Col. Richard Nevil's (Commanded at that time by his Lieut. Col. Standiſh, Sir Bernard Gaſcoign, Capt. Medcalf, and other Officers) by whom the Parliamentarian Party was forced to Retreat, and Major Bethel (venturing too far (as was ſaid) in the dark) taken Priſoner, with two Colours of Horſe, and ſome Common Soldiers; the Lord Wentworth in the interim ſtopping the Paſs, and hindring Cromwell's ſending over any more Forces, who yet (beſides thoſe before mentioned taken Priſoners) acknowledged not their loſs to be above four or five kill'd: However General Goring kept his Advantage of the River, and Quarter'd his Horſe as far back as Lachlade, whil'ſt Cromwell making a Paſſage over New-Bridge, and having gain'd the ſame, General Goring either declining an Engagement, or rather deſirous to prevent the Raiſing of the Siege at Taunton (whither Fairfax was then advancing) marched back with all ſpeed after that Army into the Weſt.

Skirmiſh between the L. Goring and Cromwell at Radcot-Bridge May 3.

From Newbery Fairfax marched May the fourth to Andover (twelve Miles;) thence on the fifth to Salisbury (fifteen Miles;) But in the mean time had this Order ſent him from the Committee of both Kingdoms.

Order to Fairfax to ſtop his March, May the 4*th.*

SIR,

WE ſend you here encloſed, an Extract of the Intelligence we have of the Prince's Advance towards Oxford, and deſire you to Halt to Morrow about Andover with your Horſe and Foot, till you receive further Advertiſement from us, which ſhall be very ſpeedily.

Signed in the Name and by the Warrant of the Committee of both Kingdoms.

But Fairfax (intent upon Relieving Taunton) was march'd May the 5*th* to Salisbury (fifteen Miles; thence on the 6*th* to Sixepenny Hauley in Dorſetſhire (ten Miles;) and ſo on the 7*th* to Blandford (ſeven Miles.) In the mean time the Houſes being more aſſured of the Advance of Prince Rupert towards Oxford, on the 6*th* of May paſs'd an Ordinance, That Sir Tho. Fairfax ſhould forthwith ſend only a Party of about 3000 Foot, and 1500 Horſe and Dragoons to Taunton; and he and the reſt of his Army march back to Joyn Cromwell and Brown, and attend the King's Motions with their united Force.

A Party ordered to Relieve Taunton.

This Order Fairfax received at Beauford, and readily obey'd; and on May the 8*th* Commanded out a Brigade for the Relief of Taunton, conſiſting of four Regiments of Foot, viz. Col. Welden's, Col. Forteſcue's, Col. Floyd's, and Col. Ingoldsby's, under the Conduct of Col. Welden, as being Eldeſt Colonel, unto whom ſix Companies of Foot, belonging to the Gariſon of Chicheſter, Joyned themſelves about Dorcheſter, and afterwards as many Colours from Lime; in all between four and 5000 Foot, with a Body of 1800, or 2000 Horſe, viz. Col. Graves's Regiment, Col. Cook's, Col. Popham's, Col. Fitz-James's, and the Plimouth Regiment.

Col. Welden Commands the Brigade for Taunton.

Theſe marched directly on to Taunton, near which they arrived May 11*th*, upon whoſe approach the King's Forces before the Town raiſed their Siege, ſo that on Monday Morning May the 12*th*, Col. Welden with the Officers without any oppoſition entred into it, (where they found a ſad Spectacle of a flouriſhing Town almoſt ruined by Fire, and the Extremities of War, and the People nigh famiſhed for want of Food) and having ſpent ſome time with Col. Blake the Governour, they gave Order for the whole Brigade to Retreat back and take up their Quarters at Chard.

Taunton Relieved May the 12*th*.

The Houſe of Commons upon receipt of the News of Taunton's being Relieved, Ordered a Publick Thankſgiving for the ſame: And a Letter was ſent to the Town of Taunton, and the Governour, and Soldiers therein, to give them the hearty Thanks of the Parliament, for this Extraordinary Gallant Service, in maintaining the Town ſo long: And likewiſe an Order was made for beſtowing of 2000 l. upon the Soldiers of that Gariſon, for their Courage in this Service; as alſo 500 l. to be given to Col. Blake the Governour.

That which much facilitated the Raiſing this Siege was, that the King's Party had no other Information, but that Fairfax's whole Army was advancing thither, altho' indeed it was but a part, whereas if they had underſtood it to be only a Brigade, they had, in their opinion a ſtrength ſufficient to have fought them, and alſo made good the Siege; and for this miſintelligence there was ſome colour, for Fairfax with his whole Army did advance out of Blandford to Wichampton as if he had altogether deſign'd for Taunton, but then ſuddenly parting with that Commanded Brigade, wheeled about Eaſtward (marching through Incloſures, and avoiding the Champion-way, in reguard he was not well furniſh'd with Cavalry if he ſhould meet with Goring's Horſe, who were now upon their Retreat from Oxford towards the Weſt) and coming to Ringwood, May the 9*th*; thence on the 11*th* to Rumſey (fourteen Miles;) on the twelfth to Alresford (fourteen Miles more;) on the 13*th* to Whitechurch (ten miles;) on the 14*th* he reached Newbery, and there reſted his Army three days.

Fairfax's March.

During theſe Traverſes of the Parliament's Forces Weſtward, and back again, the King on the 7*th* of May with his Army left Oxford, and took the Field, His Majeſty with Prince Rupert and between ſeven and 8000 Horſe and Foot marching towards Warwickſhire, and deſigning for the Relief of Cheſter, which had long been Beſieged by Sir William Brereton; but General Goring with about 3000 Horſe and Dragoons was diſpatcht into the Weſt, that he together with the reſt of the King's Forces in thoſe Parts might ſtreighten that Party of Fairfax's Army which were gone to the Relief of Taunton, which they effected accordingly, for that whole Brigade was ſhortly after Coop'd up and Beſieged in the ſaid Town of Taunton, which ſo lately they had relieved from a former Siege.

The King takes the Field, May the 7*th*.

His Majeſty on the 15*th* of May came to Hemley, two miles beyond Sturbridge in Worceſterſhire, and there and at Droitwich reſted three or four days, whilſt Prince Rupert took in Hawkeſly Houſe (a ſmall Gariſon of the Parliaments, about ſeven or eight miles) which being Surrendred was Burnt. From Hemley His Majeſty advanced to Wolverhampton, and from thence May the 17*th* to Newport in Shropſhire; where by the way Sir William Vaughan Governour of Shrawarden Caſtle, (two miles from Shrewsbury) coming towards Bridgenorth to meet his Majeſty, fell upon ſome Shrewsbury Horſe at Wenlock, and worſted them. From Newport His Majeſty marched to Drayton (on the Borders of Cheſhire) and by that time the Army came within twenty miles of Cheſter, the Lord Byron with ſome Troops of Horſe came from that City, and aſſured His Majeſty of the Raiſing of that Siege, and that Sir William Brereton was Retreated into Lancaſhire: Whereupon His Majeſty diverted his Courſe through Staffordſhire, and Quarter'd May the 26*th* at Tutbury, and to Aſhby-de-la-zouch in Leiceſterſhire on the 27*th*, and the 28*th* to Loughborough ten miles thence, where having reſted that Night, on the 29*th* of May His Majeſty came before Leiceſter, which he took by Storm, as herein after is mentioned.

Siege of Cheſter raiſed.

The King's marches back.

For the Reader's better underſtanding the Military Tranſactions of this Juncture he muſt note, that upon Fairfax's being recall'd, and return with the greater Party of his Army out of the Weſt, the Houſes conſidered whether he ſhould be Imploy'd to ſit down before Oxford, or follow the King, who ſeemed to bend Northwards: And the former was reſolved upon: For which theſe Reaſons were urged:

The ſtate of the Parliaments Affairs and Councils at that time.

1. That the Parliament had already in the North a great Army under their Pay, of 21000 Scots Horſe and Foot.

2. That there were conſiderable Forces of theirs in Cheſhire and Lancaſhire under Sir William Brereton, which held Cheſter ſtraitly Beſieged.

3. That

Ann. 1645.

3. That in Staffordſhire, Derbyſhire, Yorkſhire, Notinghamſhire, and Lincolnſhire, there were alſo very conſiderable Forces, which might Joyn with the Scotiſh Army if there were need, and were commanded ſo to do in caſe the King advanced Northwards. Beſides a part of 2500 Horſe and Dragoons under Col. Vermuden, part of Fairfax's Army appointed to Joyn with the Scotiſh Army, becauſe they ſeemed only to want a due proportion of Horſe to Engage with the King's Army, and upon the Allotment of them to that Service, the Commiſſioners of Scotland, wrote to their General the Earl of Leven to advance; and the Committee of both Kingdoms ordered Col. Vermuden with his before mentioned Party to march into Derbyſhire, which accordingly he did, and came to the Rendezvous at the time appointed. This proviſion was held ſufficient, and more than enough, not only to ſecure and cover the Sieges of Cheſter, Pontfract, and Scarborough, (which were all then Beſieged by the Parliament) in caſe the King ſhould move Northwards, but alſo to fight the Royal Army with advantage, if need ſo required. But on the other ſide if His Majeſty ſhould tend Southward or Weſtward, Fairfax lying before Oxford, would be in the moſt convenient Poſt to Engage his Army, or obſtruct his Deſigns. But all this Fair Scheme of promiſing advantage, was interrupted and took no effect, for the Scot's Army deſigned to attend the King's motions, did not advance according to Expectation and Order; whether it were for want of Money, for which they complain'd, and much importun'd the Two Houſes, or whether they were ſomewhat diſcontented, for that ſeveral Officers of their Nation were left out of Service upon this New Model, ſo it was, that inſtead of marching Southward, they returned back into Weſtmerland. Whereupon Sir William Brereton upon the Approach of the King's Army, ſeeing no Army ready at hand, nor hopes of any to Ballance it, Raiſed the Siege of Weſtcheſter, and ſo His Majeſty ſeeing the work done to his hand, marched back to Leiceſter and took it, there being no Army to check or controll Him. Cromwell and Brown who attended his motions as far as Warwick being recall'd to aſſiſt Fairfax at the Siege, or rather Blockade of Oxford.

The cauſe of Fairfax's coming and ſitting down there, will partly appear by the following Letters and Orders ſent to him from the Committee of both Kingdoms.

Letter from the Committee of both Kingdoms to Fairfax, May 10*th*.

SIR,

WE have received your Letter of the Ninth Inſtant, and thereby take notice of your marching back, according to our Order: Since thoſe Letters of ours, we have notice that the King is marched to Worceſter, and Lieut. WE have received your Letter of the Tenth Inſtant, and thereby intimation of your being at Rumſey, and your ſtay there for the next day: And in reſpect of Goring's Return to the Weſt, and the danger we apprehend the Party gone into the Weſt, may be in thereby: We deſire you to ſtay where theſe Letters ſhall find you, if there ſhall be no inconvenience therein appear to you being upon the place, until we ſhall ſend further Orders, which ſhall be with all ſpeed.

SIR,

WE have received the welcome News of the Relief of Taunton by the Forces ſent from your Army, whereby thoſe poor People deſigned to Slaughter by their cruel Enemies, are delivered: We bleſs God for giving ſuch Succeſs to ſo weak a Party: And that the work was done without Loſs. And we return Thanks to you for the great Service you have done herein, and your ſpeedy Marches, and careful diſpatch of that Party you ſent, which came ſo ſeaſonably to the Relief of that Place: And we hope this happy beginning hath made ſuch alteration in the Affairs of the Weſt, as if it be followed with effect (of which we doubt not) will hinder the raiſing of the great Forces they promiſed themſelves there, will incourage and preſerve the People that do adhere to the Parliament, and lay a good foundation to the reducement of the whole Weſt: To which we doubt not but they will now contribute their own beſt aſſiſtance, being delivered of the Bridle that kept them in awe: And having had a ſad experience of the Cruelties of the Enemies, and taught thereby more clearly to know their own, and the Publick Intereſt, and to purſue and ſerve it.

SIR,

WE have appointed a Party of Two thouſand Horſe, and five hundred Dragoons to march to the North, for the aſſiſtance of the Scotiſh Army, to be made up of the Regiments of Col. Sidney, Col. Vermuiden, Sir Robert Pye, and Col. Fiennes; and in caſe they ſhall not make up 2000, then to fill that Number up with ſuch of the Troops now under the Command of Major Sadaſky as are fulleſt: That theſe and 500 Dragoons all under the Command of Col. Vermuiden ſhall march towards the Scotiſh Army, in caſe the King's Army ſhall march Northward. The reſt of the Forces that are left with Lieut. Gen. Cromwell are appointed to march back towards Blechington to put a Gariſon into that Houſe, and diſpoſe the Forces in the beſt way that may be for the ſtreightening of Oxford, which we have deſign'd to be Blocked up forthwith, in order to a Siege, with thoſe Forces that are at preſent with you, and with Lieut. Gen. Cromwell, and with all the Recruits that are to come up, and ſuch other Forces both of the Gariſons and other Counties as we ſhall ſend thither for that purpoſe.

We have deſigned this as the main, Abington to be preſerved; with the reſt of its Forces not already elſewhere appointed, unleſs there ſhall any eſpecial Exigency require them to be otherwiſe imployed: We deſire you therefore ſo to diſpoſe of your March as may be of moſt advantage to the deſign of Blocking up and Beſieging of Oxford. We deſire you to conſider what is neceſſary for ſuch a work, and to adviſe us thereof.

2. For the eaſe of the Country, the ſaid Commiſſioners are to endeavour that no Officer or Soldier be Quarter'd in any Place but by the Quarter-maſter, firſt ſhewing his Commiſſion, if it be required, and by what Authority he takes up ſuch Quarters; and giving a Ticket of the Names of every Perſon which he ſhall Quarter, expreſſing of what Regiment, Troop, or Company the ſame Perſon ſo Quarter'd is; and the Number of Horſes there Quarter'd, and at whoſe Houſe; together with the day of the Month, and to ſubſcribe his Name thereunto: Saving where by reaſon of the great Numbers of them they cannot be Incerted, and then their Numbers to be expreſſed in place of their Names.

A Letter to Fairfax about laying Siege to Oxford, May 17.

Sir,

We wrote unto you the Fifteenth Inſtant, giving you notice of our intention for the preſent Blocking up and future Siege of Oxford, by the encloſed Copy of the Order of both Houſes; you ſee it is now their reſolution, who have written to the Committees about it; we therefore deſire you forthwith to ſend ſuch of your Horſe as you can ſpare, leaving ſufficient to bring up your Foot, to prevent the carrying of any Proviſions into that Town; we have written alſo to that purpoſe to Lieut. General Cromwell and Major General Brown. We deſire this may be ſpeedily done, and withal to ſend us word what Proviſions you think neceſſary for that Siege, that there may be a ſpeedy Proviſion thereof. In regard this deſign is now publick, we deſire you to make all ſpeed to ſend in ſome Horſe to hinder the carrying in of Proviſion to Oxford, and the Burning and Spoiling of the Country.

Die Sabbatis 17. May 1645.

The Houſes Order the Siege of Oxford.

It was Voted, declared, and agreed, That the Lords and Commons do approve of the deſign for the ſpeedy reducement of Oxford.

Ordered by the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, That the City at a Common Council be made acquainted with this deſign, by ſome Members of both Houſes on Tueſday next at Three of the Clock in the Afternoon, and the reaſons of this deſign urged, and their concurrent Aſſiſtance deſired.

Accordingly Fairfax on the 17*th* of May advanced from Newbury to Blewbury (ten miles;) and there lay two Nights; on the 19*th* to Newnam in Oxfordſhire (nine miles;) the next day two miles further to Garſington, and on the 22*d* to Marſton, and began to Beleaguer Oxford. Capt. Gardiner with a party of Horſe and Foot Charg'd a Party of Fairfax's Horſe, Commanded by Adjut. Gen. Fleming, but was repulſed, and near two hundred of his Foot taken Priſoners. Fairfax cauſed a Breaſt-work to be raiſed on the Eaſt-ſide of Charwell, and a Bridge over the River near Marſton: Cromwell and Brown being come up, and having taken up their Quarters on that ſide, between whom and Fairfax's Forces there was by this Bridge a Communication, and the City ſtrictly Beleaguer'd on all ſides. And Fairfax having called a Council of War to debate what requiſites would be wanting for carrying on a cloſe Siege, what proviſion they concluded to be neceſſary, they gave notice to the Parliament to be ſent them down, but the ſame arrived not till the day before he received Orders to Riſe from thence, ſo that little or no Action happen'd in all the fifteen days he lay before it. For Fairfax (as he acquainted the Cloſe Committee) not conceiving himſelf ſecure, nor ſufficient for ſuch an undertaking whilſt the King was in the Field without any Army of the Parliaments to attend his Motions, declined ſo much as to Summon the Town, that ſo, if there were occaſion he might draw off with the leſs Diſhonour.

May 23. the King's Gariſon at Godſtow near Wolvercot had Order to deſert it, and the Houſes there were by the Owners ordered to be ſet on fire; but by the coming in of ſome of Fairfax's Troops, the ſame were preſerv'd, and the Governour in his Retreat towards Oxford taken Priſoner. May 24th Fairfax viewed Boſtol-Houſe, and ſent a Party to Beſiege it, where Adjutant General Flemming, being engaged in a ſingle Encounter, ſhot his Enemy, but alſo received a ſhot himſelf in the Belly, which was thought mortal, but he afterwards recovered. May 26th Sir Thomas put over four Regiments, and thirteen Carriages at the New Bridge over Charwell; His Head-Quarter was at Marſton, Cromwell's at Witeham, and Brown's at Wolvercot.

On the 28*th* of May the Committee of both Kingdoms ſent the following Letter to their General.

A Letter to Fairfax, May 28*th*.

SIR,

Upon the 25*th* of this Inſtant, the King's Army returned to Titbury, and upon Monday the 26*th*. was about Aſhby intending in probability for the Aſſociation; upon which intelligence, we have again written to L. Gen. Cromwell to repair ſpeedily to the Iſle of Ely, and to take with him four Troops of Horſe, and we deſire you to give Order accordingly. We have alſo written to the Committee of Cambridge to look to the ſecurity of their Gariſons, and to ſend their Forces to Rendezvous as L. Gen. Cromwell ſhall appoint. We have written to Col. Vermuyden (unleſs the King march Northward) to come back towards the Aſſociation with all diligence, and to joyn with ſuch other Forces, as we have appointed, for the defence thereof, and to obey ſuch further directions as he ſhall receive from this Committee, or from you. We have alſo written to Col. Maſſie to come to Burford, with what force he can, having regard to the ſecurity of his Gariſons, and thoſe parts, and holding Intelligence with you to joyn as there ſhall be occaſion. We deſire you without interrupting your proceedings for the preſent about Oxford to have your Forces in ſuch poſture as they may be ready to march for oppoſing the Enemy, and ſecurity of the Aſſociation if there ſhall be need.

The King takes Leiceſter by Storm, May the 30*th.*

His Majeſty marching back as you have heard, through Stafford-ſhire, came up to Leiceſter May 29*th.* His Highneſs Prince Rupert betimes in the Morning facing the Town with Horſe, view'd it every way, and ſuddenly girt it round: In the Afternoon his Majeſty's whole Army came up and ſat down before it, and his Highneſs ſent in a Summons, requiring them to deliver up the Town for his Majeſty, who was there in Perſon: To which towards Evening they returned a Denial, and Superſcribed thus, To the Commander in Chief of the King's Army. Orders having been given to raiſe a Battery before the New Work, the ſame by Eleven a Clock next day was finiſht, and Six great Pieces of Ordnance planted thereon, and played fiercely all that Afternoon, making a Breach by Seven a Clock in the New-Work Wall ſo wide, that Ten men might enter a-breaſt. About Ten a Clock his Highneſs Commanded the Soldiers to draw near the Works, and upon the Signal given (which was to be the Firing of thoſe Six Pieces of Cannon all at once) to fall on. They ſtorm'd the Town in five ſeveral Places at once, but the fierceſt Aſſault and moſt deſperate Service was at the beforementioned Breach in the New-Work Wall, where they came to puſh of Pike, and Col. St. George of the King's ſide, in a Gallantry came up almoſt to the mouth of a Cannon, and was by it ſhot to pieces, and Col. George Liſle who led on the Aſſailants there, was twice forced back, and he himſelf knockt down into the Ditch, yet they went on the third time, and then forced their Entrance at that Breach, tho' the Town at other Places was as good as loſt before; for the firſt that entred were Sir Bernard Aſteley; and at another Place Sir Henry Bard who Scaled the Works only with three Ladders; then his Highneſs Prince Rupert's Regiment got in, and the Ports were flung open, and the Horſe let in, and the Town Maſter'd, tho' thoſe within it made a very ſtout defence, of whom there was in all about one hundred kill'd, and near as many acknowledged by the King's party to be ſlain on their ſide. Whereas the Writers on the Parliament's Party, make the Loſs of the Royaliſts to be much greater, and that there were Buried of them in Leiceſter 709. as had been computed by the Burials there. 'Tis certain his Majeſty's Army here got abundance of excellent Plunder and Pillage; for beſides the Goods and Wares of the Townſmen, thoſe that adher'd to the Parliament round about in the Country, had ſent in thither their beſt Moveables as to a place of Security. They alſo took there about 1500 Priſoners, Fourteen Pieces of Ordnance, 500 Horſe in Service, with as many more good Horſes brought in thither as made them up 1000. 140 Barrels of Powder, with Bullet and Match proportionable. And in Money, Plate and other rich Commodities to the value of many thouſands of Pounds. The next day being Sunday, the King commanded Solemn Thanks to be given to God for his ſucceſs in taking that Town, and ſtaid there to refreſh his Army two or three days.

This Loſs of Leiceſter ſtartled the Two Houſes, and the rather becauſe at the ſame time by a conjunction of the Forces of Col. Goring, Sir Ralph Hopton, and Sir Richard Greenvile, their Brigade under Welden in the Weſt, was Beſieged in Taunton; and therefore they now began to think more earneſtly of Raiſing their Army from Oxford to prevent if they could his Majeſty from marching into the Aſſociated Counties. But in the mean time Cromwell with but four Troops of Horſe, being gone into the Iſle of Ely, and Brown ſent

July the 4*th Fairfax* received poſitive Orders to march from Oxford, to defend the Aſſociation; who forthwith ordered the Forces on the other ſide of the River to march to Iſlip, and pull'd down the New-built Bridge, and the next day June 5th the Army march'd to Marſh-Gibeon, ten miles, and in his march turned out of his way to ſee the Siege before Borſtal-Houſe, where Major-General Skippon had lain for ſome time; and ſent the following Summons.

Summons to Borſtal-Houſe.

SIR,

I ſend you this Summons before I proceed to further Extremities, to deliver up to me the Houſe of Borſtal you now hold, with all the Ordnance, Arms and Ammunition therein, for the uſe and ſervice of the Kingdom, which if you ſhall agree unto, you may expect Civilities and fair Reſpects, otherwiſe you may draw upon your ſelf thoſe Inconveniences which I deſire may be prevented. I expect your Anſwer by this Trumpet within one hour. I reſt,

The Anſwer.

SIR,

YOU have ſent unto me a Summons to Surrender this Houſe, for the Service of the Kingdom; I thought that Bait had been long e'er this very ſtale, (conſidering the King's often Declarations and Proteſtations to the contrary) now ſufficient only to cozen Women and poor ignorant people: For your Civilities as far as they are conſonant to my Honour I embrace; in this place I abſolutely apprehend them deſtructive not only to my Honour, but alſo to my conſcience: I am therefore ready to undergo all Inconveniences rather than to ſubmit to any, much leſs to thoſe ſo diſhonourable and unworthy Propoſitions: This is the Reſolution of,

Sir, your Servant,

That Night Skippon cauſed the Houſe to be Stormed, but the Moat being much deeper than they expected, the Aſſailants were beat off with Loſs, and ſo the next day raiſed that Siege alſo, and march'd after the Army, whoſe Head-Quarter was that Night at

In the mean time the Aſſociated Counties, and the Parliaments Gariſons therein, were under great apprehenſions of dangers; and Letters were Poſted from all Parts to General Fairfax to haſten him to their Aſſiſtance, ſome of which I ſhall inſert from the Originals now in my Cuſtody.

But ſince my coming into theſe parts I have been buſied to ſecure that part of the Iſle of Ely, where I conceived moſt danger to be. From Vermuyden.

May it pleaſe your Excellency,

Laſt Night upon Intelligence of the King's March towards Northampton, I came to Oundle, and am now marching to meet your Excellency, who I hear is about Brackley. The Lord ſend us a ſpeedy Conjunction, a good Engagement with bleſſed ſucceſs. Which is the earneſt Prayer of June the 6*th*. Seven in the Morning.

Your Excellency's moſt Obedient Faithful Servant,
Vermuyden.

Affairs ſtanding in this poſture, Fairfax on the 7*th* of June marched from Brickhill to Sherrington a Mile-Eaſt of Newport Pagnell, that Vermuyden with that conſiderable Body of Horſe formerly detached to Joyn the Scots, but upon their Retreat to Weſtmerland, now marching back as you have heard, might more conveniently Joyn him, and eſpecially to be on that ſide the River the better to ſerve the Aſſociation. There they reſted the next day, being Sunday, but ſent out ſeveral Parties of Horſe, who brought in Priſoners ſome Stragglers of Sir Marmaduke Langdale's Brigade, by whom they gain'd Intelligence that his Majeſty's Army continued ſtill about Daventry.

Whereupon Fairfax call'd a Council of War, by whom (amongſt other things) it was reſolved that a Letter ſhould be ſent to the Parliament to deſire them for a time to diſpenſe with Cromwell's abſence from the Houſe, and that he might Command their Horſe, an Engagement being like to happen very ſpeedily, wherein his Service might be of great uſe; which Letter was ſent by Col. Hammond, and Orders given by Votes of the Houſe to Cromwell forthwith to march to the Army accordingly, in Order to which Fairfax wrote to him the following Letter:

Cromwell ſent for.

Fairfax's Letter to Cromwell, June 11*th*.

SIR,

YOU will find by the Incloſed Vote of the Houſe of Commons a liberty given me to appoint you Lieut. Gen. of the Horſe of this Army during ſuch time as that Houſe ſhall be pleaſed to diſpenſe with your attendance, you cannot expect but that I make uſe of ſo good an advantage as I apprehend this to be to the publick good. And therefore I deſire you to make ſpeedy repair to this Army, and give order that the Troops of Horſe you had from hence, and what other Horſe or Dragoons can be ſpared from the attendance of your Foot in their coming up, march hither with convenient ſpeed; and as for any other Forces you have there, I ſhall not need to deſire you to diſpoſe of them as you ſhall find moſt for the publick advantage; which we here apprehend to be that they march toward us by the way of Bedford. We are now Quarter'd at Wotton two miles from Northampton, the Enemy ſtill at Daventry. Your Intelligence is that they intend to move on Friday, but which way we cannot yet tell. They are as we hear more Horſe than Foot, and make their Horſe their Confidence. Ours ſhall be in God, I pray make all poſſible haſte toward to Serve you,

Th. Fairfax.

The ſame day Col. Vermuyden, a Valiant Man, being return'd with his Party of Horſe, deſired General Fairfax that he might Surrender his Commiſſion, having (as he alledged) ſpecial occaſions requiring quiring his preſence beyond the Seas; which was yielded unto, and accordingly he received his Diſcharge.

Ann. 1645.

Major Gen. Skippon was deſired to draw the Form of a Battel, and the Army was divided into ſeveral Brigades of Horſe and Foot, in order to their being better diſpoſed for an Engagement. And Fairfax diſpatch'd Couriers to Sir John Gell, Col. Roſciter, and the Governours of Coventry, Warwick, Northampton and Nottingham, to give them notice of the probability of a ſudden Engagement, and to haſten them to come up with what Strength they could make to Reinforce his Army.

Fairfax's Marches.

On Wedneſday, June the 11*th*, Fairfax marched from Stonyſtratford to Wotton within three Miles of Northampton, his Majeſty continuing about Daventry, and Quartering his Troops and Carriages upon Borrough-Hill (having anciently been a place of Fortification) and 'twas imagined he had made choice thereof as advantagious to Fight upon, in caſe the Enemy durſt advance to him: But indeed his Majeſty only waited there for the return of a Party of Twelve hundred Horſe, which he had ſent as a Convoy with Proviſions gathered up in Leiceſterſhire, Northamptonſhire, &c. the better to ſecure that City againſt a Siege in caſe it ſhould be attempted, whilſt he marched for the Relief of Pontfract and Scarborough, to which he had a great inclination, eſpecially becauſe the ſame appeared more feaſible, ſince the Removal of the Scotiſh Army.

From Wotton, Fairfax ſent the following Letter that Night:

Fairfax's Letter to the Committee of both Kingdoms, June 11*th*.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

THE Army is this day marched from Stoniſtratford to Wotton, two miles from Northampton, and about nine from Daventry, where the Enemy yet remains. The ill Weather hath been ſome diſadvantage to us, but I hope a fair day may recover what a foul day loſes. It is intended that the Army move ſomething nearer the Enemy to Morrow, by which its like we may diſcover their reſolution. If they appear forward to engage, I ſhall take the beſt advice I can upon the place, but as yet I ſee no great reaſon to decline. But if the Enemy retreat Weſtward, or ſtand upon their advantage till further Supplies, which I hear they expect from the Weſt to come to them, I offer it to your Lordſhips, whether it be not fit that this Army receive what addition conveniently they may. And ſeeing we lye at as good an advantage, for marching Northward as the Enemy, being nearer to Newark their only Paſs, I think fit to propound that the Horſe of Lincolnſhire, Darby and Nottingham be drawn this way with all convenient ſpeed, for if the King go toward the Weſt, or the Weſtern Horſe come to him, we ſhall be much inferior in Horſe, being already over-numbred. I have already ſent to thoſe Horſe, but thought fit not only to give your Lordſhips notice, but deſire your aſſiſtance in the accompliſhing of this motion which appears but reaſonable to

Wotton at 10. at Night,
June 11*th*, 1645.

Your Lordſhips Humble Servant,
Tho. Fairfax.

June the 12*th*, Fairfax marched to Gilsborough, four mileſt Weſt of Northampton, and within five miles of Burrough-Hill, where his Majeſty's Army ſtill continued; to whom a Commanded Party of Horſe gave an Alarm, and by ſome Priſoners taken, underſtood that his Majeſty was diverting himſelf with Hunting, the Soldiers in no good Order, and many of their Horſes at Graſs, having no thoughts of the ſo near Advance of the Parliamentarians; yet the Alarm was ſo quickly taken through all their Quarters, that Fairfax's Foot being ſomewhat behind, and Night approaching, he did not then think fit to venture any further attempt: But being rather apprehenſive they might viſit his Quarters, mounted about Twelve that Night, and rode about the Horſe and Foot-Guards till Four in the Morning, where an odd Adventure happen'd: Having his thoughts otherwiſe buſied, he himſelf forgot the Word, and was ſtopt at the firſt Guard; whereupon declaring who he was, and requiring the Soldier that ſtood Centinel to give it him, the Fellow refuſed, ſaying, He was to demand the Word from all that paſt him, but to give it to none; and if he advanced without it, would ſhoot him. And ſo made the General ſtay in the Wet till he ſent for the Captain of the Guard to receieve his Commiſſion to give the Word; and in the end the Soldier was rewarded for his Duty and Carefulneſs.

The Convoy of Horſe ſent by the King to Oxford being that Night return'd, and this unexpected March of the Enemy up ſo cloſe to them, being in a manner a ſurprize, his Majeſty thought fit to Decamp from Burrough-Hill, deſigning on the before mentioned towards Pontfract, either judging Fairfax's Army would not follow them, or if they did, that he might fight them with more advantage after they had drawn them further Northwards. Accordingly early in the Morning his Majeſty's Army diſpatch'd their Carriages towards Harborough, fired their Huts, and bent their March thitherwards.

Fairfax holds a Council of War.

About Six a Clock the ſame Morning Fairfax called a Council of War, and in the midſt of their Debates came in Lieut. General Cromwell out of the Aſſociation with Six hundred Horſe and Dragoons, and preſently Orders were given for Drums to Beat, Trumpets to Sound to Horſe, and all their Army to draw to a Rendezvous; from whence a Party of Horſe were ſent towards Daventry, under the Command of Major Harriſon to bring further Intelligence; and another ſtrong Party under the Command of Col. Ireton to fall upon the Flank of the King's Army, if he found opportunity, whilſt Fairfax with the Main-Body marched to Flank them in the way to Harborough, and came that Night to Gilling; at which time the Van of his Majeſty's Army was at Harborough, the Rear within two miles of Naſeby, where Ireton fell into their Quarters and took ſeveral Priſoners, giving an Alarm to the whole Army. Upon which his Majeſty (not having notice thereof till Eleven at Night) left his own Quarters at that unſeaſonable time, and called a Council of War at Harborough, where Prince Rupert Quartered; To whom the Queſtion was put, what was beſt to be done, ſeeing the Enemy was ſo near, and (as 'twas plain) intended to Engage them? It was conſidered, That ſhould they march on to Leiceſter, if the Rear were Engaged, the whole Army might be put in Hazard, and therefore there was no ſafety in marching with the Van, unleſs they could bring the Rear clear off, which they foreſaw would be very difficult to do: And therefore it was reſolv'd to put it to a Battel, taking themſelves to be more ſtrong in Horſe, than Fairfax; to be much better furniſh'd with old Experienced Commanders, and having no reaſon not to relye upon their Infantry; for indeed they were generally valiant ſtout Men. And further they reſolved, ſince Fairfax had been ſo forward in preſſing upon him, they would not remain in that place where they were, expecting him, but forthwith advance to find him out and offer him an Engagement.

The Battel at Naſeby, June the 14*th*.

General Fairfax on Saturday, June the 14*th*, by Three a Clock in the Morning marched from Gilling towards Naſeby, with deſign to follow cloſe upon the King's Rear, and if he could, to retard their March with his Horſe, till his Foot could come up to him, in caſe they ſhould march on to Leiceſter, (he being told that they had in the Night drawn ſome of their Carriages through Harborough that way.) By Five a Clock Fairfax brought his Army to a Rendezvous near Naſeby, and ſoon after ſeveral Bodies of his Majeſty's Horſe ſhew'd themſelves on the Top of the Hill on that ſide Harborough, whereby Fairfax and his Officers plainly perceived that they were putting themſelves into Order to Engage him. And ſo both Armies began to draw up in Battalia.

The Right Wing of the Parliament's Army conſiſting of Six Regiments of Horſe was led by Lieutenant General Cromwell, General Fairfax and Major General Skippon undertook the Charge of the Main Body. The Left Wing compoſed of five Regiments of Horſe, and a Diviſion of Two hundred Horſe of the Aſſociation, and a Party of Dragoons to ſecure their Left Flank, was committed at Cromwell's Requeſt to the management of Col. Ireton, who was for that purpoſe made Commiſſary-General of Horſe: And the Reſerves were brought up by Rainsborough, Hammond and Pride. The Place where they fought was a large Fallow Field about a mile broad on the North-weſt-ſide of Naſeby, which ſpace of Ground was wholly taken up. The Two Armies were pretty equal as to Numbers, there not being Five hundred difference on either ſide.

The Field-word for the King was, Queen Mary: For the Parliament, God our Strength.

The Exact Form of the Battel is repreſented in the following Figure: That of the King's Army being drawn up ſoon after by the Lord Aſhley, who in an Engagement near Stow in the Wold was taken Priſoner; and whoſe Papers of Naſeby Battel under his own hand I have by me, and that of the Parliament's Army given in, approved by ſeveral of the Commanders in Chief therein Concerned.

The King's Army in the Form here deſcribed marched up in good Order, a ſwift March, with abundance of Alacrity, Gallantry and Reſolution. Fairfax's Army was on the Brow of a ſmall Hill, having placed a Forlorn Hope of Three hundred Muſquetiers about Carbin-ſhot lower, who after they began to be hard preſſed upon, Retreated, according to the Orders before given them, to the Main Battalia. Prince Rupert with his Majeſty's Right Wing firſt began the Charge on that ſide againſt Ireton, and Cromwell with the Parliament's Right Wing at the ſame inſtant fell upon Langdale; and tho' ſeveral Actions in divers parts of the Battel happen'd at the ſame moment, yet they cannot be related otherwiſe than ſucceſſively, and therefore for Method I ſhall ſpeak firſt of the ſucceſs of the King's Right Wing againſt the Parliament's Left: 2*ly*, of the Actions ons between the two Main-Bodies; 3*d*, of the ſucceſs of Fairfax's Right Wing againſt the King's Left, which will bring us, 4*ly*, to the Cataſtrophe or Upſhot of the whole Action, wherein the Parliamentarians gain'd an intire Victory.

Firſt then, the Prince furiouſly Charging, as you have heard, was handſomely received by Ireton, who yet after ſome ſmart Action, was diſorder'd, and himſelf in Charging a Brigade of the King's Foot, which he ſaw on his Right hand, preſſing ſore upon ſome of his Party, having his Horſe ſhot under him, was run through the Thigh with a Pike, and into the Face with an Halbert, and taken Priſoner, untill afterwards upon the Turn of the Battel he found an opportunity to gain his Liberty. This Wing and their Reſerves being broke, and generally over-born (which they imputed to the diſadvantages they ſuſtained by certain Pits of Water, and Pieces of Ditches which they expected not), his Highneſs Prince Rupert purſued the Advantage, and Chaced them almoſt to Naſeby Town. And in his Return Summoned the Train, offering them Quarter; but they being well defended with Firelocks, and a Rear-Guard, refuſed to ſubmit, and kept him off ſo long, till perceiving the Fortune of the reſt of the King's Army not to be equal to his, he quitted them, to ſuccour, if he could, his Friends, but came too late, as appeared by the Sequel.

Between the Two Main-Bodies very fierce and doubtful was the Encounter; but the ſucceſs there at firſt ſeemed to incline to his Majeſty's Forces; for except Fairfax's own Regiment of Foot, almoſt all the reſt of his Front-diviſions gave Ground, and went off in diſorder, falling behind the Reſerves: But the Colonels and Officers after they found all their Endeavours to keep their Men firm, were (for a while) fruitleſs, did themſelves with their Colours and ſome Soldiers, fall into the Reſerves, who advancing, repell'd the King's Forces, and at laſt put them to a diſorderly Retreat. But Major General Skippon was very dangerouſly Wounded by a ſhot in the Side, whereupon General Fairfax deſired him to go off the Field, but the Old Man anſwered, He would not ſtir ſo long as a Man would ſtand; and accordingly ſtaid till the Battel was ended.

In the mean time Cromwell with his Right Wing had Charged Sir Marmaduke Langdale with great ſucceſs; for tho' he met with a Gallant Reſiſtance, inſomuch that they Fired at a cloſe Charge, and came to the Sword's point, and put ſeveral of his Diviſions into diſorder, yet in fine he broke them, and forced them to fly beyond all their Foot, near a Quarter of a mile beyond the place where the Battel was fought. Which having accompliſhed, his next buſineſs was with part of his Troops to keep the King's Horſe from coming to the Reſcue of their Foot; againſt whom by this time Fairfax with his Main-Body had prevailed, and diſorder'd them all, except one Tertia, who ſtood like a Rock, and tho' twice deſperately Charged, would not move an Inch; whereupon Fairfax commanded (the Captain of his Life-Guard) to Charge them once more in the Front, and he himſelf with his own Regiment, and a Commanded Party would at the ſame inſtant fall upon them in the Rear, and ſo they might meet together in the middle; which was done accordingly, and that laſt Body of the King's Foot put into confuſion and broken.

Ann. 1645.

Upon the Routing of this laſt Body, the King had nothing intire in the Field, but his Horſe, with whom was his Majeſty himſelf, and had Rallied and put them into as good order as the time would permit; the Prince too being now returned from his fatal ſucceſs, and Joyned with him: But all his Majeſty's Train of Artillery was already loſt, and his Foot broken, and Fairfax's Army buſied in taking of Priſoners, except ſome Bodies of Horſe which faced the King to prevent him from advancing to the Succour of his Infantry.

However his Majeſty having got his Cavalry into convenient Order, Fairfax did not think fit to Charge them with his Horſe only, till the Foot were come up; and therefore the Officers having Rallied his Foot that were diſorder'd in the firſt Charges, and got them into a Body, they were coming up upon a faſt March to fall in between the Horſe who were drawn up again in two Wings, with a ſufficient ſpace left between them for the Foot, ſo that here was formed a ſecond good Battalia of Horſe, Foot and Artillery at the latter end of the day; from which the King's Horſe without any Ordnance or aſſiſtance of Foot were to expect a ſecond Charge; the Dragoons having already began to Fire; whereupon not willing to venture another ſhock upon ſuch great diſadvantages, his Majeſty with Courage and Magnanimity endeavoured all that was poſſible to encourage them, crying out, One Charge more, and we recover the day; yet he could not prevail, but they Retreated in diſorder, both Fronts and Reſerves; and Fairfax's Horſe purſued them unto within two miles of Leiceſter, being fourteen miles of Leiceſter, and took many Priſoners.

Touching the Number ſlain in this Battel I have not been able to gain any certain Account: There were taken Priſoners near 5000, viz. Six Colonels, Eight Lieut. Colonels, Eighteen Majors, Seventy Captains, Eighty Lieutenants, Eighty Enſigns, and about Two hundred inferior Officers, beſides many of his Majeſty's Houſhold-Servants, and above 4000 private Soldiers.

There were alſo taken all the King's Train of Artillery that was in the Field, viz. Twelve Braſs Pieces of Ordnance (whereof two were Demi-Cannon,) Two Mortar-pieces, about 8000 Arms, Forty Barrels of Powder, all the Bag and Baggage, and very rich Pillage which the Soldiers had poſſeſs'd themſelves of at the taking of Leiceſter, above one hundred Colours, the King's Sumpter, ſeveral Coaches, and his Majeſty's Cabinet of Papers and Letters, &c.

The King this day excellently diſcloſed the part of a General both for Conduct and Courage; ſo likewiſe the Earl of Lindſey, Lord Aſhley, Col. Ruſſel and others that were Wounded, acquitted themſelves with great Gallantry. Of Colonels, Knights, and Officers of Note, there were ſlain of his Majeſty's ſide about twenty. And of private Soldiers, the Number of 600 or thereabout, as was commonly computed, but much greater and indeed irreparable was his Majeſty's Loſs of ſo many brave Foot taken Priſoners.

The King retires towards Wales.

His Majeſty in Perſon with part of the Horſe retreated into Leiceſter, but not judging it ſafe there to continue, parted thence the ſame Evening to Aſhby-de-la-zouch, where he Refreſhed himſelf for ſome hours, and thence paſs'd on to Litchfield, and ſo towards Wales.

Another part being the Northern Horſe, under Sir Marm. Langdale got to Newark, and both Parties happily miſs'd Sir John Gell, who with 2000 Horſe according to Orders formerly ſent him, were the ſame day on their march from Nottingham towards Leiceſter, intending to have joyn'd the Parliament's Army before the Engagement.

Fairfax the ſame Night of the Battel marched five miles, viz. to Harborough, and made that his Head-Quarter; and moſt of the Priſoners taken in the Fight were that Night kept in Harborough Church; and the reſt, eſpecially ſuch as were Wounded, ſent to Northampton.

But the next day the General ordered Col. John Fiennes and his Regiment to march up to London with the Priſoners and Colours taken in this Fight.

Fairfax's Letter to the Commons of the Battel at Naſeby, June 15*th*.

Mr. Speaker,

BEſides the General Account I have already given by one of my Servants, whom I ſent up to London Yeſterday, I thought fit to ſend this Bearer, Mr. Boles, who may more particularly inform you, concerning the abundant Goodneſs of God to this Army and the whole Kingdom in the late Victory obtained at Naſeby-Field, the whole Body of their Foot taken and ſlain; ſuch a Liſt of the Priſoners as could be made up in this ſhort time, I have ſent: The Horſe all quitted the Field, and were purſued within three miles of Leiceſter: Their Ammunition, Ordnance and Carriages all taken, amongſt which there were two Demi-Cannons, a whole Culverin, and a Mortar-piece, beſides leſſer Pieces. We intend to move to Leiceſter, as ſoon as we have taken order with our Priſoners and Wounded Men: All that I deſire is that the Honour of this great never to be forgotten Mercy, may be given to God in an Extraordinary Day of Thankſgiving. And that it may be Improved to the good of his Church and this Kingdom; which ſhall be faithfully endeavoured by,

POSTSCRIPT.

MAjor Gen. Skippon was ſhot through his Side, but notwithſtanding continued in the Field with great Reſolution. And when I deſired him to go off the Field, he anſwered, He would not go off as long as a Man would ſtand; ſtill doing his Office as a Valiant and wiſe Commander. Alſo Col. Butler, and Col. Ireton upon their firſt Charge were both dangerouſly Wounded, behaving themſelves very Gallantly. If I could enter into Particulars much might be ſpoken of the Reſolution and Courage of many Commanders both Horſe and Foot in this days Service. Some Iriſh are amongſt the Priſoners, as I am informed; I have not time to make inquiry into it; I deſire they may be proceeded againſt above according to Ordinance of Parliament.

Cromwell's Letter touching the ſame.

SIR,

BEing Commanded by you to this Service, I think my ſelf bound to acquaint you with the good hand of God towards you and us: We marched yeſterday after the King, who went before us from Daventry to Haverbrow, and Quarter'd about ſix miles from him. This day we marched towards him. He drew out to meet us, both Armies Engaged. We after three Hours Fight very doubtful, at laſt Routed his Army, kill'd and took about 5000, very many Officers, but of what quality, we yet know not. We took alſo about 200 Carriages, all he had, and all his Guns, being twelve in number, whereof two were Demi-Cannon, two Demi-Culverins, and I think the reſt Sacres; we purſued the Enemy from three miles ſhort of Harborough to nine beyond, even to the ſight of Leiceſter, whither the King fled.

Sir,

Ann. 1645.

Sir, This is none other but the hand of God, and to him alone belongs the Glory, wherein none are to ſhare with him. The General ſerved you with all Faithfulneſs and Honour, and the beſt Commendations I can give him, is, That I dare ſay he attributes all to God, and would rather periſh than aſſume to himſelf; which is an honeſt and a thriving way; and yet as much for Bravery may be given to him in this action, as to a Man: Honeſt Men ſerved you faithfully in this Action. Sir, they are truſty; I beſeech you in the Name of God not to diſcourage them. I wiſh this Action may beget Thankfulneſs and Humility in all that are concerned in it. He that ventures his Life for the Liberty of his Country, I wiſh he truſt God for the Liberty of his Conſcience, and you for the Liberty he fights for: In this he reſts, who is,

The Committee reſiding with the Army, their Letter to the Speaker, June 14th.

S I R,

THIS Morning by Day-break we marched out of Guilsborow after the Enemy; after an Hours March we diſcovered their Horſe drawn up at Sybbertoft, three miles on this ſide Harborcugh; an Hour after their Foot appeared. This was about Eight in the Morning; by Ten we were diſpoſed into a Battalia on both ſides: Both ſides with mighty ſhouts expreſs'd a hearty deſire of Fighting, having for our parts Recommended our Cauſe to God's Protection, and receiv'd the Word, which was, God our Strength: Theirs, Queen Mary. Our Forlorn Hopes began to play, whilſt both ſides labour'd for the Hill and Wind, which in concluſion was as it were equally divided. Our Forlorn-Hope gave back, and their Right Wing of Horſe fell upon our Left with ſuch Gallantry, that ours were immediately Routed, above 1000 ran along with them: But ſuch was the courage and diligence of the Right Wing backt with the Foot, that they not only beat back the Enemy from their Train, but fell in with their Foot, and after two Hours diſpute won all the Field-pieces, (whereof ſome are Cannon) moſt of their Baggage, Mortar-Pieces, Boats, 9000 Arms, much Powder and Match, &c. And nigh 4000 Priſoners. Their Number was about 12000. Some 600 Slain, many Commanders of Note. Of ours not above a hundred. Our Horſe are ſtill in purſuit, and have taken many of theirs. The Standard is ours, the King's Waggons and many Ladies. God Almighty give us Thankful Hearts for this Great Victory, the moſt abſolute as yet obtained. The General, Lieut. Gen. Cromwell, and Maj. Gen. Skippon (who is ſhot in the Side, but not dangerous) did beyond expreſſion Gallantly, ſo did all our other Commanders and Soldiers. We have loſt but two Captains. Tho' this come late, be pleaſed to accept it from

Die Lunæ, 16 Junii, 1645.

IT is this Day Ordered by the Lords and Commons in Parliament Aſſembled, That Thurſday next ſhall be ſet a-part for a day of Publick Thankſgiving to Almighty God in all the Churches and Chappels within the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Lines of Communication, for the Great and Glorious Victory obtained by the Parliament's Army, under the Command of Sir Thomas Fairfax againſt the Forces of the King. And that Mr. Marſhall and Mr. Vines be deſired to Preach at Chriſt-Church before the Parliament. And that the L. Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council do meet the Parliament there. And it is further Ordered, That Friday being the 27*th* of this Inſtant June be likewiſe ſet apart for a Publick Day of Thankſgiving for this Victory in all the Churches and Chappels in the ſeveral Counties of the Kingdom under the Power of the Parliament.

Jo. Brown Cler. Parliament.

General Fairfax endeavouring to improve this Victory, gave Orders for the Army, Horſe, Foot and Train, to march forwards the very next day, being Sunday June 15*th*, and made to Glyn four miles ſhort of Leiceſter, the Head-Quarter; the Horſe marching within a Mile of Leiceſter that Night, and kept Guards, which ſo alarm'd the Nobles and Gentry that had fled thither for ſecurity, that they departed thence in much haſte, leaving the Lord Haſtings to defend that Place.

This day he alſo received a full Intelligence of the ſtate of Affairs in the Weſt, by means of the contrivement of the Scout-maſter General, the manner thus: A Spy of his formerly employed by him to Secretary Nicholas in Oxford, was the day that the Army roſe from before that City, ſent to him again, (yet as coming of his own accord) to give him Intelligence, that the Army would that Morning march away, it being conceived that either the Secretary would ſend him, (or he might find ſome opportunity) to go into the Weſt, where General Goring then lay with his Army about Taunton, and bring the Intelligence deſired; accordingly it fell out: Into the Weſt he was ſent, firſt to Bath, where the Prince of Wales then was, to whom he brought the firſt News of the Parliament's Army riſing from before Oxford, from thence to General Goring about Taunton, who received him and the News very gladly, and looking upon him as a fit Inſtrument to be employed to the King, then about Leiceſter, and as they ſuppoſed, intending Northward; dealt with him, (as about buſineſs of great concernment) to carry a Packet of Letters to his Majeſty: The Fellow with ſome ſeeming difficulty ſuffered himſelf to be perſwaded, received the Packet, but brought them to Fairfax fairly Sealed up. Fairfax ſeemed unwilling to open the King's Letters. But Cromwell and Ireton prevailed to open them, wherein was ſignified that in three Weeks time (nine days whereof were then expired) General Goring was confident to maſter the Forces at Taunton, and by conſequence to ſettle the Weſt of England, in an abſolute poſture for his Majeſty's Service, and march up with a conſiderable Army to his aſſiſtance; adviſing the King by all means in the mean time to ſtand upon the defenſive, and not engage till his Forces were joyned with his Majeſty's. Had theſe Letters been delivered to the King (as they might have been but for this Defeatment) in all probability his Majeſty had declined fighting for the preſent, and ſtaid for thoſe Additionals: But as the want of this Intelligence was ſo fatal to his Majeſty, ſo the notice thereof quickned Fairfax to make ſpeed to Relieve Taunton; yet he being ſo near Leiceſter, and that Town in all probability eaſie to be regain'd, (conſidering the fear that they within were poſſeſſed withal by the loſs of the day at Naſeby) beſides the want of Men thereby, (in all likelihood) to make good their Works, he reſolved firſt to aſſay that; and accordingly Monday, June the 16*th* about Noon brought his whole Army before the Town; and ſent a Summons to the Lord Haſtings, to Surrender the Gariſon, with all the Ordnance, Arms and Ammunition therein, who returned a reſolute Negative Anſwer, as if he meant to defend it to the laſt Man; whereupon a Council of War being called, it was reſolved to Storm the Place. Warrants were ſent to the Hundreds to bring in Ladders, Carts, Hay, Straw, and other things requiſite for that purpoſe. In purſuance whereof great ſtore of Ladders were brought in on Tueſday, June the 17*th*, and a Battery was raiſed, upon which two Demi-Cannon and a whole Culverine taken at Naſeby were Planted, which played upon the Fortification called the Newark, being the very ſame Guns which the King not many days before had uſed againſt the ſame Place: The Lord Haſtings perceiving his condition was like to be deſperate, ſent a Trumpeter with a Letter to the General, deſiring a Parley concerning the Surrender of the Town, which was accepted of; Commiſſioners appointed to Treat, and Hoſtages on both Sides given; and the Treaty begun that Evening, and held Debate till Twelve a Clock that Night, then concluded upon theſe Articles.

Leiceſter Surrenders.

Articles of the Surrender of Leiceſter.

1. That the Lord Loughborough ſhould have Quarter granted him, and have Protection for his Perſon to be ſafely conveyed to the Gariſon of Aſhby-de-la-zouch.

2. That all Field-Officers, Colonels, Lieutenant Colonels, Serjeants, Majors, and Captains, and Lieutenants of Horſe, (but not of Foot) ſhall march away with their own particular ſingle Horſe and Arms, with Protection for their own Perſons.

3. That all the reſt of the Officers ſhall be conveyed ſafely to the Gariſon of Lichfield with Staves only, and no other Weapon in their hand.

4. That all common Soldiers have Quarter only for their Lives, and be conveyed to Lichfield, without any other Weapons, ſave only Staves in their hands.

5. That before Ten of the Clock, the ſaid Morning June the 18*th*, the Governour of the Town, and the Lord Loughborough and all the reſt of the Officers and Soldiers march out of the Gariſon according to the Agreement aforeſaid.

6. That Sir Thomas Fairfax be permitted to enter in at Ten of the Clock the ſaid Wedneſday Morning aforeſaid, with his Forces, and take Poſſeſſion of the Gariſon.

7. That all the Pieces of Cannon, Great and Small now in the Gariſon of Leiceſter, be left to Sir Thomas Fairfax.

8. That all the Arms and Ammunition now in Leiceſter be left to Sir Thomas Fairfax, ſave only what is agreed to for the Officers of Horſe aforeſaid.

9. That all the Proviſions, Colours, Bag and Baggage be alſo left to Sir Thomas Fairfax.

10. That all the Horſe (ſave only thoſe excepted for the Officers aforeſaid) that are in the Gariſon of Leiceſter be delivered up to Sir Thomas Fairfax for the Service of the Parliament.

11. That all the Officers and Soldiers have Quarter for their Lives.

12. That all the Priſoners of War that are in Leiceſter at the ſame time be releaſed and ſet free to ſerve the Parliament.

The Guards and Centinels in the Gate-houſe Priſon in the Newark hearing of the Concluſion of the Articles, about Four a Clock on Wedneſday Morning went away from their Duty, and left their Arms behind them, and the Priſon-door open; whereupon the Priſoners went out, and finding the Gariſon a Plundering, they fell a Plundering too. About Seven a Clock all the Guards were drawn off, the Soldiers on the Line threw down their Arms, quit their Poſts, and the Gates were opened, which gave Invitation to divers of Fairfax's ſtragling Soldiers to get into the Town at the Ports, and over the Works; Complaint hereof being made to Fairfax by ſome from the Lord Loughborough, of the Violation of the Articles by his Soldiers: He ſent to the Lord Loughborough to keep all his Men upon their Guards, and if any offered violently to enter the Town before the time, to fire upon them, and immediately iſſued out a Proclamation, commanding the punctual obſervance of the Articles by his own Soldiers under pain of death. But the Lord Loughborough inſtead thereof mounted on Horſe-back in the Morning with divers Gentlemen (Officers and others) and left the Town ſome hours before the time appointed for his marching forth; ſo that when Fairfax's Commiſſioners came at the time appointed to ſee the Articles perform'd, they found his Lordſhip gone, and the Town in confuſion, but the Soldiers were Commanded off, and things ſoon put into ſome convenient order, and then about Eleven a Clock the Army entred the Town, where they found divers Commanders of Note, viz. Serj. Maj. Gen. Eyres, Col. Liſle, Lieut. Col. Mouldſworth, Lieut. Col. Pemberton, Major Naylor, Major Trollop, and divers Perſons of Quality, all Wounded in the late Battel.

Lord Loughborough marches out of Leiceſter.

Here were taken in the Town Fourteen Pieces of Ordnance, Thirty Colours, about 2000 Arms, fifty Barrels of Powder, and other Ammunition in good proportion.

The next day being June the 18*th*, Money being come down from London, the Army was Muſter'd.

Leiceſter being thus regain'd on the 18*th* of June, Fairfax was in ſome doubt whether he ſhould march after the King, whom he had Intelligence was raiſing new Forces on the Borders of Wales, or advance to Relieve that part of his Army which was now Beſieged in and about Taunton, and which by the late gain'd Intelligence, were not in a condition long to ſupport themſelves; nor was Maſſey who was ſent that way able to ſuccour them, being not above 3000 ſtrong, ſo that General Goring was in a condition both to keep off him and continue the Siege. And if Taunton, and conſequently that Party ſhould be loſt he eaſily foreſaw of what conſequence it would be to the Parliament's Intereſt, when his Majeſty's Forces ſhould poſſeſs the whole Weſt, (except the Gariſons of Lime, Pool, and Weymouth) intirely to themſelves, and therefore his march thither ſeem'd abſolutely requiſite: But being unwilling to determine himſelf in ſo weighty a caſe, ſent to the Parliament for their Directions. And in the mean time on the 20*th* of June drew out of Leiceſter to Lutterworth, and the next day to Lillington in Warwickſhire, ſo to Warwick on the 22*th*, and to Clifford in Gloceſterſhire, thence to Campden, thence to Northledge (fourteen miles,) and on the 26*th* came to Lechlade, where his Forlorn ſurprized ſome of the King's Soldiers belonging to Radcot Gariſon, ſhot Lieut. Col. Nott, and took four Priſoners.

Fairfax deliberates of Relieving of Taunton.

In their March to Wanborough, Friday June the 27*th*, they took in Highworth Gariſon, being a Church Fortified by a Line and Bulwarks, and therein Major Hen the Governour, and about ſeventy

Priſoners; and becauſe it ſtood conveniently in a Line for Malmesbury, appointed the Governour of that Town to continue an Out-Gariſon there, for inlarging his Quarters.

From Wanborough the Army marched to Burchalk in Wiltſhire, by three Stages; and by the way on the Sunday (June 29.) while they reſted at Marlborough, ſent out ſome Spies to Taunton, to give them notice of the Army's advance for their relief. Thence after a Rendezvous at Stonehenge, they marched in Battalia upon Salisbury-Plain, and ſo came on Wedneſday, July 2. to Blandford, and in their march took Mr. Penruddock, and one Fuſſell, two Captains of the Club-men (as they were called) being a great Number of the Inhabitants of ſeveral parts of Wiltſhire, and ſome Counties adjacent, who gathered themſelves together, alledging they did but ſtand on their own defence, to prevent Plundering; and that they would in that poſture remain Neuters until the King and his Parliament ſhould agree; but in truth moſt of the Leading Men amongſt them favour'd the King's Party; (and had they had opportunity, would no doubt openly have ſhewed themſelves for his Majeſty's Service.) Theſe two Gentlemen being Examined, and promiſing not to appear any more in that buſineſs, were diſcharged.

In this days march was a Soldier executed, being by the Country apprehended and accuſed, for plundering of a Gentleman paſſing on the way near Marlborough.

The Club-men.

Thurſday July 3. Fairfax marched from Blandford to Dorcheſter 12. miles, a very hot day, where Col. Sidenham Governour of Weymouth gave him information of the condition of thoſe Parts, and of the great danger of the Club-riſers; who would not ſuffer either Contribution or Victuals to be carried to the Parliament's Gariſons. And the ſame Night Mr. Hollis of Dorſetſhire the Chief Leader of the Club-men, with ſome others of their principal Men came to Fairfax, and Mr. Hollis own'd himſelf to be one of their Leaders, affirming that it was fit the People ſhould ſhew their Grievances and their Strength. Fairfax Treated them civilly, and promiſed they ſhould have an Anſwer the next Morning; for they were ſo ſtrong at that time, that it was held a point of prudence to be fair in demeanor towards them for a while; for if he ſhould Engage with General Goring, and be put to the worſt, theſe Club-men would knock them on the heads as they ſhould fly for ſafety.

That which they deſired from him was a ſafe Conduct for certain Perſons to go to the King and Parliament with Petitions: Thoſe aſſigned to the King were Dr. Henry Goche of Trinity-Colledge in Cambridge, and Mr. Thom. Bromwell Divines, John St. Loe, Peter Hoskins, Eſquires, Mr. Thom. Young an Attorney, and Mr. Rob. Pawlet, Gentleman. To the Parliament Mr. Melchizedeck Waltham, Mr. Richard Hook, two Divines, Thom. Trenchard, Robert Calliford, Eſquires, George Hawleys, Richards and Newmen, Gentlemen.

The Club-men deſire their Petitions to be ſent to the Parliament.

Mr. Hollis tendered to the General the Petitions, ſo to be conveyed; as alſo certain Articles of their Aſſociation: The Articles were,

That the Aſſociates provide Arms, ſet Watches, be quiet with them that are ſo, lay hold on diſorderly Soldiers, bring them to the next Gariſons, not to deny Quarters and Contributions to their ability: Till their Petitions be delivered, not to favour either Party, nor to protect any not Aſſociated.

The

The Heads of the Petitions were:

To deſire a renewed Treaty, with a Ceſſation, as alſo that the Gariſons of Dorſet and Wiltſhire be put into their hands, till the King and Parliament agree about their diſpoſal. That they be free from all Charge, but the Maintenance of thoſe Gariſons. That all Laws not repealed, be in force and executed by the ordinary Officers. That all Men who deſire it, may lay down Arms. That others that have abſented themſelves from their Dwellings may have free liberty to return and live at home.

After Speech had with them, and ſome Conſultation what to do in the Buſineſs, he returned his Anſwer in Writing as followeth.

Fairfax's Anſwer to the Club-men.

ALthough the Papers brought to me, being not Subſcribed, cannot challenge my Anſwer, yet to clear my ſelf from any averſeneſs, to the ſatisfaction of the Country, who are pretended to be Intereſted in theſe Petitions, I return this,

That my Affections and the Affections of this Army are as much inclined to Peace, as any Mens whatſoever.; and we undertake the War for no other end, but the Eſtabliſhing of a firm and happy Peace, by oppoſing the Enemies thereof; and that I ſhall be ready, ſo far as concerns me, to further all lawful and fit means to procure it: But having ſeen the Petitions, upon which a Let-paſs is deſired, I muſt profeſs my ſelf not ſo well ſatisfied with ſome things contained in them, as to concur to their delivering by any act of mine: In particular, in that a Ceſſation is deſired; whilſt by Letters written by the King and Queen, taken at the late Battel of Naſeby, it evidently appears that Contracts are already made for the bringing in 10000 French, and 6000 Iriſh. It is further deſired, that the Gariſons in theſe Parts, whereof three are Sea-ports, ſhould be delivered up to the Petitioners; which to grant, were for the Parliament to acquit part of the Truſt repoſed in them by the Kingdom; and conſidering theſe Foreign Preparations, to run very great hazard to thoſe Ports themſelves, and to the whole Kingdom. Thirdly, It is propounded that liberty be given to all Soldiers to disband, and to return to their home, if they deſire it; which may with equal Juſtice be deſired by all Parts of the Kingdom, and ſo the Parliament made unable to manage the War, before Peace be ſetled.

Theſe Conſiderations with ſome other yet [illegible] be debated, will not allow me to grant the deſire of the Letter: But as for that part of the Petition which declares the Grievances of the Country by Plunder and Violence, committed either by Gariſons or Armies: I do hereby promiſe and undertake for the Gariſons and Armies under the command of the Parliament, that whatſoever diſorders are committed by them, upon complaint, making known the offences and perſons, juſtice ſhall be done, and ſatisfaction given: As alſo I ſhall endeavour that the Parliament's Gariſons may be regulated according to any reaſonable agreement with the Country; and without doubt the Parliament will cauſe them to be ſlighted, ſo ſoon as the condition of thoſe Parts, and the publick good ſhall permit; and that the Army under my Command ſhall be ordered as may be moſt for the good and advantage of theſe Counties, and of the whole Kingdom; of which ſome reaſonable Teſtimony is already given, in their quiet and orderly paſſage from theſe and other Counties, without many of thoſe Complaints which uſually follow Armies.

I further deſire that in the publiſhing this my Anſwer to your requeſt, all aſſembling the People to Publick Rendezvous may be forborn, and that Copies hereof may be diſperſed to the ſeveral Pariſhes, that the Country may be acquainted therewith.

Tho. Fairfax.

An. 1645.

The Army marched that day from Dorcheſter to Beawminſter, the Train and moſt of the Foot Quartered on the Top of an Hill, ſome few in Beawminſter Town, the greateſt part of which had lately been burnt down when Prince Maurice was there.

In the mean time General Goring advertiz'd of Fairfax's March, had raiſed his Army from before Taunton, and was marched towards Langport.

Thus was Taunton the ſecond time Relieved, (being greatly diſtreſſed both for Ammunition and Victuals.) In which laſt Siege the Parliament's Party loſt Col. Lloyd, and Col. Richbell, and ſeveral other Officers: But on the King's Side were alſo loſt divers Perſons of Quality, amongſt whom Sir John Digby, Brother to Sir Kenelm Digby, receiv'd a mortal Wound, of which ſoon after he died.

Fairfix at Crookhorn.

The 5th and 6th of July, Fairfax kept his Head-Quarters at Crookhorn, and General Goring with his Forces kept the Paſs at Load-Bridge with a ſtrong Guard, and alſo pulled down Pederton-Bridge, and made Breaſt-works on the other ſide: But upon the Approach of a Party under Col. Fleetwood, quitted the latter Paſs; whereupon Fairfax ordered that Bridge to be made up again, and planted a conſiderable Guard there.

General Goring continued at Long-Sutton, keeping a Guard at Load-Bridge, and making good the Gariſon at Ilcheſter and Langport the two Paſſes upon the River, and had broken down the Bridge higher up the River towards the Town of Evil. Fairfax on Monday the 7th of July by Six of the Clock in the Morning drew his Foot to a Rendezvous in a Field about a Mile from Crookhorn in the way to Pederton, and with a Commanded Party went to view the Paſs at Load-Bridge: General Goring ſeeing their Horſe appear in great Numbers, drew up his Foot, and ordered ſome Regiments to march from Load-Bridge along the River-ſide to Ilcheſter, fearing they might Storm that place; and the Horſe diverted themſelves in Skirmiſhes upon the Meadows near the River by Parties all that day. In the Field Fairfax called a Council of War to conſider what was to be done; for Goring keeping beyond the River, and having the Gariſons of Ilcheſter, Langport, Burrough and Bridgewater, there was no coming on that ſide; and to attempt a paſſage where an Enemy ſtood in good order, ready to receive them, and it being alſo a Moraſs, ſeemed deſperate. And on the Right-hand the Bridge at Evil being broke down, and a Guard upon it, and on all the Bridges on that ſide, there ſeemed no convenient paſſage nearer than the Head of the River about Sherburn, which would prove a tedious and difficult March.

In fine, they reſolved to march the greateſt part of the Army to Evil, and there to force their way, leaving in the mean time a convenient Force of Horſe and Foot over againſt Ilcheſter and Load-Bridge, to Engage Goring's Troops if they ſhould advance on that ſide: In purſuance of this Reſolution Fairfax marched to Evil, and made that the Head-Quarter for that Night, Goring's Horſe Retreating to Ilcheſter, and ſoon after General Goring drew his Army towards Langport, and quitted Load-Bridge, and Ilcheſter, leaving the Works undemoliſhed, only ſetting Fire to the Bridewell which they had Fortified, but the Inhabitants ſoon quench'd, and ſaved the ſame.

21 Caroli.

Upon notice hereof Fairfax declining the Paſs at Evil, marched back towards Ilcheſter on the ſame ſide of the River, and Quartered there that Night. And General Goring having detached part of his Army, which 'twas thought might be deſigned to ſurprize Taunton, hoping to find them now in ſecurity; wherefore Maj. Gen. Maſſey with his Brigade of Horſe, and ſome Dragoons were diſpatch'd after them to attend their motion; and on Wedneſday, July the 9*th*, Fairfax's Army being at Long-Sutton, he had advice that Maſſey was near an Engagement, and therefore forthwith Ordered Col. Montague to march with 2000 Muſquetiers to his aſſiſtance, it being an Incloſed Country, where Foot would be moſt ſerviceable. But before they came up, Maſſey had worſted that Party, and taken Nine Colours, and between two and three hundred Horſe: In which Action Col. Cook was ſhot through both Cheeks.

The Fight at Langport, July 10*th*.

All this while General Goring ſtanding on his Advantages, as being Maſter of the Paſſes on the River, had declined to Fight, being inferior in ſtrength, and waiting to be Recruited with ſome Forces he expected to Joyn him, but finding they came not, thought fit now to draw off to Bridgewater, and ſent away moſt of his Cannon and Carriages thitherwards, but the better to ſecure his Retreat by keeping the Paſs; ſent over Muſquetiers to Line the Hedges, and brought down two Cannons, and his Horſe and Foot to Guard the Paſs, and drew up in a poſture to receive the Enemy if they ſhould preſs on: But Fairfax drew down his Ordnance to ſuch Places of advantage that they did great Execution on Goring's Army, who ſtood in good Order on the Hill, about Muſquet-ſhot from the Paſs, and forced them to draw off their Ordnance, and their Horſe to remove their Ground. And then the Parliament's Foot thunder'd down the Hill, and Charged reſolutely from Hedge to Hedge till they had gain'd the Paſs: Upon which Goring's Horſe drew down towards them, and a Forlorn of about 120 Horſe was Ordered by Fairfax to advance over the Paſs up the Hill, Commanded by Major Bethel, who tho' the Lane were very narrow, forced his way, and beat back two Bodies of Horſe, being of General Goring's own Brigade, and brake them at Swords Point; but then they Charged him with freſh Troops, and beat him back. At which time Major Desborough with his Reſerve came up to his Relief, and Bethel facing about and Joyning with him, they gave ſuch an effectual Charge as put Goring's Men to a Retreat, and then the Muſquetiers coming up with the Horſe, ſome of Goring's Foot began to fly before ever they were Engaged, which put all the reſt into confuſion, ſo that Fairfax's Horſe had the Chaſe of them almoſt to Bridgewater, for they quitted Langport, and fired it, hoping thereby to ſtop the purſuit; but Fairfax's Men not reguarding that, made their Paſſage after them between the Flaming-Houſes, and the Paſſes being narrow in many Places, it was very difficult to eſcape them, ſo that they took about 1400 Priſoners, and 1200 Horſes, many of their Riders deſerting them, and getting away over the Meadows and Encloſures. There was thought to be in all about 300 of the King's Party ſlain. Of the Priſoners of Note taken, were Col. Slingsby General of the Ordnance, and Col. Henningham, and Lieut. Col. Preſton, Four Captains of Horſe, Eleven Lieutenants, Twenty Cornets of Horſe, and above Thirty Colours of Horſe and Foot; as alſo the Two Pieces of Cannon before mentioned, and a great Number of Arms. On the Parliament's ſide were loſt Two Reformado Captains, tains, Col. Butler's Capt. Lieut. and above fifty others, and Col. Cook, and Major Bethel, and about Sixteen of his Troop Wounded.

After this Battel the Parliament's Army marched the ſame day five miles to Middleſay in the way to Bridgewater; and next day the whole Army, Horſe and Foot with the Train, were drawn up in Weſton-Moor, otherwiſe called Penſy-Pound, two miles from Bridgewater. The Country-men thereabouts roſe in great Numbers, and with their Colours, Clubs, and Arms, appeared upon Knol-Hill; which being made known to the General, he with the Lieutenant General and other Officers, marched up to them, who ſeemingly received him with Joy, and in token thereof gave a Volley of Shot; whence after ſome conference with them, and their Leader, who made a Neutral Speech, the General returned, and the Army that Night went to Quarter, the Head-Quarter that Night being appointed at Chedſay, within two miles of Bridgewater.

Friday, July the 11*th*, Col. Welden's Brigade was commanded on the North-ſide of the Town of Bridgewater, towards Devonſhire, and the reſt of the Army on this ſide towards Chedſay; the Guards being ſet, Fairfax and Cromwell went to view the Town, which they found to be very ſtrong, ſtanding in a Valley, yet glorying in the Equality of its Level with the Ground about it, there being not a clod that coulſt afford any advantage againſt that Place. The Fortifications regular and ſtrong, the Ditch about it deep, and about thirty foot wide, which for a great part about the Town, was every Tide filled up to the brim with water, the compaſs of Ground within the Line and Works not great, very well Manned, having in it about 1800 Soldiers to defend it: Within the Town was a Caſtle of indifferent ſtrength, there was planted on the ſeveral Batteries about forty Piece of Ordnance; well ſtored with Ammunition, and Victuals, being a Magazine for his Majeſty's ſmaller Gariſons thereabouts.

Saturday and Sunday July 12*th* and 13*th* they continu'd at Chedſay; and Col. Okey having (from that day the Battel was at Langport) Beſieged Burrough Gariſon with his Dragoons, had the ſame Surrendred unto him upon Quarter, wherein were a hundred and forty Priſoners, the Officers being promiſed fair uſage.

Deliberations about the manner of taking the Town of Bridgewater.

Monday, July the 14*th*, a Council of War was called, Great Debate whether to ſtorm the Town, or not, ſome inclination to it, but no poſitive reſolution; notwithſtanding preparations were made, but upon further conſideration were for that time drawn back to their Quarters; and more time being taken, there were eight Long-Bridges, betwixt thirty and forty Foot length, deviſed to be made by Lieut. Gen. Hammond the Lieut. Gen. of the Ordnance, which were approved of by the Commanders and Officers, and of very great uſe to the Soldiers in the Storm.

Tueſday, July the 15*th* the General went to Glaſtenbury, and returned that Night to the Head-Quarter.

Wedneſday, July the 16*th*, a Council of War was again called, and ſeveral Propoſitions were made for the Freeing of the Army and Reduction of the Town. To riſe with their whole Army, and leave the Town unattempted, was conceived to be very prejudicial to their future Progreſs; to ſit down before it (being a place of that ſtrength, if not ſure to carry it) leaving the King at liberty to rally his Forces, ſeemed very hazardous.

The Blocking of it up by Forts on both ſides with a part of the Army was propounded; but the difficulty of laying the Bridge over the River through the violence of the Current, (which yet would be neceſſary for the maintaining a Communication between the Quarters on both ſides) hindered the deſign.

It was alſo propounded to attempt it by Approaches; but it was conſidered, that if they ſhould go that way, it would prove very tedious; and if during their ſtay about it any great glut of Rain ſhould have fallen, it would lay them wet in their Trenches, and diſable them from effecting the buſineſs.

Agreed upon to Storm it.

At laſt, a reſolution to ſtorm it, was agreed upon, though it carried the greateſt danger with it. For which purpoſe Lots were drawn for every one to take their Poſts, ſome to Storm, ſome to be Reſerves, others to alarm, but the time of falling on was not determined till Friday, July the 19*th*, that it ſhould be on the Monday Morning following, towards dawning of the day. The Brigade appointed on that ſide towards Devon was Commanded by Major General Maſſey, only to alarm on that ſide, being the Regiments of Col. Welden, Col. Ingolsby, Col. Forteſcue, Col. Herbert, Col. Bitch, and Maj. Gen. Maſſey's own Regiment: The Regiments deſigned on this ſide to Storm were the Generals, Col. Pickering's, Col. Montague's, Sir Hardreſs Waller's, the Regiment Commanded by Lieut. Col. Pride, Col. Rainsborough, and Col. Hammond's. The General rode round about the Town this day, to ſee if all things were in readineſs for the Storm, that both ſides might fall on together.

On the Lords-day, July the Twentieth, after both Sermons, the Drums Beat, the Army was drawn out into the Field; and as ſoon as it grew dark, the Soldiers drew every one to their ſeveral Poſts allotted them to Storm; the Sign when the Storm was to begin, was, the ſhooting off three Pieces of Ordnance on this ſide, which the Forces on the other ſide were to take notice of, and to fall on the ſame inſtant. Accordingly on Monday, July 22. about Two of the Clock in the Morning, the Storm began on this ſide of the Town, (the Forces on the other ſide only giving an Alarm which kept the Gariſon upon the Line;) the Forlorn-hope was led on by Lieut. Col. Hewſon, and ſeconded by the General's Regiment, commanded by Lieut. Col. Jackſon; and the Major General's commanded by Lieut. Col. Aſhfield. The Bridges prepared to paſs over the Moat, were quickly brought to the Ditch, and thrown in, on which the Soldiers with little loſs got over the deep Ditch, and mounted the Works (notwithſtanding the great number of ſmall ſhot which ſhowr'd about them) beat them from their Ordnance, turn'd them upon the Town, and let down their Draw-Bridge, which made many of their Foot cry Quarter; Captain Rainolds, who commanded the Forlorn-hope of Horſe, immediately entred, and ſcoured the Streets of that part of the Town ſo gained, called Eaſtover, to the Draw-Bridge over the main Ditch, leading to the ſecond Town; whereupon the reſt of the Officers and Soldiers that were in a Body, and yet annoyed the Aſſailants in that part of the Town which they had won, threw down their Arms, and had Quarter given them; (there were about Six hundred taken Priſoners, Officers and Soldiers.) But the King's Party in the ſecond Town inſtantly made Barricadoes at the Gate upon the Bridge, and drew up the Bridge that divided one part of the Town from the other. Fairfax's Forces had not been two Hours in Ann. 1645. the firſt Town, but they were pelted with Granadoes and Slugs, of hot Iron, which Fired it on both ſides, which by the next Morning burnt that part of the Town (of goodly Buildings) down to the Ground, except three or four Houſes, yet Major Cowell ſtood all that while in the midſt of the Street, which was both ſides on fire, keeping Guards to prevent a Sally. Capt. Sampſon in that remarkable Action received a ſhot.

The General hoping that the Storm might have wrought upon the Soldiers, and the Fire upon the Townſmen, ſo far that they would have hearkned to Treaty, renewed his Summons, which the Governour ſtoutly refuſed; whereupon Tueſday, July the 22*th*, it was reſolved to Alarm the Town by Forces on this ſide, and to Storm it on the other ſide, at Two of the Clock the next Morning; for which purpoſe the General was there in Perſon to ſee it done, though it was held fit on after Conſiderations, only to Alarm on both ſides, which much amazed the Gariſon, and kept them waking all that Night. Alſo about Two of the Clock in the Afternoon, the General ſent to the Governour a Trumpet with a Meſſage to this purpoſe: That his denial of fair Terms had wrought in him no other thoughts, but of compaſſion towards thoſe that were innocent, who otherwiſe might ſuffer; wherefore he ſignified that all Women and Children that would accept of this liberty, ſhould come forth of the Town by Four of the Clock in the Afternoon: Whereupon the Governour Windham's Lady ſaid to the Meſſenger, Tell thy General, (laying her hand upon her Breaſts, which ſhe ſaid gave Prince Charles Suck) we will hold it out to the laſt. But the next day the Governours Lady and divers others, were of another opinion, and came out when the Cannon play'd fiercely into the Town, and Granadoes were ſhot, and Slugs of hot Iron in abundance, whereby ſeveral Houſes in that Town were fired, and the Wind being high increaſed the Flame, the Townſmen within were in great diſtraction, every Man imployed how to ſave his Houſe and Goods, the Gariſon was in a great amazement, ſo that the Governour thought fit to ſend forth Mr. Tho. Elliot to know the General's Terms, who refuſed to admit of any Treaty at all: However they offered theſe Particulars.

Firſt, That the Governour with all the Officers and Gentlemen that were in the Town, with their Servants, Horſes, Swords, Piſtols and Cloak-Bags, might march with a ſafe Conduct to Exeter.

Secondly, That all the Soldiers might likewiſe march to Exeter, leaving their Arms.

Thirdly, That all Clergy-men in the Town, and Townſmen might have liberty to march with them, or abide at home.

Edmund Windham.

Whereunto the General returned theſe:

1. To all their Lives.
2. To the Inhabitants, their Liberty and Freedom from Plunder.
3. Neither Officers nor Soldiers to be Plundered of the Clothes they had upon them.
4. The Gentlemen to be diſpoſed of as the Parliament ſhould appoint, and in the mean time to have Civil Uſage.

Six Hoſtages to be ſent, and an Anſwer in a Quarter of an Hour.

Tho. Fairfax.

The Governour returned Anſwer, That he found thoſe Propoſitions ſo ill reſented, both by the Gentlemen and Soldiers, that he could not accept of them.

Fairfax thereupon gave Order to the Soldiers to ſtand upon their Guards, and go to their Duties. Mr. Elliot deſired nothing might be done till he returned, leaving Sir John Heal as Caution, which was agreed to: And he preſently returned with an Anſwer of accepting the laſt Articles; only added for himſelf, that he might have liberty to carry the News to the King upon his Parol.

Thereupon the Hoſtages were ſent, viz. from the Town Sir John Heal, Sir Hugh Windham, Mr. Waldron, Mr. Warr, Mr. Siddingham, Mr. Speak, and others ſent by Fairfax into the Town to them.

They were to deliver the Town, and yield themſelves Priſoners the next Morning by Eight of the Clock; and all that Night they employ'd themſelves to quench the Fire in the Town. The loſs of Men in the Storm were not many; Mr. Martin an Officer in the Train had his Leg ſhot, and afterwards cut off, whereof he died.

Wedneſday, July 23. the Town was Surrendered, about 1000 Officers and Soldiers, beſides Gentlemen and Clergy, marched out as Priſoners. There were taken in the Town about forty four Barrels of Powder, 1500 Arms, forty four Pieces of Ordnance, 400 weight of Match, Goods of great value, that had been carried for ſecurity into that place, and were ſeiſed by the Commiſſioners of the Parliament and Sold; and Three Shillings a Man raiſed upon the Sale, to be beſtowed as a Reward upon the Common Soldiers for their Service in Storming of the Place.

The taking this Town was of conſiderable advantage to the Parliament, for by it a Line of Gariſons was drawn over that Iſthmus of Ground between the South Sea and Severn, by Bridgewater, Taunton, Lime, and Langport, it being from Bridgewater to Lime little above twenty miles, by which the Counties of Devon and Cornwall, then wholly at the King's Devotion, except Plimouth, were in a manner block'd up from all intercourſe with the Eaſtern Parts: And likewiſe this being taken, their Army was at liberty for further Exploits.

Friday, July 25. a Council of War was called, to adviſe whether to march up Weſt to General Goring, or to ſtay in the Eaſtern Parts to curb the Club-men; and in favour of this latter, it was conſidered, that the Army wanted Ammunition to march far Weſt, to undertake any conſiderable action; and there being alſo ſeveral Gariſons of the King's, by which the Club-men were Encouraged to ſhew themſelves. It was therefore inclined unto by ſome, that the Army ſhould firſt make it their buſineſs to reduce the Club-men, and to that end, to attempt the taking, or at leaſt the Blockading of that Gariſon, which moſt countenanced them, viz. Sherborn-Caſtle, where Sir Lewis Dives an active and reſolute Soldier was Commander in Chief; but the determination of the Council of War was, notwithſtanding to advance rather more Weſt, to proſecute this late Succeſs at Langport and Bridgewater, and hinder Goring from rallying his Forces, or raiſing any conſiderable Body, leaving ſome Force to attend Prince Rupert's motion about Briſtol, and to diſturb the Club-men if they frequented meetings as formerly. A March being thus reſolv'd on, it was accordingly undertaken on the Morrow, whence the Army marched to Martock*, ten miles, where reſting the Lords-day, there was a Thankſgiving for the Succeſs in the taking of Bridgewater. The General, tho' he accounted it his greateſt ſafety, to act according to the advice of his Council of War, yet was at this time much troubled in his own thoughts concerning his March further Weſt, before Bath and Sherborn, and the Club-men were reduc'd, reckoning it alſo a Service of Importance to take in Bath; in order to the ſtraitning of Briſtol, and hindering Prince Rupert from raiſing any conſiderable Force in thoſe Parts.

Whereupon his Excellency took a Reſolution to march back, and accordingly came to Wells that Night, with part of the Army and Train, being fourteen miles, and ſent a Brigade of Horſe and Foot unto Sherborn, under the Command of Colonel Pickering, to face that Gariſon, and if there were hopes to reduce it, to ſit down before it, in order to a Siege. The Horſe-quarters this Night were nearer unto Bath, and more Forces were ſent to get between Bath and Briſtol; having Intelligence that their Diſtractions were ſuch in Bath, the Townſmen not willing to bear Arms, nor yet to receive Soldiers from Briſtol, which was then infected, and the Soldiers too few to keep it, ſo that the Governour Sir Tho. Bridges had quitted it, had not Prince Rupert ſent about 100 Men to him with poſitive Orders to ſtay; that they would eaſily be driven to quit it: And in the mean time the General ſtayed at Wells.

Tueſday the 29*th*, Col. Rich faced Bath with Horſe and Dragoons, Summoned the Town, but the Governour refuſed to Surrender. Towards Evening ſome Dragoons Commanded by Col. Okey, were drawn near the Bridge, and crept on their Bellies over it to the Gate, ſeiſed on the ſmall end of the Guards Muſquets, which they put through the Loop-holes of the Gate, taking hold of the Barrels of the Muſquets, and cried to them within to take Quarter; whereupon they ran to their Work which flankered the Bridge, and left their Muſquets behind them. The Aſſailants on this advantage inſtantly fired the Gate, and became Maſters of the Bridge, upon which the Deputy-Governour ſent for a Parley, and the Town was yielded upon Articles, making the Common Soldiers, who were about 140, Priſoners, and having Conditions for the Officers to march away to what Gariſon they pleaſed. There were found in the Town Six Pieces of Ordnance, Four hundred Arms, Twelve Barrels of Powder; the Works, beſides the Wall of the City, ſtrong and tenable. Prince Rupert was advanced with a Party of Fifteen hundred Horſe and Foot from Briſtol, within four miles to relieve it, but coming too late retreated.

The motions of Fairfax's Army in the Weſt.

Wedneſday, July the 30*th*, the Army was drawn up to Mendeep Hills, with intention to march to Bath, but upon Intelligence the Horſe and Dragoons alone had taken the Town, Fairfax ſent back the Army to Wells, marching only with two Regiments of Foot to Bath (which he intended to leave there for the ſecurity of that place, and parts thereabouts.) The General Quartered there that Night, and ſetled things for the ſafety of that Place, and in the Afternoon following returned to Wells, leaving two Regiments at Bath.

Friday, Auguſt the firſt, the Army marched from Wells to Queen-Camel, where the Head-Quarter was that Night, but the General himſelf went with a few Horſe to Sherborn, viewing the Works and Caſtle, and Quartered there that Night. And on Saturday, Auguſt the ſecond, the General and Lieut. Gen. rode again to the Lodge, and upon a ſecond view and obſervation, conceiving the Place reducible, Guards were appointed nearer, and Orders given for a cloſe Siege.

That day Intelligence came that the Club-men of three Counties, viz. Dorſet, Wilts, and Somerſet, were to meet at Shaftsbury, and might be ſurprized. Whereupon Col. Fleetwood was Commanded forth with a good Party of Horſe, who accordingly incompaſſed them in the Town with about 1000 Horſe, and took about fifty, whereof Mr. Hollis, Carey, Young, Cradock, and Dr. Goche were the Chief, who being brought Priſoners by a Guard of Horſe, were after the reducement of Sherborn, ſent to London with other Priſoners.

On the Lords-day, Aug. 3. News came that all the Country of Wilts and Dorſet, and part of Somerſet were up in Arms, and would have a Rendezvous of 10000 Men at leaſt, to fetch off their Leaders; but privately Fairfax underſtood it was to Interrupt his Siege, and to hinder Proviſions from coming to the Leaguer; giving out withal, that General Goring with his Army was coming out of the Weſt to Relieve Sherborn.

On Monday, Aug. 4. L.Gen. Cromwel having Intelligence of ſome of their Places of Rendezvous, for their ſeveral Diviſions, went forth with a Party of Horſe to meet with them, and towards Shaftsbury diſcovered ſome Colours upon the top of an high Hill, full of Wood and almoſt inacceſſible; a Lieutenant with a ſmall Party was ſent to them to know their meaning, and to acquaint them that the Lieut. Gen. of the Army was there. Whereupon one Mr. Newman one of their Leaders thought fit to come down, and told Cromwell their intent was to know why the Gentlemen were taken at Shaftsbury on Saturday? The Lieut. Gen. return'd this Anſwer, That he held himſelf not bound to give him or them an account: What was done was by Authority, and they that did it were not reſponſible to them that had none: But not to leave them wholly unſatisfied, he told him that thoſe Perſons ſo met, had been the occaſions and ſtirrers of many Tumultuous and Unlawful Meetings, for which they were to be tryed by Law; which Tryal by them ought not to be queſtioned, or interrupted. Mr. Newman deſired to go up to return the Anſwer. Cromwell with a ſmall Party went with him, and had ſome Conſerence with the People to this purpoſe: That whereas they pretended to meet there to ſave their Goods, they took a very ill courſe for that, ſince to leave their Houſes was the way to loſe their Goods; and it was offered them, that Juſtice ſhould be done upon any who offered them violence: And as for the Gentlemen taken at Shaftsbury, Cromwell told them it was only to anſwer ſome things they were accuſed of, which they had done contrary to Law, and the Peace of the Kingdom. Herewith they ſeeming to be well ſatisfied, promiſed to return to their Houſes, and accordingly did ſo.

Cromwell's Interview with the Weſtern Men in Arms, and ſatisfies them.

Theſe being thus quietly ſent home, Cromwell advanced further to a meeting of a greater number, viz. about 4000, who betook themſelves to Hambleton Hill, near Shrawton; which had been an Old Roman Work, deeply Trenched: The Lieut. Gen. ſent thither a Lieutenant with a Party of Horſe, to require an account of their meeting? He was anſwered with half a dozen of ſhot, and could could get no other anſwer; thereupon one Mr. Lee, who upon Cromwell's approach came from them, was ſent in, requiring them to ſubmit to the Power and Protection of the Parliament, and to lay down their Arms; they refuſed to leave their Arms, and gave ſome more ſhots. Cromwell ſent Mr. Lee again, to tell them that if they would not lay down their Arms, he would fall upon them.

And attacks them, and diſperſes them.

But they ſtill refuſing, Order was given to the General's Troop to fall on, who did ſo, and received a repulſe, ſome kill'd, eight or nine Wounded, and ſix or ſeven Horſes ſlain; for the Club-men ſhot briskly from the Bank of the Old Work, and kept the narrow paſſage with Muſquets, and other Weapons: But then Major Deſborough with the General's Regiment, went round about a Ledge of the Hill, and made a hard ſhift to climb up and enter on their Rear; which they no ſooner diſcerned, but after a ſhort diſpute they ran, and the paſſage formerly aſſaulted was opened, and all the Club-men diſperſed, and diſarmed, ſome ſlain, many Wounded, the reſt ſlid and tumbled down that ſteep Hill, with great hazard; there were brought away about 400 of them to Shrawton, of which near 200 were Wounded in this Skirmiſh; Capt. Paltiſon was ſore hurt, of which afterward he died, and about twelve more. There were taken about twelve Colours, the Motto of one of them was thus: If you offer to Plunder our Cattle, be aſſured we will bid you Battel.

The greater part of theſe Priſoners after Examination touching their Chief Inſtigators, Deſigns and Correſpondencies, were upon their Parole never to intermeddle any more in that kind, diſmiſſed and ſent home.

Cromwell returns to the Siege of Sherborn.

And ſo Cromwell return'd to the Leaguer before Sherborn, Aug. 5 on which day a Commanded Party crept under the ſhelter of the Stone-wall, cloſe by the Caſtle, and gained the Hay-Stack, within a Stone's-caſt of their Works.

Wedneſday, Aug. 6. the Beſieged making a New Work to Plant Ordnance to beat them from that Hay-Stack, were themſelves beat off, and their Cannon diſmounted. But Fairfax had in that Service four Captains Wounded, and one Slain. And now all things were in a preparation to Storm; the Soldiers had every one his Faggot; another Summons was ſent unto the Caſtle to Surrender, but a denial was returned; whereupon a Council of War was called, and it was reſolved, That ſince a whole Cannon was upon the way from Portſmouth, and that from Mendeep Hills might be had Excellent Miners, therefore they would proceed in Approaches and Batteries, being well inform'd that the Ground whereon the Caſtle ſtood was Mineable.

This day towards Evening, Capt. Horſey another of Col. Rainſborough's Officers was ſhot dead in the Place with a Birding-Piece, from one of the Towers, who with Capt. Lieut. Flemming of Col. Rainsborough's Regiment, (who was ſhot before) were the next day Buried after a Martial manner in the Church at Sherborn, being the Place where Capt. Horſey's Anceſtors were Intombed.

Very freely did the Soldiers work in the Mines and Galleries, and making of Batteries, every Man rewarded Twelve-pence apiece for the Day, and as much for the Night, for the Service was hot and hazardous.

By Monday, Aug. 11. the whole Cannon, and Money for the Army long expected, came to the Head-Quarter. And Fairfax had Intelligence, that Maj. Gen. Maſſey's Horſe, who were Quartered near Taunton to Interrupt General Goring's Forces in caſe they advanced this way, had fallen on ſome of his Horſe and taken ſeveral Priſoners.

Tueſday, Aug. 12. the Mendeep Miners came and were ſet to work; the Gariſon threw fiery Faggots over thoſe Parts of the Wall where the Miners were, and where a Bridge likewiſe was making (over a little Rivulet) which Bridge was in Part burnt thereby, but the Soldiers quenched it, and a Meſſage was ſent to Sir Lewis Dives, That if he pleas'd to ſend out his Lady, or any other Women, he might: Sir Lewis acknowledged the favour, ſeemed to incline to accept of it, but gave no poſitive anſwer, expreſſing withal his reſolution (Soldier-like) to hold out to the laſt.

Batteries raiſed.

Wedneſday, Aug. 13. the Canon and Demi-canon were planted on the New Battery, where another Chief Gunner of Fairfax's was ſlain, beſides one Jenkins, another Gunner was ſhot from the Tower. The Miners wrought within two yards of the Wall, where the Rock appearing, 'twas thought it would have given more interruption than it did, but it proving but a ſoft ſtone, was eaſily wrought through.

Thurſday, Aug. 14. the Great Guns began to play about Eleven of the Clock, and before Six had made a Breach in the Wall, that ten a breaſt might enter, and had beaten down one of the Towers, which much diſheartned thoſe within. On this occaſion the great adventurouſneſs of many of the Soldiers comes fitly to be remembred, who (whilſt their Cannon play'd hard upon the Caſtle and wanted ſhot) fetcht off the Bullets (that had been ſhot) from under the very Walls, and had Six-pence apiece for every Bullet they ſo brought off. After the Breach ſo made, Fairfax ſent a third Summons to Surrender the Caſtle, or to expect Extremity: Which Meſſage being ſtoutly delivered by the Drummer, he ſaid, He deſerved to be Hanged. And ſent an Anſwer to this purpoſe: That the Language was ſo far differing from what he had formerly received, that he could not believe that it came from the ſame hand, but ſaid, that he would not loſe his Honour to ſave his Life: And if the laſt happen'd, he ſhould think it well beſtow'd in his Majeſty's Service.

But by this time the Approaches were ſo near, that they within could have no uſe of their Muſquets, only threw down Stones: And this day the Beſiegers Soldiers upon the Guard, (Commanded then by Col. Ingoldesby) gained the Tower in the corner of the Caſtle, out of which their Muſquetiers play'd into the Caſtle; and ſo near did they venture to the Walls from the Gallery, that they pulled the Wool out of the Wool-Sacks that lay on the Works, which cauſed that ſtrong Guards were ſet by the Gariſon, and in the Night great Fires were made in the Caſtle to diſcover the Enemies Approaches and Mines.

Sherborn Capitulates.

Friday, Aug. 15. at Two in the Morning the Governour ſent out a Drummer with a Meſſage, that he was willing to Surrender upon Honourable Terms. Anſwer was returned, No Terms but Quarter, ſeeing he had ſlipt and ſlighted the opportunity; and he was not to expect that, except he rendred ſpeedily. Immediately the General went in Perſon to the Works, and viewed the Caſtle within over the Wall, and gave Orders for all things to be prepared for a Storm, every Soldier to cut his freſh Faggot, whereby by in two Hours they had above 6000 Faggots, with which they were to fill the Trenches, and to throw Stones and Rubbiſh upon them. Whilſt this was in doing, the Soldiers that had before gained one Tower, recovered alſo another; and out of the ſame Towers did great Execution, (Sir Lewis Dives his Secretary being ſlain by a ſhot from thence) and ſoon after inforc'd them from their Guns within, which they had planted to oppoſe the Entrance at the Breach. The Miners had by this time wrought quite through the Foundation of the Wall, and the Foot play'd ſo hard from the Breach, that Sir Lewis Dives's Men were forced to quit the Great Court within the Caſtle; which much diſheartned them, eſpecially ſeeing Fairfax's Soldiers coming forwards with Faggots on their Backs to fall on, ſome of them before their time appointed leaping over the Works, all which concurring, they within hung out a White-Flag, had no power to make oppoſition, ſent a Drum for to crave Quarter, but before he could get out, and return, a great part of Fairfax's Foot were entred, they within had thrown down their Arms, and cryed for Quarter, which was given, but ſtript they were very ſeverely, all except Sir Lewis Dives and his Lady, and ſome few more, and ſo Fairfax became Maſter of the Caſtle, and all within it. The Soldiers finding Plunder of great Value, the taking of which in a diſorderly manner could not then be prevented. There was taken about 400 Priſoners in the Caſtle, beſides Sir Lewis Dives the Governour, Col. Giles Strangeways, formerly a Member of Parliament, Sir John Walcot, Col. Thornhill, and others of Quality; Eighteen Pieces of Ordnance, and a Mortar-Piece.

The Soldiers Spoil laſted all that day, and moſt part of the Night, and on Saturday, Aug. 16. being Market-day, with the Booty they had got, kept a great Market to the Country, who bought the Goods of them. And all this Day and the next was ſpent in ordering the diſpoſal of Priſoners, and in conſidering what to do with the Gariſon, which not above two or three days after was ordered to be ſlighted.

The General views Nunney-Caſtle, and is Surrendred.

Sherborn being thus fallen into the Parliament's Power, their Army on the Reaſons mentioned in Cromwell's Letter herein after recited, reſolv'd next to Inveſt Briſtol, where Prince Rupert then was with a conſiderable Gariſon. Accordingly Orders were given, and Fairfax's Army on Auguſt the 18*th* marched to Caſtle-Carey: Only a Party was detached forth under Col. Rainsborough, conſiſting of his own and Col. Hammond's Regiment, and two Pieces of Ordinance to ſit down before Nunney-Caſtle, whither the next day Fairfax went himſelf to view it, and found it to be a very ſtrong Place. The Head-Quarter was that Night at Shipton-Mallet, but five miles from Carew, far enough for the Train, which was four miles behind from the Quarters the Night before. But to expedite, what might be this deſign againſt Briſtol, 2000 Horſe and Dragoons were ſent under the Command of Commiſſary General Ireton, to Block it up. The next Day the Army marched to Chue nine miles; Meſſengers were ſent to the Vice-Admiral, Captain Moulton, Riding about Milford-haven, to ſend Ships into King's-Road, to Block up Briſtol by Sea. In the mean time Prince Rupert did not imagin their Forces ſo near, or that they had any deſign upon Briſtol. And by a Trumpeter that came with a Meſſage from thence, they ſeemed to be ſo far from a belief thereof, that he ſaid he did not expect to find them on that ſide Sherborn; and when he met their Horſe, he took them to be the King's. That Night there was a ſtrong Party of Horſe, and one Regiment of Foot diſpos'd at Hannam, within three miles of Briſtol, on Glouceſterſhire ſide, by whom the Prince was Alarmed.

Fairfax advances towards Bedminſter.

Thurſday, Aug. 21. in the Morning, Fairfax receiv'd Intelligence of the Surrender of Nunney-Caſtle to Col. Rainsborough, upon Condition to have liberty to go to their own Houſes. By reaſon of the Train coming in ſo late, the Army reſted that Day at Chue, ſave that another Party of Horſe and Foot advanced towards Bedminſter, upon Intelligence that the Prince intended to break through with his Horſe, and Joyn with General Goring, with which Party the General and Lieutenant General went and viewed the Town, and appointed Guards and Quarters on the Weſt-ſide of the River, and Quartered himſelf at Keniſome that Night, where divers Lords ſent for Paſſes to come out of the City and go beyond Sea, but were deny'd. It being a received opinion, That Perſons of Quality and great Eſtate, in a Beſieged Town, rather incline to a timely yielding, than hazardous defending thereof, when no Relief is at hand.

Fairfax marches towards Briſtol, and orders matter for the Beſieging it.

Friday the 22*d*, there was a General Rendezvous of Horſe, and all that Day was ſpent in ſetting of Guards on Somerſetſhire-ſide, where the Country-men maintained a Paſſage at Clyfton, the Head-Quarter being remov'd that Night to Hannam.

Saturday the 23*d*, the General and Lieutenant-General employed the whole Day in the ſetling of Quarters and Guards on the other ſide of Briſtol. This Day the City-Cannon played from the great Fort, and Pryors-Fort, but hurt none but one Dragoon, who had his Thigh ſhot off. Alſo a Sally was made with a Party of Horſe, who were beaten in again, and Sir Richard Crane, that led them, mortally Wounded, and preſently after died.

On the Lords-day, Aug. 24. the Beſieged about Noon Sallied out again at the Sally-Port near Pryor-Hill Fort, in a full Career, and were upon the Enemies Dragooners on the ſudden; yet by coming on of Horſe, were beaten back again, as alſo their Foot were by the Foot of Col. Rainsborough's Brigade, made to Retreat in diſorder.

Monday, Aug. 25. Warrants were Iſſued out by Fairfax to Sir John Horner High Sheriff of the County of Somerſet, to raiſe the Power of the County, which was much promoted by the Intereſt and Endeavours of Mr. Aſh and Mr. Moor, two Members of the Houſe of Commons. This Day the Parliament's Army had Intelligence, that General Goring, then about Collumpton in Devon, did ſeem to draw to a Rendezvous, as if he intended a March to Interrupt the Siege, but Major General Maſſey's Brigade of Horſe were Quarter'd not far from Taunton, in ſuch an advantagious Poſture, that they could not move, but he might Flank them, and interrupt their motion, whilſt Fairfax's Horſe might draw off to meet them, in caſe they ſhould attempt the forementioned deſign.

Ann. 1645.

Sallies from the Town.

Tueſday, Aug. 26. Four a Clock in the Morning, a third Sally was made on Somerſet-ſide on a Poſt of Col. Welden's Brigade at Bedminſter, and through the negligence of the Officer that had then the Command there, they took ten, and killed as many. But the ſame day, Capt. Molleneux, (Capt. Lieutenant to Col. Butler) and with him another ſtout Soldier, perceiving three Gallant Cavaliers, under their Works (whom afterward they ſound to be Sir Bernard Aſtley, Col. Daniel, and a third Man) rode up to them, ask'd them, Who they were for? who anſwering, For the King: And diſcharging upon them, the others replied with their Piſtols; and after ſome Bickering took Sir Bernard Aſtley, who died within few days of his Wounds; but Col. Daniel, tho' dangerouſly Wounded eſcaped.

Wedneſday, Aug. 27. the Gariſon drew out the fourth time, about the cloſe of the Evening, with intention to fall on the Guards; but finding their deſign diſcovered, drew back to their Works.

The Siege of Briſtol continues.

Thurſday, Aug. 28. Prince Rupert ſent out thoſe Foot which were taken Priſoners on Somerſet-ſide, being in number ten, with a Trumpet, propounding alſo an Exchange for Sir Bernard Aſtley, but the Exchange was not hearkned to. This Day Fairfax had Intelligence of the King's Party having Plunder'd Huntingdon, his Majeſty having happily eſcaped the Scotch and Northern Horſe, out of Notinghamſhire. Mean while the Foot at Portſhead Point that had been four Days Beſieged by Lieut. Col. Kempſon, of Col. Welden's Regiment, with a Party of Foot, was with ſix Pieces of Ordnance Surrendred, whereby the Paſſage into King's-Road with Ships was made open.

Friday, Aug. 29. a Faſt was kept through the Army, which the Gariſon endeavoured to interrupt by a Sally about Noontime, upon their Quarters near Lawford's-Gate, where they took ſome Priſoners. And now it was propounded whether to Storm Briſtol or not? The Debate was long, Opinions various; however it was agreed that all things ſhould be prepared in Order to a Storm, and afterwards to take into further conſideration, Whether to Storm or to Entrench the Leaguer. In the midſt of theſe thoughts and reſolutions, tidings were brought the Army of the Defeat given by Montroſs to the Scots, and that he was marched to Edenborough in purſuit thereof; and that the King was now advanced to Bedford unfollowed, and was expected ſpeedily to raiſe the Siege at Briſtol; and towards Evening the Intelligence was confirmed by Letters from the Committee of both Kingdoms, of the King's ſpeedy march towards Oxford, and probably to theſe Parts. At the ſame time Fairfax had Advice that General Goring in the Weſt advanced his Quarters nearer Chard, and as it was verily thought, intended a Conjunction with the King.

On the Lords-day, Aug. 31. Capt. Moulton, Admiral for the Iriſh Coaſts (who was now come into Severn) came from Aboard the Ship to General Fairfax, expreſſed much readineſs to aſſiſt in Storming of the City (if it were ſo determined) with his Seamen. A Debate was then had concerning that Affair, and what might be done by Water with the aſſiſtance of the Seamen. General Goring's Letters from Exceter to Secretary Nichols, bearing Date Aug. 25. were this day intercepted; wherein he ſignified that in three Weeks time he would be ready to Interrupt Fairfax in his Siege.

Monday,

The Beſieged Sally the ſixth time, and are repulſed.

Monday, Sept. 1. the Weather wet and miſty, about Twelve at Noon Prince Rupert with a 1000 Horſe and 600 Foot Sallied out the ſixth time, in a full Career, and came upon Fairfax's Horſe-Guards with much fierceneſs and Gallantry; but the Horſe inſtantly came up, and with the aſſiſtance of the Foot of Col. Rainsborough's Brigade forced them to a Retreat: On the Parliament's ſide was loſt in that Skirmiſh Capt. Guilliams, a Captain of Horſe; Col. Okey a Colonel of Dragoons (it being in the miſt) was taken Priſoner. At that time further Advertiſements confirm'd the King's advance from Oxford towards Briſtol. Whereupon Orders were given for all the Colonels to view the Line and Works, and for the Soldiers to make Faggots, and all fitting Preparations for a Storm.

By a Council it was reſolved to Storm Briſtol

Tueſday, Sept. 2. A Council of War being called, and all the Colonels preſent; after a long Debate, Whether to Storm or no? it was put to the Queſtion, and reſolved in the Affirmative; and for the manner of the Storm, it was referred to a Committee of the Colonels of the Army, to preſent in Writing to the General the next Morning to be Debated at a General Council of War: Accordingly Wedneſday, Sept. 3. the manner of the Storm was preſented in Writing to the General, which was propoſed thus: Colonel Welden with his Brigade, conſiſting of the four Regiments that were at Taunton, (viz. his own, Col. Ingolsby's, Col. Forteſcue's, and Col. Herbert's Regiments, whoſe Poſts were to make good Somerſetſhire-ſide) to Storm in three Places, viz. 200 Men in the middle, 200 on each ſide, as Forlorn-hopes; twenty Ladders to each Place, two Men to carry each Ladder, and to have Five Shillings apiece; two Serjeants that attended the Service of the Ladder, to have Twenty Shillings a Man: Each Muſquetier that followed the Ladder, to carry a Faggot, a Serjeant to Command them, and to have the ſame Reward: Twelve Files of Men with Fire-Arms and Pikes to follow the Ladders to each Place where the Storm was to be; thoſe to be Commanded each by a Captain, and a Lieutenant: The Lieutenant to go before with five Files, the Captain to ſecond him with the other ſeven Files; the 200 Men that were appointed to Second the Storm, to be furniſht each Party of them with twenty Pioneers, who were to march in their Reer; the 200 Men, each to be Commanded by a Field-Officer, and the Pioneers each by a Serjeant: (Thoſe Pioneers were to throw down the Line, and make way for the Horſe:) the Party that was to make good the Line, to poſſeſs the Guns, and turn them: A Gentleman of the Ordnance, Gunners, and Matroſſes, to enter with the Parties: The Draw-Bridge to be let down; two Regiments and a half to Storm in after the Foot, if way were made. Much after this manner were the General's Brigade, under Col. Montague's Command, conſiſting of the General's, Col. Montague's, Col. Pickering's, and Sir Hardreſs Waller's Regiments, to Storm on both ſides of Lawford's Gate, both to the River Avon, and to the leſſer River Froom: The Bridge over Froom to be made good againſt Horſe with Pikes, or to break it down. Col. Rainsborough's Brigade, conſiſting of his own, Major Gen. Skippon's, Col. Hammond's, Col. Birch's, and Lieutenant Col. Pride's Regiments, to Storm on this ſide the River Froom, beginning on the Right hand of the Sally-Port up to Pryor's-Hill Fort, and to Storm the Fort it ſelf, as the main buſineſs; 200 of this Brigade to go up in Boats with the Seamen to Storm Waterfort (if it were to be attempted) one Regiment of Horſe, and a Regiment of Foot, to be moving up and down in the Cloſes before the Royal Fort, and to ply hard upon it, to alarm it, with a Field-Officer to Command them. The Regiment of Dragoons, with two Regiments of Horſe, to carry Ladders with them, and to attempt the Line and Works by Clypton and Waſhington's Breach.

The manner of Storming reſolved on.

The manner of the Storm being thus agreed on, the Soldiers were drawn out to try their inclinations; and the General to make good his Promiſe to reward them for the Service of Bridgewater, ordered them immediately to receive Six Shillings a Man, which by the Commiſſioners of Parliament was forthwith paid unto them, and which put a great Obligation upon the Soldiers.

At this Council of War it was alſo agreed, that a Letter ſhould be written, and ſubſcribed by the General, and all the Officers, to General Leven, to expreſs how ſenſible they were of the Loſſes their Forces had received in Scotland by Montroſs; (the Particulars of which ſhall be given in the particular Chapter of the Affairs of that Kingdom) and their willingneſs to ſerve them, if need were, for the ſetling of their Nation in Peace, ſo ſoon as the condition of this Kingdom could ſpare them. The Copy of which Letter followeth in theſe words:

May it pleaſe your Excellency and the reſt Honoured Friends, and Beloved Brethren,

A Letter from Fairfax's Army to the Scot's Army.

WE have, not without much grief, received the ſad report of your Affairs in Scotland; how far God, for his beſt and ſecret Ends, hath been pleaſed to ſuffer the Enemy to prevail there: And are (we ſpeak unfeignedly) not leſs ſenſible of your evils, than you have been and are of ours, nor than we are of our own. And the greater cauſe we have of ſimpathy with you, the more do our Bowels earn towards you, becauſe whatever you now ſuffer your ſelves in your own Kingdom, are chiefly occaſioned by your aſſiſting us in ours, againſt the Power that was riſen up againſt the Lord himſelf, and his Anointed ones. Wherefore we cannot forget your Labour of Love, but thought good at this ſeaſon even amongſt our many occaſions, to let you know, that when the Affairs of this Kingdom will poſſibly diſpence with us, the Parliament allowing, and you accepting of our Aſſiſtance, we ſhall be moſt willing, if need ſo require to help and ſerve you faithfully in your own Kingdom, and to engage our ſelves to ſuppreſs the Enemy there, and to eſtabliſh you again in Peace. In the mean time we ſhall endeavour to help you by our Prayers, and to wreſtle with God, for one Bleſſing of God upon both Nations; between whom, beſides many other ſtrong Relations and Engagements we hope the Unity of Spirit ſhall be the ſureſt bond of Peace. And this whatever Suggeſtions or Jealouſies may have been to the contrary, we deſire you would believe, as you ſhall ever really find to proceed from integrity of heart, a ſenſe of your Sufferings, and a full purpoſe to anſwer any Call of God to your Aſſiſtance: As become,

Your Chriſtian Friends and Servants in the Lord,

The Report concerning the Storm being made unto the Council of War, and fully agreed unto, the Cannon-Baskets were Ordered to be filled, Seamen and Boats ſent for.

Thurſday, *Sept.*4. the Weather that had been ſo extream wet before, that many Soldiers died thereby (and with extream hard duty) began to alter. The Aſſailants play'd their Great Guns from off the New Battery againſt Pryors-Fort. Summons was alſo prepared to be ſent to P. Rupert; and being agreed unto, were ſent in accordingly: But the ſame and moſt other Remarkable paſſages of this Siege, being at large expreſs'd in Prince Rupert's Narrative thereof, together with an Apologetical Declaration he ſoon after the Surrender of the City (apprehending himſelf ſcandaliz'd by ſome of the King's Party concerning that Affair) cauſed to be publiſh'd, I conceive it will be more to the ſatisfaction of Poſterity to deliver it in the words of that Valiant Prince, faithfully Reprinted, as followeth.

A Declaration of His Highneſs Prince Rupert.

NOT that His Highneſs thinks to juſtifie himſelf to thoſe, who by that muſt condemn themſelves: Nor that he believes any thing he hath done needs a Declaration, does he publiſh this to the World: But he thought it might not be unneceſſary to the Service of his Majeſty (in order to which all his Actions have been directed) to let the World ſee that he hath faithfully ſerved Him, and that his Enemies had no other reaſon for his accuſation, than that they found it neceſſary for their defence. His Highneſs is not ignorant how great a difficulty he hath undertaken in ſatisfying the People, who are as ſevere in the Actions of others as they are partial in their own, and who cenſure all by ſucceſs; which judgment, how unjuſt it is, the meaneſt underſtanding, even thoſe brought againſt him, muſt confeſs. Yet with theſe diſadvantages muſt he now appear, and he is confident that through them all he ſhall let the miſinformed Kingdom ſee that his honour is as much above the malice of his Enemies as their competition. His Highneſs will not go back to the beginning of theſe times, nor particularly mention his Actions in this War, altho' he believes he may without vanity ſay, that neither Integrity nor Induſtry hath been wanting in any of them: nor that there hath ſcarce been any Service where he hath not appeared in his Perſon and his Care; which how ſucceſsful it hath been in ſeveral occaſions the Kingdom will be his witneſs, and where the event hath been contrary, His Majeſty and the Armies will acquit him of his part in it. And he eſteems it his happineſs to have ſerved the King in difficult times, where he hath appeared with him in good and ill-fortune, aſſiſted by the Gallantry of thoſe Gentlemen who neither in danger nor disfavour have forſaken him, of whoſe affections he ſhall ever make a juſt and proportioned acknowledgment. But ſince (as it is the fate of thoſe in the condition of his Highneſs) he hath had his actions imperfectly, if not maliciouſly related, examined at a diſtance, and accordingly cenſured: Since he is become the ſubject of every ones paſſion, how unjuſt ſoever, and of every opinion, altho' never ſo weak; His Highneſs thought it was a right he owed the King's Service and himſelf (whom he will ever conſider laſt) to publiſh in the following Narrative, the integrity and reaſons of his proceedings, that it might appear, that as his Highneſs hath faithfully ſerved the King, he hath not ſerved him unadviſedly, but like a Soldier, as well as a Man of Honour. And all the World, even his enemies ſhall ſee, that his Actions (to ſay no more) have been as far from injuring his Majeſty's cauſe, as theirs from defending it.

A Narrative of the ſtate and condition of the City and Gariſon of Briſtol, when his Highneſs Prince Rupert came thither; of the actions there during the Siege, of the Treaties and Rendition thereof.

HIS Majeſty, after the Battel of Naſeby, Retreating towards Hereford, intending to recruit his Army by new Levies in thoſe Parts; His Highneſs, Prince Rupert croſs'd the Severn-Sea to viſit his Highneſs the Prince of Wales; and by his Perſonal preſence, to inform himſelf more fully of the condition of his Majeſty's Forces in the Weſtern parts. In his return, he paſſed through the Lord Goring his Army, thereby to ſettle and order things ſo there, as might moſt advantage his Majeſty's future Service: and immediately after, his Highneſs intending to provide for a Train of Artillery, and other Neceſſaries for his Majeſty's Army, repaired to Briſtol, where the then preſent conſtitution of the Gariſon had by the eſtabliſhment Contribution ſetled for 3600 men, for that and the ſubordinate Gariſons, as Nunney, Portſend Point, &c. But at his coming thither, the Preſidiary Soldiers (which went by reputation, for 800, or 900 Men, and for ſome reaſons unknown to his Highneſs, it was not thought fit or convenient by them who took upon them the power to have them called to a Muſter) were really in the judgment of honeſt and judicious Perſons, whoſe ſafeties were concerned in it, betwixt 500, or 600 effective. The Auxiliary and Trained Bands, by interruption of Trade and Commerce, by the Peſtilence then raging there, by their poverty and preſſures laid upon them, were reduced to 800; and the Mariners, for want of imployment, betook themſelves to other parts, or to the Enemy.

The Commiſſioners intruſted for the Contribution and ſupport of the Gariſon, upon the Enemies approach, abandoned the Town, and many conſiderable Perſons had liberty given them, and quitted the Town, which much weakned and diſheartned the reſt.

For the ſecuring of that place, his Highneſs drew in ſo many, that made the Gariſon 2300 Men upon ſight: But after the Enemy approach'd his Highneſs could never draw upon the Line above 1500, and it was impoſſible for his Highneſs to keep them from getting over the Works, and many of thoſe were new Levied Welſh, and unexperienced Men.

The Line which was to be defended, was above four miles in compaſs, the Breaſt-work low and thin, the Graff very narrow, and of no depth; and by the opinion of all the Colonels (whoſe Judgments and Votes were required upon all important occaſions) not tenable upon a brisk or vigorous aſſault.

The great Fort, which had the reputation of ſtrength, lay open to Brandon-Hill Fort, which being taken, would from its height with the Cannon, command the whole Plain within it, and that wanting Water was not to be kept many days. For the like conſideration of danger to the Line from another part, his Highneſs built a Redoubt without, which on that ſide prevented the Enemy from erecting a Battery, as likewiſe three other during the Siege, and drew a Line of 500 Foot.

After the misfortune which hapned to the Lord Goring his Army, the loſs of Bridgewater and Sherborn, and upon his Majeſty's ſudden receſs out of Wales, his Highneſs not having received any Command or intimation to follow him, he thought it might be more conducible to his Majeſty's Affairs for him to remain there; and conceiving that the Enemies deſign after their former ſucceſſes, might be for Briſtol, gave expreſs Orders, for all Inhabitants to Victual themſelves for ſix Months: and upon a ſtrict ſurvey, there were 2500 Families then remaining in the City, whereof 1500, through indigence and want, could not provide for themſeves. To ſupply this defect, his Highneſs cauſed 2000 Buſhels of Corn to be imported out of Wales. For further ſupply, his Highneſs, upon the certain approach of the Enemies whole Army, Commanded out Parties to drive in all the Cattel thereabouts; of which there were an indifferent number.

The Ammunition was ſcant (conſidering that in the Forts, Caſtle, Line and Streets, there being above one hundred Cannon mounted) the quantity of Powder exceeding not 130 Barrels: and at his Highneſs firſt coming thither, there was not in the Publick Magazine Musket-balls for three Hours-fight, wherefore he cauſed immediately great quantities of Lead to be caſt into Bullet; and the Manufacture of Match was quite down, and ſet up by his Highneſs during the Siege.

His Highneſs having made all poſſible preparations, conſulted with all us, the Colonels of Poſts, for our opinion concerning the tenableneſs of the Line: our judgment general was, that notwithſtanding, the Works and Line were very defective, the Circuit large, our numbers few; yet if we could repell one General Storm, the Enemy would be diſcouraged from attempting the ſecond time, and the ſeaſon of the Year might advantage us, and incommode them.

Upon this uncertainty his Highneſs made offer, that for his own Perſon he would attempt to break through with his Horſe, with ſuch Officers as could be ſpared, leaving ſuch as were requiſite for the Fort and Caſtle.

This by all us the Colonels of Poſts, and Officers was thought neither ſafe nor honourable. In the ſecond place he offered to put himſelf upon the defence of the Caſtle and Fort; all the Officers were clear of opinion againſt this, in regard of the Nobility and Gentry, and ſuch of the Town as had appeared well affected, and the Horſe and Foot which the Fort and Caſtle could not receive, had thereby been left to the Sword of the Enemy, and in regard the Fort and Caſtle in our opinions were not tenable againſt their Army.

In the third place, ſeeing that neither of the former ways could be taken, we were all reſolved to fall upon the beſt general defence that could be made of the whole, wherein we might all ſhare alike. Theſe were the reſolutions of all we Colonels and Officers of the Poſts, Caſtle and Fort, his Highneſs leaving the free debate unto us, himſelf not being by, upon our own deſires.

Theſe were the reſults at a Council of War, only I do not well remember that the weakneſs of the Caſtle and Fort was at that inſtant, while I was preſent, taken into conſideration.

SIGNED,

F. Hawley, John Ruſſell, Somerſet Fox, Will. Murry, Hen. Osburn, Henry Tillier, Mat. Appleyard.

The State and condition of the Line of Fortifications about the City of Briſtol, as likewiſe of the great Fort (as appears by the Subſcriptions of the Enginiers, who had taken an exact ſurvey of them) were as follows.

THE Line generally was three Foot thick.

The heighth of it five Foot where it was higheſt.

The Graff commonly ſix Foot broad, and where it was wideſt but ſeven.

The depth in moſt parts four Foot, and five where deepeſt.

Between Pryor-Hill Fort, Stoke's Croft-Gate, and beyond the little River towards Lafford's-Gate, in which Places the Enemy entred, not five Foot high.

The Graff five Foot broad, and all that part of the Line much decayed.

The Ditch of the Great Fort on the Right-hand of the Gate before the Face of the Bulwark, was not four Foot deep, and eighteen Foot broad, ſo that Horſes did go up and down into it.

The higheſt Work of the Fort was not twelve Foot high, and the Curtains but ten.

Ann. 1645. Within one hundred Foot of the Fort, there was a deep hollow way, where the Enemy might lodge what numbers he pleaſed, and might be in the Graff the firſt Night, and in that part the Fort was Minable.

Brandon-Hill Fort, was about twelve Foot above the level of the Great Fort, and that being not able to make any long reſiſtance, the Enemy gaining it, would command the other.

The Hedges and Ditches without the Line were neither cut, nor levelled, ſo that they lodged their Men ſecurely near our Works, at their firſt approach.

We do here under our Hands atteſt the Particulars above written to be true.

The Reſolution being then taken for a general defence, his Highneſs diſpoſed all the Colonels to their ſeveral Poſts and Forts upon the Line. His Highneſs being thus ſollicitous for the ſecuring of the Place, the Enemy upon the 22*d* of Auguſt appeared before the Town, upon Pine-Hill to the South-ſide. To Encounter them his Highneſs ſent a party of Horſe Commanded by Sir Richard Crane (who in that action received his Death's Wound) a little before that Bedminſter was fired, upon Intelligence the Enemy intended that Night to Quarter 2000 Men in it, and notwithſtanding the Fire, the Enemy drew thither, and ply'd their Small-ſhot all Night.

Aug. 23. his Highneſs cauſed a Traverſe or Blind of Earth to be made within the Draw-Bridge without Temple-Gate, and the ſame day a Battery was raiſed in the Marſh for ſecuring the River, and ſcouring the Fields beyond it. The Enemy began ſome Breaſt-Works, and a Battery on the Hill without Temple-Gate, with a Traverſe croſs the way to hinder our Sallies.

In this time the Enemy omitted no opportunity to ſollicit the minds of the Inhabitants, Trained-Bands, and Auxiliaries, and to that purpoſe ſent ſecretly in theſe Lines following, Signed and Sealed by Sir Tho. Fairfax, and Oliver Cromwell, as likewiſe further Inſtructions to the Citizens of Briſtol, for the delivery of Briſtol to the Parliament.

WE do hereby promiſe and engage our ſelves, that all ſuch Citizens of Briſtol, now Inhabiting within the ſaid City, which ſhall from henceforth forbear to reſiſt the Army under our Command, in the attempting to enter the ſaid City, and the Lines of Defence, and Forts made about it, and ſhall appear to do their beſt endeavour for the delivering in of the ſame into our Hands, for the uſe of the Parliament, ſhall (in caſe the ſaid City be delivered into our Hands) be ſecured and protected by the Authority of the Parliament, in the enjoyment of their Lives, Liberties and Eſtates, as freely as in former times, and as any other Perſons under the obedience of the Parliament, notwithſtanding any paſt Acts of Hoſtility, or any other thing by them done in the former delivering up of the ſaid City to the Enemy, or maintaining of it againſt the Parliament, or otherwiſe in aſſiſtance of the Enemy. For aſſurance, and in teſtimony whereof We have hereunto ſet our Hands and Seals, this 25*th* of Auguſt, 1645.

Subſcribed and Sealed by

Thomas Fairfax.
Oliver Cromwell.

Further

Further Inſtructions to the Citizens of Briſtol that ſhall endeavour the delivering up of the City to the Parliament's Forces.

1. THAT if any doubtful Expreſſions or defects be conceived to be in the Notes ſent in under our Hands, the ſaid Citizens ſhall have any other Draught to the ſame purpoſe, Signed and Sealed by us in as full and ample Terms, as themſelves ſhall deviſe and ſend forth to us.

2. That what Liberty, Freedom or Immunity the ſaid Citizens ſhall find needful to promiſe to any common Soldiers, or Officers of the Enemy within the Gariſon (not exceeding the degree of Colonels) for the more ſure and ſpeedy delivering up of the ſaid City unto us, ſhall be fully made good by us.

3. That they fall to ſome ſpeedy Reſolution, and attempt for the purpoſes aforeſaid, becauſe elſe we ſhall fall to ſome attempt by our own Forces, and (if thereby through God's bleſſing it be taken) we ſhall hardly be able to with-hold the Soldiers from doing that violence and damage to the City, which we earneſtly deſire and ſtudy to prevent.

4. For the particular way of their attempt we muſt expect advertiſement from them, and cannot particularly direct them, but in general we offer that it may be either by ſeizing the Prince, or poſſeſſing or delivering up ſome Fort or Work which we may enter, or ſetting open ſome Port, or by a general riſing to aſſault and oppoſe the Prince's Forces, or otherwiſe as they ſhall find any ſpeedy opportunity, and upon the perceiving of any ſuch riſing, or attempt of theirs within, we ſhall apply our Forces accordingly to enter for their aſſiſtance, and if by any ſuch means of theirs we enter, we ſhall undertake to ſecure the City from loſs or violence by our Soldiers.

5. If they think themſelves by their own force able to maſter the Enemy, or by any deſign to make themſelves Maſters of the Commanding Forts without our aſſiſtance, we ſhall not bring our Army into the City, unleſs they deſire it.

Upon the Interception of which Papers his Highneſs cauſed ſeveral ſuſpected and active Perſons to be reſtrained, which prevented the deſign, and withal by his Perſonal preſence ſecured the Great Fort from ſurprizal.

In the mean time his Highneſs to interrupt the Enemies working made ſeveral Sallies, all which ſucceeded according to deſign.

Aug. 26. Soon after a Storm being expected by the Enemies drawing great Bodies of Horſe and Foot, his Highneſs double Manned the Line, but nothing followed.

Aug. 28. Five Parliament Ships entred King's-Road, and forc'd Capt. Boone, who commanded the Tenth Whelp, to run up the Severn for ſecurity.

Aug. 29. The Enemy was making a Bridge over Avon to conjoyn their Quarters.

Sept. 3. His Highneſs began a Work, or cutting off within the Line by Lafford's-Gate.

Sir Thomas Fairfax his Summons.

Fairfax's firſt Summons to Briſtol.

SIR, For the Service of the Parliament, I have brought this Army before the City of Briſtol, and do Summon you in their Names to render it, with all the Forts belonging to the ſame into my hands to their uſe. Having uſed this plain Language, as the buſineſs requires, I wiſh it may be as effectual with you, as it is ſatisfactory to my ſelf, that I do a little expoſtulate with you about the Surrender of the ſame, which I confeſs is a way not common, and which I ſhould not have uſed, but in reſpect to ſuch a perſon, and to ſuch a place. I take into conſideration Your Royal Birth, and relation to the Crown of England, Your Honour, Courage, and the Vertue of your Perſon, and the ſtrength of that Place, which you may think Your Self bound, and able to maintain.

SIR, The Crown of England is and will be where it ought to be, we fight to maintain it there, but the King miſled by Evil Councellors, or through a ſeduced heart hath left His Parliament, and His People; (under God the beſt aſſurance of his Crown and Family), the maintenance of this Schiſm is the Ground of this unhappy War on your part,and what ſad effects it hath produced in the three Kingdoms, is viſible to all Men. To maintain the Rights of the Crown of England jointly (a principal part whereof is that the King in Supreme Acts concerning the whole State is not to be adviſed by Men, of whom the Law takes no notice, but by His Parliament the Great Council of the Kingdom; in whom, (as much as Man is capable of) he hears all his People as it were at once, adviſing Him, and in which multitude of Councellors lies His Safety, and His Peoples Intereſt; and to ſet Him right in this, has been the conſtant and faithful endeavour of the Parliament, and to bring thoſe wicked Inſtruments to Juſtice (that have miſled Him) is a principal Ground of our Fighting.

SIR, If God makes this clear to you as he has to us, I doubt not but he will give you a heart to deliver this Place, notwithſtanding all the other conſiderations of Honour, Courage, Fidelity, &c. Becauſe their conſiſtency and uſe in the preſent Buſineſs depends upon the right and wrongfulneſs of this that has been ſaid: and if upon ſuch conviction you ſhould ſurrender it, and ſave the loſs of Blood, or hazard of ſpoiling ſuch a City, it would be an occaſion glorious in its ſelf, and joyful to us for the reſtoring of you to the indear'd affection of the Parliament, and People of England, the trueſt Friends to your Family, it hath in the World.

But if this be hid from your Eyes, and that through your wilfulneſs, this ſo great, ſo famous, and antient a City, and ſo full of People be (by your putting us to force the ſame) expoſed to ruin, and the extremity of War, (which yet we ſhall in that caſe as much as poſſible endeavour to prevent) then I appeal to the righteous God to be Judge between you and us, and to require the wrong.

And let all England judge whether the burning of its Towns, ruining its Cities, and deſtroying its People, be a good requital from a Perſon of your Family, which hath had the Prayers, Tears, Purſes, and Blood of its Parliament and People, and (if you look on either as now divided) which hath ever had that ſame Party both in Parliaments, and amongſt the People moſt zealous for their aſſiſtance, and reſtitution, which you now oppoſe, and ſeek to deſtroy, and whoſe conſtant grief hath been, that their deſires to ſerve your Family have been ever hindred or made fruitleſs by that ſame party about his Majeſty, whoſe Counſels you act, and whoſe Intereſt you purſue in this unnatural War.

I expect your ſpeedy anſwer to the Summons with the return of the Bearer this Evening, and remain,

Sept. 4. 1645. Your Highneſs Humble Servant,

THO. FAIRFAX.

His Highneſs reply was only to know whether he would give leave for a Meſſenger to go to his Majeſty to know his pleaſure, which occaſioned Sir Thomas Fairfax to return this Anſwer.

S I R,

SIR,

THE Overture of ſending to the King to know his pleaſure I cannot give way to, becauſe of delay; I confeſs your anſwer doth intimate your intention not to Surrender without His Majeſty's conſent; yet (becauſe it is but implicit) I ſhall ſend again to know a more poſitive anſwer from your ſelf, which I deſire may be ſuch, as may render me capable to approve my ſelf,

Sept. 5. 1645. Your Highneſs Humble Servant,

THO. FAIRFAX.

Whereupon his Highneſs ſent him theſe following Propoſitions; for during a Treaty we might ſtrengthen our Works within, hear from the King, and had he aſſented unto our demands, we ſhould have required a confirmation of them by the Parliament, which protraction of time would have been our advantage.

At the Council of War, Preſent,

Prince Rupert, Lord Hawley, Lord Lumley, Col. John Ruſſell, Sir Matthew Appleyard, Col. Tillier, Col. Fox, Col. Robert Slingsby, Col. Walter Slingsby, Col. Murrey, Lieut. Col. Osborn.

SIR,

WHereas I received your Letter for the Delivery of the City, Forts, and Caſtle of Briſtol, and being willing to joyn with you for the ſparing of Blood, and preſerving of His Majeſty's Subjects, I have upon thoſe Grounds and none other, ſent you theſe following Propoſitions.

1. That my ſelf, all Noblemen, Commanders, Officers, Gentlemen, and Soldiers, of Horſe and Foot, that have ſerved either His Majeſty or Parliament in England, or elſwhere, as likewiſe all Perſons whatſoever, Men or Women, now Reſident here in this City of Briſtol, Caſtle, and Forts thereof, ſhall have free liberty to march away out of the ſaid City, Caſtle, and Forts, with their Arms, Flying Colours, Drums Beating, Trumpets Sounding, Piſtols Cockt, Swords Drawn, Matches lighted on both ends, Bullets in their Mouths, and as much Powder as they can carry about them, with all their Bag and Baggage, Horſes, Arms and other Furniture, Ten Pieces of Cannon, Fifty Barrels of Powder, and Match and Bullet proportionable.

2. That neither my own Perſon, nor the Perſon of any Nobleman, Commander, Officer, Gentleman, or Soldier, or any other of mine or their Retinues, be ſearched, moleſted, or troubled, upon what pretence ſoever, but left to their liberties, to depart or ſtay as it ſhall be moſt convenient for them.

3. That none of your Army whatſoever ſhall entice or perſwade any Officer or Soldier of mine from their Regiments or Colours, with any promiſe of Preferment or Rewards.

4. That all ſuch Officers and Soldiers that are hurt, and ſick, and cannot now march out of this City, Caſtle, and Forts, ſhall have liberty to ſtay until they be recovered, and then have ſafe Conduct to go whereſoever they pleaſe, either to any of His Majeſty's Armies, or Gariſons, or their own Houſes, where they may live quiet, in the interim they being ſick and hurt, may be protected by you, and have civil uſage.

5. That all Priſoners taken on both ſides ſince the beginning of this Siege be forthwith ſet at liberty.

6. That my ſelf, and thoſe abovementioned be not required to march further in a day, than what conveniently we may, and that a day or two of reſt may be allowed upon our march if we ſhall find it requiſite; and that we be accommodated with free Quarters during our March, and a ſufficient Convoy to any of the King's Armies or Gariſons which I ſhall name, to ſecure us in our Quarter, and upon our March, from injuries and incivilities that ſhall any way be offered unto us; and likewiſe that there be one hundred and fifty Carriage-Horſes, and forty Wains with ſufficient Teams provided for Carriages of all ſorts.

7. That no Perſon here in theſe Articles mentioned ſhall be in their March, Rendezvous, or Quarters ſtopt, ſearched, or Plundered, upon any pretence whatſoever. That two Officers be appointed by you, the one for accommodation of free Quarters for Officers, Soldiers, and others, and the other for providing of Horſes and Carriages for our Baggage and Train.

8. That all Noblemen, Gentlemen, Clergy-men, Citizens, Reſidents, and any other Perſon within the City, Suburbs, or Liberties of the City of Briſtol, ſhall at any time when they pleaſe have free liberty to remove themſelves, their Goods, and Families, and to diſpoſe thereof at their pleaſures, according to the known and Enacted Laws of the Land, either to live at their own Houſes, or elſewhere, and to enjoy their Houſes, Lands, Goods, and Eſtates, without any moleſtation, and to have Protections for that purpoſe; and this Article to extend to all whoſe Eſtates are Sequeſtred, or not Sequeſtred, and that they may reſt quietly at their Abodes, and travel freely, and ſafely upon their occaſions, and for their better removal they may have Letters of ſafe conduct with Horſes and Carriages at reaſonable Rates upon demand.

9. That all Perſons abovementioned may have liberty to go beyond the Seas at any time within three Months, as their occaſions ſhall require.

10. That the Lines, Forts, Caſtle, and all other Fortifications about or in the City, be forthwith ſlighted, and the City ſtated in the ſame condition it was before the beginning of this unnatural War, and that the Parliament during this War place no Gariſon in it.

11. That no Churches be defaced, that the ſeveral Members of the Foundation of this Cathedral ſhall quietly enjoy their Houſes, and Revenues belonging to their Places, and that the Miniſters likewiſe of this City may enjoy their Benefices without any trouble.

12. That no Oaths be impoſed upon any Perſon now in this City, Suburbs, and Liberties, other than ſuch as are required by the ancient and Enacted Laws of this Land.

13. That the Mayor, Sheriffs, Aldermen and Citizens, within this Corporation of the City of Briſtol, ſhall be free in their Perſons and Eſtates, and enjoy all their Priviledges, Liberties, and Immunities, in as full and ample manner as formerly at any time they did before the beginning of this War; And that they have freedom of Trade both by Land and Sea, paying ſuch Cuſtoms and Duties as formerly they have done to His Majeſty, and that no Mulct nor Fine be impoſed upon any Perſon mentioned in this Article, or queſtioned for any Act or thing done before the day of our marching forth, upon any pretence whatſoever, and that no Free Quarters be put upon them without their own conſents.

14. That all other Perſons whoſe Dwellings are in this City, and now abſent, may have the full benefit of theſe Articles as if they were preſent.

15. That all Noblemen, Gentlemen and others, who have Goods in this City, and now preſent or abſent, may have liberty at any time within three Months to diſpoſe of their Goods as they pleaſe.

16. That there be no Plundering, or taking away of any Man's Perſon, or any part of his Eſtate under what pretence ſoever, and that Juſtice, according to the known and Enacted Laws of the Land, be adminiſtred to all Perſons within this City, by the Civil Magiſtrates.

17. And for the Performance of all theſe Articles, I expect ſuch Hoſtages to be given as I ſhall accept of, and hereunto I deſire your ſpeedy Anſwer.

SIR,

By this you may evidently perceive my inclination to Peace, and you may be aſſured that I ſhall deſire nothing but what ſhall be with relation to his Majeſty's Honour, and the Safety of the Kingdom, and what may become,

Upon Peruſal of which Sir Tho. Fairfax returns this Anſwer.

SIR,

I Have peruſed your Propoſitions, wherein ſome things are doubtfully expreſſed, other things inconſiſtent to the duty I owe to them I ſerve, notwithſtanding to the end I may give aſſurance, that I earneſtly deſire to ſave effuſion of Blood, and the ruin of a City and People, that may be ſo ſerviceable to the Crown and Kingdom: If your Highneſs pleaſe, that Commiſſioners may Treat between us concerning the accommodating of Things, I hope to make it evident to the World, that what ſhall reſpect the Honour of a Soldier, due Civilities to all Men, the good and welfare of the People of that City, both in paſſing by what is paſt, and reſtoring them to the Priviledge of all other Subjects, and to the Immunities of their City, will readily be condeſcended unto by Me, as becomes a Gentleman and a Chriſtian. And to the end no time may be loſt, I have here incloſed ſent you the Names of Three Commiſſioners, who upon the return of Hoſtages of equal condition unto me, ſhall attend your Highneſs ſufficiently inſtructed to conclude on my Part: Provided the ſaid Treaty be ended by Nine of the Clock this Night, and to this I deſire your Anſwer within the ſpace of an Hour, and remain

SIR,

I Thought I had ſufficiently explained my ſelf in my Propoſitions, and that there was nothing doubtful, or could be inconſiſtent with the duty you owe to them you ſerve, but ſince it ſeems otherwiſe to you, I deſire you would ſet down your Doubts and Exceptions in Writing, to which you ſhall have a ſpeedy Anſwer from

Which occaſioned this following Letter, and Propoſitions from Sir Thomas Fairfax.

SIR,

I Perceive by your laſt, that you decline any Treaty by Commiſſioners, and for me to ſend you in Writing my Doubts and Exceptions to your Propoſitions, and expect your Anſwers, were a way like to give occaſion

By all this I hope I have ſufficiently evidenced my tenderneſs of Blood, and of this City, and have cleared my ſelf before God, and the World, from what evil ſhall enſue upon your refuſal; If you accept the Terms, having here ſent two Copies Sealed and Signed by me, I ſhall expect that you return one of them Signed and Sealed by your ſelf, alſo to be brought back to me this day by Six of the Clock in the Evening at furtheſt, otherwiſe I ſhall conclude your refuſal, and account my ſelf abſolved, ſave from the deſire of being, Sir,

THO. FAIRFAX.

Wherein his Highneſs finding ſundry omiſſions of ſeveral Clauſes, and ſome Propoſitions totally left out, returned him this Letter with the Poſtſcript.

SIR,

ALthough I conceive my former Propoſitions ſo well Grounded upon Honour and Juſtice, as that I cannot well recede from them, yet for preventing of effuſion of Blood, and for the welfare of this place with which I am intruſted, I am willing ſo far to aſſent unto you as to leave the Caſtle undemoliſhed; but for the other Forts and Lines, to have them abſolutely ſlighted, and for all the other Articles to ſtand firm as I propoſed them, to which if you will aſſent, I will then ſend Commiſſioners unto you to regulate, and ſettle all things between us, which will occaſion me to reſt.

Sept. 8. 1645. Your Servant,

RUPERT.

SIR,

I have returned you your Propoſitions again, finding many alterations and omiſſions in them, very prejudicial to thoſe whom I am obliged in honour, and am reſolved to protect.

But Sir Thomas Fairfax being conſtant to his own Propoſitions gave this Anſwer.

SIR,

I Have offered what is fair for your Honour, and the Townſmens Immunity, and for what I demanded, I can accept no leſs, except I ſhould grant all for nothing, and though for that point of the Townſmens ſecurity, I ſhall be moſt willing to ſupply any thing that might be thought wanting in my offers, yet to admit a new conſideration upon your Propoſitions, would tend to, and (I doubt) end in nothing elſe but further delay, for by all your Letters, and the whole carriage in this buſineſs, I find the advantage of time wholly, or chiefly intended. As you have thus far had your end therein, I have not loſt mine, that is, to make my proceedings more clear, and innocent before God and the World, and having done this, I can with a clear confidence truſt God for a better iſſue in another way; you have my reſolution, which if you accept not, I deſire nothing further but the return of my Trumpet by Noon, and that he may not be detained as formerly. I remain, Sir,

Sept. 9. 1645. Your Highneſs's Humble Servant,

THO. FAIRFAX.

Hereupon his Highneſs and the Commanders, reſolving not to break off nor conclude the Treaty untill that they might hear from the King, unleſs forced thereunto, returned this Anſwer:

His Highneſs's Anſwer.

SIR,

HOW fair your Offers are to my Honour, I hope you will give me the liberty to judge, finding you wanting in your care of the Noblemen, Commanders, and Soldiers that are under my protection, of whom I am bound to have an equal care with my ſelf, and am ſorry to find ſo ill a conſtruction made of my fair proceedings and intentions in this my intercourſe of Letters; ſince you interpret that a delay, which on my part was but a compliance to what you propounded, tending to the prevention of effuſion of Blood, and to the good of the Kingdom, to which the ſlighting of the Caſtle, Forts and Works, was the moſt conducible means, ſince that can only ſettle this City in the condition of its former peace, and might have been a leading preſident to the happineſs of the whole Kingdom. Thus you may ſee the reality of my Ends, which ſince you took the liberty to queſtion, give me leave to tell you, that yours have not been ſuch to me as you have profeſt before God and the World, by what I have ſeen under your Hand and Seal propoſed to others, nevertheleſs I ſhall never decline to embrace any overture that tends to the general peace of this Nation, and in particular of this City, and thoſe under my protection and command, which is the only endeavour and ſtudy of, Sir,

Sept. 9. 1645. Your Servant,

RUPERT.

Upon the Tenth of September the Enemy Stormed the Line generally, about Two in the Morning, and his Highneſs having received Intelligence a little before of it, all were in a readineſs to receive them, they entred the Line where the Townſmen and New Welſh were, as at Stokeſcroft-Gate, where the Officer in chief, who was Mayor of the Town was ſlain in the place, and at Lafford's-Gate, where many of the Officers and Soldiers were taken and killed; and the ſame time they Stormed Pryor-Hill Fort, and took it, which was the loſs of the whole Line, they being beaten off, in the other parts of the Town; then the day breaking we found them in full poſſeſſion of the Line and Fort, which cauſed our Horſe and Foot to Retreat to the great Fort, who were preſently Commanded into the City to make that good, leaving the other Works ſufficiently Manned, as Golſon's Fort, Brandon-Hill, and the New Redoubt without the Line. Finding our ſelves in this condition, and conſidering the Engagement of thoſe within the City and Caſtle, and that the Lord Hawley, Sir Matthew Appleyard, and Col. Slingsby with their Men were in danger to be cut off, the Enemy being between us and them, his Highneſs was moved by the Officers to entertain a Treaty in time, before thoſe were loſt; His

Ann. 1645.

Highneſs condeſcending thereunto, ſent a Trumpet to Sir Thomas Fairfax, to know whether he would Treat or not? who accepting it, Commiſſioners were nominated on our part, Sir William Vavaſour, Sir John Mennes, and Col. Henry Tillier; the firſt thing propoſed was a Ceſſation of Arms, and in the mean time every one to keep his Poſt. They firſt propoſed his Highneſs former Propoſitions; but our condition being then altred, and they ſenſible of their own ſucceſs, would not admit them, but would Treat upon New Propoſitions, which after long Debate were as followeth.

Signed by us the Commiſſioners appointed on the behalf of his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax, E. Mountague, Tho. Rainsborough, J. Pickering.

But in that particular Point of laying down our Fire-Arms, there could be no Concluſion made without his Highneſs's Pleaſure firſt known, who thereupon called all the Commanders to deliver their Opinions therein, and upon full Debate they concluded, as by their Subſcriptions appears, that if better Conditions could not be obtained, then to accept of thoſe.

It is our general opinion that if better Conditions cannot be Granted, We aſſent to the leaving of the Fire-Arms of the Private Soldiers.

Briſtol Surrendred by Pr. Rupert, Sept. 11.1645.

And thereupon there was a full Concluſion of the Treaty. The next day upon ſome Inſolencies of the Soldiers, his Highneſs ſent to Sir Thomas Fairfax, that the Articles were violated, and that if there was not a preſent redreſs, he would ſtand upon his own defence, and rather die than ſuffer thoſe injuries; and thereupon for his Highneſs ſatisfaction we had liberty to march with our Arms unto our Quarters.

For ſome days before the approach of the Enemy, and during the whole Siege, his Highneſs received not any Letter from his Majeſty, nor from the Prince of Wales, nor from any General, or Miniſter of State, until his coming to Cyrenceſter; only the Governour of Hereford ſignified the Riſing of the Scots, and their marching towards Glouceſter, and a deſire to have ſome Ammunition from him. Notwithſtanding his Highneſs made ſeveral diſpatches by all the convenient means he could.

The Well in the great Fort was not half finiſhed, the Water ſcant, and troubled, and far inſufficient for the uſe of the Numbers that were there.

It may be objected, That notwithſtanding the Enemies power and Force, and their entring the Line, yet the Caſtle and great Fort might have held out ſo long that probably relief might have come, and that therefore there was not any preſſing neceſſity to precipitate the rendition of thoſe Places.

To which this is replied, That any timely relief was utterly improbable, conſidering that during the whole Siege, his Highneſs ne'er received any Intelligence from his Majeſty, nor from the Weſt; and though his Highneſs well knew in what condition his Majeſty's Army was, yet if his Majeſty could have drawn together all the power he expected, the Enemy could have Block'd up the Caſtle, and Fort, and have advanced 12000 Men to have fought a Battel, or elſe have ſecured themſelves within the Line againſt all oppoſition; beſides they were ſo abſolutely Maſters of all the Paſſes, and had ſo Barricado'd up the ways, that a ſmall Force might have hindred a great Army. And at that time General Poyntz ſo cloſely obſerved his Majeſty's motions, that relief was as improbable to be expected as eaſie to be deſired. And his Highneſs could not promiſe himſelf any more likelihood of Succours from the Weſt, Bridgewater, Sherborn, and other interjacent Gariſons, being already reduced by the Enemy, and Col. Maſſey lying with a conſiderable Body of Horſe and Foot in places of advantage ready to intercept and ſtop the Lord Goring. Moreover had there been any probability of relief in any reaſonable time, yet the Line being forc'd, Pryor-Hill Fort an important Place loſt, the Officer to whoſe truſt it was committed, deſerting it (who never ſince that time appeared) the City had thereby been expoſed to the ſpoil and fury of the Enemy, ſo many Gallant Men who had ſo long and faithfully ſerved his Majeſty, (whoſe ſafeties his Highneſs conceived himſelf in Honour, obliged to preſerve as dearly as his own) had been left to the ſlaughter and rage of a prevailing Enemy.

Nevertheleſs, although theſe Reaſons were of that validity, that his Highneſs could but deſpair of relief, yet another important conſideration was in it ſelf ſingly ſufficient to exclude all credence of poſſibility, which was that the Scots, upon removal from Hereford, march'd to Glouceſter, where their whole Body was the Eighth of September, an intermediate place, near which his Majeſty muſt have march'd, and can any rational Man imagin them ſo ſtupidly unactive, as to ſuffer his Majeſty to paſs ſo near them without oppoſition, conſidering what effective Forces they had, and their Commanders neither ignorant or idle to entertain opportunities for action.

CHARLES R.

WHereas Our Right Dear and Intirely Beloved Nephew Prince Rupert, did at a Council of War, held by Us, at Newark the Eighteenth of this Inſtant October, there being then preſent Our Right Truſty and Welbeloved Couſin and Councellor Mountague Earl of Lindſey, Lord Great Chamberlain of England; Our Right Truſty, and Right Welbeloved Couſin, Richard Earl of Cork; Our Right Truſty and Welbeloved Jacob Lord Aſtley Field-Marſhal General of Our Army; John Lord Bellaſis, Captain General of Our Horſe-Guards; and Charles Lord Gerrard, Lieutenant-General of all Our Horſe-forces; Our Truſty and Welbeloved Sir Richard Willis, Knight and Baronet, Governour of Newark, and John Aſhburnham Eſq; our Treaſurer at War, deſire to clear himſelf for the rendring of the City and Gariſon of Briſtol, with the Caſtle and Forts thereof, and thereupon produced a Narrative of the matter of fact during the ſaid Siege, with the Articles for the rendring of thoſe Places, which being accordingly read and conſidered: We were then pleaſed to ſay, That We did not believe Our ſaid Nephew to be guilty of any the leaſt want of Courage or Fidelity to Us in the doing thereof, but withal We believed that he might have kept the Caſtle and Fort a longer time. We having abſolutely reſolved ſpeedily to have drawn together all the Forces we poſſibly could, and to have hazarded our own Perſon for his relief: Our deſign being ſo laid as that in probability it would have ſucceeded, to which our ſaid right Dear Nephew anſwered, that what ever he did therein, was by the advice of the Council of War of that Gariſon, and that he could not in his Judgment poſſibly expect ſuch relief; beſides he alledged that he had not received from Us any intimation thereof, but ſaid, that if he had, he would have maintained thoſe places to the laſt Man, though the tender regard he had to the preſervation of ſo many Officers and Soldiers, was the chief reaſon that induced him to Capitulate for the whole, they having ſo long and faithfully ſerved Us, all which Our ſaid right Dear Nephew humbly ſubmitted to Our Judgment. Who upon which at a ſecond Hearing before Our Self this 21*ſt* day of October, the Lords and others above named being then likewiſe preſent, and upon a ſerious conſideration of the whole matter, We were then pleaſed to declare that We were fully ſatisfied that our ſaid Right Dear Nephew Prince Rupert, is not guilty of any the leaſt want of Courage or Fidelity to Us, or our ſervice in that action, and We then gave leave to the Lords and others above ſpecified, to declare their opinions in that point. Who upon Our leave, and a full conſideration of the Narrative formerly delivered, did Unanimouſly concur with Us, Declaring likewiſe that Our ſaid Right Dear Nephew is not guilty of any the leaſt want of Courage or Fidelity to Us or Our Service in that action. Given under Our Sign Manual at Our Court at Newark this 21ſt of Octob. 1645.

Whereas in this his Highneſs's Narrative there is mention made of the King's Common Soldiers marching away with their Arms, the ſame is to be underſtood thus: After the Articles concluded, ſome breach of Articles being alledged by his Highneſs, and alſo that he was in fear that the Club-men might fall upon his Soldiers unarm'd, and doubted the Convoy would not be able to ſecure them in their Paſſage to Oxford, whither he declared it was his intention to march, deſired Fairfax to let him have 1000 Arms for his Foot, Engaging on his Honour they ſhould injure no Man therewith, only make uſe of them (if need were) to ſecure themſelves from the violence of the People, and when they came up to Oxford to return them back again by the Convoy, which was done accordingly.

In this Service before Briſtol there were loſt on the Parliament's ſide Major Bethel, and Major Cromwell (who both died ſoon after of their Wounds); Lieut.Col.Pureſoy, and Capt. Hill, kill'd upon the place; Major Read, and Capt. Ireton, and ſeveral other Officers Wounded.

As to what Ordnance, Arms, Ammunition and Proviſions were found in the Forts, City and Caſtle, the ſame with other Particulars are mentioned to be as followeth in Cromwell's Letter to the Speaker.

Cromwell's Letter of taking of Briſtol, Sept. 14. 1645.

'SIR,

IT hath pleaſed the General to give me in charge to repreſent unto you a particular account of the taking of Briſtol, the which I gladly undertake: After the finiſhing of that Service at Sherborn, it was diſputed at a Council of War, Whether we ſhould march into the Weſt, or to Briſtol? Amongſt other Arguments the leaving ſo conſiderable an Enemy at our Backs, to march into the heart of the Kingdom, the undoing of the Country about Briſtol, which was exceedingly haraſſed by the Prince his being thereabouts but a Fortnight; the Correſpondency he might hold in Wales, the poſſibility of uniting the Enemy's Forces where they pleaſed, and eſpecially the drawing to an Head the diſaffected Club-men of Somerſet, Wilts and Dorſet, when once our Backs were towards them.

Theſe Conſiderations, together with taking ſo important a place, ſo advantagious for the opening of Trade to London, did ſway the Ballance, and beget that Concluſion. When we came within four Miles of the City, we had a new Debate, Whether we ſhould endeavour to Block it up, or make a Regular Siege? The latter being over-ruled, Col. Welden with his Brigade marched to Pile-Hill, on the South-ſide of the City, being within Muſquet-ſhot thereof, where in a few days they made a good Quar-

Ann. 1645. Quarter, over-looking the City. Upon our advance, the Enemy fired Bedminſter, Clifton, and ſome other Villages lying near to the City, and would have fired more, if our unexpected coming had not hindered. The General cauſed ſome Horſe and Dragoons under Commiſſary General Ireton, to advance over Avon, to keep in the Enemy on the North-ſide of the Town, untill the Foot could come up; and after a day, the General with Col. Montague's, and Col. Rainsborough's Brigades, marched over at Kenſham to Stapleton, where he Quartered that Night; the next day, Col. Montague (having his Poſt aſſigned) with his Brigade, was to ſecure all between the Rivers Froom and Avon, he came up to Lawford's Gate within Muſquet-ſhot thereof: Col. Rainsborough's Poſt was near to Durdam-down, whereof the Dragooners and three Regiments of Horſe made good a Poſt upon the Down, between him and the River Avon, on his Right hand, and from Col. Rainsborough's Quarters to Froom River, on his left, a part of Col. Birch, and Major General Skippon's Regiment were to maintain that Poſt. Theſe Poſts thus ſetled, our Horſe were forced to be upon exceeding great Duty, to ſtand by the Foot, leſt the Foot being ſo weak in all their Poſts, might receive an affront. And truly herein we were very happy, that we ſhould receive ſo little loſs by Sallies, conſidering the paucity of our Men to make good the Poſts, and Strength of the Enemy within: By Sallies (which were three or four) I know not that we loſt thirty Men in all the time of our Siege. Of Officers of Quality, only Col. Okey was taken by miſtake, going to the Enemy, thinking they had been Friends, and Capt. Guilliams ſlain in a Charge. We took Sir Bernard Aſtley, and killed Sir Richard Crane, (one very conſiderable with the Prince.) We had a Council of War concerning the Storming of the Town, about eight days before we took it; and in that there appeared great unwillingneſs to the Work, through the unſeaſonableneſs of the Weather, and other apparent difficulties. Some inducements to bring us thither, was the report of the good affection of the Townſmen to us, but that did not anſwer expectation. Upon a ſecond conſideration, it was over-ruled for a Storm; which no ſooner concluded, but difficulties were removed, and all things ſeemed to favour the deſign; and truly there hath been ſeldom the like cheerfulneſs to any work like to this, after it was once reſolv'd on. The day and hour of our Storm was appointed to be on Wedneſday Morning the Tenth of September about One of the Clock: We choſe to act it ſo early, becauſe we hoped thereby to ſurpriſe the Enemy. With this reſolution alſo, to avoid confuſion, and falling foul one upon another; that when we had recovered the Line, and Forts upon it, we could not advance further until day. The General's Signal unto a Storm, was, the firing of Straw, and diſcharging four Pieces of Cannon at Pryors-Hill Fort: The Signal was very well perceived of all, and truly the Men went on with great reſolution, and very preſently recovered the Line, making way for the Horſe to enter. Col. Montague, and Col. Pickering, who Stormed at Lawford's Gate, where was a Double Work, well filled with Men and Cannon, preſently entred, and with great reſolution beat the Enemy from their Works, and poſſeſſed their Cannon; their Expedition was ſuch, that they forced the Enemy from their advantages, without any conſiderable loſs to themſelves: They laid down the Bridges for the Horſe to enter, Major Desborough commanding the Horſe, who very Gallantly ſeconded the Foot: Then, our Foot advanced to the City-Walls, where they poſſeſſed the Gate againſt the Caſtle-Street, whereinto were put an hundred Men, who made it good. Sir Hardreſs Waller with his, and the General's Regiment, with no leſs reſolution, entred on the other ſide of Lawford's Gate, towards Avon-River, and put themſelves into an immediate conjunction with the reſt of the Brigade. During this, Col. Rainsborough, and Col. Hammond attempted Pryors-Hill Fort, and the Line downward towards Froom; and the Major-General's Regiment being to Storm towards Froom-River, Col. Hammond poſſeſſed the Line immediately, and beating the Enemy from it, made way for the Horſe to enter. Col. Rainsborough, who had the hardeſt task of all at Pryors-Hill Fort, attempted it and fought near three hours for it, and indeed there was great deſpair of carrying the place, it being exceeding high, a Ladder of thirty Rounds ſcarcely reaching the top thereof; but his reſolution was ſuch, that notwithſtanding the inacceſſibleneſs and difficulty, he would not give over. The Enemy had four Pieces of Cannon upon it, which they plied with round, and Caſe-ſhot upon our Men; his Lieut. Col. Bowen, and others, were two Hours at Puſh of Pike, ſtanding upon the Pallizadoes, but could not enter. Col. Hammond being entred the Line, and Capt. Ireton with a Forlorn of Col. Rich his Regiment, interpoſing with his Horſe, between the Enemies Horſe, and Col. Hammond, received a Shot with two Piſtol-bullets, which broke his Arm; by which means the entrance of Col. Hammond did Storm the Fort on that part which was inward; by which means Col. Rainsborough, and Col. Hammond's Men entred the Fort, and immediately put almoſt all the Men in it to the Sword.

And as this was the place of moſt difficulty, ſo of moſt loſs to us on that ſide, and of very great honour to the undertaker; the Horſe did ſecond them with great reſolution. Both theſe Colonels do acknowledge, that their Interpoſition between the Enemy's Horſe, and their Foot, was a great means of obtaining of this ſtrong Fort, without which all the reſt of the Line to Froom-River would have done us little good; and indeed neither Horſe nor Foot would have ſtood in all that way in any manner of ſecurity had not the Fort been taken.

Major Bethel's were the firſt Horſe that entred the Line, who did behave himſelf Gallantly, and was ſhot in the Thigh, had one or two ſhot more, and had his Horſe ſhot under him. Col. Birch with his Men, and the Major-General's Regiment, entred with very good reſolution where their Poſt was; poſſeſſing the Enemy's Guns, and turning them upon them.

By this, all the Line from Pryors-Hill Fort to Avon (which was a full Mile) with all the Forts, Ordnance and Bulwarks, were poſſeſſed by us, but one, wherein there were about Two hundred and twenty Men of the Enemy, which the General Summoned, and all the Men ſubmitted.

The Succeſs on Col. Welden's Side did not anſwer with this; and although the Colonels, and other the Officers and Soldiers, both Horſe and Foot, teſtified as much reſolution as could be expected; Col. Welden, Col. Ingoldsby, Col. Herbert, and the reſt of the Colonels and Officers both of Horſe and Foot, doing what could be well looked for from Men of Honour; yet what by reaſon of the heighth of the Works, which proved higher than report made them, and the ſhortneſs of the Ladders, they were repulſed with the loſs of about an hundred Men; Col. Forteſcue's Lieut. Col. was killed, and Major Cromwell dangerouſly ſhot, and two of Col. Ingoldsby's Brothers hurt, with ſome Officers.

Being poſſeſſed of thus much as hath been related, the Town was fired in three places by the Enemy, which we could not put out; which begat a great trouble in the General, and us all, fearing to ſee ſo famous a City burnt to aſhes before our faces. Whilſt we were viewing ſo ſad a Spectacle, and conſulting which way to make further advantage of our Succeſs, the Prince ſent a Trumpet to the General, to deſire a Treaty for the Surrender of the Town; to which the General agreed, and deputed Col. Montague, Col. Rainsborough, and Col. Pickering for that Service, authorizing them with Inſtructions to Treat and conclude the Articles, which are theſe encloſed.

For performance whereof Hoſtages were mutually given. On Thurſday about Two of the Clock in the Afternoon, the Prince marched out, having a Convoy of Two Regiments of Horſe from us, and making Election of Oxford for the place he would go to, which he had liberty to do by his Articles.

The Cannon which we have taken are about One hundred and forty mounted, about One hundred Barrels of Powder already come to our hands, with a good quantity of Shot, Ammunition and Arms. We have found already between Two and three thouſand Muſquets. The Royal Fort had Victuals in it for One hundred and fifty Men, for Three hundred and twenty days; the Caſtle Victualled for near half ſo long. The

Prince

Ann. 1645. Prince had Foot of the Gariſon, as the Major of the City informed me, Two thouſand five hundred, and about one thouſand Horſe, beſides the Trained Bands of the Town, and Auxiliaries one thouſand, ſome ſay, one thouſand five hundred. I hear but of one Man that hath died of the Plague in all our Army, although we have Quartred amongſt, and in the midſt of infected perſons and places: We had not kill'd of ours in the Storm, nor all this Siege Two hundred Men.

Thus I have given you a true, but not a full account of this great Buſineſs; wherein he that runs may read, that all this is none other than the Work of God: He muſt be a very Atheiſt that doth not acknowledg it.

It may be thought that ſome Praiſes are due to theſe Gallant Men, of whoſe Valour ſo much mention is made: Their humble Suit to you, and all that have an Intereſt in this Bleſſing, is, that in the remembrance of God's Praiſes, they may be forgotten. It is their Joy, that they are Inſtruments of God's Glory, and their Countrys good: It is their Honour that God vouchſafes to uſe them. Sir, They that have been employed in this Service know, that Faith and Prayer obtained this City for you: I do not ſay ours only, but of the People of God with you, and all England over, who have wreſtled with God for a Bleſſing in this very thing. Our deſires are, that God may be Glorified by the ſame Spirit of Faith by which we ask all our Sufficiency, and have received it; it is meet that he have all the Praiſe. Presbyterians, Independants, all have here the ſame ſpirit of Faith and Prayer, the ſame Preſence and Anſwer; they agree here, have no names of difference: Pity it is it ſhould be otherwiſe any where. All that believe, have the real Unity, which is moſt Glorious, becauſe inward; and Spiritual in the Body, and to the Head. For being united in Forms, commonly called Uniformity, every Chriſtian will, for Peace ſake, ſtudy, and do as far as Conſcience will permit. And for Brethren in things of the Mind, we look for no compulſion, but that of Light and Reaſon, in other things God hath put the Sword in the Parliament's hands, for the terror of evil doers, and the praiſe of them that do well. If any plead exemption from it, he knows not the Goſpel; if any would wring it out of your hands, or ſteal it from you under what pretence ſoever, I hope they ſhall do it without effect; that God will maintain it in your hands, and direct you in the uſe thereof, is the Prayer of

The Proceedings of Fairfax's Army, &c.

THE Parliament being thus become Maſters of Briſtol, on Saturday, Sept. 13. a Council of War was called in their Army to adviſe whether they ſhould march preſently for the Relief of Plimouth, and further parts of the Weſt, or to clear thoſe Gariſons that did interpoſe between the Weſt and London; which latter was very neceſſary, for that if thoſe Gariſons were not reduced, they would hinder Correſpondency between London and the Army except at high rates, of very exceſſive trouble and charge to the Army by Convoys upon every occaſion. But it was reſolved for the preſent to attempt only the taking in of Berkley, and the Devizes, as thoſe that were the neareſt; deferring the reſt to further opportunities. Colonel Rainsborough for that purpoſe was Commanded to march with a Brigade (conſiſting of Major Gen. Skippon's, Col. Herbert's, and Lieut. Col. Pride's Regiments) for the taking in of Berkley Caſtle (already blocked up by Horſe) the only Gariſon conſiderable left in the County of Glouceſter, interrupting the Paſſage between that City and Briſtol. Lieut. Gen. Cromwell was deſigned by the General with another Brigade (conſiſting of Col. Mountague's, Col. Pickering's, Sir Hardreſs Waller's and Col. Hammond's Regiments) for the taking in of the Devizes, and Laicock Houſe.

A Council of War called.

Wedneſday, Sept. 17. General Fairfax marched to Bath, and reſted there four or five days, for the better recovery of his Health, having been much wearied out, and ſpent with the Fatigues he endured at Briſtol-Siege.

During which time Cromwell ſat down before the Caſtle of the Devizes, which commanded the County of Wilts, and was ſituate in the Road of Traffick between the Weſt and London; a place of great Strength, having been an old Fortification, raiſed on a huge Mount of Earth; the Governour Sir Charles Lloyd, a ſtout Gentleman, and a good Engineer, had added to the Strength of its natural Situation what Art could do; having cut out of the main Earth ſeveral Works commanding one another, and ſo ſtrong that no Cannon could pierce them; beſides that, being Pallizado'd and Stockado'd in moſt places, it was a matter of extream difficulty to Storm it: Cromwell having conveniently planted his Cannon and Mortar-pieces, on Sunday at One of the Clock he ſent in to Summon the Caſtle.

Lieut. Gen. Cromwell ſet down before the Devizes.

The Governour ſent forth word, That the King his Maſter put him in Truſt, and he deſired ten Days time to ſend to him; in the mean time he would keep it for the King. Cromwell in Reply wiſhed him not to let ſlip ſuch an opportunity: But if he were otherwiſe reſolved, gave leave to ſend forth his Lady, and ſuch other Gentlewomen as were in the Caſtle; adding that none were more fitting to keep ſtrong Holds, Forts and Caſtles, than the Parliament for the uſe of the King.

But all that the Governour returned was, Win it and wear it. Upon receipt of which Anſwer, Cromwell having put all things in readineſs for a Storm, gave Command to the Cannoniers preſently to give fire, and alſo to play the Mortar-pieces; which was accordingly done, and ſome of the Granadoes breaking in the midſt of the Caſtle (being open above) killed ſeveral of their Men, and much endangered the Blowing up of the Magazine; which ſo ſtartled them that on Monday about Eight of the Clock in the Morning, the Governour ſent forth for a Parley, and about Eleven of the Clock Cromwell ſent them in theſe Propoſitions following: viz.

Conditions of Surrender.

1. That all Commanders and Gentlemen ſhould march to any Gariſon the King had within thirty Miles, with their Horſe and Arms: And that all Private Soldiers ſhould march away leaving their Arms behind them, but to go to the ſame Gariſons the Commanders marched to.
2. That all Gentlemen ſhould have liberty to go to their own Homes, or beyond the Seas.
3. That all Soldiers that have been formerly in the Parliament Service, ſhould be delivered up to the Lieut. Gen. and all Soldiers that would take up Arms in the Parliament Service ſhould be entertained.

The Devizes Surrendred, Sept. 23.

To theſe Propoſitions a ſpeedy Anſwer was deſired, that ſo they might march away by Four of the Clock in the Afternoon. The Governour ſeeing no other Remedy, agreed to them all, (ſaving in point of Time) and delivered up the Caſtle on the Morrow at Ten of the Clock, at which time they marched out. The Governour and his Officers with their Arms, and his Foot without Arms, having the liberty of Three Carriages, and a ſafe Convoy to Worceſter. The number of Soldiers that marched out were about 400. In the Caſtle was found a very plentiful Magazine of Victuals, good ſtore of Ammunition, and two Pieces of Ordnance.

Col. Pickering ſent to reduce Laicock-Houſe the ſame day.

No ſooner was the Devizes gained, but the ſame day Col. Pickering with his own and Two Regiments more, was Commanded to Laicock-Houſe, a Gariſon of the King's kept by Col. Bovile, who conſidering that neither Briſtol nor the Devizes were able to hold out againſt ſuch Force, did eaſily reſolve, that a poor Houſe was much leſs able, (though in truth there were good Works about it) therefore upon the firſt Summons, he came to Conditions of Surrender, and had Honourable Terms granted him: Upon which he march'd out the next day towards Exeter, viz. Himſelf, his Officers and Soldiers, with their Arms and Baggage.

Barkley-Caſtle Stormed by Col. Rainsborough.

The ſame day Col. Rainsborough with his Forces before Barkley-Caſtle Storm'd the Out-works and the Church, which were the main Strength of the Caſtle, with Scaling Ladders, performing the Service with ſo much reſolution, as quickly made them Maſters of the Place; wherein were taken ninety Priſoners, beſides forty put to the Sword, amongſt whom were a Major and a Captain. This was ſuch a terror and diſcouragement to thoſe within the Caſtle, to ſee the Execution done upon theirs in the Church and Out-works, that the Governour Sir Charles Lucas perceiving the planting of their Ordnance againſt him upon his own Works (which were newly loſt, whereby they had a great advantage to play into the Caſtle) ſounded a Parley, which was yielded to, and Commiſſioners ſent out to Treat, and the Caſtle was Surrendred upon theſe Articles. The Soldiers to march out without Arms; the Governour Sir Charles Lucas with Three Horſes and Arms, and not above Fifty Pound in Money, every Field-Officer with Two Horſes, and but Five Pound in Money; Foot-Captains with Swords, but no Horſes; the Soldiers with not above Five Shillings apiece.

Barkley Caſtle Surrendred, Sept. 26.

There march'd out of this Caſtle about 500 Horſe and Foot; who left in it Eleven Pieces of Ordnance, Proviſion of Victuals for Six Months (afterwards ſold for a good value, for the uſe of the Soldiery.) On the Beſiegers-ſide were loſt in that Service one Captain, and divers Common Soldiers, and many Wounded. Col. Herbert as he led on his Men to Storm, was ſhot through the Hat, but without further hurt.

On Sept. 26. Fairfax having call'd a Council of War, wherein it was reſoved to march with the Main Body of the Army into the Weſt, ſent away his Lieut. Gen. Cromwell with the beforementioned Brigade (conſiſting of Four Regiments of Foot, and Three Regiments of Horſe) to attempt the taking in of the Gariſons of Wincheſter and Baſing-Houſe, which would otherwiſe interrupt the Entercourſe between London and Fairfax's Army.

Accordingly Cromwell advanced to Wincheſter, and took it upon Articles. Touching the manner of which he gave this following Account to the General.

Lieut. Gen. Cromwell's Letter of the taking of Wincheſter.

SIR,

I Am come to Wincheſter on the Lords-Day, being the Twenty eighth of September, with Col. Pickering, Commanding his own, Col. Mountague's, and Sir Hardreſs Waller's Regiments. After ſome Diſpute with the Governour, we entred the Town; I Summoned the Caſtle; but was denied, whereupon we fell to prepare our Batteries, which we could not perfect, ſome of our Guns being out of order untill Friday following; Our Battery was Six Guns, which being finiſhed, after once firing of them round, I ſent him a ſecond Summons for a Treaty, which they refuſed; whereupon we went on with our Work, and made a Breach in the Wall, near the Black Tower, which after about 200 ſhot, we thought Stormable, and purpoſed on Monday Morn to attempt it. On Sunday about Ten of the Clock, the Governour beat a Parley, deſiring to Treat: I agreed unto it, and ſent Col. Hammond and Major Harriſon in to him, who agreed unto theſe incloſed Articles.

The Caſtle was well Manned, with 680 Horſe and Foot, there being near 200 Gentlemen Officers, and their Servants; well Victualled, with 1500 Weight of Cheeſe, very great ſtore of Wheat and Beer, near Twenty Barrels of Powder, Seven Pieces of Cannon, the Works were exceeding good and ſtrong. It is very likely it would have coſt much Blood to have gained it by Storm: This is repeated to you, that God may have all the Praiſe, for it is all his due. Sir, I reſt

Your Moſt Humble Servant,

O. CROMWELL.

Articles agreed upon the Fifth of October 1645, between the Right Honourable William Viſcount Ogle, Governour of the Gariſon of the Caſtle of Winton, of the one part, and Col. Robert Hammond, and Major Thomas Harriſon, on the behalf of Lieutenant General Oliver Cromwell of the other Party, for the Surrender of the ſaid Caſtle.

1. That the Lord Ogle ſhall deliver up the Caſtle of Wincheſter with all the Arms, Ordnance, Ammunition, Proviſion, and all Function of War whatſoever, without any Imbezlement, waſt or ſpoil unto that Officer or Officers as ſhall be thereunto appointed by the ſaid Lieut. General to Morrow being Monday the Sixth of October, by Three of the Clock in the Afternoon.

Ann. 1645.

2. That the ſaid Lord Ogle ſhall have his own Colours, and One hundred fixt Arms for his Guard, and One hundred Men to carry them.

3. That the Lord Ogle, and all the Officers in Commiſſion, ſhall march out of the ſaid Caſtle with their own Horſe and Arms, and their own proper Goods, unto Woodſtock, whither they ſhall be ſafely Conveyed.

4. That there ſhall be allowed to the Lord Ogle and his Officers Six Carriages for the Tranſporting of their Goods aforeſaid.

5. That all Officers, Gentlemen, Clergy-men, and Inhabitants of the City of Wincheſter, and all Officers within the Guards, deſiring it, may be at their own time free from all violence and injury of the Parliament's Forces.

6. That the Lord Ogle ſhall give ſufficient Hoſtages for the performance of the Articles here Conſtituted on their part to be performed, as for the ſafe return of the Convoy.

Proviſions found there, viz.

Seven Pieces of Ordnance.
Seventeen Barrels of Powder.
Two thouſand Weight of Muſquet-Bullet.
Eight hundred Weight of Match.
Thirty eight Hogſheads of Beef and Pork.
Fifteen thouſand Weight of Cheeſe.
Eight hundred Pound of Butter.
One hundred and forty Quarters of Wheat and Meal.
Three Hogſheads of French Wine.
Ten Quarters of Salt.
Twenty Buſhels of Oatmeal.
Seventy dozen of Candles.
Thirty Load of Wood.
Forty Quarters of Charcoal.
Thirty Buſhels of Seacoal.
Fourteen Sheep.
Four Quarters of freſh Beef.
Seven thouſand Weight of Bisket.
One hundred and twelve Hogſheads of Strong Beer.

The Caſtle was Manned with 700 Men, divers of them Reformadoes; the Chief Men there were Viſc. Ogle the Governour, Sir John Pawlet an Old Soldier, Sir W. Courtney, and Col. Bennet; alſo Dr. Curle the Biſhop of Wincheſter, who was ſafely convey'd to me.

A Complaint being made by ſome of the Gariſon for Injuries they had ſuſtained at their marching forth of Wincheſter, by being Plundered, contrary to the Articles, by ſome of the Parliament's Troopers; the matter was inquired into, and the Troopers that did it were apprehended and tryed by a Council of War, and condemned to die, and after Lots caſt for their Lives (being Six of them) he whoſe Lot it was, was Executed. And the other Five were ſent with a Convoy to Oxford, with a full account of this proceeding to Sir Tho. Glemham His Majeſty's Governour there, to be delivered over as Priſoners, and to be put to death, or otherwiſe puniſhed as he ſhould think fit. Which Juſtice was ſo well reſented, that Sir Thomas Glemham returned the Priſoners back again, with an acknowledgment of the Lieut. General's Civility in being ſo tender of breach of Articles.

From Winton Cromwell advanc'd to Baſing, the Houſe of my Lord Marquis of Wincheſter, which he having ſtrongly Fortified kept Gariſon therein himſelf for His Majeſty, and had already withſtood ſeveral Sieges, and always beat off the Enemy, or forced them to riſe with loſs: The Marquis declaring, That if the King had no more Ground in England, but Baſing-Houſe, he would adventure as he did, and hold it out to the utmoſt Extremity; inſomuch that this Houſe was called by the King's Party Loyalty. The Works were many, the Line of Circumvallation above a Mile in compaſs. The old Houſe had ſtood ſome Hundreds of years, but the New one ſurpaſſed in ſtate and beauty, and either of them were fit for a Royal Palace.

Cromwell knew the Reſolution of this Gariſon, and therefore whatever it coſt him reſolved to Storm it, wherein he ſucceeded, and became Maſter of it on Tueſday the 14th of October, which was thus related by him in his Letter to the Speaker.

Cromwell's Letter giving an account of the Storming and taking of Baſing-Houſe.

SIR,

I Thank God I can give you a good account of Baſing: After our Batteries placed, we ſetled the ſeveral Poſts for the Storm: Col. Dolbier was to be on the North ſide next the Grange; Col. Pickering on his Left-hand, and Sir Hardreſs Waller's, and Col. Mountague's Regiments next him. We Stormed this Morning, after Six of the Clock; the Signal for falling on, was the Firing four of our Cannon, which being done, our Men fell on with great Reſolution and cheerfulneſs; we took the two Houſes without any conſiderable loſs to our ſelves: Col. Pickering Stormed the New Houſe, paſſed through and got the Gate of the Old Houſe; whereupon they Summoned a Parley, which our Men would not hear; in the mean time Col. Mountague's, and Sir Hardreſs Waller's Regiments Aſſaulted the ſtrongeſt Works where the Enemy kept his Court of Guard, which with great Reſolution they recovered, beating the Enemy from a whole Culverin, and from that Work, which having done, they drew their Ladders after them, and got over another Work, and the Houſe-Wall before they could enter. In this Sir Hardreſs Waller performing his Duty with Honour and Diligence, was ſhot in the Arm, but not dangerouſly. We have had little loſs; many of the Enemy our Men put to the Sword, and ſome Officers of Quality; moſt of the reſt we have Priſonſoners, among which the Marqueſs, and Sir Robert Peak, with divers other Officers, whom I have ordered to be ſent to you: We have taken about Ten Pieces of Ordnance, much Ammunition, and our Soldiers a good Encouragement.

I humbly offer to have this Place ſlighted for theſe Reaſons: It will ask 800 Men to Mann it; it is no Frontier, the Country is poor about it, the Place exceedingly ruined by our Batteries and Mortar-Pieces, and a Fire which fell upon the Place ſince our taking it. If you pleaſe to take the Gariſon of Farnham, ſome out of Chicheſter, and a good part of the Foot which are here under D'Albier, and make a ſtrong Quarter at Newbery, with three or four Troops of Horſe; I dare be confident it would not only be a curb to Denington, but a Security and Frontier to all thoſe Parts, and by lying there, will make the Trade moſt ſecure between Briſtol and London for all Carriages; and I believe the Gentry of Suſſex and Hampſhire will with more cheerfulneſs contribute to maintain a Gariſon on the Frontier than in their Bowels, which will have leſs ſafety in it. Sir, I hope not to delay, but march towards the Weſt to Morrow, and to be as diligent as I may in my Expedition thither. I muſt ſpeak my Judgment to you, that if you intend to have your Work carried on, Recruits of Foot muſt be had, and a courſe taken to pay your Army; elſe believe me, Sir, it may not be able to anſwer the Work you have for it to do.

I intreated Col. Hammond to wait upon you, who was taken by a miſtake whilſt we lay before this Gariſon, whom God ſafely delivered to us, to our great joy, but to his loſs of almoſt all he had, which the Enemy took from him.

The Lord grant that theſe Mercies may be acknowledg'd with all Thankfulneſs: God exceedingly abounds in his Goodneſs to us, and will not be weary, until Righteouſneſs and Peace meet, and that he hath brought forth a Glorious Work for the happineſs of this poor Kingdom; wherein deſires to ſerve God and you, with a faithful heart.

Baſingſtoke, Octob. 14. 1645.

Your Moſt Humble Servant,

O. CROMWELL.

Langford-Houſe Surrendred to Cromwell, Oct. 18*th*.

From Baſing, Cromwell march'd to Langford-Houſe (near Saliſbury) and facing the ſame with part of his Brigade, ſent in a Summons, and the Governour conſidering that Wincheſter and Baſing had not been able to reſiſt that Force, and how much leſs he could hope to withſtand them, yielded to Surrender upon Articles, that the Commanders in chief ſhould march away with Horſe and Arms, the Gentlemen therein not exceeding Fourteen, with Swords and Piſtols, and the private Soldiers without Arms; and the Goods in the ſaid Houſe to be delivered to the ſeveral Owners within two days upon demand.

The General marches to Warminſter.

In the mean time General Fairfax on Saturday, Sept. 27. march'd to Warminſter, and there made an Halt for two or three Days, till Col. Rainsborough from the taking of Berkley-Caſtle might come up to him. On the 30*th* the Army advanc'd to Shaftsbury, being ſo out of Money that they were all forced to take free Quarter; and ſo on by continual Marches to Chard; whence on Wedneſday, Octob. the 8*th*. Fairfax went to Lyme to ſee the ſtate of that Gariſon, where he ſtaid all Night. On the 11*th* of that Month the Money which had been ſo long expected from London arrived at the Head-Quarters at Chard; and the ſame Night the Army was paid, having been ever ſince the taking of Briſtol without Pay.

To Axminſter.

On Monday, Octob. 13. part of Fairfax's Army being advanced to Axminſter (and the Lord Goring with near 1500 Horſe being come on this ſide the River Ex, as far as Poltimore.) In the Night his Lordſhip, the Lord Wentworth, the Lord Miller, and a ſtrong Party of Cavalry paſſing through Hunnington, came on to Blackdown, fell into Fairfax's Quarters, and took Priſoners about forty Foot, and twenty Dragoons. The next Night Fairfax's Horſe, and moſt of his Foot lay in the Field about Hunnington, fearing the like ſurprize, or that the Lord Goring ſhould attempt to break through them to Joyn with the King, but on the 15*th* underſtanding the Lord Goring was marched over the River Ex, Fairfax cauſed part of his Army to be Quartered along that River, at Broadnixe, Silverton, and Columb-John, within three or four miles of Exeter, to prevent his Return, and with the reſt of the Army marched to Tiverton, where Major-General Maſſey with his Horſe, and Col. Welden's Brigade had been to Block it up.

Tiverton Caſtle taken by Fairfax, Octob. 19*th*.

On Saturday, Oct. 18. the Batteries were raiſed, and the next Day after Forenoon Sermon, a Council of War being called, it was reſolv'd to Storm (the ſeaſon of the year not admitting loſs of time) but whilſt they were conſulting the manner how to order the Attack, the Ordnance playing hard againſt the Works and Caſtle, a Round-ſhot happen'd to break the Chain of the Draw-Bridge, whereby the Bridge fell down, and immediately the Soldiers ſpying that Advantage, without waiting for Orders, poſſeſs'd themſelves of the Bridge, entred the Works, and made themſelves Maſters, firſt of the Church-yard, and ſoon after of both the Church and the Caſtle. Col. Sir Gilbert Talbot the Governour, who had made as brave a defence as was poſſible in ſuch a Juncture, being taken Priſoner with about 200 more, amongſt whom was one Major George Sadler, who formerly ſerved the Parliament, but deſerted them, and betook himſelf to the King's Party, but had lately made ſeveral private Overtures if he might be pardoned, which being rejected, and he now taken, was called before a Council of War, and condemned to ſuffer death for his former deſertion, who to ſave his Life broke Priſon (after Sentence) and fled to Exeter, but there was again by the Royal Party tried by a Council of War, for endeavouring to betray their Cauſe after he had undertaken it, being charged to have treacherouſly quitted his Poſts in this Action at Tiverton, and for the ſame was adjudged to die, and Executed accordingly.

Treachery remarkably puniſh'd.

In the next place, Fairfax's Army reſolved to try their Fortunes on the City of Exeter, where his Majeſty had a ſtrong Gariſon; for though they had a great mind to relieve Plimouth, which at the ſame time was Beſieged by the Royal Party, yet finding their Army much weakned and tired, it was not thought fit to advance thither, and leave ſuch a Force as there was in Exeter behind them: Therefore on Monday, Octob. 20. Fairfax marched to Silverton, thence to Newton Siers, and on the 23*d* came to a Rendezvous at the Beacon, within three miles of Exeter, and made his Head-Quarters that Night at Crediton, where he received Intelligence that the Lord Goring with a conſiderable Party of Horſe was gone out of Exeter towards Okehampton, and ſoon after to Taveſtock.

On the 28*th* of October, it was concluded at a Council of War, to make ſeveral Gariſons, firſt on the Eaſt-ſide of Exeter, as at Biſhops-Clyffe, Stoak and Poultimore, which being once finiſh'd, a few Men might keep them, and cut off Proviſions from the City that way, and then the whole Army might be at liberty to go on the other ſide of the Town to do the like there afterwards. In purſuance whereof Gariſons were form'd accordingly on the Eaſt-ſide of the River Ex, and the General with the Train of Artillery repair to St. Mary Autree, making that his Head-Quarters, where he continued till the ſecond of December, but in the mean time by reaſon of the Seaſon, and want of Accommodations, abundance of his Army, eſpecially the Foot, were ſick, and many died, ſeldom leſs than ſeven, eight or nine in a day in the Town of Autree, and amongſt the reſt Col. Pickering died, and ſome other Officers. The Royal Party had notice of this Conſumption of Fairfax's Army, and his Highneſs the Prince of Wales was not wanting in his induſtry to raiſe Forces in Cornwall and Devon; and to draw together the Forces from their Quarters before Plimouth, and ſome Foot from Dartmouth and Barnſtaple, which together with the Recruits brought in by Sir Richard Greenvile, made a Formidable Body, conſiſting in all of Eight or nine thouſand Horſe and Foot, and were Quarter'd about Taveſtock, Okehampton, &c. intending to oblige Fairfax to riſe from the Eaſt-ſide of Exeter. Who having Intelligence of their Preparations and Advance, and having now pretty well ſetled his Gariſons on that ſide, Ordered ſeveral Regiments of his Foot to remove beyond the River to Crediton, a place better ſituated for Air, who ſhortly after made an Attempt on Pouldrum-Houſe, Houſe, where the King had a Gariſon; but after hard Service, they were forc'd to quit that deſign, and Retreat.

Royaliſts Quarters at Bovey-Tracy Beaten up, Jan. 9. 1645.

On Decemb. 26. Fairfax had further Advertiſement from Plimouth, and confirm'd by ſeveral of his Spies, that the King's Forces were advancing towards him, moſt of their Horſe being come to Okehampton; which quickned him into thoughts of marching to meet them, and drew up his Horſe and ſome Foot at Cadbury-Hill, and in the mean time made Proviſions for a continued march; having in his thoughts the Gariſon of Dartmouth, by Carriages on Horſe-back, thoſe parts admitting no other. On Jan. the 8*th* all things being in readineſs, the Horſe and Foot ſet forwards to Crediton; but to amuſe the King's Forces, as if the Army had bent towards Okehampton, Sir Hardreſs Waller with two Regiments march'd to Bow, and had a Skirmiſh with ſome Horſe and Dragoons there Quarter'd, and took ſome Priſoners, whilſt at the ſame time a Brigade of Horſe and Foot Commanded by Cromwell, advanced that Night to Crediton, and the next day (tho' very cold and much Snow on the Ground) came to Bovey-Tracy; where part of the Lord Wentworth's Brigade then lay, whom they ſurprizing thus unexpectedly, took between three and four hundred Horſes, but moſt of the Men through the darkneſs of the Night got away, except one Major, and ſome few other Officers, and about fifty Common Troopers, who were taken Priſoners, and ſeven Colours left behind. On the 10*th Fairfax* advanced to Aſhburton, and the next day to Totneſs, and whilſt he prepared to attack Dartmouth, ſent out ſtrong Parties of Horſe after the King's Forces towards Taveſtock, whom they apprehending to be the Van of the whole Army, which they ſuppoſed to be following, haſten'd their march, quitted the Siege before Plimouth, leaving their Forts undemoliſh'd, with Seven Pieces of Ordnance, and Four Barrels of Powder, which at that ſeaſon of the year, and in thoſe ways, they could not carry off, and ſo paſs'd the River Tamar into Cornwall.

Dartmouth Stormed and taken by Fairfax, Jan. 18*th* 1645.

Dartmouth having return'd a reſolute Negative Anſwer to the Summons ſent in, it was reſolved to ſtorm the Town; and whilſt Proviſions were making for that purpoſe, Capt. Batten a Commander at Sea for the Parliament, came before the Haven with a Squadron of Ships (being ſent for by Fairfax) to aſſiſt by Sea, and keep any Ships from going out of the Harbour, whilſt it was Storm'd by Land, who alſo Landed 200 of his Seamen, who had their Poſt allotted them on Shore, and did great Service in the Storm, which began on Sunday, Jan. 18. about Eleven a Clock at Night. The Aſſailants word given was, God with us, and the Signal of the Soldiers, their Shirts out before and behind. They went on with ſo much fury and Reſolution, that after the Town had diſcharged once, before they could get ready a ſecond, they were got under their Cannon, and quickly poſſeſs'd them, and turn'd them on the Town, for they had no great Pieces of their own there, the way and weather not admitting any to be drawn to that place, where there were near an Hundred Pieces mounted againſt them. The Particulars of this Action were related by General Fairfax, as followeth in a Letter to the Houſe of Peers.

My Lords,

Fairfax's Letter to the Houſe of Peers concerning the taking of Dartmouth, Jan. 20.1645.

My Lords,

AFter my coming to Totneſs, the Enemy riſing in great diſorder from their Siege at Plimouth, leaving their Guns and ſome Ammunition behind them, I conſidered with thoſe about me, of attempting upon Dartmouth; and it being concluded affirmatively, I cauſed Two Regiments of Foot to march to Ditſam, and Two to Stoke-Fleming, being on the Weſt-ſide of Dart-River. I having Summoned the place before, reſolved upon Sunday Night to attempt it by Storm, which was agreed to be done in three Places; the firſt Poſt was on the Weſt-Gate by Colonel Hammond; on the North-end of the Town by Lieut. Col. Pride; and on Tunſtall Church and Works by Forteſcue: The time reſolved upon was in the Evening; our Men fell on with great Reſolution, to whom Col. Lambert's Regiment was a Reſerve, and to Alarm the Enemy elſe where, Col. Hammond entred the Weſt-Gate, where Four Guns were planted, and Two upon the Mill-Pool, upon his Flank, (the Enemy firing his Great Guns but once): His Men that had the Forelorn Hope did very Gallantly (as indeed they did all) and went freely on, and beat off the Enemy, and poſſeſſed one Fort after another, viz. Mount-Flagon, the Weſt-Gate, Paradice Fort, and beat off the Main Guard, where were taken Four Lieut. Colonels; and ſo poſſeſſed the Town, from the Weſt-Gate to Little Dartmouth. In the interim Lieut. Col. Pride attempted the North-part of the Town, called Harneſs, where beating off the Enemy, he entred, and took about Eighty Priſoners in it, and by it poſſeſſed all the North-part of the Town, unto the Draw-Bridge, which divided the North-part from the reſt of the Town, where Col. Hammond's Men, and his met. Col. Forteſcue with his Men attempted Tunſtal-Church, which was very well Manned with above a Hundred Men, and having in it Ten Guns; his Men after ſome diſpute, with good Reſolution entred the place and poſſeſſed it. So that by this time the Enemy was beaten out of all, except the Great Fort on the Eaſt-ſide of the River called Kingſworth-Fort, and the Caſtle, with the Fort that lay over the Caſtle, at the Mouth of the Harbour, called Gallants-Bower; to which laſt, the Governour and the Earl of Newport, and as many as eſcaped us, fled. After they were forced from their Strengths out of the Town; the Governour coming back from the Caſtle, to ſee in what poſture the Town was, had a remarkable ſhot, as he was in the Boat; a Muſquet ſhot was made at the Boat, which pierced the Boat, and both the Thighs of one that ſat next to him, and about three Inches into his own Thigh; whereupon he Retreated to the Caſtle. Our Dragoons with two Companies of our Firelocks, and ſome Seamen were only to Alarm Kingſworth Fort, wherein was Sir Henry Cary with his Regiment, having in it Twelve Guns, and Twelve Barrels of Powder, and convenient proportion of Ammunition. This was a very ſtrong Fort, with about four good Bulwarks, ſtrong enough to make a troubleſome Reſiſtance: But the Enemy came willingly to Terms; and to ſave time, I willingly condeſcended to let Sir Henry Cary march away with the reſt, leaving the Arms, Ordnance, Ammunition, with all Proviſions in the Fort, to me, and all engaging themſelves never to take up Arms more againſt the Parliament; which was accordingly performed. Next Morning, being thus Maſter of all, but the Caſtle, and Gallants-Bower, I Summoned that; the Governour was willing to liſten unto me, but I held him to thoſe Terms, upon which after ſome diſpute he yielded, which was to deliver himſelf and all Officers and Soldiers, upon Quarter. He ſent me out Col. Seymour, and Mr. Denham for Hoſtages, with whom came out the Earl of Newport, and all was this day performed accordingly. In this Fort and Caſtle were Eleven Guns, with proportion of Ammunition and Proviſions. We have taken in the Harbour Two Men of War, one belonging to the Governour of Barnſtaple, with Twelve Guns, Burthen 200 Tuns; the other belonging to Newcaſtle, formerly Capt. Johnſon's, of Ten Guns.

In the Town 103 Pieces of Ordnance, and about 600 Priſoners, and 100 Horſe, with good proportion of Arms and Ammunition, one exact particular whereof I am not able to give your Lordſhips at preſent.

There being many of the Town-Soldiers in Plimouth, and ſome Officers, and underſtanding that that Town hath Two thouſand five hundred in Gariſon, beſides Townſmen, I have ſent thither for Five hundred Foot for this place, who quickly will increaſe to more; and to this I deſire your Approbation; for having found more Work to do, I hold it not fit to weaken my Army, eſpecially conſidering the Recruits deſigned by you, I doubt will be too long before they come.

I have given your Lordſhips a brief account of this Service, which I deſire may be accounted a ſweet mercy of God, in a fitting ſeaſon, and only aſcribed to him, who (truly) did direct and act it, and made all the preparation to it, both in the ordering our hearts, and giving health to the Army, who labour'd two Months ago extremely of Sickneſs, but is now in good diſpoſition generally as to health. I can ſay, I find it to be in the hearts of all here, in all integrity to ſerve you; and that it is ſo, is ſtill the mercy of God; for ſurely the ſucceſs of your Affairs only depends upon the ordering of a Gracious Providence, which is no leſs viſible in your Councils, (which we Congratulate) than amongſt us; that being the common root and ſpring of all, and which can and will carry you through the greateſt difficulties, and us in ſerving you, untill God hath finiſhed his own Work: Wherein to profeſs the Obligation and readineſs of my ſelf, and the Army, by the ſame good hand of God is all the undertaking of

Your Lordſhip's moſt Humble Servant,

THO. FAIRFAX.

Priſoners taken at Dartmouth.

Sir Hugh Pollard Governour, the Earl of Newport, Col. Seymour, Four Lieutenant Colonels, Two Majors, Fifteen Captains, Fourteen Lieutenants, Nine Enſigns, and one Cornet, beſides many Country Gentlemen, Miniſters, and Inferior Officers.

All the Common Soldiers being betwixt 800 and 1000, were ſet at liberty to repair to their Dwellings. Ordnance about 120 mounted; and two Men of War in the Harbour. And ſoon after a French Veſſel coming from the Queen ſtruck in there, preſuming that Town ſtill in the King's hands, and ſo was made Prize; they had on Board a Packet of Letters from her Majeſty, which as ſoon as they perceived their miſtake they flung into the Sea, but a Boat being ſent out to ſeek it, the ſame was retriev'd, and ſeveral Letters of Importance thereby Intercepted.

On Monday the 19th, Sir Henry Cary who Commanded one of the Forts, being after the loſs of the Town, neceſſitated to Parley, and having obtained as Honourable Conditions as in ſuch a Caſe could be expected, marched out with all his Officers and Soldiers, leaving the Ordnance, Ammunition, &c. behind them therein.

Thurſday the 20th, the Guns were cleared. The General went Aboard Capt. Batten's Ship, where he was Nobly Entertain'd. All the Corniſh Men that were Priſoners, were ſet at liberty, and had Two Shillings a Man to carry them home, the better to oblige and win the Affections of that County. Alſo Commiſſioners were appointed to diſpoſe of the Prize-goods taken in the Town, towards the Reparation of ſuch in the Town as had adhered to the Parliament, and were damnified by the Storm, who had the greateſt part of thoſe Goods diſtributed amongſt them.

Pouldram Caſtle Surrendred, Jan. 25.

And now Fairfax having gain'd theſe Advantages by this Diverſion, draws back his Army again towards Exeter, and having Iſſued out Warrants to four Hundreds, for the Country to make their Appearance at Totneſs on Jan. 24. They came in thither in all to the Number of about 3000, out of whom a Regiment was raiſed under Col. Fowel; which being done, and Pouldram Caſtle Surrendred to Col. Hammond who was ſent to attack the ſame, wherein he found five Barrels of Powder with proportionate Match and Bullet, and four Pieces of Ordnance; On the 27*th* a Summons with an offer of Conditions was ſent in to the City of Exeter, whereunto the next day an Anſwer was returned, that they could not in Honour Surrender upon the Terms offered, whilſt they were in no worſe Condition, and had ſuch probable hopes of Relief from the Prince: To which a Reply was ſent; and indeed little beſides theſe Papers paſt at that time between them, ſave only that the Parliamentarians now Blockt up the City on the Weſt-ſide alſo, by ſetling Guards and Quarters at Affington, Barley-Houſe, and Reymouth-Houſe within a mile of the City, and a Gariſon kept at Pouldram, and ſome Foot under the Command of Col. Shapcoate, lay before the Fort at Exmouth, ſo that Exeter was compleatly ſtraitned and Blockaded on all ſides, and the Command in chief of all theſe Forces conferred on Sir Hardreſs Waller, whilſt General Fairfax with the reſt of his Army was once more forc'd to march off, to meet the Lord Hopton, who (in the abſence of the Lord Goring, who was gone into France to ſollicite Aid, or on ſome other Service for his Majeſty) being made Commander in Chief under the Prince, and having been Reinforced with New Levies in Cornwall, had uſed Extraordinary Expedition, marching in one day from Stratton to Torrington (which is eighteen long miles) with near four thouſand Horſe, and three thouſand Foot, expecting there 1000 Horſe and Foot more to joyn them from Barnſtaple, and having with them great ſtore of Cattel, Sheep, Salt, and other Proviſions for the Relief of Exeter.

To oppoſe them, Fairfax on the 10*th* of February march'd from Chidley to Crediton, where waiting till Supply of Money, and ſome other Forces came up to him, he advanced on the 14*th* to Chimley, and from thence to Torrington, where a ſmart Engagement happened. The Account of which as it was given to the Houſe of Commons in a Letter from General Fairfax ran thus.

Fairfax's Letter concerning the Fight at Torrington.

Mr. Speaker,

PLimouth being ſet free, and Dartmouth taken, I ſent Col. Hammond with part of the Foot to poſſeſs part of the Houſes near Exeter, for the Blocking of it up on the Weſt-ſide of the River, as formerly I had done on the Eaſt, and lay with the reſt of the Army, ſo as to Countenance both that work, and the raiſing of ſome Forces in the Southams to lye about Totneſs for the ſecuring of that Country, and to keep the Enemy from coming on that ſide of Devonſhire again, when the Army ſhould remove to the other; theſe two things with the continual foul Weather at that time, and the abſence of Col. Cook, with ſo many of the Horſe, occaſioned my ſtay thereabouts above a Fortnight, in which time the Houſes being competently Fortified, and the Forces raiſing in the Southams in good forwardneſs, I drew the Army up towards Crediton, with with purpoſe to advance into the North of Devonſhire alſo, either by the taking of Barnſtaple, or by Blocking of it up, and raiſing a force in that well affected corner to keep it in, ſo as having all clear, or made faſt behind me, I might the better follow the remaining Field-force of the Enemy into Cornwall. And to continue the Blocking up of Exeter on the Weſt-ſide, I left Sir Hardreſs Waller with Three Regiments of Foot, and one of Horſe of this Army, and advanced with Five Regiments of Horſe, and Seven Regiments of Foot, and Five Troops of Dragoons, the reſt of the Horſe and Dragoons being abſent with Col. Cook in Dorſetſhire, but then ſent for to come up, when I was reſolved upon my Advance this way. The Enemy at the ſame time Advanced out of Cornwall with all the Foot to Torrington, about which their Horſe did lye before, and began to Fortifie the Town; their intentions therein, as we conceived, and do ſince further find, were by advantage of this place and their Gariſon of Barnſtaple ſo near it, to make this part of Devonſhire more ſurely theirs, and more difficult for us to come into, and lying ſo much the nearer to Exeter (againſt which they ſuppoſed this Army wholly engaged) to take their beſt advantages from hence; and from Chimley, which they meant alſo to have poſſeſſed, to relieve Exeter on the North-ſide, or diſturb us in the Siege. And it is probable they might have a further purpoſe in their poſture here, to ſecure the Landing of Iriſh or Welſh Supplies ſo much the forwarder towards the Eaſt.

On Saturday laſt, I advanced from Crediton to Chimley, where by many Priſoners I was informed, that the Lord Hopton had hereabouts Four thouſand Horſe, and Three thouſand Foot; We believed them to be about Two thouſand Foot or upwards, and Three thouſand Horſe; the extream foulneſs of Weather that day and the next, occaſioned me not to advance from about Chimley for the next Night, ſave only one Foot-Quarter, and an Horſe-Guard advanced to Rings-Aſh, three miles towards the Enemy, to ſecure a Rendezvous ſo much the nearer to them; for the day following I underſtood by the beſt Intelligence that the Enemy was reſolved to make good their Station, and ſet their reſt upon it to Fight us there if we would come up to them; and truly Men in their condition could not hope (all things conſidered) to have more for it, their Horſe for number ſuperior to what I brought up with me; their Foot, as I find ſince, not much inferior; and if they could with all their Force make good this Town, and put us to lye in the Field, there being no Villages near it that could ſhelter the Army, the wet Weather continuing, which was then moſt likely, would have forced us to draw back and make our Fire-Arms little uſeful, either for aſſault or defence. And beſides, we were like for matter of Proviſions to be forced to draw off firſt, they having both by their poſture, with the plentiful Country of Cornwall behind them, and a River at their backs, ſecuring alſo a good part of Devonſhire unto them, and by their Strength of Horſe, much advantage for longer ſubſiſtence than we. And we by the Barrenneſs of the place where we muſt have layn before them, eſpecially for Horſe-meat, their Gariſon of Barnſtaple lying partly behind us, their Horſe more numerous than ours, which might with ſtronger parties cut off our Supplies, had little poſſibility to ſubſiſt long before them. Theſe Conſiderations we had in our Eye to diſcourage us from going on, as I believe they had to encourage them to ſtand; yet on the other ſide, finding that by reaſon of the barrenneſs and long exhauſting of our Quarters behind us we could neither keep our Horſe ſo cloſe together as to lye ſafe ſo near the Enemy, nor indeed find ſubſiſtence for the Army, either where we were, or in any other Quarters more backward, where we could lye ſo as to ſecure the Siege of Exeter from Relief; and upon all Conſiderations conceiving the Affairs of the Kingdom did require us, and God by all did call us to make a preſent Attempt upon the Enemy: We reſolved to go on, to try what God would do for us, and truſt him for Weather, Subſiſtence, and all things.

Accordingly on Monday Morning I drew out the Army to an early Rendezvous at Rings-Aſh, within ſix miles of the Enemy; the Weather ſtill continued very wet, and ſo by all ſigns was like to hold till we were advanced from the Rendezvous. But ſuddenly when we were upon the march, beyond all expectation it began to be fair and dry, and ſo continued; whereas we had ſcarce ſeen one fair blaſt for many days before. The Enemy (as we underſtood by the way) had all their Horſe drawn together about Torrington, and with their Foot prepared to defend the Town, which they had Fortified with good Barricadoes with Earth caſt up at every Avenue, and a competent Line patch'd up round about it, their Horſe ſtanding by to Flank the ſame, and ſome within to ſcowre the Streets. Our Forelorn-Hope had order to advance to Stephenſon-Park, about a mile from the Town, and there to ſtay for the drawing up of the Army, there being no other place fit for that purpoſe nearer to the Town on that ſide we came on. But when we came near we underſtood that the Enemy had with Two hundred Dragoons poſſeſt the Houſe in the Park, and were Fortifying it, being of it ſelf very ſtrong, but upon our nearer approach, the Dragoons quitted the Houſe, and our Forlorn-Hope falling on them, took many Priſoners; and purſuing them near the Town were engaged ſo far as that they could not well draw back to the Park, which occaſioned the ſending up of ſtronger Parties to make them good where they were, or beating them off; and at laſt, there being ſome fear that the Enemy would draw about them and hem them in, Col. Hammond was ſent up with Three Regiments of Foot, being his own, Col. Harlow's, and mine, and ſome more Horſe, to lye for Reſerves unto them; by which time the Night was grown on, ſo that it was not thought fit, unleſs the Enemy appear'd to be drawing away, to attempt any thing further upon the Town till Morning, in regard none of us knew the Ground, nor the Advantages or diſadvantages of it; but about Nine of the Clock, there being ſome apprehenſion of the Enemies drawing away, by reaſon of their drawing back ſome Out-Guards, ſmall Parties were ſent out towards the Town's end to make a certain diſcovery, which going very near their Works, before the Enemy made any firing, but being at laſt entertained with a great Volley of Shot, and thereupon ſuppoſed to be Engaged, ſtronger Parties were ſent up to relieve them, and after them the Three Regiments went up for reſerves, till at laſt they fell on in earneſt; after very hot Firings our Men coming up to the Barricadoes and Line, the Diſpute continued long at puſh of Pike, and with Butt-ends of Muskets, till at laſt it pleaſed God to make the Enemy fly from their Works, and give our Men the Entrance. After which our Men were twice repulſed by their Horſe, and almoſt all driven out again, but Col. Hammond with ſome other Officers and a few Soldiers, made a ſtop at the Barricadoes, and ſo making good their re-entrance, rallied their Men and went on again; Major Stephen's with their Forlorn Hope of Horſe coming ſeaſonably up to ſecond them, the Enemies Foot ran ſeveral ways, moſt of them leaving their Arms, but moſt of their Officers with the aſſiſtance of Horſe, made good their own Retreat out of the Town towards the Bridge, and taking the advantage of ſtraight Paſſages, to make often ſtands againſt our Men, gave time for many of their Foot to get over the Bridge; their Horſe without the Town, after ſome attempts at other Avenues, to have broken in again upon us, being repulſed, at laſt went all away over another Bridge, and at ſeveral other Paſſes of the River, and all fell Weſt-ward; the Ground where their Horſe had ſtood, and the Bridge they went over lying ſo beyond the Town, as our Horſe could not come at them, but through the Town, which by reaſon of ſtraight Paſſages through ſeveral Barricadoes was very tedious, by means whereof, and by reaſon of continued ſtraight Lanes the Enemy had to Retreat by after they were over the River, as alſo by the advantage of the Night, and by their perfect knowledge of the Country, and our ignorance therein, our Horſe could do little Execution upon the purſuit; but Parties being ſent out ſeveral ways to follow them as thoſe diſadvantages would admit, did the beſt they could, brought back many Priſoners and Horſes; we took many Priſoners in the Town, who being put into the Church where the Enemies Magazine lay, of above Fourſcore Barrels of Powder, as is reported, beſides other Ammunition, either purpoſely by ſome deſperate Priſoner, or caſually by ſome Soldier, the Powder was fired, whereby the Church was quite blown up, the Priſoners and moſt of our Men that Guarded them were killed, and overwhelmed in the Ruins, the Houſes of the Town ſhaken and ſhattered, and our Men all the Town over much endangered by the Stones. Timber, and Lead, which with the Blaſt were carried up very high and ſcattered in great abundance all the Town over, and beyond; yet it pleaſed God that few of our Men were ſlain or hurt thereby, ſave thoſe in the Church; only our loſs of Men otherwiſe, was ſmall in this Service, though many Wounded, it being a hotter Service than any Storm this Army hath before been upon, wherein God gave our Men great Reſolution; and Col. Hammond eſpecially, and other Officers Engaged with him, behaved themſelves with much Reſolution, Courage and Diligence recovering the Ground after their Men were quite repulſed. Of Priſoners taken in this Service about Two hundred were Blown up, Two hundred have taken up Arms with us, and about Two hundred more Common Soldiers remain Priſoners, beſides many Officers, Gentlemen and Servants; not many ſlain, but their Foot ſo diſperſed, as that of about Three thouſand, which the moſt credible Perſons affirm they had there, and we find by a Liſt taken among the Lord Hopton's Papers, themſelves did account the more, we cannot hear of above Four hundred that they carried off with them into Cornwall, whither their Horſe alſo are gone; being much broken and diſperſed as well as their Foot.

By the Conſiderations and Circumſtances in this Buſineſs which I have here touched upon, you will perceive whoſe hand it was that led us to it, and gave ſuch ſucceſs in it; and truly there were many more evident appearances of the good hand of God therein than I can ſet forth; let all the Honour be to him alone for ever, being deſirous, as God ſhall ſee it good, and further enable me, to improve the advantage of this ſucceſs to the uttermoſt.

The next day having ſent ſome Regiments of Horſe and Foot to advance unto Quarters up towards Holſworthy, to ſet the Enemy more home unto Cornwall, and with more terror upon them, I ſent alſo one Regiment of Foot with ſome Horſe, back towards Barnſtaple to poſſeſs the Earl of Bath's Houſe at North-Taviſtock, about a mile from Barnſtaple, on this ſide the River, whereby the Gariſon will be eaſily kept in on this ſide, and I ſhall try what will be done upon it other ways, whilſt the Army takes a little reſt here abouts, which the unſeaſonable Marches, miſerable Quarters, and hard Duty both Horſe and Foot for many days, have been put unto, do neceſſarily require. But I conceive that as ſoon as the Army can be fitted for the purpoſe, it would be beſt to follow the Enemy home, and throughly into Cornwall; the breaking of that Body of Horſe that's left there being the likelieſt means to prevent or diſcourage the Landing of any Foreign Forces in theſe Parts; or the raiſing of any more out of Cornwall; in order to which I muſt earneſtly recommend to your care two things eſpecially, the one to provide by the diſpoſal of your Forces in the Midland Parts, that by Excurſions from Oxford hitherward, I may not be diverted from proſecution of the Work in Cornwall to ſend again that way, nor the Sieges of Exeter and Barnſtaple diſturbed, when I am Engaged further Weſt: The other, that Money may be ſpeeded, if any ways poſſible, but for a Month or ſix Weeks to enable the Horſe as well as Foot to pay Quarters in Cornwall, whereby the oppoſitions that People might make would in all likelihood be taken off, and their Affections or good opinions gained, to make them helpful to us againſt their preſent oppreſſors. There came unto me this day a young Man from Truro, who certifieth me, that Sir Walter Dudley came very lately from France, to let thoſe about the Prince know, that if there were an abſolute neceſſity, they could bring over their Men with a fair Wind from France to be here by the middle of the next Month; expreſſing that they had near 8000 Foot, and 2000 Horſe in readineſs, and Three Months Pay provided for them, beſides Ten thouſand Pound in Bullion daily expected, pected, a Mint being ready to Coyn the ſame, but yet intimated a conveniency in the giving a little more time for their coming over; whereupon Sir John Culpepper was to go in all haſte to France upon Friday laſt, as is ſuppoſed on purpoſe either to haſten all, or a good part of thoſe Forces over. I think it will be very good that as much Shipping as may be obtained be haſtned into thoſe Parts. I ſhall upon this Information, and the good Succeſs God hath been pleaſed to give us, ſo diſpoſe of the Army, as may moſt effectually conduce to a ſpeedy and through Settlement of theſe Weſtern Parts of the Kingdom; therefore I deſire you again to have a ſpecial care, that the Forces about Oxford be not permitted to Range into theſe Parts, when the Army is like to be Engaged ſo far Weſt, leſt it occaſion the diviſion of our Forces, and hinder the Accompliſhment of that we deſire to effect. Great Torrington, Febr. 19. 1645.

Your Moſt Humble Servant,

THO. FAIRFAX.

Here were taken Lieut. Col. Wood, Eight Captains, Commiſſary Boney, Six Lieutenants, One Cornet, Three Enſigns, One Chirurgeon, Four Serjeants, Two and fifty Troopers, One hundred twenty ſeven Gentlemen, and about Two hundred Common Soldiers; in all, Four hundred thirty and three. Near Three thouſand Arms broken and whole; moſt of the Ammunition Blown up in the Church, Eight Colours brought in, whereof one was the Lord Hopton's own, with this Motto,

I will ſtrive to ſerve my Sovereign King.

There were ſlain Major Threave, Captain Fry, and ſome other Officers, Two hundred Soldiers or thereabouts, and as many more Blown up in the Church; ſeveral Perſons of Quality Wounded, between Four and five hundred Pound in Money taken in my Lord Hopton's Quarters, and much other Plunder.

This unexpected Blow whereby moſt of their Foot were ſcatter'd, prov'd of very ill conſequence to his Majeſty's Affairs in thoſe Parts; for Fairfax by ſending out forthwith Parties of Horſe after them kept them in continual Alarms, and Glean'd up many Priſoners, ſo that they choſe to Retreat into Cornwall, where the Princes Regiment of about 800 Horſe, and ſome other Corniſh Horſe having Joyn'd them, they made up a Body of about 5000 Horſe, and a Thouſand Foot, who kept Guards on the other ſide the River Tamar.

A Council of War, and their Reſolution to march into Cornwall.

On Saturday, Febr. 21. at a Council of War held in Fairfax's Army, it was unanimouſly reſolved to march into Cornwall, and on the 23*d* they began to march with the Van from Torrington to Holſworthy, and Col. Butler with a Party of Horſe, and 400 Dragoons was Commanded before to force his Paſſage over the River Tamar, who accordingly performed the ſame, and about Stratton beat up the Quarters of Major General Webb, took 400 Horſes, and Eighty Priſoners, and poſſeſs'd himſelf of that Town.

On the 25*th* Fairfax march'd to Lanceſton, and after a ſhort Diſpute (Col. Baſſet being there with 500 Foot of Col. Tremayne's, and ſome Horſe) obtained the ſame for his Quarters that Night, and continued there two or three days. In the mean time a Treaty was concluded with the Governour of Mount Edgcomb (a place of great great Strength and Conſideration) whereby it was agreed to be Surrendred. The firſt of March Fairfax Quarter'd his Army all Night in the Field about a Village call'd St. Bliſland, and the ſame Night the Lord Hopton quitted Bodmin, Retreating further Weſt; towards which Fairfax advanced the next Morning, and ſent out a Party of Horſe and Foot to ſecure Warebridge, to hinder the Lord Hopton's Forces of that Paſſage in caſe they intended to break through Eaſtward; as likewiſe other Guards were Commanded to Padſtow, leſt they ſhould there get over the River, and to encourage the Townſmen, who ſeeing now the Parliamentarians Maſters of the Field, began to ſtand upon their Guard, and refuſe the Royaliſts Entrance into their Town.

Prince Charles goes to Scilly.

About this time his Highneſs the Prince of Wales, ſeeing it impoſſible at that Juncture to make Head with any ſucceſs againſt Fairfax's numerous Forces, that his Perſon might not fall into their hands, expoſed himſelf rather to the mercy of the Sea, Embarking with ſeveral Lords and Gentlemen his Attendants, and ſafely arrived in Scilly. In the mean time the Lord Hopton kept his Head-Quarters at Truro, but his main Guard of Horſe at Caſtle O Deniſſe, and the reſt of his Troops Quarter'd about St. Columb, Grampound, and Tregni, they wanted not thoughts nor courage to force their paſſage with their Swords in their hands through the Enemy; but the ſame to their calmer Judgments appeared impracticable without expoſing themſelves to certain deſtruction, wherein 'tis like they conſidered the loſs that would accrew to his Majeſty more than their own Lives; for Fairfax had diſpoſed of Guards of Horſe and Foot into all the Paſſes from the North to the South-Sea, and the Country were enjoined to Barracade up the Lanes, and keep Men upon the Fords.

A Ship taken coming from Waterford in Ireland, where ſeveral Letters were found.

Beſides, at this time an Accident happen'd of ill conſequence to the King's Party; a Ship came into Padſtow from Ireland, not doubting but to have been welcomely receiv'd; whereas on the contrary the Towns people endeavour'd to ſeize her, and with the help of ſome Parliament Dragoons Boarded her, and put moſt of the Men to the Sword. But the Captain, one Allen of Waterford had his Life ſpared to the intent to make uſe of his Confeſſion. The Pacquet Letters they brought were thrown over board, but ſound floating on the Water, and were carried to Fairfax, amongſt which were Letters from the Earl of Glamorgan, mentioning that ſome Thouſands of Men were ready to be Tranſported from Ireland, and 4000 more ſhould be ready by the firſt of May. Alſo Letters from the Lord Digby, giving a Narrative of his Proceedings againſt the Earl of Glamorgan, &c. (Which Letters ſee at large herein afterwards, in the Chapter of Affairs in Ireland during this year 1645, whereunto they properly belong.) Now theſe Letters being ſhew'd and read unto the People of the Country who were Summon'd in to appear on the Downs by Bodmin, the ſame made great Impreſſions on them, ſo that above a Thouſand of them expreſs'd much willingneſs to aſſiſt in the Blocking up of all Paſſages and ways to prevent the Royal Cavalry from breaking through. To whom Fairfax ſent this following Summons directed to the Lord Hopton, their Commander in chief.

Fairfax's Summons to the Lord Hopton.

SIR,

THrough the Goodneſs of God to his People, and his juſt hand againſt their Enemies, your Forces being reduced to ſuch Condition, as (to my ſenſe) the good hand of God continuing with us, wherein alone we truſt, they are not like either to have ſubſiſtence or ſhelter long where they are, or to eſcape thence, nor if they could, have they whither to go to have better. I have thought good, for prevention of more Bloodſhed, or of further hardſhip or extremity to any, but ſuch whoſe hearts God ſhall harden to their own deſtruction, to ſend you this Summons, for your ſelf and them to lay down Arms, and withal a tender of ſuch Conditions (upon a preſent Surrender and Engagement, never to bear Arms againſt the Parliament) as may be better than any thing they can rationally expect by further ſtanding out.

Propoſitions ſent to Lord Hopton.

Firſt therefore to the Soldiery in General, Engliſh and Foreigners, I ſhall grant liberty either to go beyond Sea, or to their Homes in England, as they pleaſe; and to ſuch Engliſh as ſhall chuſe to live at Home, my Protection for the liberty of their Perſons, and for the Immunity of their Eſtates from all Plunder or violence of Soldiers, and all to go their ways with what they have, ſaving Horſes and Arms. But for Officers in Commiſſion and Gentlemen of Quality, I ſhall allow them to go with Horſes for themſelves, and one Servant or more, ſuitable to their quality; and with Arms befitting Gentlemen in a condition of Peace; and ſuch Officers as would go beyond Sea for other Service, to take with them their Arms, and full number of Horſes anſwerable to their Offices.

To all Troopers and inferior ſort of Horſe-Officers bringing in and delivering up of their Horſes and Arms, Twenty Shillings a Man in lieu of their Horſes to carry them home: To Engliſh Gentlemen of conſiderable Eſtates, my Paſs, and recommendation to the Parliament for their moderate Compoſition.

Laſtly, for your ſelf (beſides what is before implied to you in common with others, you may be aſſured of ſuch Mediation to the Parliament on your behalf,) both from my ſelf and others, as for one whom (for Perſonal worth, and many Vertues, but eſpecially for your care of, and moderation towards the Country) we honour and eſteem above any other of your party, whoſe error (ſuppoſing you more ſwayed with Principles of Honour and Conſcience than others) we moſt pity, and whoſe happineſs (ſo far as conſiſtent with the publick welfare) we ſhould delight in more than in your leaſt ſuffering.

Theſe things (not from any need or other ends than Humane and Chriſtian) having offered, I leave to your Conſideration and theirs whom they concern; deſiring your and their ſpeedy reſolution, which I wiſh may be ſuch as ſhall be moſt for the Honour of God, the peace and welfare of this poor Kingdom, and for your and their good, ſo far as may ſtand therewith.

And having herein diſcharged (as I conceive) the duty of an honeſt Man, a Soldier and a Chriſtian; If God ſhall ſee it good to let your hearts be hardened againſt your own peace, I ſhall (though with ſome regret for that ill that ſhall enſue to any, yet with cheerfulneſs and rejoycing at the righteous judgment of God) purſue my Charge and Truſt for the Publick in another way, not doubting of the ſame Preſence and Bleſſing which God hath hitherto vouchſafed in the ſame Cauſe to the weak Endeavours of

Your Humble Servant,

Ann. 1645.

This Letter was ſent on the 6*th* of March, and on the 7*th Fairfax* advanced four miles from Bodmin towards St. Collombe, and that Night ſent out Col. Rich with a Thouſand Horſe and Dragoons to beat up their Quarters, which he did near St. Collombe, forcing the Out-Guards up to the Main-Guard, which conſiſting of about 600, moſt of them his Highneſs's the Prince of Wales's Life-Guard, and brave Gentlemen, then Commanded by Major Pert a proper ſtout Gallant Man, who drew out to meet them, and gave a moſt brisk home-Charge, the Major himſelf Charging quite through the firſt Diviſion, but being ſhot was taken Priſoner, (and afterwards died of his Wounds) upon which his Troops retired in diſorder, and were purſued two or three miles by Quarter-Maſter General Fincher, who led the Van, wherein many were Slain and Wounded, near an hundred taken Priſoners, and about 300 Horſes taken, their Riders deſerting them to facilitate their Eſcape. And the next Day Fairfax marched further to other Quarters at St. Stephen's, St. Blaſe, &c. within ſix or ſeven miles of Truro. And that Day my Lord Hopton return'd the following Anſwer to the Letter before recited.

The Lord Hopton's Anſwer.

SIR,

I Received yours bearing Date the Fifth of this Month, wherein I muſt acknowledge much kindneſs from you, and a very Chriſtian Conſideration of ſparing Blood. But one thing there is, I am confident you have too much Honour to expect from me, which is, that to avoid any danger, or to enjoy any worldly advantage, I will renounce my Maſter's Houſe, to whom I am both a ſworn Subject, and a ſworn Servant; that I muſt profeſs I am reſolved to undergo all Fortunes with him, and if there ſhall be cauſe, to ſuffer any thing, rather than in the leaſt point to taint my Honour in that particular; and I hope there is not a Man of any Conſideration in this Army under my Command, that is not ſo reſolved; yet in all honeſt and honourable ways, to procure the Peace of this Kingdom, and the ſparing of Chriſtian Blood, I take God to witneſs I am and ſtill have been moſt deſirous. And I hear from good hands, that our Gracious Sovereign is at preſent ſo far advanced in a Treaty with the Parliament, as that he hath promiſed to paſs four of their Bills propoſed, whereof the intruſting of the Militia for Seven years, in hands agreed between them, is one. I deſire you to deal freely with me in that particular, for if that be ſo, it will ſpare the labour of further Treaty, being for my part ready to obey whatſoever his Majeſty ſhall agree to. God hath indeed of late humbled us with many ill Succeſſes, which I acknowledge as a very certain evidence of his juſt Judgment againſt us for our Perſonal crimes; yet give me leave to ſay, your preſent proſperity cannot be ſo certain an evidence of his being altogether pleaſed with you. It is true, we are reduced to a lower condition than we have been in, yet have we a Gallant Body of Horſe, that being preſerved to a general accord, may be for good uſe againſt our Common Enemies; and being otherwiſe preſt, I may ſay it without vanity, want not a reſolution, at leaſt, to ſell our ſelves at a dear rate againſt any odds. Your Propoſitions, though they be not wholly conſented to, yet if a general accord, much more deſirable, be not in a likely forwardneſs to prevent them, I ſhall be willing that Eight Commanders of ours, with Three Country Gentlemen, give a meeting as ſoon as you pleaſe, to any equal number of yours, at any indifferent place to conſult of this great Buſineſs, and to conclude of ſome Propoſitions that may be Reaſonable and Honourable for both parts; wherein I hope God will ſo bleſs our clear intentions, as may produce a probable inducement to a General Peace, according to the unfained deſire of your Servant,

March 8. 1645.

Ralph Hopton.

The next Day Fairfax ſent this Reply:

Fairfax's Reply, March the 9*th*.

My Lord,

I Should moſt truly and freely inform your Lordſhip the beſt I could, in any thing that might lead you to a right underſtanding of things, in order to the Peace of the Kingdom; or the real good of your ſelf, and thoſe with you, ſo far as may ſtand with my truſt and duty to the Publick, to what I conceive your more certain knowledge of that your deſire to be informed in concerning the King's Offers to the Parliament; and amongſt them one concerning the Militia. Something to the purpoſe, as you ſay you have heard; but the juſt certainty what his laſt Overtures are, or how far they are advanced to a general accord, I cannot at preſent certifie. I do not hear they have proceeded ſo far as to a Treaty; and I believe that as the Parliament may be diſcouraged from the way of Treaty by former experiences of the fruitleſneſs thereof, and the ill uſe the ſame hath been deſigned or driven unto, viz. only to gain advantages for War, without real intentions for Peace; ſo the late Overtures that way are the leſs like to be ſucceſsful, by reaſon of the clear and certain diſcoveries the Parliament have had, That his Majeſty at the ſame time was and is labouring by Agents in all Parts to draw in Foreign Forces, and eſpecially that the Earl of Glamorgan by Commiſſion from his Majeſty, had concluded a Peace with the Iriſh Rebells, on Terms extreamly diſhonourable and prejudicial, upon the only Condition of ſending over Force under the Command of that Lord, to invade England; whereof I preſume you cannot but have heard. And though his Majeſty did in a Letter to the Parliament, diſavow any ſuch Agreement, and pretended he had given Order to the Lord Digby for the Attainting and Impeaching the Earl of Glamorgan of High Treaſon for what he had done therein; yet by late diſcoveries to the Parliament, and eſpecially by Letters intercepted the other day at Padſtow, from the Lord Digby, the Earl of Glamorgan, and others, to Secretary Nicholas, your ſelf, Sir Edward Hide, the Lord Culpeper, and others, it is moſt clear and evident, that the Arreſting of the Earl of Glamorgan was only for a preſent colour to ſalve reputation with the People, and continue their deluſion till deſigns were ripe for execution; for the ſame Peace is fully concluded with the Rebels, the King to have the Aid conditioned upon the ſame Agreement, and the Earl of Glamorgan at liberty again, and to Command that Force in Chief.

Now for the Overture of a Meeting to Treat further about the Propoſitions I ſent, though I know nothing material that I can add or alter, except in Circumſtances, yet I ſhall not refuſe or decline ſuch a Meeting, or ought elſe that probably tends to the ſaving of Blood, or further miſery to any; Provided the Meeting be ſpeedily, and number of Perſons not to exceed Four or Five. But, my Lord, when you conſider what I have before related concerning Foreign Supplies, which I have reaſon to think you know and believe; you ſee what cauſe I have to be jealous of advantages ſought by delays, and not to intermit any time, or omit any opportunity to proſecute the Service I have in hand. And that there may be no colour of your expecting that forbearance on my part, which you offer on yours, I do the more haſten back my reſolution to you. In purſuance whereof, I do not deſpiſe, nor ſhall inſult upon your preſent condition. I queſtion not, nor yet ſhall I hope, be much moved with the reſolution of your Men. I preſume not on former Succeſſes, nor preſent advantage in fleſhly power, but deſire to truſt in God alone, whoſe favour and bleſſing to this Army above others, I do not account in what is paſt, or expect in future, to be for any precedence in merit or goodneſs of ours, whereby we ſhould be more pleaſing to him than others, but from his own free Grace and Goodneſs towards his People, whoſe welfare with the common good of the Kingdom, we ſeek and deſire with all faithfulneſs and integrity to purſue. And ſo committing the iſſue of all to his good pleaſure, I remain your humble Servant,

Moreover, Fairfax commanded ſome of the Regiment to advance this day to Tregny, and the next day the Army advanced two ſeveral ways, part following to Tregny (the Head-Quarter that Night) another part of it to Probus, and thoſe Parts. Whereupon the Lord Hopton ſeeing his Men were ſo ſtartled at the advance of the Enemy, ſent that Night about Twelve of the Clock, for a Treaty, naming the Place, Treſillian Bridge. The Trumpet was return'd about Three in the Morning, that the General did hearken to a Treaty, and would appoint Commiſſioners to meet at the Place propoſed by the Lord Hopton. Hereupon Commiſſioners on both ſides were nominated to meet at Nine the next Day, (being Tueſday Morning March the 10*th*) but the General being unwilling to loſe time, gave Orders for a March; accordingly the Army that Tueſday advanced by break of Day, and marched to a Rendezvous within two miles of Truro, by Ten of the Clock, where the Lord Hopton's Trumpeter brought a ſafe Conduct for the Commiſſioners, and they having received the like, a Ceſſation was agreed to, but withal a Meſſage was ſent to the Lord Hopton from the General, that he intended to Quarter his Army at Truro and St. Allen that Night, which he thought fit to give him notice of, that none of his Forces might be left in the Town. This much diſreliſhed the Lord Hopton, and his Commiſſioners that he ſent, had much reluctancy againſt it. And ſo at laſt Fairfax upon Conference, was content to let them have St. Ellen for their Quarter, reſerving ſtill Truro (the Prime Quarter) to himſelf.

A Treaty began, March 10.

Wedneſday the 11*th*, the Commiſſioners on both ſides met again, but could not make any great progreſs into the Treaty; the Ceſſation was continued for a day longer; about one hundred and twenty Muſquetiers came in this Day with their Arms and Colours flying, being of Colonel Trevanian's Regiment; alſo divers Colonels, Knights and Gentlemen of Quality ſent to Fairfax, making known their deſires, to be received into the Protection of the Parliament; which ſo diſheartned Col. Trevanian then with his Regiment at Perin, that late that Evening he alſo ſent, deſiring he might be included in the Treaty with the Lord Hopton, and have the ſame Conditions that other Officers were to have. Theſe things operated with the Governour of St. Mawes Caſtle, a principal Fort that had a great command of the Haven at Falmouth, that he likewiſe ſent to be received into the like Terms. And although the Governour of Pendennis ſent to command him to come into the Caſtle of Pendennis, he refuſed and perſiſted in his former deſire; whereupon the General ſent him Conditions, with a Summons; which were accepted, and he agreed to Surrender.

Treaty Concluded.

By Twelve of the Clock this Night, all the material Points of the Treaty were concluded, matters of Circumſtances only remained, which yet were ſo neceſſary to be concluded, in order to the perfecting of the Treaty, that the next Day was allowed (and the Ceſſation continued) for the finiſhing therein. When the Treaty was fully ended, and Hoſtages appointed, the ſame day St. Mawes Caſtle was Surrendred, and Thirteen Pieces of Ordnance in it, (whereof Two Great Braſs-pieces of about Four thouſand Weight a piece) and Foot were ſent to poſſeſs it.

The Treaty being thus ended, thoſe that ſeemed moſt diſcontented were the Common Troopers that were to be Diſmounted, who therefore to mend their Conditions, had changed away their beſt Horſes, for advantage before the Diſbanding.

Saturday was appointed to be the day of Disbanding, which yet of very neceſſity was put off till the next day; and now all things being agreed, the Commiſſioners of both ſides ſupt this Night with the General.

The next Day the French Regiment under the Command of Monſieur Lapland, which was to be the firſt Disbanded, was brought to the place appointed. Their Horſes were very poor, they having before by private Contracts, put off the beſt of them. Theſe were about Three hundred, Diſmounted, but they having made their Markets before, moſt of their Horſes were turned back upon their hands, as not worth the Twenty Shillings an Horſe, which they were to receive according to the Agreement. In the ſpace of five Days more the work was finiſhed, viz. on Monday Two Brigades of Horſe. On Tueſday the 17*th*, the Two Brigades of the Lord Cleveland's and Major General Web's. Wedneſday the 18*th*, part of the Lord Wentworth's, Col. Bovile's Brigade, Lord Hopton's Life-Guard, and Sir Richard Greenvile's Life-Guard. Thurſday Two Brigades more, of which the Lord Goring's was one, and the Prince's Life-Guard. Friday the 20*th*, the Two laſt Troops of all the Corniſh Horſe were Disbanded. The number of Brigades in all that were Disbanded, were Nine, viz. the French Brigade, conſiſting of Three Regiments. The Lord Wentworth's Brigade, conſiſting of Four Regiments. Sir James Smith's Brigade, conſiſting of Three Regiments. The Lord Cleveland's Brigade, conſiſting of Four Regiments. Major General Webb's of Three Regiments. The Lord Hopton's Brigade, Commanded by Col. Bovile. The Lord Goring's Brigade, of Five Regiments. The Prince's Life-Guard, conſiſting of Nine Troops, being Seven hundred Men, well Armed. And Sir Richard Greenvile's Reformadoes.

But of this whole Action, ſee the Account given by Fairfax himſelf.

To the Honourable William Lenthall Eſq; Speaker of the Honourable Houſe of Commons.

SIR,

Fairfax's Letter to the Speaker.

WHilſt I lay at Bodmin, for the neceſſary Refreſhment of the Army, and to block up the Paſſages from Bodmin to the North and South Sea; I ſent a Summons with Propoſitions to Sr. Ralph Hopton, and the Army under his Command (a true Copy whereof I have here incloſed) being encouraged thereunto by ſome of the Enemies Officers and Souldiers, who came in to me, and informed me of their Inclinableneſs to Conditions, hoping thereby either to bring them to ſuch Terms as ſhould be to your Advantage, or would diſtract and weaken them; and withall underſtanding by the intercepted Letters I ſent you, that an Iriſh Infantry was ready to be ſhipt for England; I thought fit to try all means which in Probability might break their Body of Cavalry upon the place. When I had diſpatched theſe Propoſitions to the Enemy, I advanced upon Monday with all the Army from Bodmin towards Truro, being then the Enemy's Head-Quarters; and to Tregny, where I quartered that Night. Sr. Ralph Hopton ſent a Trumpeter to me with a Letter, deſiring to have Commiſſioners appointed on both ſides to meet at Treſillian Bridge the next day, with Power to treat and conclude; which I aſſented to: The Treaty accordingly began, the Commiſſioners meeting about four a Clock in the Afternoon; and I, in the mean time, advancing the Quarters of the Army to Truro and Saint Allen. After ſome time ſpent between the Commiſſioners, miſſioners, this Agreement was made, a Copy whereof I have here alſo incloſed; and in Execution thereof, this day we began to diſband the French Brigade under Colonel Lapland; to morrow we proceed with Three other Brigades, they having Nine in all; and ſhall endeavour to ſhorten this work as much as may be. Truly, SIR, this muſt needs be acknowledged for an Admirable Mercy from the ſame gracious hand of Providence that has hitherto gone along with you, that ſo conſiderable a Force as this ſhould be ſo baffled; firſt at Torrington, and afterwards ſhould put themſelves as it were into a Net, whereby they were neceſſitated to take Terms to the utter ruine of ſo great a Body of Cavalry; which according to all our Information, and the Confeſſion of our Enemies, was not leſs at the time of the Treaty than Four or Five thouſand Horſe. The Articles of Agreement will ſpeak the Mercy, and needs no Coment; yet, I hope, I may make this obſervation upon them: That thereby not only ſo great a Body of Cavalry is broken, but ſo many, both Officers and Soldiers, diſobliged from taking Arms againſt you, and this at ſuch a Seaſon when a Foreign Aid ſo ready as the Earl of Glamorgan's Letters ſent up formerly (and now ſent you) ſpeak at large; the timely freeing of us from other Services that remain, with Diſcouragement put upon the Enemies Garriſons in theſe Parts, which we hope will cauſe them the more ſpeedily to come in, we truſt will be good Conſequences of this Work: Its the Deſire of us all, the Praiſe of all may be returned to God to whom it is only due. The Reputation of this hath already produced a Surrender of St. Mawes Caſtle, wherein we found about Thirteen Guns, and good Proportion of Ammunition; which Place gives you a better Intereſt in Falmouth Harbour than the Enemy hath: for by the Advantage hereof you may bring in Shipping without hazard, which they cannot. It hath alſo occaſioned the coming in of between Three hundred and Four hundred Foot of the Enemies with their Arms to me; and given the Countries ſuch heart againſt them, that in Peryn (a Town formerly not very well affected) and in St. Ive they ſtand upon their Guards againſt the Enemy: For further particulars concerning this Buſineſs, I refer you to Maſter Peters, who (ſince he came into this County where he was Born) hath very much furthered the Service in the bringing of the Country in ſo freely to the Protection of the Parliament. I remain

Truro. Your Moſt Humble Servant,

THO. FAIRFAX.

Truro, March 14. 1645.

CHAP. IV.

His Majeſty's Marches after the Battel of Naſeby, the Proceedings of the Scots Army in England, and other Military Tranſactions to the end of the Year 1645.

The King's marches from the Battel of Naſeby to the end of the Year 1645.

HIS Majeſty after the fatal Battel at Naſeby, June the 14*th*, Retreated towards Hereford, and ſo to Ragland, and other parts in Wales to Recruit his Army; from whence about the beginning of Auguſt he advanced with about 3000 Horſe by the way of Ludlow, and ſo to Litchfield. Aug. the 8*th*, the Scots (who by this time were ſet down before Hereford, as ſhall be related in convenient place) ſending out a ſtrong Party of Horſe under Lieutenant General David Leſley, to attend his Motions. On Wedneſday, Aug. 13*th*, his Majeſty Quartered about Titbury and Aſhburn, where Sir John Gell Skirmiſht with his Rear, but was beat off, and ſome of his Men taken Priſoners. On the 15*th* the King came to Welbeck-Houſe, and there was Reinforced with Horſe and Dragoons from Newark. It was believed that his Majeſty then deſigned for the North, to Joyn with Montroſs, who about that time was Maſter of the Field in Scotland. To prevent which Major General Poyntz was Poſted with above 2000 Horſe about Doncaſter and Rotheram, with whom Col. Roſſiter, and the Staffordſhire and Derbyſhire Horſe were haſtening to joyn; ſo that his Majeſty finding his Paſſage that way Intercepted (the Paſs at Ferrybriggs being ſecured, and Leſley ready to joyn with the Enemy) turn'd back Southwards, and from Newark fell into the Aſſociated Counties, and having lain one Night at Belvoir-Caſtle, made his next Head-Quarters at Stamford in Lincolnſhire, and march'd with ſuch ſpeed that on Sunday the Van of his Army (which conſiſted only of Horſe and Dragoons) came to Huntington, where at the Bridge Capt. Bennet with his Foot-Company oppoſed them, until he himſelf, his Lieutenant, and many of his Men being ſlain, they forc'd their Entrance, and became Maſters of that Town, where the King Quarter'd on Monday the 25*th* of Auguſt, and gave Cambridge ſeveral Alarms, and faced it with a Party of Horſe, but then drew off, and on Tueſday lay at Wooburn, but his Troops ſpread themſelves in ſeveral Parties through Bedfordſhire, and part of Hartfordſhire, ſome of them coming as far as Margret-Street, not above five miles beyond St. Albans, and on Wedneſday his Majeſty was in Perſon at Dunſtable, but moſt of his Forces Quarter'd about Biſſiter, and on the 28*th* of Auguſt repaired to Oxford, where the day before the Lord Keeper Littleton departed this Life. In this ſudden and unexpected March, his Majeſty's Horſe got great Booty out of thoſe Countries adhering to the Parliament through which they paſs'd, eſpecially at Huntington.

The King falls into the Eaſtern Aſſociation.

Lord Keeper Littleton died, Aug. 27.

His Majeſty taking with him what Forces might be ſpared, on the 31*ſt* of Auguſt march'd from Oxford to Cambden, and the Two Houſes fearing that his deſign was either to raiſe the Siege of Hereford or Briſtol (whereof the former was at that time Inveſted by General Leven and the Scots, the latter by Fairfax) gave immediate Orders that Major General Poyntz and Col. Roſſiter ſhould draw what Forces they could together, and attend the King's Motions, holding Correſpondence with Leven or Fairfax, according as they ſound either of them in danger of being Attacked. But the Scots upon the King's approach (and for the reaſons herein after mentioned) raiſed their Siege before Hereford of their own accord, and began to march homewards; and ſoon after his Majeſty received the unexpected News of the loſs of Briſtol, being Surrendred by Prince Rupert on the Eleventh of September to Sir Thomas Fairfax.

The King after the Retreat of the Scots viſited Hereford, and continued there and at Worceſter and Ludlow, till about the 20th of that Month, Poyntz with conſiderable Forces lying between him and Oxford. Sometime before this the Parliaments Forces Beſieging Beeſton-Caſtle, not far from Weſt-cheſter, on a ſudden Col. Jones who Commanded the Horſe, with Adjutant General Louthian, who Commanded the Foot, drew off thence a Party of 1300 Horſe and Foot about Eight a Clock in the Evening, and advancing all Night with a Still-march, came the next Morning about Four a Clock before Cheſter on the Eaſt-Gate ſide, and divided their Forces into four Squadrons to Storm the Works in ſo many ſeveral places, and got upon the Works in ſome places before the Guards diſcovered them, and ſo with little loſs made themſelves Maſters of the Forreſt-Street, with the Bar, St. John's Church, Barker's Lane, &c. with the Mayor's Houſe, Sword and Mace, and thereby much affrightned and ſtraitned the City, before which they continued, expecting daily Sir William Brereton with more Forces to joyn with them; wherefore to prevent if poſſible the loſs of ſo important a place (and ſo convenient for the Landing of the Forces from Ireland, who every minute were expected) his Majeſty with about 5000 Horſe and Foot drain'd out of ſeveral Gariſons, advanced that way, and Major General Poyntz follows with all expedition after him; and on Routon Heath within ſome two miles of Cheſter, began to Engage with his Majeſty's Forces, who Charged with ſuch Reſolution that they routed the Major, and were in purſuit of him, when at the ſame inſtant Col. Jones and Adjutant Louthian having drawn out 500 Horſe, and 300 Foot from their Leaguer before Cheſter, came up to his Aſſiſtance, Charging the King's Troops on the other ſide, which gave Poyntz's Men an opportunity to Rally, and then there began a moſt furious freſh Encounter, wherein at laſt the King's Forces having to deal with Poyntz in the Front, and Jones in the Rear, were diſcomfited, five or ſix hundred of them ſlain upon the place, amongſt whom was the Lord Berty Stuart Earl of Litchfield; many Officers and Perſons of Quality, and above 1000 Common Soldiers taken, his Majeſty himſelf not without difficulty retiring with the Remainder into Wales; where having ſtaid ſome days about Denbighſhire to refreſh and recruit his Forces, being attended with the Lord Loughborough, General Gerard, Sir Marmaduke Langdale, and other Great Commanders, and an Army of about 3000 Fighting Men, came on the Second of October to Litchfield, the next day to Melburn, and on the 4th to Newark, where he continued till about the beginning of November; his Horſe being Quarter'd at Belvoir, Worton, Welbeck, and Sleford. But Poyntz and great Numbers of the Parliaments Forces drawing round that way, and having on Monday, Novemb. 3. taken by Storm Shelford Mannor (the Earl of Cheſterfield's Houſe) where the Gariſon conſiſting of about 200, were moſt of them put to the Sword, Sword, and the Governour, Son to the Earl of Cheſterfield dangerouſly Wounded. His Majeſty apprehending to be Beſieged in Newark, took the opportunity whilſt the Parliamentarians were Engaged before that Houſe, to march away in the Night with a Party of Horſe to Daintry, where the Earl of Northampton met him with a greater Body, and conducted him to Banbury, and ſo to Oxford, where he arrived Novemb. the 6th, and continued there and thereabouts all the reſt of this Year, ſending divers Meſſages to the Two Houſes about a Treaty for Peace: All which together with their Anſwers you will find in the ſubſequent Chapter of Civil Tranſactions.

The Proceedings of the Scot's Army in England, and ſome Tranſactions in the North, 1645.

After the Surrender of Newcaſtle to the Scottiſh Army in Octob. 1644 (whereof we have before given an Account) part of their Forces laid Siege to Carliſle, which was reſolutely defended by the Governour Sir Tho. Glemham; but being reduced to the utmoſt Extremity, and without any proſpect of Relief, he Surrendred it to them June the 28*th* upon Honourable Conditions, viz. to march out with Horſe and Arms, Colours Flying, Drums Beating, and a Convoy to Skipton or Newark; to which latter he march'd with about eighty Horſe, and 500 Foot.

Carliſle Surrendred, June 28*th*.

Pontfract-Caſtle yielded, July 21.

Soon after, viz. July 21. Pontfract-Caſtle likewiſe Surrendred to the Parliaments Forces upon Articles much to the ſame effect.

And four days after Scarborough Caſtle (that had held out a long Siege under Sir Hugh Cholmley, and before which Sir John Meldrum upon a Salley in May had been Wounded, whereof he afterwards died) did alſo Surrender to Sir Mat. Bointon upon Articles, which were much grumbled at by ſome of the Parliaments Party as too favourable, being as follows.

Articles agreed and concluded upon the Twenty ſecond Day of July 1645, betwixt the Honourable Sir Matthew Boynton, Knight and Baronet, one of the Military Committee for the Northern Aſſociation: Col. Francis Laſſels, Col. Simon Needham, Commanders in chief of the Forces for the King and Parliament in Scarborough: And the Honourable Sir Hugh Cholmley, Knight and Baronet, Governour of the Caſtle there; concerning the Rendition thereof to the Perſons before Named.

I. THAT the Caſtle be Surrendred upon Friday next, being the Twenty fifth Day of this Inſtant July 1645, by Twelve of the Clock at Noon: That all the Arms, Ordnance, Ammunition, Proviſion and Goods of what ſort ſoever, now in, and about the Caſtle (except what is hereafter excepted) ſhall be delivered to the Commanders in Chief in Scarborough, or to whom they ſhall appoint, to the uſe of the King and Parliament.

II. That all Priſoners now in the Caſtle be ſet at liberty within ſix Hours after the Sealing of theſe Articles.

III. That the Governour Sir Hugh Cholmley, and thoſe Officers, and Gentlemen Soldiers, if he deſire it, ſhall have a ſafe Convoy from hence into Holland, or be ſafely conveyed to Newark, whether they ſhall chuſe; and if any after their coming to Newark ſhall then reſolve to go into Holland, giving notice thereof within ſix Days to the Committe for Military Affairs at York, they ſhall have Paſſes from thence, to take Shipping at Hull, Scarborough, and Birdlington-Key, and be there Accommodated, paying ſmall Rates, ſo that they take the firſt opportunity of Wind and Shipping. And ſuch other who deſire them, ſhall have Paſſes from the ſaid Committee to go to the King's Army, or any of his Gariſons, as they pleaſe; they travelling not above Twenty in a Company, where the Governour or Colonel ſhall be in Perſon, otherwiſe not above Ten in a Company; the time to be permitted in their ſeveral Paſſes, as the diſtance of the Places they go to ſhall require; none of them paſſing through any Gariſon for the King and Parliament, if there be any other way.

IV. That no Perſon whatſoever going from this Caſtle, be Plundered, Arreſted, or ſtaid upon any ground or pretence whatſoever, and in ſuch caſe upon complaint made to the aforeſaid Committee at York, to be ſpeedily redreſſed.

V. That the Lady Cholmley ſhall have liberty to live at her own Houſe in Whitby, and enjoy ſuch part of her Eſtate, as is allowed by Ordnance of Parliament: That ſhe may have two Men-ſervants, and two Horſes to carry her ſelf and ſuch neceſſary things as ſhall be granted her.

VI. That all inferior Officers, Common Soldiers, and others, who have deſire to live at home, ſhall have Paſſes granted them for that end, and ſhall not be forced to take up Arms againſt their minds: That the Sick and Wounded ſhall be provided for until their recovery, and then have Paſſes to travel to what place they pleaſe, having ſufficient time allowed for their Journey, and two Perſons permitted to take care of them.

VII. That the Governour march on his own Horſe, with Sword, Piſtols, and Defenſive Arms; and all Field-Officers upon their own Horſes, with their Swords and Piſtols, all Captains whatſoever, Lieutenants, Cornets of Horſe in like manner, three Servants of the Governour, and one for every Field-Officer as aforeſaid, and all other Officers and Soldiers whatſoever on Foot, without any other Arms than their Swords, and not to be compelled to march above ten Miles a Day.

VIII. That all Officers and Soldiers may carry upon their Perſons what is really their own; that nothing be carried in Cloth-bags or Snapſacks, but their own wearing Apparel, Writings, Evidences and Bills.

IX. That every Officer, Gentleman and Clergy-man, may have liberty to buy, or lawfully procure a travelling Horſe for himſelf and his Servant, and that all Sick and Lame-men may enjoy the ſame Priviledge.

X. That all Gentlemen of Quality and Clergy-men have liberty to march, Gentlemen with their Swords; that none of them carry above the value of 5 l. in Money or Plate about their Perſons, and nothing in their Cloth-bags, but as is expreſſed in the Eighth Article.

XI. That there be no fraud or deceit whatſoever uſed, in ſpoiling or imbezilling any thing before mentioned, or comprized in theſe Articles; and if any of them ſhall be violated, the Party offending ſhall be delivered to the Commander in chief where the fact ſhall be done, to give ſatisfaction for his offence, and his particular act ſhall not be underſtood as a breach of theſe Articles, nor be prejudicial to any other.

There were taken in this Caſtle Thirty ſeven Ordnance, One thouſand Arms, great ſtore of Powder, Match, Bullet, and much Pillage.

Whilſt theſe things were Tranſacting, part of the Scot's Forces were Ordered into Lancaſhire, to aſſiſt Sir William Brereton, but the Groſs of their Army hover'd to and fro, ſometimes advancing Southward, and ſometimes Retreating, as being 'tis likely apprehenſive of the King's breaking Northwards to joyn with Montroſs, (who about this time was very victorious in Scotland) till ſome time after the Battel at Naſeby; and then towards the latter end of June they advanced to Nottingham, whence on the ſecond of July they came to Melton Mowbray, the next day to Tamworth, and on the fifth to Bromingham, and ſo in Parties to ſeveral Places of Worceſterſhire and Herefordſhire, obſtructing the King from making New Levies in thoſe Parts; and the Houſe of Commons appointed Commiſſioners to Reſide in that Army for the better ſatisfaction of their Proceedings.

The firſt attempt of the Scots was upon Canon-Froom, a Gariſon of the King's about the Mid-way between Worceſter and Hereford, where Col. Barnold was Governour, to whom the Earl of Calendar ſent a Summons, and the Governour returned the following Anſwer.

For the Lord Calendar.

SIR,

YOU demand this Houſe for the King and Parliament, my Commiſſion is by the King alone, and if I may ſee a Command under his Majeſty's Hand, I ſhall with all willingneſs obey it, until then I cannot give that Account as is expected from me; nor will I reſign it upon any other Conditions, ſo long as I ſhall have Life, only reſt

Cannon-Froom, July 22. 1645.

Your Servant,

John Barnold.

Hereupon the Scots reſolv'd to Storm the Place, and met with a brave Defence; the Gariſon holding out till ſeventy of them were kill'd, the Governour mortally Wounded, and then the Scots became Maſters of it; taking two Captains, and not above thirty other Priſoners. And ſoon after Col. Harlow (Son to Sir Robert Harlow, a Member of the Houſe of Commons) was appointed to be Governour thereof, and to Gariſon it with the Foot he had raiſed in Glouceſterſhire.

At the ſame time one Sir William Flemming a Scotiſh Gentleman of the King's Party in Hereford made the following Addreſſes to the Earl of Leven, and the Earl of Calendar, who was his Uncle.

For his Excellency the Earl of Leven.

My Lord,

BEing very deſirous to ſpeak with my Uncle the Earl of Calendar about ſome private Buſineſs of my own; and conceiving alſo that I may be able to ſay ſomewhat to your Lordſhip worth your conſideration, in relation to the Publick Good; I ſhall eſteem my ſelf obliged, if your Lordſhip pleaſe to favour me with a ſafe Conduct to wait upon you, Reſting, my Lord,

For the Right Honourable the Earl of Calendar.

My Lord,

Having the Honour of ſo near Relation to your Lordſhip, and being perſuaded that over and above ſome private Buſineſs of my own, I can impart ſomewhat to your Lordſhip, which if timouſly conſidered might very much conduce jointly to the Good of my Country, the King's Service, and the Honour of our Nation, I have obtained permiſſion to come over and ſpeak with your Lordſhip, if you ſhall be pleaſed to procure me a ſafe Conduct, wherein you ſhall much oblige, my Lord,

Leven's Anſwer.

SIR,

I Receiv'd your Letter, wherein you deſire a ſafe Conduct to ſpeak with the Earl of Calendar about ſome private Buſineſs of your own, and with my ſelf about the Publick; whereto I return this Anſwer, That upon good Conſiderations I cannot yield to your deſires; nor do I think it fitting that you or any of your Party ſhould repair to this Army to ſpeak with my ſelf or any elſe here, about the Buſineſs of the Publick, wherein if you have any thing to ſay of worthy Conſideration, you may follow the ſtrait and publick way, applying your ſelf to the Parliament, or Committees of both Kingdoms, and not make your Addreſs to me, who am not to ſpeak or hear any thing of Publick Concernment, but what ſhall be Recommended to me by them. I ſhall add nothing, but remain

Nephew,

I Receiv'd yours, and ſhall be ever willing to witneſs my Intereſt to you, wherein I can be ſteadable in your own particular and private Buſineſs: But for theſe matters of Publick Concernment which you would communicate to me, tho' your Affection and Judgment in theſe Affairs hath not hitherto been ſuch as I would have deſired, yet if now God hath given you better thoughts towards the Good of his Cauſe, and the Peace of theſe Kingdoms, and that you do really apply your ſelf that way, I wiſh your diſcretion had carried you to have made your Addreſs to thoſe to whom matters of that kind do belong, namely to the Parliaments of both Kingdoms, or their Committees, who will be very willing to hear of you what may tend to the Glory of God, Honour of the King, and Peace of the Kingdom: All which I am confident are the deſires of all Honeſt Men, and of none more than of and better be provided of all Neceſſaries, both for the Siege, and Entertainment of the Soldiers; the King had not another Paſs upon the Severn, and it brought much Trade to London: But on the other ſide, Hereford was nearer the King's Quarters, where they could more hinder his Recruits, and break his Forces, and thereby Worceſter too would in a manner be Block'd up, the Parliaments Troops having three ſides of it already; therefore it was concluded they ſhould attempt the latter, and accordingly drew before it July the 30*th*, and next day ſent in this Summons.

The Scots Summons ſent to the Governour of Hereford, July 31. 1645.

SIR,

OUR appearance before you in this poſture is for no other End, but for the ſettling of Truth with Peace in England, without the leaſt deſire to ſhed the Blood of any Subject in it: Our by-paſt Actions may be a ſufficient evidence thereof. This is to Summon and require you to deliver up the City unto me, to be kept for the uſe of his Majeſty and the Parliament of England, whereunto if you ſhall be ſo wiſe and happy as to condeſcend, you may have Conditions Honourable and ſafe; but if otherwiſe worſe Councel ſhall ſo far prevail with you, as to contemn this offer, I am perſwaded all the World and you alſo will acquit us of the manifold Inconveniences which will undoubtedly enſue upon your Refuſal. Conſider ſadly of your own condition, and of thoſe now under your Charge, whoſe Blood will be laid upon your Account, and return Anſwer unto me within three Hours after the Receipt hereof. Given at the Leaguer before Hereford this laſt day of July about Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon.

My Lord,

I Am not to give up the King's Gariſons upon any Summons or Letter, neither ſhall it be in the power of the Mayor, or other, to condeſcend to any ſuch Propoſition made unto them: I was ſet in here by the King's Command, and ſhall not quit it but by Special Order from his Majeſty or the Prince: And with this Reſolution I ſhall perſiſt. General of the Scotiſh
Army, Theſe.

The Scots continued here till about the beginning of September, and then raiſed their Siege. The occaſions and reaſons whereof they ſoon after publiſh'd as followeth.

A Declaration of his Excellency the Earl of Leven.

A Declaration of his Excellency the Earl of Leven, concerning the riſing of the Scotiſh Army from the Siege of the City of Hereford.

LEST the miſrepreſentation of our Affairs at a diſtance, and the miſconſtructions of ſuch as want affection, might poſſibly beget a miſunderſtanding of the reality and ſincerity of our intentions and deſires, to be uſeful to this Kingdom, and to improve every opportunity and advantage for advancing the Publick Service; I have thought it neceſſary to declare and make known the Grounds and Reaſons of the riſing of this Army from the Siege of Hereford, which are as follow.

At our firſt undertaking of this Service we had large Promiſes, for furniſhing and providing our Army with Victuals, and with all Materials neceſſary for a Siege; in both which we have been exceedingly diſappointed. Concerning the firſt, the Honourable Houſes of Parliament did appoint 200 l. per diem to be Aſſeſſed upon Herefordſhire, and the adjacent Counties, to be paid to the Infantry of the Army, whereof they never received a farthing, but for the moſt part have been left to their own ſhift, and conſtrained to eat Fruit and the Corns that were growing upon the ground, and now for theſe ſix or ſeven Months paſt, have received but one Months Pay, which was advanced by the City of London.

As the Army hath been much diſcouraged for want of neceſſary Proviſions for their maintenance, ſo the Service hath been exceedingly retarded by the want of Battering Pieces and Ball, for we had only from Glouceſter three Guns of Eighteen Pound Ball, and to each of them fifty Ball, ſo that we were forced to ſend to the Iron Mills to cauſe more Ball to be caſt, which ſpent a great deal of time; we entertained fifty Miners, and when the Mines were brought to perfection, they were drowned by reaſon of eight days continual Rain, the Town being low in Situation: Notwithſtanding all which diſcouragements, after conſultation with the General Officers, Orders were iſſued upon Monday the firſt of this Inſtant, to the ſeveral Regimentss, to make ready for a Storm againſt the next Morning; but within a few Hours after theſe Orders were iſſued, there came a Meſſenger from Eveſham with intelligence that the King's Horſe, being about 3000, had a Rendezvous on Broadway and Cambden-Hill, and were marching to Worceſter: This Intelligence was immediately confirmed by Letters from the Committee of Eveſham, and from Glouceſter, to the Commiſſioners of Parliament, and from Col. Freeman, and Col. Devereux, (who ſent a Copy of a Letter which he had from one of his Servants;) ſome of thoſe Informations ſay the Enemy was 7000, and others ſay 6000, and at leaſt 3000. All this could not have made us alter our former Reſolutions, but at the ſame time we received a Letter from Lieutenant General David Leſley, ſhewing that he was gone to Scotland with the whole Party of Horſe and Dragoons under his Command. In this conjuncture we were not a little perplexed how to carry our ſelves, for when we thought upon all the pains and hazard we had undergone, and the fair probability of our ſpeedy compaſſing the end we propoſed therein, we were very deſirous to have continued in our Reſolutions, and the next day to have adventured a Storm; but the Enemies Forces conſiſting in Horſe and Dragoons, and we having no conſiderable ſtrength of Horſe to interpoſe betwixt us and their Quarters, which were ſo near, that they might eaſily have aſſaulted us before our Breaches could be made, and ſo have interrupted us in the midſt of the action; it was generally conceived a very dangerous attempt, for if the Enemies forces ſhould fall upon us before we could enter the Town, it was the apparent ruin and deſtruction of the Army: And albeit we had been aſſured to carry the place before the King's Forces could have come this length, (which by our Intelligence we find was not poſſible for us to do) yet having no conſiderable ſtrength of Horſe to oppoſe the Enemy, all the ways and paſſages had been cloſe ſhut up by their Cavalry, all accommodation of Draughts and Proviſions of Victuals had been totally cut off, beſides many more inconveniences, from which we knew no way how to be relieved. For preventing of all which, and the preſervation of this Army, for the Publick good of both Kingdoms, (which is the meaſure of our deſires, and the end of all our Actions) after a full debate and ſerious deliberation, it was reſolved by the Committee of both Kingdoms, reſiding with this Army, that the Siege ſhould be raiſed, and thereupon Orders were given for drawing off the whole Body of the Army to the open Fields, which was accordingly performed next Morning, without any loſs upon our ſide, and the Enemy ſeveral times ſallying forth, both with Horſe and Foot, were beaten back with the loſs of divers, both Officers and Soldiers. Theſe Grounds and Reaſons impartially weighed, will evidence a conjuncture of neceſſities laid upon us for preferring the ſafety of the Army to the uncertain event of a dangerous aſſault, in the now poſture of Affairs, when a cruel Enemy is Maſter of the Fields in Scotland, and for theſe three Weeks paſt, hath robbed, plundered and ſpoiled the ſubſtance of that Kingdom at his pleaſure, deſtroying the Lands and Houſes of the well-affected by fire, and impriſoning their Perſons, for all which he pretendeth no other Quarrel, but the aſſiſtance given by us to this Kingdom; which as it was performed with much readineſs and cheerfulneſs, and no leſs expence in the hardeſt ſeaſon of the year, and when this Kingdom was in its loweſt condition; ſo we are confident to meet with the like kindneſs and cheerful affection in the day of our calamity, when the Lord is pleaſed to hide his Countenance from us for our Sins and provocations againſt him.

Gentlemen,

KNowing the great Importance that the knowledg of the Motion of the King's Army may be unto you, in diſcharge of our Duty; theſe are to ſignifie unto you that yeſterday the King's Army kept their Rendezvous near Marton in Marſh, where the King was in Perſon: (ſince we hear he is gone to Oxford.) This Morning his Army Rendezvouſed upon Broad-way-Hills, and are marching over Bidford-Bridge, and thence to Worceſter, as Priſoners taken by us inform us. Their Commanders in Chief, are General Gerrard, and Sir Marmaduke Langdale; their number about 3000 Horſe, ſcarce any Dragoons. Their Horſe are much ſpent with their long Marches: How far this may concern Hereford, is referred to your Judicious conſideration, by

Gentlemen,

WE have Intelligence but now, from the Committee of Worceſter, which we were by them deſired to communicate to you, That upon Saturday laſt the King's Army kept their Rendezvous near Marton in Marſh, (where the King was in Perſon) that yeſterday Morning the King kept his Rendezvous upon Broad-way-Hills, and did march over Bidford-Bridge, and thence to Worceſter, they were about 3000 Horſe, few Dragoons, or none, their Horſe much ſpent, Commanded by Langdale, and Gerrard: The King himſelf is gone to Oxford. The which having acquainted you with, we reſt aſſured, that you will preſently acquaint the General, with

For our much Honoured Friends, the Commoners appointed to aſſiſt the Scotiſh Army reſiding in Herefordſhire.

May it pleaſe your Excellency,

NO ſooner had I addreſſed my ſelf to the Obedience of your Commands in ſettling part of our Brigade in a ready poſture to ſerve your Excellency, but I received this Intelligence: That the Enemy fell upon Cap. Bernard, and Capt. Ennes Quarters at Cambden, and took all their Men but two, which brought me the News thereof: they tell me that they march 6000 ſtrong in Horſe, but neither Train of Artillery, nor Infantry attending them. The ſmalleſt number I hear of is 3000, very able Horſes newly recruited out of the Aſſociated Counties, and joyning with Oxenford, Wallingford, Woodſtock, Radford, Faringdon, and Banbury Horſe. I am uniting all the Foot poſſibly I may, and have drawn all my Horſe to purſue the Rear, and if their Army come towards your Excellency, I will leave that purſuit, and draw all the Force I can to ſerve you. In the mean time I ſhall beg your Excellency to eſteem me

Honourable Maſter,

THESE are to certifie you that His Majeſty came yeſternight into Worceſter; they ſay he hath 7000 Soldiers; the Speech is amongſt the Soldiers, they are this day to go to Cannon-Froom; if you pleaſe to ſend by this Meſſenger where I ſhall meet ſome other Man to Morrow Morning, you ſhall have further Intelligence, and in the interim I will uſe the beſt means I can to further the Buſineſs.

May it pleaſe your Excellency,

I Did acquaint you formerly with my Reſolution to go to Scotland with four Regiments of Horſe, and a Regiment of Dragoons, and leave the reſt under the Command of General Major Middleton; but I am ſince forced to alter that reſolution, for the ſad news of the laſt defeat of our Army near Kilſith, and of the Enemies being Maſter of the Field at Home

1645. being noiſed abroad amongſt the common Soldiers, they all openly profeſſed that none of them would ſtay, but all go for relief of their Native Country. Upon which conſideration, and the confidence that Col. General Poyntz profeſſed to me, that with his own and the reſt of the Country Forces, he was ſtrong enough to oppoſe the King. I have marched with the whole Party for Scotland, expecting your further Orders, which ſhall be carefully obeyed by Nottingham, Aug.

Your Excellency's moſt Humble Servant,

DAVID LESLEY.

The Scots marched away to Glouceſter, and ſo towards Warwick Northwards; Lieut. Gen. David Leſley being with a ſtrong Party of Horſe and Dragoons gone ſome time before into Scotland, of whoſe Encounter with the Marqueſs of Montroſs we ſhall have occaſion to ſpeak in the particular Chapter of the Affairs of that Kingdom.

On the 23*d* of Septemb. the Commons Ordered that the Scotiſh Army in England ſhould be deſired to ſit down before Newark, and that they ſhould lay no Aſſeſſments or Contributions on any County in this Kingdom, but that the Eaſtern Aſſociation ſhould pay 1400 l. per Week to the ſaid Scot's Army for their maintaince. And on the 6*th* of Octob. added, That at their ſitting down before that Gariſon they ſhould have 30000 Pounds paid them, with Proviſion of March, Powder, Bullet and other Neceſſaries; which on the 13*th* they qualified thus, That the Scots ſhould have the ſaid 30000 l. paid them if they ſhould ſit down before Newark by the firſt of November next, or elſe not. And alſo on the Report that one Mr. Caſe was to be tryed by a Council of War of the Scotiſh Army, Voted, That the Scotiſh Army in this Kingdom have no power to Try any Engliſh Man by Martial Law, and that the ſaid Mr. Caſe ought to have ſatisfaction therein.

And on the 14*th* of Octob. both Houſes paſs'd the Votes enſuing:

1. That the Houſes will obſerve, and deſire to continue the Aſſiſtance, Amity, and Friendſhip betwixt both Kingdoms according to the Solemn League and Covenant, and their Treaty.

2. That the Receding of the Scotiſh Army into thoſe Parts of Yorkſhire, where they now are, is not ſo uſeful to this Kingdom, as if they came and ſat down before Newark, neither ought they to lay Taxes on the Country where they come, without making ſatisfaction.

3. That Carliſle, Tinby-Caſtle, Hartlepool, and other Gariſons in the North, now in the Poſſeſſion of the Scots, are to be diſpoſed of according to the directions of the Parliament.

4. That if the Scots ſat down before Newark, according to the former Vote by the firſt of November next, they ſhould have forthwith 30000 l. towards their Pay, &c.

Alſo Commiſſioners were ſent down to Treat with the Scots Commiſſioners, touching the Scots rendition of all the Forts, Caſtles and Places Gariſon'd by them in England, and upon their return, the reaſons alledg'd to the contrary were held inſufficient, and a Letter Ordered to be ſent to the Parliament of Scotland about it.

At laſt the Scots did according to the Two Houſes Directions come back to Newark and Joyned with the Forces Beſieging that Town, where they continued till the beginning of May following, at which time his Majeſty thought fit to come privately to their Army, and intruſt his Royal Perſon with them, as ſhall be related in its proper place.

As for the reſt of the Military Occurrences of this year 1645, conſiderable, and not comprehended under any of the Heads before mentioned, take them in the Series of time when they were Tranſacted, as follows.

On the firſt of Auguſt Major General Langhorn of the Parliaments ſide, drawing out ſome Forces out of the Gariſons of Pembroke and Tinby, Engaged Major General Stradling, and Major General Egerton, with about 1000 Foot, and 400 Horſe, and four Field-pieces on Colby-Moor, three miles from Haverford-Weſt; a ſharp Encounter there was, both ſides fighting briskly for above an Hour, but in Concluſion the Royal Horſe gave Ground and deſerted their Foot, ſo that beſides 150 kill'd on the place, and in the purſuit, there were near 600 taken Priſoners, amongſt whom ſome Men of Note, as Lieutenant Col. Price, Major Brande, Major Guddinge, Seven Captains, Four Guns, Five Barrels of Powder, &c. and purſued them to Haverford Town, which that Night they deſerted, and next Day Langhorn entred it, and on the 5th Stormed and took the Caſtle, and therein Col. Manley the Governour, 120 Arms, &c.

On the 12*th* of Octob. the ſame Maj. Gen. Langhorn by agreement with the Country was admitted into Carmarthen Town and Caſtle, the Town declaring for the Parliament.

About the ſame time Col. Morgan Governour of Glouceſter, with 300 Horſe, and 400 Foot, aſſiſted by the Monmouthſhire-Men, came before the Town of Chepſtow, and with little difficulty gained poſſeſſion of it, and then ſent the following Summons to the Governour of the Caſtle, Col. Fitzmorris an Iriſh Man.

SIR,

I Am commanded by his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax to demand this Caſtle for the uſe of King and Parliament, which I require of you, and to lay down your Arms, and accept of reaſonable Propoſitions, which will be granted both to you and your Soldiers if you obſerve this Summons. And further you are to conſider of what Nation and Religion you are; if you refuſe this Summons you exclude your ſelf from Mercy, and are to expect for your ſelf and Soldiers no better than Stinchcombe * Quarter; I expect your ſudden Anſwer, and according thereunto ſhall reſt of Octob. 1645.

Chepſtow the 6th

Your Friend,
Tho. Morgan.

The Anſwer.

SIR,

I Have the ſame Reaſon to keep this Caſtle for my Maſter the King, as you to demand it for General Fairfax, and until my Reaſon be convinc'd, and my Proviſion decreas'd, I ſhall (notwithſtanding my Religion and Menaces of Extirpation) continue in my Reſolution, and in my Fidelity and Loyalty to my King. As for Stinchcombe Quarter I know not what you mean by it, nor do depend upon your Intelligence for Relief, which in any Indigence I aſſure me of, and in that aſſurance, I reſt

Chepſtow,

Your Servant,
Robert Fitzmorrice.

What Quarter you give me and my Soldiers, I refer to the Conſideration of all Soldiers, when I am conſtrained to ſeek for any.

Morgan takes Chepſtow Caſtle, Oct. 10.

But four days after he Surrendred upon Articles, wherein fair Quarter was granted for him and all his Soldiers as to their Lives, but to deliver up the Caſtle, and all Arms, Ammunition, and other things therein, and to remain Priſoners of War.

And Monmouth, Oct. 22.

From thence Morgan advanc'd to Monmouth, took the Town, and after three days Siege the Caſtle, and in it Seven Pieces of Ordnance, 300 Muſquets, 100 Pikes, 10 Barrels of Powder, &c.

Whilſt theſe Accidents happen'd in Wales, greater diſaſters befell His Majeſty's Intereſts in the North, the Lord Digby and Sir Marmaduke Langdale with a brave party about 1500 Horſe, advancing towards Scotland to Joyn with Montroſs, having ſurprized and taken Priſoners near 1000 of Poyntz's Foot at Sherburn in Yorkſhire, were ſuddenly defeated, and all thoſe Priſoners reſcued, and afterwards Digby utterly Routed at Carliſle-ſands, the Circumſtances whereof were thus:

Whilſt the King was at Newark, on Sunday, Octob. the 12th, he marched out from thence to Welbeck, where he drew out 1200 Horſe, giving the Chief Command to the Lord Digby, whom Sir Marmaduke Langdale was to accompany, with Orders to march to Scotland and joyn Montroſs, who complained much for want of Cavalry, and out of reſpect to the Lord Digby in this his new Military Imploy above 300 Gentlemen offered themſelves voluntarily to attend him. But the nature of this Expedition and the true Grounds of Digby's undertaking, will better appear by the following Letter of his Lordſhip, wrote ſome time after out of Ireland, and Intercepted (amongſt other Papers) at Padſtow in Cornwall.

To Sir Edward Hide Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The Lord Digby's Letter to Sir Edw. Hide, Jan. 4. 1645.

My Dear Chancellor,

I Seize with much Joy this occaſion that flatters me with the hopes of conveying ſafe unto you, and by you unto the reſt of my Friends there, an accompt of my Adventures; ſince you heard from me, theſe incloſed Papers will give you a very particular relation of all matters of fact; I make no queſtion but my unſucceſsfulneſs in that imployment will give occaſion to my Enemies to accuſe me of a great Diſſervice to the King, in having been the loſs of ſo many of his Horſe, not in the Conduct of them (for I apprehend not malice it ſelf in that point) but in putting them upon ſo deſperate a Deſign. This point I deſire you to clear by letting all, with whom you ſhall find the Objection, know, That although I was of opinion, that the King himſelf ought to have ventured, when he was at Welbeck the Paſſage into Scotland, in caſe there had been a certainty of my Lord of Montroſs's being on this ſide Forth, yet when that was once diverted, upon both my Intelligence and Advice, I had afterwards the leaſt ſhare of any Man in the Council, of adventuring any part of the King's Horſe upon ſo hopeleſs a Deſign as that of Scotland was, while we were doubtful of my Lord of Montroſs's condition; but the Northern Horſe being diſguſted with Gerrard, refuſing abſolately to march back Southward to Welbeck, and ſo rather than they ſhould diſband it was thought fit to try whether they would be engaged to adventure to Montroſs, who in all his Letters had ſeemed much to reſent the neglect of him, in not ſending him a ſupply of Horſe, aſſuring, That with the help but of 1000, he could carry through his work: The Propoſition being made to Sir Marmaduke Langdale, he at firſt point-blank refuſed it, as an undertaking which had by Gerrard and all the reſt been declared deſperate, even with all the King's Horſe; but upon ſecond thoughts, he and all the Northern Gentlemen came to the King and told him, That if he would lay his Commands upon me to take the charge and to go along with them, they would adventure it, otherwiſe not: Whereupon, I having declared my Obedience to whatſoever the King would impoſe upon me, His Majeſty commanded me poſitively to that Charge, uſing beſides his pleaſure this argument to me, That if I ſucceeded in it, I ſhould reap much Honour; if not, I could incur no prejudice by failing, in that which was at firſt given for deſperate; and ſo at half an Hours warning having (I proteſt to God) not dream'd of the matter before I marched off from the Rendezvous, with an addition only to the Northern Horſe, of ſuch as would voluntarily chuſe to go with me, which proved to be a matter of three hundred, with which I made that progreſs, which you will find related in the incloſed Papers. But here I am ſure you will wonder how I holding that place I did near the King, and having the Honour of ſo great a part in his Truſt, eſpecially at a time when he had ſcarce either Councellor or Penman about him, ſhould be put upon ſo extravagant and deſperate an Employment: To this I muſt let you know, and ſuch only as you ſhall think fit, That though I had no thought of the preſent action, yet the King and I had long before, (that is ever ſince his Affairs were made ſo deſperate by the loſs of Briſtol) concluded it moſt for his Service, that I ſhould abſent my ſelf from him for ſome time, in caſe I could find a fair and honourable pretence for it: I believe the accidents ſince befaln at Newark with Prince Rupert and Gerrard, will have given you a light of ſome reaſons of my remove. The truth, [Here follow many Lines of Characters.]

Over and above theſe urging Reaſons, as to the time upon the main of the King's condition and mine, and found the King likely to ſuffer much by my ſtay near him, the wearineſs of the War being ſo univerſal, and the deſpair of my approvement in his condition being ſo great in all about him, I found it almoſt every Man's opinion. [Here come in more Lines of Character.]

I thought it then high time to watch an opportunity of freeing his Majeſty from an Attendant ſo pernicious to his Honour and Intereſt; and this my deareſt Friend, is as much as I think neceſſary to ſay to you upon this Subject, hoping that by your dextrous conveyance of it to his Highneſs the Prince of Wales, it will have the ſame impreſſion with him which I cannot doubt of with you.

Since my coming out of England I ſtaid a Month for a Wind at the Iſle of Man, which time I cannot think miſ-ſpent, having there received great Civilities from my Lord of Derby, and had the means of a particular acquaintance with his Noble Lady, whom I think one of the wiſeſt and generouſeſt Perſons that I have known of her Sex. From thence I and my Company were very ſecurely conveyed hither in a light Frigate of his Lordſhip's, where I found all things in a great forwardneſs, the Concluſion of which was expected within few Days, and great Forces (as was pretended) already in a readineſs for England, under the Command of the Earl of Glamorgan the Confederates Great General and Favourite; But his Lordſhip being ſent for by my Lord Lieutenant and my ſelf, to confer about the ways of diſpoſing thoſe Aids moſt to the advantage of his Majeſty's Service, the buſineſſes contained in the incloſed Papers brake forth in ſuch manner as you will find theſe ſet down, and obliged me to that part of the King's Vindication, which was thought could not ſo properly be performed by any as my ſelf, you will find the whole buſineſs ſo fully ſtated in the Tranſactions themſelves which I ſend you, and in my Letter to my Brother Secretary, that I ſhall need to ſay no more upon the Subject, only let me ask you, whether according to the Rules of Policy, I have not carried my Body Swimingly, who being before ſo irreconcilably hated by the Puritan Party, have thus ſeaſonably made my ſelf as odious with the Papiſts. Well, my comfort is, that the very few honeſt Men that are in the World will love me the better, and whilſt I do the part of a Man of Integrity and Honour, I am willing to truſt God with the reſt. I muſt not conclude without telling you, that if I had been brought hither by far greater misfortunes, I could not have repined at any thing that had given me the happineſs of ſo particular a knowledge of, and friendſhip with the Marqueſs of Ormond, who (if I can judge at all of Men) is not only the wiſeſt young Man, but the moſt ſteady, generous, and virtuous Perſon that I have ever known. I conjure you as you love Virtue, and as you love me, who have ſo little a ſhare of it, build carefully by the diligent application upon thoſe Grounds which I have laid for a Friendſhip between you; for indeed I love him ſo much as I cannot be at reſt till we make up the Triangle equal on all ſides to that perfection wherewith I am

Yours,
George Digby.

Pray fail not to let my Father partake of what I write to you, and General Goring alſo, as far forth as you ſhall judge neceſſary.

Lord Digby's Motions, towards Doncaſter.

But to return to my Lord Digby's March: From Welbeck he ſpeedily advanced to Doncaſter, took the Centry and the Parliament Soldiers that were there fled, without making any reſiſtance, whoſe Quarters at Cuſworth, and ſeveral other Towns they beat up, and ſo proceeded to Sherburn, where they routed Col. Wren's Regiment of Horſe, and took almoſt a Thouſand Foot Priſoners. And laid their Arms on an Heap in Sherburn-Street, till they could get Carriages to ſend them away; But before they could provide them, Col. Copley with a party of about thirteen hundred came up to them, upon whoſe approach the Lord Digby and Sir Marmaduke drew out to meet them, and both ſides Charged with extraordinary Gallantry, but after a ſharp and doubtful conteſt Copley's Men had the advantage, and put the others to the Rout, recovering not only all their own Foot and Arms, but alſo taking about 300 Priſoners, and many of them Perſons of Note, together with the Lord Digby's Coach, and therein ſeveral Letters and Papers, which were afterwards Printed by Order of the Two Houſes, and to recite them here would too much ſwell this Volume.

Letters taken.

The Principal Contents were, 1. Several Letters from Goff (an Agent imployed in Holland) to the Lord Jermin at Paris; and the Lord Digby, touching a Negotiation then on Foot, and wherein he was imploy'd for a Match between his Highneſs the Prince of Wales and the Prince of Orange's Daughter, thereby to Engage the States of Holland to Eſpouſe the King's Intereſts. 2. Other Letters from the Lord Jermin at Paris to the Lord Digby touching a Treaty for bringing over the Duke of Lorrain with an Army to the King's Aſſiſtance. As alſo concerning Aids from the King of Denmark, and the Prince of Curland. And in one of them Dated June the 9*th* 1645, 'tis mentioned that Sir Kenelm Digby was arrived at Rome, had Audience of the Pope, who had given him the beſt Reception that the firſt Viſit was capable of, that is, the faireſt Promiſes in general that can be wiſh'd; if he may be relyed on, there are good hopes of Money there, &c. 3*ly*, Letters concerning Ireland, and a Treaty of Fitz-

Williams an Iriſh Man with the Queen, who propounded to bring over from thence Ten thouſand Men, &c.

This is the Subſtance of moſt of thoſe Letters, but there being one which gives great light to the ſtate of the King's Affairs at that Juncture, I ſhall for the Reader's ſatisfaction recite the ſame at large, as follows.

Lord Digby's Letter to my Lord Jermin, Aug. 27. 1645.

My Dear Lord,

IT is a great comfort to us to hear by this Expreſs, that Her Majeſty preſerves Her Health, notwithſtanding that trouble of mind which our Miſfortunes muſt needs have given Her; and that inſtead of deſpairing, Her Majeſty and you do rather improve your diligence to procure us Aids; God ſend that your Hopes may ſucceed. For my part I think there is more probability in that of Denmark for Men, now the Peace is concluded with the Swedes, and for Money from Rome, than any other way. The buſineſs of Ireland hath hung long in ſuſpence, altho' the King hath long ſince given my Lord of Ormond power to conclude Peace there, upon the very utmoſt Conceſſion that can poſſibly be yielded unto, without cauſing a Revolt, not only of all his Party here, but alſo ſuch an one of his Army, and all his Proteſtant Subjects there, as would make it impoſſible for the Iriſh to afford us any Aids, they would have ſo much to do within themſelves againſt thoſe that would not ſubmit to Peace upon ſuch Terms. The truth of it is, the Iriſh have proceeded hitherto, as if they had no good intention, having not been contented with the Offers of more than their Agents did profeſs to expect, and have inſiſted upon thoſe Demands, the granting of which they could not but ſee, would be abſolutely deſtructive to His Majeſty, that is, the granting unto them the Proteſtant Churches in ſuch Pariſhes where the Number of the Catholicks was greater, that is in effect all through Ireland. And whereas you write that perhaps my Lord of Ormond is not the fit Perſon to conclude that buſineſs, but that the management of it ſhould be remitted to the Queen, I am much afraid that the expectation of that in the Iriſh hath much retarded the hoped for iſſue of the Treaty, but (God be thanked) we receiv'd Men: Now the certain News is, that the Peace there is concluded, and that an Expreſs from my Lord of Ormond is upon his way from Cheſter with all the Particulars. The utmoſt extent of my Lord of Ormond's power to grant, was the Suſpenſion of Poining's Act as to the paſſing of ſuch Bills as ſhould be firſt agreed on; the Repeal of the Penal Laws, and the allowing the Papiſts ſome Chappels in private places for the Exerciſe of their Religion; but you may not take notice that he had ſo large a power, for happily he may have obtained a Peace upon a better Bargain. Thus much for that Buſineſs.

His Majeſty approves very well of the Courſe propoſed by you for ſuch Aids as may be obtained from Denmark; but above all things let the matter of Money be labour'd in, for without ſome competent Stock of that againſt the next Spring, it will be impoſſible for us ever to have a Reſource again. My former Letters will have acquainted you with our Progreſs, ſince our Retreat from Wales, and the Reaſons of it, and I make no doubt but you will be ſatisfied, that the King's Buſineſs hath been as well Conducted in that Retreat from Wales, as the deſperateneſs of our condition could admit of. And that in fine, we are likely to have gain'd the only thing we could hope for, which was to preſerve His Majeſty's Perſon ſafe, till the ſeaſon of the year ſhould ſecure him in any of his Principal Gariſons from the danger of a Siege. 'Tis true, I could have wiſht that the Rebels had given us ſome leiſure, either in the North, or at Huntington (where we have done them ſome miſchief, and gained ſome Reputation) and not obliged us to go to Oxford, yet this Fortnight, but preſſing us as they have done, and do, it is not to be avoided; but I hope it is not poſſible, that they can any ways endanger Oxford before the Winter relieve it.

Ann. 1645.

You write to me to tell you freely our condition without flattering you or my ſelf; you will find in my Letters of late, eſpecially by Porter, that I have not been Guilty of that fault, nor ſhall I now: But the freedom which I ſhall at this time uſe in ſtating to you the greateſt Myſtery of our Miſfortunes, I deſire may be receiv'd by you as the Breathings out of my Soul unto my Deareſt Friend by way of Prediction. It is moſt true; that as deſperate as our condition ſeems, I have no apprehenſion, but that having got thus far in the year, we ſhall be ſafe till the next, from any further great Miſchiefs, and that probably by Helps from Denmark and Ireland, and Moneys from you, our Quarters being well-manag'd for the preſervation and recruit of our remaining Forces, we may poſſibly have a freſh and hopeful Reſource the next Spring. Theſe hopes I am confident the condition of our Buſineſs it ſelf will bear, would the Humours of our own Party bear the patience: But alas, my Lord! we muſt not expect it, there is ſuch an univerſal wearineſs of the War, deſpair of a poſſibility for the King to recover, and ſo much of private Intereſts grown from theſe upon every Body, that I proteſt to God, I do not know four Perſons living, beſides my ſelf and you, that have not already given clear Demonſtrations, that they will purchaſe their own, and (as they flatter themſelves) the Kingdoms quiet at any price to the King to the Church, to the faithfulleſt of his Party. And to deal freely with you, I do not think it will be in the King's power to hinder himſelf from being forced to accept ſuch Conditions as the Rebels will give him; and that the next News you will hear, after we have been one Month at Oxford, will be, that I and thoſe few others who may be thought by our Councels to fortifie the King's infirmneſs to his Principles, ſhall be forced or torn from him, and you will find the prime Inſtruments to impoſe the neceſſity upon the King, of ſubmitting to what they and moſt of the King's Party at Oxford ſhall think fit. Truly, I have great confidence in the King's Virtue and Steadineſs, and I am much improved in it by this encloſed Letter which he wrote in his great diſtreſs in Wales, upon occaſion of declaring unto him there was nothing left for him to do but to ſeek Conditions, I proteſt to God I knew nothing either of the Letter or the occaſion, till a good while after it was ſent; but having then gained a ſight of it, I got leave to communicate a Copy of it only to the Queen, and to your ſelf. My Dear Lord, I ſhall add no more at this time, but only to conjure you, firſt, to believe, if I have any Truth or Honour in me, I have not the leaſt unfriendly thought in the world towards any mentioned or pointed at in this Letter, more than purely in relation to the King's Service. And in the next place, that tho' I ſtand ſingle againſt all the world, I ſhall not vary a tittle from thoſe Foundations of Juſtice and Right to the Honour and Intereſt of my Gracious Maſter and Miſtreſs which I have profeſs'd my ſelf built upon, and that I will in ſpight of the world carry to my Grave the Honour of a Servant intirely faithful and unbias'd, and of being worthy that happy Relation to you of

Your beſt Friend and Faithfulleſt Servant.

The Letter here mentioned is this which follows, ſent ſome time before from his Majeſty to Prince Rupert (a Copy whereof was ſeiz'd amongſt the Lord Digby's Papers.)

C. R.

The King's Letter to Prince Rupert.

N*Ephew*, This is occaſion'd by a Letter of yours which the Duke of Richmond ſhew'd me yeſterday: And firſt, I aſſure you, I have been (and ever will be) very careful to Advertiſe you of my Reſolutions ſo ſoon as they were undertaken; and if I injoined ſilence to that which was no Secret, it was not my fault, for I thought it one, and I am ſure it ought to have been ſo. Now as for your opinion of my Buſineſs, and your Counſel thereupon, if I had any other Quarrel but the Defence of my Religion, Crown and Friends, you had full reaſon for your Advice; for I confeſs that ſpeaking as a meer Soldier, or Stateſman, I muſt ſay, there is no probability but of my Ruin; yet as a Chriſtian I muſt tell you, that God will not ſuffer Rebels and Traytors to proſper, nor this Cauſe to be overthrown. And whatever Perſonal Puniſhment it ſhall pleaſe him to inflict upon me, muſt not make me repine, much leſs give over this Quarrel; and there is as little queſtion that a Compoſition with them at this time, is nothing elſe but a ſubmiſſion, which by the Grace of God I am reſolved againſt whatever it coſt me: For I know my Obligation to be both in Conſcience and Honour, neither to abandon God's Cauſe, injure my Succeſſors, nor forſake my Friends. Indeed I cannot flatter my ſelf with expectation of good ſucceſs more than this, to end my days with Honour and a good Conſcience, which obligeth me to continue my Endeavours, in not deſpairing that God may yet in due time avenge his own Cauſe. Tho' I muſt aver to all my Friends that he that will ſtay with me at this time, muſt expect and reſolve either to die for a good Cauſe, or (which is worſe) to live as miſerable in maintaining it as the violence of inſulting Rebels can make him.

Having thus truly and impartially ſtated my Caſe unto you, and plainly told you my Reſolutions which by the Grace of God I will not alter, they being neither lightly nor ſuddenly Grounded; I earneſtly deſire you not in any wiſe to hearken now after Treaties, aſſuring you that as low as I am, I will do no more than was offered in my Name at Uxbridge. Confeſſing that it were as great a Miracle that they ſhould agree to ſo much reaſon, as that I ſhould be within a Month in the ſame condition that I was immediately before the Battel at Naſeby. Therefore for God's ſake let us not flatter our ſelves with theſe Conceits. And believe me, the very imagination that you are deſirous of a Treaty will but loſe me ſo much the ſooner; wherefore as you love me, whatſoever you have already done, apply your Diſcourſe hereafter to my Reſolution and Judgment. As for the Iriſh I aſſure you, they ſhall not cheat me, but it is poſſible they may cozen themſelves; for be aſſured what I have refuſed to the Engliſh, I will not grant to the Iriſh Rebels, never truſting to that kind of People (of what Nation ſoever) more than I ſee by their Actions. And I am ſending to Ormond ſuch a Diſpatch as I am ſure will pleaſe you and all honeſt Men, a Copy whereof by the next opportunity you ſhall have. Laſtly be confident I would not have put you nor my ſelf to the trouble of this long Letter, had I not a great Eſtimation of you, and a full confidence of your Friendſhip too.

Caerdiffe, Aug. 3. 1645. C. R.

But this Defeat at Sherburn was not the worſt of my L. Digby's Misfortunes, for haſtening thence towards Skipton, he and Sir Marmaduke Langdale ſent to thoſe of the King's Party in Lancaſhire and Cumberland to come and joyn with them, and endeavour'd to have paſs'd by Kirby-Lunſdale, but Col. Briggs ſecured that Paſs againſt them, and made them turn by the way of the Sands about Partmach to get into Cumberland; Lieut.Gen. Leſley was before between them and Montroß, and ſent out a Brigade of about 1200 Horſe under Maj. Gen. Vandruske to meet them, who made good ſeveral Paſſes, but my Lord and his Troops having Sir William Huddleſton for their chief Guide, got over the Fords at Low-water, and ſo eſcaped. Alſo the Lord Balmerinoth with Forces out of the Frontiers of Scotland prepared to oppoſe them, but being skilful in the ways they wheeled about and avoided him too. At laſt Sir John Brown a Scotch Governour of Carliſle with a Party met with them about Carliſle-Sands, and tho' inferior in Number Charged them ſo furiouſly that he broke through their Body and routed them, kill'd divers; took my Lord's Standard, and Sir Marmaduke's, a Quarter-Maſter-General, One Colonel, Two Lieutenant Colonels, and ſeveral other Priſoners, and about 200 Horſes and Arms: On the other ſide Sir John Brown was ſhot through his ſide, Capt. Leſley alſo Wounded, and about fifty Slain and Wounded. After this Grand Defeat endeavouring to get to Dumfreeze, and ſo at laſt to Joyn Montroß, and finding their Paſſage intercepted before, and all hopes of Retreat barr'd behind, my Lord Digby and Sir Marmaduke, the Lord Carnworth, Sir William Huddleſton, and about thirty Horſe got the opportunity of ſome Veſſels on the Coaſts, and Tranſported themſelves into the Iſle of Man; and from thence the Lord Digby conveyed himſelf into Ireland. The reſt of their Forces diſperſed ſeveral ways, and many of them as they ſtraggled homewards were taken up by Vandruske, and the Northumberland Forces that ſtood for the Parliament. As alſo by Col. Briggs, with the Lancaſhire Troops and others.

Hereford Surpriz'd by a Stratagem, and taken, Dec. 8*th*.

The next ill News that arrived to his Majeſty was out of the Weſt; the City of Hereford that had withſtood the Scots Army was now unexpectedly taken by a ſmall Party: The manner thus, Col. Morgan (who upon Maſſey's being call'd to Command in the Weſt, ſucceeded him in the Government of Glouceſter) and Col. Birch who was Governour of Bath, (having Intelligence that the Gariſon of Hereford ſince the Remove of the Scots, lived very ſecure, and negligent, and wanting not ſome Correſpondence in the City) drew together their Forces, amounting in all to about 2000 Horſe and Foot, (viz. of Glouceſter Forces 1050, and from Bath 950) reſolved to attempt the Surprize of the ſaid City of Hereford, whereunto they were encouraged by the convenient Situation of Ailſton's Hill which faced the Draw-Bridge, where an Army might lye in Ambuſh undiſcovered by the Centinels, eſpecially ſince the Guards there were ſo ſecure as to neglect, ſending out of Scouts, or ſecuring Lug-Bridge, and then the Walls of the Priory within Carbine-ſhot of the Gate, being then ſtanding, gave an advantage there to Lodge a Forlorn Party of Firelocks: But the main point was they contriv'd to ſend an Officer pretending himſelf a Conſtable with ſix Men with Mattocks and Shovels as Labourers brought by him out of his Pariſh upon the Summons of the Governour (which were then uſually ſent out to the Neighbouring parts) to help to work in the Fortifications of the Gariſon, and theſe coming up to the Gate juſt after the Draw-bridge was let down in the Morning, were to take the opportunity to kill the Guard, and give the Forlorn an opportunity to enter. The Plot being thus laid, the aforeſaid conjoyn'd Forces on Tueſday the 16*th* of Decemb. drew towards Hereford, but by reaſon of the deepneſs of the Snow, the Foot were not able to come up time enough, ſo that to avoid all ſuſpition, they then retreated to Ledbury within about nine miles of Glouceſter, and there having refreſh'd and reſted themſelves all Wedneſday, towards Night they again began their March to Cannon-Froom, whence Captain Aldern with two Troops of Horſe ſecured the three Bridges, viz. Lug-Bridge, Lugwarden-Bridge, and Wordifords-Bridge, by means whereof there could no Alarm or notice paſs unto the Gariſon. Between Three and Four a Clock on Thurſday Morning the Body of Horſe and Foot Rendezvous'd together behind Ailſton's Hill; then there were 150 Firelocks Commanded out under Capt. Howorth, and one of Col. Birch's Captains to the Priory; Lieut. Barrow who was to Act the Conſtable with his ſix Men, accoutred as Country-Labourers, got ready, and about Eight of the Clock the Draw-Bridge being let fall, brought them up thither, and produced the pretended Return of a Warrant from the Governour, ſpecifying the Names of the Perſons ſent to Work, who were preſent with their Spades and Pickaxes, which whilſt he that Commanded the Guard was viewing, they kill'd him and two others, and held the reſt in Play until the Firelocks ruſh'd up to them, and poſſeſſed the Gate, and ſo let in the whole Body; the Foot being led by Birch, the Horſe by Morgan, who ſcowring the Streets prevented the Gariſon from drawing into a Body, tho they made all the Reſiſtance they were able, under ſuch a Surprize, ſo that with little loſs they became Maſters of the City, which the Soldiers Plunder'd, tho' the Commanders endeavour'd to prevent it. Here were taken Priſoners the Lord Brudenell, Sir Tho. Lunsford, Sir Walter Blunt, Sir Henry Spiller, Sir Henry Bedington, Sir Marmaduke Lloyd, and many other Knights, Commanders and Gentlemen; Eleven Pieces of Cannon, much Arms, Ammunition, &c.

Priſoners taken.

The Two Houſes appointed a Thankſgiving for this Succeſs, and Ordered that Lieut. Barrow ſhould have 100 l. paid him at preſent, and 50 l. per Annum to him and his Heirs for ever out of the Eſtate of Sir Henry Lingen, an Eminent Royaliſt in thoſe Parts.

Weſt-Cheſter taken by the Parliaments Forces.

The next Grand Loſs was that of Weſt-Cheſter, a Place ſtrong in it ſelf, as having high and broad Walls, with many Towers and Bulwarks flanking the ſame, and ſince theſe Wars Fortified by more than ordinary Mud-walls ſecuring the Suburbs, and to compleat the whole, the River Dee (in ſome meaſure Navigable) ſecures it on the Weſt and South, which ſwells ſo broad and high in the Tide that no Forces by Land can reſtrain Relief by Sea; but beſides its Srength, its Situation renders it very advantageous, being as it were the Key of Ireland, and a Tye to unite North-Wales to Lancaſhire by a ſmall Neck of Land in Cheſhire five miles over, the Rivers on both ſides Fordable. This important City ever ſince the beginning of theſe Troubles, ſecured by the Commiſſioners of Array, had been kept for the King; and having ſo great an Aſcendant on thoſe parts of the Kingdom, the Parliament had uſed great Endeavours to gain it, much time and treaſure having been ſpent by Sir William Brereton for reducing thereof; and of Beeſton Caſtle, a Neighbouring Gariſon firſt fortified by the Parliament, but upon the Arrival of the Forces out of Ireland with other Forces under the Command of Sir John Byron, loſt by one Capt. Steel the Governour (as 'twas ſaid) by neglect or Cowardice, for which he was ſentenc'd to death by a Council of War and Executed; and thenceforwards it remained in poſſeſſion of the King's Forces till a while before the taking of Cheſter, and then as a Prodromus of its Neighbouring Cities fate was yielded to the Parliament.

We have before in their proper places occaſionally mentioned ſeveral Actions relating to the Siege of Cheſter, needleſs here to be repeated, as how it was relieved, and the Forces before it forced to riſe, upon the approach of Prince Rupert, how afterwards Col. Jones ſurprized the Out-works of the City, and the King endeavouring to relieve it, was repell'd at Routon-Moor; after which time the Beſiegers both there and at Beeſton Caſtle plied their Buſineſs more earneſtly than ever, about the beginning of October 1645, ſent for Great Guns to Stafford and Shrewsbury, wherewith eſpecially on the the Welſh ſide they did great Execution, and continued Battering, and ſeveral times Storming very furiouſly, but without ſucceſs.

Sir William Vaughan defeated at Denbigh, Nov. 1.

On Saturday, Octob. 25. Sir William Brereton (who had been call'd away to London) came down again, being appointed by the Parliament to Command in Chief, and having notice that Sir William Vaughan was gathering of Forces about Denbigh to raiſe the Siege, ſent Col. Jones with 1400 Horſe and Dragoons, and Adjutant Louthian with 1000 Foot to diſſipate them, whom they found not to be above 2000 ſtrong at moſt, yet they fought bravely; but at laſt Jones and Louthian put them to flight, kill'd (as was computed) one hundred, and took two or three hundred Priſoners, and ſeveral hundred Horſes.

The 14*th* of November Beeſton-Caſtle after Eighteen Weeks continual Siege, being reduced to ſuch want of Proviſions that they eat Cats, &c. the Governour Col. Ballard in compaſſion to his Soldiers conſented to beat a Parley, whereupon a Treaty followed, and having obtained very Honourable Conditions (even beyond expectation in ſuch Extremity, viz. To march out, the Governour and Officers with their Horſes and Arms, and their own proper Goods (which loaded two Wains) the Common Soldiers with their Arms, Colours flying, Drums beating, Matches alight, and a proportion of Powder and Ball, and a Convoy to Guard them to Flint-Caſtle. He did on Sunday the 16*th* of Novemb. ſurrender the Caſtle. The Gariſon being reduced to not above ſixty Men, who marched away according to the Conditions.

The Siege of Cheſter continued ſtill with the utmoſt Efforts of Courage and Skill both on the Defendants part, and Aſſailants; for the Lord Byron bouy'd up with continual hopes and intelligence of Relief from Ireland, reſolved if poſſible to preſerve the Town; and when he perceived thoſe Expectations fail, and began to hearken to a Treaty, inſiſted on very high Conditions, as appears by this Letter of Sir William Brereton's to him.

Sir William Brereton's Letter to the Lord Byron Governour of Cheſter.

My Lord,

I Cannot now ſend you ſuch Propoſitions as have been formerly rejected, every day producing loſs of Blood, and expence of Treaſure; neither will I trouble my ſelf with anſwering the Particulars of your unparallel'd Demands; to which if I ſhould ſuit mine, I could require no leſs than your ſelf and all the Officers and Commanders to be my Priſoners, and the reſt to ſubmit to Mercy. Yet to witneſs my deſires of the preſervation of the City, I have upon ſerious conſideration and debate thought fit to tender theſe encloſed Conditions; for the perfecting whereof I am content Commiſſioners meet concerning them, and ſuch further Particulars as may be conceived conducible to the Welfare of the City and Counties adjacent, and have given Commiſſion to theſe Gentlemen to receive your Anſwer in writing to theſe Propoſitions of mine herewith ſent, touching which I ſhall not be ſo ſcrupulous as to demand their return, not valuing to what view they may be expoſed, therefore they are to be left with you if you pleaſe, and remain

Cheſter-Suburbs, Your Servant,
Jan. 26. 1645. William Brereton.

To this my Lord that day return'd, that he could not at preſent give an Anſwer in regard of the ſeveral Conditions of Men therein concern'd, who muſt be conſulted; but the next day ſent his Anſwer thus:

SIR,

S I R,

The Lord Byron's Anſwer.

THESE Demands of mine which you term unparallel'd, have been heretofore granted (by far greater Commanders than your ſelf, no diſparagement to you) to places in far worſe condition than (God be thanked) this is yet; Witneſs the Baſſe, Breda, Maeſtricht, and as many other Towns as have been Beleaguer'd either by the Spaniard or the Hollander, or to come home, York and Carliſle, and neareſt of all Beeſton-Caſtle. And therefore you muſt excuſe me if upon the Authority of ſo many Examples, I have not only propounded, but think fit to inſiſt upon them as the ſenſe of all manner of People in the City. As for your conceit in the demanding of my ſelf and the reſt of the Commanders and Officers to be your Priſoners, I would have you know, that we eſteem our Honours ſo far above our Lives, that no Extremity whatſoever can put ſo mean thoughts into the meaneſt of us all. And that to ſubmit to your mercy, is by us reckon'd amongſt thoſe things that we intend never to make uſe of. I am nevertheleſs ſtill content that the Commiſſioners whoſe Names I formerly tendred unto you, meet with ſuch as you ſhall appoint in any indifferent place to Treat upon Honourable Conditions, and deſire you to aſſure your ſelf that no other will be aſſented unto you by

27. 1645.

Your Servant,
John Byron.

My Lord,

Brereton's Reply.

I Cannot believe that you conceive the War betwixt the Hollander and Spaniard is to be made a Precedent for us: Neither can I believe that ſuch Conditions as you demanded were granted to the Baſſe, Breda, or Maeſtricht; ſure I am none ſuch were given to York, Carliſle, or Beeſton, tho' ſome of them were maintained by as great Commanders as your ſelf, and no diſparagement to you, I ſhall therefore offer to your conſideration the Examples of Liverpool, Baſing and Latham, who by their refuſal of Honourable Terms when they were propounded, were not long after ſubjected to Captivity and the Sword; you may therefore do right to all thoſe many Innocents under your Command, to tender their ſafety and the preſervation of the City; For which end I have ſent you fair and Honourable Conditions, ſuch as are the ſenſe of all the Officers and Soldiers with me, which being rejected you may expect worſe from

Cheſter-Suburbs,
Jan. 27. 1645.

Your Servant,
William Brereton.

Edmund Verney, John Robinſon, Thomas Cholmondeley, Peter Griffith, Henry Leigh, Thomas Throppe, Chriſtopher Bleaſe, William Ince, John Werden, John Johnſon, Edward Moreton, Thomas Bridge.

What is done by the Commiſſioners is confirmed by John Byron.

The Affairs of the City being ſetled, Col. Jones was there left Governour for the Parliament, and the Neighbouring Gariſons of Holt, Hawarden and Ruthen-Caſtle, were all ſtraitly begirt, and not able to hold out long after.

But as this Year had generally been very fatal to his Majeſty's Intereſts, ſo it concluded with ſuch a Sparring-Blow as deſtroy'd almoſt all hopes of Reſource; and this was the Defeat of the Lord Aſtley, who had the only ſtanding Force abroad for the King, and with them, amounting in all to about the Number of 3000, (the greater part Horſe) was advancing from Worceſter towards Oxford to Joyn with his Majeſty, and by that Conjunction would have furniſh'd his Majeſty with ſuch a competent Force that he might have been able to have taken the Field this Spring, and by ſpeedy Marches, and declining Engagements with the Enemy, might have aug-

Ann. 1645. augmented his Numbers with freſh Recruits, or at leaſt gained time till the promiſed Supplies of Men from Ireland, and Money and Men from other parts ſhould arrive, to put his Affairs in a better poſture; ſo that on theſe Troops with my Lord Aſtley as the laſt Stake, they at Oxford built all their hopes, and therefore the better to facilitate his advance drew out from thence a Party of 1500 to meet him; but all Intelligence and the Paſſages were ſo intercepted by the Enemy, that theſe latter never could hear a word of my Lord's motions till they received the ſad Tidings how he was utterly defeated, by Col. Morgan, Sir William Brereton, Col. Birch, &c. near Stow in Glouceſterſhire; of which Col. Morgan who Commanded there in Chief for the Parliament, by permiſſion of Sir W. Brereton gave this following Account.

HAving received a Command from the Honourable Committee of both Kingdoms to take the Charge of a Brigade of Horſe and Foot drawn out of the Gariſons of Glouceſter, Hereford, and Eviſhalm, to prevent the Lord Aſtley's Conjunction with the King's Forces at Oxford, and to effect that deſign, I drew forth and Rendezvouſed ſeaſonably near Eviſhalm and Warwick, notwithſtanding the Lord Aſtley endeavoured by all means to get by me, which much foiled my Brigade to prevent, in marching from place to place, to ſecure the place upon the River Avon. Yet after ſome conſiderations, I perceived that he was unwilling to paſs over ſo long as I lay near the River. Reſolved upon Thurſday laſt to quarter and camp in the moſt convenient place (whereſoever he made his paſſage) to fall upon him, and that Night had Intelligence of his March from Droit with near 100 Horſe towards Bedford, three miles from Eviſhalm, whereof I preſently advertized Col. Whaley, and Col. Fleetwood, and ſent Poſt to Sir W. Brereton for the aſſiſtance of his Horſe, which was accordingly granted. But upon Friday the Lord Aſtley ſtill continuing his March, and Sir W. Brereton not come up, was forced to hold him in action for the ſpace of four Hours, Skirmiſhing with by Parties, and keeping my Body drawn up in a moſt advantageous place for purſuit, in caſe he ſhould paſs by me before Sir Will. Brereton came up, which about Nine a Clock that Night he did, whereupon I reſolved to purſue, thinking it more advantageous to fall upon his Rear, than at that time to draw out to meet him in the Field, and in my purſuit Sir W. Brereton came up with 800 Horſe, (of whom I deſired to receive Orders, but he referred the whole Command of the Field unto me, then being equal in number to the Lord Aſtley's Forces, conſiſting of 3000. I commanded 400 Horſe, and 200 Firelocks to Charge his Rear-guard, to put him to a ſtand before he ſhould paſs through Stow upon the Woold, and as my Intelligence informed me, the King was to have joyned with him within ſeven miles of that place, where he made choice of his Ground, and had the Wind with him, yet truſting in God, I drew up and Charged him, whom half an hour before day on Saturday Morning I put to a total rout, killed many Gentlemen and Officers of quality, took Priſoners the Lord Aſtley and all his Foot-Officers, whoſe Names are in the incloſed Liſt, beſides 1600 Common Soldiers, whereof many being Wounded, I gave liberty to go to their own Homes, taking the Oath of the Fifth of April, the reſt I have ſent to Glouceſter. There are alſo taken 2000 Arms, and all their Ammunition. Sir W. Brereton deſired that the Lord Aſtley ſhould be his Priſoner, which I willingly condeſcended unto, not doubting but he will give a good account of him to the Parliament. This good ſucceſs (the glory thereof I deſire may be given unto God) will prevent the King from drawing an Army into the Field which he expected: I am now marched towards Worceſter, where I ſhall obſerve ſuch Orders as I ſhall receive from the Parliament and the Committee of both Kingdoms.

Cambden, March

Your Faithful Servant,
Tho. Morgan.

There were taken Priſoners the Lord Aſtley, Col. Corbet, Col. Gerard, Col. Mouldſworth, Lieut. Col. Broughton, Major Billingſley, Major Harnedge, Major Saltonſtone, and many other Officers. Thoſe that Eſcaped made towards Farrington and Oxford, of whom ſome were taken in the way by Col. Fleetwood. The Lord Aſtley was ſo ſenſible of the conſequences of this Defeat, that after he was taken Priſoner he ſaid to ſome of Brereton's Officers, You have now done your work, and may go to play, unleſs you will fall out amongſt your ſelves. This action happen'd on the 22*th* of March, and therefore therewith we muſt conclude the Military part of this Year 1645.

Much about the beginning of this Year 164[illegible] the Lord [illegible] [illegible] created Earl of Suſſex, upon ſome diſguſt taken at Court, left [illegible] and attended with ſome Gentlemen, came publickly in the day [illegible] into London; but being miſtruſted by the Two Houſes, an Order [illegible] on the 31*ſt* of March, That in a Week's time he ſhould depart [illegible] and all the Parliaments Quarters. But he ſtill being willing to continue in the City, did on the 22*d* of April take the Oath appointed by the Parliament for ſuch as came in unto them, before the Commiſſioners of the Great Seal: And afterwards was complained of by Mr. Hollis touching a Letter pretended to be ſent from Oxford to Hollis: On which the ſaid Lord Savile, for Contempt in refuſing to tell from whom he had that Letter, was committed to the Tower. And on the 2*d* of July following, Mr. Gourden, a Member of the Houſe of Commons, preſented a Letter from the ſaid Lord to that Houſe, with a Paper therein incloſed, deſiring the ſame might be read; which after ſome Debate, being admitted; the Subſtance of the Letter was to ſignify his Affections to the Parliament, to whom he had come from the King, and ſubmitted himſelf, and taken the Oath enjoined: In obſervance whereof, and of his Duty to the Parliament, under whoſe Protection he was, he held himſelf obliged to diſcover to them what he knew concerning Two of their Members, who had acted contrary to their Truſt, and to the Prejudice of the Parliament, in the matters in that Paper contained: Which Paper ſet forth, That Mr. Hollis and Mr. Whitlock being Perſons well-affected to the King and his Cauſe, were nevertheleſs Two of the Parliaments Commiſſioners lately ſent to Oxford to his Majeſty, with Propoſitions for Peace: And did there, contrary to their Truſt, and to the Parliament's prejudice, treat and adviſe with the King, and ſome great Lords about him, namely, the Earl of Lindſey, the Earl of Southampton, and others, about the King's Anſwer to thoſe Propoſitions; and did give a Paper in writing, wherein they adviſed what the Kings Anſwer ſhould be. Which Advice of theirs was followed by the King, and ſome of the very Words thereof made uſe of in his Majeſty's Anſwer. And that both before and after that time, they held Intelligence and Correſpondence with the King and the Royal Party at Oxford, &c. Whereupon ſeveral moved, That Hollis and Whitlock might make a preſent Anſwer to this Charge: And Hollis in his place made his Anſwer to the matter of the Paper, denying any ſuch Intelligence or Correſpondence: And Whitlock being that morning out of Town, Mr. John L'Iſle acquainted the Houſe, That Mr. Whitlock being then abſent, if they pleaſed, he would undertake to give him notice to attend the next day; which was ordered; and Whitlock then attending accordingly, the ſaid Letter and Paper were again read; whereunto he in his place ſpake by way of Anſwer as followeth:

Mr. Speaker,

I Am happy, ſince I muſt be under an Accuſation (which is no mean thing) in this Honourable Houſe, that this Gentleman, my Lord Savile, is my Accuſer; and more happy, that You, to whom I have been ſo long a Servant, and who know my ways ſo well, are to be my Judges. I ſhall ſay nothing concerning my Lord Savile, becauſe he is my Accuſer; but to the parts of his Accuſation I ſhall give you a ſhort and true Anſwer, with all Ingenuity and Submiſſion to your great Judgment.

Whitlock's Speech, in anſwer to the Lord Savile's Paper, July 3.

His firſt part of the Accuſation is, That I was a Perſon well-affected to the King: But he gives no Inſtances thereof; nor is it a Crime to be well-affected to my Sovereign; we have all expreſſed the ſame in our Covenant; I could give ſome Inſtances to the contrary effect; as the Plunder of my Goods, ſeizing the Profits of my Lands, indicting my Perſon of High-Treaſon for ſerving you, and giving away my Inheritance to Sir Charles Blunt a Papiſt; which are no great Motives to an extraordinary Affection, more than a Subject is obliged to towards his Prince. But if my Lord Savile means by well-affected to the King, my being well affected to Peace; I confeſs I am a paſſionate Lover of a good Peace, and Seeker of it, and thereby have teſtified my Affection both to King and Parliament; and the longer our Troubles continue, the more we ſhall all be of this Opinion and Affection. Sir, I hope I may be thought capable to know my Duty to my King, and to underſtand what Protection I was to have from him; the mutual Relations of both; and further I hold my ſelf diſoblig'd.

The Second Accuſation is, That I met at the Earl of Lindſey's Lodgings in Oxford, to Adviſe about the King's Anſwer to your Propoſitions; and that I there did give Advice to the King, contrary to the Truſt repoſed in me by you. To this I anſwer, That when your Commiſſioners came to Oxford, we conſulted together what (amongſt other things) was fit for us to do in point of Civilities and Viſits whilſt we were there; and it was agreed by us all, That we ſhould not viſit any that were excepted in your Propoſitions; but that we might viſit others who did viſit or ſend Viſits to us. The Earl of Lindſey ſent to viſit Mr. Hollis and Me with a Complement, That he was not well, elſe he would have come to viſit us at our Lodgings. And I having a particular Relation and Alliance to him, we went together to return a Viſit to his Lordſhip, and told our Fellow-Commiſſioners of our Intentions, before we gave the Viſit, and they approved of it. When we came to the Earl's Lodging, we found there the Earl of Southampton, the Lord Savile, and ſome others; but it was ſo far from an appointed Meeting, that I knew not of their being there, till I ſaw them in the Chamber. There was much Diſcourſe amongſt us about your Propoſitions, and they urged the Unreaſonableneſs of them: We affirmed the contrary, and vindicated your Honour in them. There was alſo Diſcourſe concerning the Scots Commiſſioners, whom they affirmed to be averſe to Peace; we aſſured them that they were not, but willing to have a good Peace. There was likewiſe upon this occaſion, Diſcourſe of the Presbytery, and of the Point of Jure Divino: We told them that the Scots were off from the rigid Presbytery, and did not inſiſt upon the Point of Jure Divino. They were then likewiſe diſcourſing of Tumults, and of Perſons and Petitions brought to Weſtminſter in a violent and diſorderly manner. We did not ſpeak of any violent Independent Party; nor any the Words mentioned in my Lord Savile's Paper; nor that the Propoſitions were unreaſonable: They indeed preſſed much upon that Argument, That they were unreaſonable; particularly the Propoſitions concerning Religion and the Militia: We told them, That unleſs the King would grant thoſe Propoſitions, it would be in vain to Treat of any Peace. There was alſo much Diſcourſe about the acknowledging You to be a Parliament: The Earl of Lindſey ſaid, That the King had acknowledged you a Parliament, by the words, Lords and Commons of Parliament. We anſwered, That this was the ſame Stile his Majeſty gave to the Aſſembly at Oxford, and we could not be ſatisfied with that Acknowledgment. Then the Earl of Lindſey demanded of us, How we would be Acknowledged? We told him, thus; The Lords and Commons Aſſembled in the Parliament of England at Weſtminſter.

After this we returned to our Lodgings, and acquainted our Fellow-Commiſſioners with the Perſons that were at the Earl of Lindſey's Chamber when we were there, and with the matter of our Diſcourſe with them. In all our Diſcourſes, Mr. Holis and my ſelf did juſtify your Propoſitions, and vindicate your Proceedings. Mr. Speaker, It is no ſmall trouble to my Thoughts, to have my Name queſtioned in this Houſe; but I am comforted in my own Integrity and Innocency, and in my Accuſer, but chiefly in my Judges.

Whitlock having ended, the Houſe fell into Debate, Whether this Paper from the Lord Savile were an Accuſation or Charge againſt them: For ſeveral Gentlemen argued, That it was againſt the Privilege of the Houſe to take it for an Accuſation, being from an Enemy come from the King's Quarters, and one in Contempt to both Houſes of Parliament, for refuſing to name the Perſon from whom he received a certain Letter concerning Mr. Hollis; and therefore committed cloſe Priſoner. For he had not diſcovered this for ſeveral Months time, during which he had been in the Parliaments Quarters; but after he had been complained of by Mr. Hollis about a Letter, and Mr. Whitlock was in the Chair of the Committee appointed to examine that buſineſs, then the Lord Savile brought in a new Accuſation both againſt Hollis and Whitlock the Chairman, to take off his Teſtimony for Mr. Hollis. Others moved, That this Buſineſs might be committed, to ſee if the Lord Savile would avow his Letter and Paper, and by what Teſtimony he could make it good; and that Mr. Hollis and Mr. Whitlock might be cleared from, and have Reparation for this Aſperſion: So at laſt it was referred to a Committee to be examined in the general; and power given to the Committee to examine any Member of this Houſe: And a Meſſage ſent to the Lords, to deſire that the Lord Savile might be examined at this Committee.

The Committee met, and Mr. Samuel Brown had the Chair: Where the Lord Savile own'd the Letter and Paper as his, and his Hand to be to them; adding, That he would juſtify them to be true upon his Soul and his Life; but when put to it, could not make out the Particulars, more than what they acknowledged, by any other Evidence; ſo that after ſeveral days canvaſſing the matter, and hearing of the Earl of Denbigh, the Lord Wenman, and others of the Commiſſioners that went with them to Oxford; and eſpecially, for that depending the buſineſs, the Scots Commiſſioners had intercepted certain Letters and Papers of the Lord Savile's, which he was ſending to Oxford; the chief Scope whereof was to be informed from thence, whether Hollis or Whitlock kept Intelligence with the Duke of Richmond, the Earl of Lindſey, or any others of the King's Party: Which being brought, and read in the Houſe, and thereby ſomewhat of a Deſign being ſuſpected to be in the bottom of this Proſecution; and the whole matter being reported to the Houſe, and there re-examined, the Houſe in fine, after very high and long Debate, voted, That it not appearing that Mr. Hollis and Mr. Whitlock had done any Diſſervice in their Proceedings at Oxford, Therefore the Remainder and whole matter of the Report concerning them, ſhould be laid aſide, and no further proceeded in: And that the ſaid Mr. Hollis and Mr. Whitlock ſhall have liberty to proſecute (if they pleaſe) the Lord Savile, now Priſoner in the Tower, for Damages.

Hollis and Whitlock acquitted.

An Ordinance of the Lords and Commons Aſſembled in Parliament, for the raiſing and collecting of Ten thouſand Pounds, for and towards the Redemption of diſtreſſed Captives.

Ordinance for Redemption of Captives, July 8. 1645.

WHereas by an Act made this preſent Parliament, entituled, An Act for the Relief of the Captives taken by Turkiſh, Mooriſh, and other Pyrates; and to prevent the taking of others in time to come; a Subſidy of One per Cent. was impoſed on all Goods and Merchandize exported out of, or imported into this Kingdom of England, and Dominion of Wales, which was to be one firſt part more than the Cuſtoms and Subſidy of Tonnage and Poundage, according to the Book of Rates: Since the paſſing of which Act, the Houſe of Commons by Order of the 10*th* of March, 1641. for divers Reaſons did order, That Bonds ſhould be taken by the Collectors of that Duty, to ſtand to the Order of Parliament. And whereas both Houſes of Parliament, intending to carry on that good Work, did on the 24*th* of October 1644. order,

An. 1645.

That only one fourth part of the Monies due by the ſaid Bonds, being One Shilling in every Twenty Shillings Cuſtom, ſhould be paid by the reſpective Merchants of the City of London; having by their Petition ſet forth the great Inconveniences that might happen, as well in relation of the Advancement of the Work, as to the unequal Burthen that might reſt upon the well-affected Merchants, in regard ſundry Perſons ill-diſpoſed to that Work, and diſaffected to the Parliament, did, during the time of the ſaid Act, make ill uſe of the Favour of the Parliament, and did fraudulently make Entry of their Goods in the Names of inſolvent and unknown perſons, by whom Bonds were likewiſe ſealed: And the Duty being now required, no ſuch Perſons appear, nor Moneys can be collected for carrying on of that Work: Yet the ſaid well-affected Merchants being deſirous that the Work might go on, are ready not only by way of Advance forthwith to pay in all ſuch Moneys as they themſelves owe upon thoſe Bonds, but likewiſe willing to diſcover the Fraud in thoſe ill-affected Perſons, and to uſe their beſt Endeavours to recover in the Moneys due upon ſuch Bonds, ſo as they might be enabled by an Ordinance of Parliament, for continuance of that Duty of One fourth per Cent. for another Year, to reimburſe themſelves out of the one Moiety of the Collections of that Duty, or otherwiſe all ſuch Moneys as they ſhall pay in and advance as aforeſaid. It is therefore ordained by the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, That Samuel Avery, Eſq; Alderman of the City of London, Walter Pell, Robert Lowther, Rowland Wilſon Senior, Thomas Hodges, William Methold, Edmund Caſon, Robert Abdy, Samuel Mico, Charles Snelling, Richard Legg, Thomas Rich, Jonathan Andrews, Nathanael Wright, Thomas Burnel, Richard Chiverton, Nathan Wright, Richard Hill, Benjamin Delanney, William Vincent, Henry Hunt, and Hugh Wood, or any Three of them, ſhall be a Committee, and have Power to receive from the Chamberlain of London, who is hereby required to deliver all ſuch Bonds of Merchants heretofore taken for the ſatisfying of that Duty, by virtue of the ſaid Order of the 10*th* of March, 1641. And ſhall have further Power to receive all Moneys due upon the ſaid Bonds from the ſeveral Merchants, according to the Rule following: That is to ſay, Of all ſuch Merchants that ſhall before the 24*th* of July next, voluntarily pay in the One fourth part of the One per Cent. in obedience to the Ordinance of the 24*th* of October, 1644. upon their ſaid Bonds they ſhall accept thereof, and deliver up their Bonds cancelled to the reſpective Merchants. But of all others which ſhall refuſe to accept of the Benefit of this Ordinance, and to pay in their Moneys on their Bonds by the day preſcribed; or any others that they ſhall diſcover fraudulently to have made their Entries in unknown Names, to elude the Ordinance of Parliament; that they ſhall have Power to require and receive the whole Duty of One per Cent. or the whole Penalty of the ſaid Bonds, as they ſhall think fit. And if any ſhall refuſe upon demand to make ſuch Payment, then to levy the ſame by Diſtreſs upon the Goods and Eſtates of ſuch Perſons, and the ſame to ſell and diſpoſe of, for the ſatisfaction of the ſaid Bonds; and the Overplus, if any ſhall be, to return it to the Parties ſo refuſing. And for the better executing of this Service, they ſhall have Power to ſend for Parties, Witneſſes, other than Peers, Papers, and Records, at a certain time and place, where they ſhall conſtantly ſit. And it is further ordained, That after the Sum of Ten thouſand Pounds ſhall be raiſed and collected upon the ſaid Bonds, for the carrying on the ſaid Work, ſuch Merchants as ſhall on or before the ſaid 24*th* day of July, pay in their ſaid Moneys in obedience to this Ordinance, ſhall be repaid the ſame out of the Surplus of ſuch Moneys as ſhall ariſe upon the ſaid Bonds, in turn as they did pay in their Moneys: And what part ſhall be wanting for the full Reimburſement of every particular Merchant, ſhall be paid out of the one Moiety of the Receipts that ſhall be collected in the Port of London, on an Ordinance of Parliament paſſed this preſent day, for the Continuance of the ſaid Duty of One fourth of One per Cent. from the 10*th* of December next incluſive. Provided if any Merchant ſhall not pay in the Money due by his Bond, on or before the 24*th* of July as aforeſaid, ſhall not enjoy the Benefit of this Clauſe, or any thing in this Ordinance contained.

And it is further ordained, That this Committee ſhall have Power to appoint a Treaſurer to receive and iſſue out all ſuch Moneys as ſhall be collected on the ſaid Bonds, as he ſhall receive Order from time to time, from the Committee of the Navy appointed by Parliament, which ſhall be to him a ſufficient Diſcharge; and to employ ſuch other Perſon or Perſons in the Execution of this Service, and to give ſuch Reward for their Care and Pains, as to them, with the Approbation of the Committee of the Navy, ſhall be thought fit.

Laſtly, it is ordained, That if after the 24*th* day of July, any perſon or perſons ſhall be diſcovered eluding of the ſaid Ordinance of Parliament for the Payment of that Duty, to have made fraudulent Entries, and to cauſe Bonds to be given in the Names of unknown or inſolvent perſons, ſuch perſons ſo diſcovered ſhall be liable to the Penalty of the ſaid Bonds, and to ſuch further Puniſhment as ſhall be thought fit by Parliament to be due to Offences of that nature: One Moiety of the ſaid Fine and Penalty ſhall be to ſuch perſon or perſons that ſhall make ſuch Diſcovery; and the other Moiety to the State, to be employed to and for the Redemption of the ſaid diſtreſſed Captives. And the Committee of the Navy are to take care for the putting this Ordinance in Execution, and to give ſuch further Inſtructions from time to time, as ſhall be needful for the better carrying on of this Service.

Die Veneris, 11. Julii, 1645.

Committee appointed by Parliament to receive the Moneys due on the Bonds for Redemption of the Captives in Algiers.

Whereas both Houſes of Parliament have by their Ordinance dated the 8*th* day of this preſent Month, for ſeveral Reaſons mentioned and contained in the ſame, appointed this Committee to receive in all Moneys due upon Bond taken upon the Duty of One per Cent. for Redemption of Captives in Algiers, &c. from Merchants, according to this Rule; (viz.) Of all who ſhall voluntarily bring in their Moneys on or before the 24*th* preſent, One fourth part of One per Cent. And if any ſhall refuſe to accept of the Benefit thereof, or ſeek to elude the ſaid Ordinance, that then they ſhall be compelled to pay the ſaid whole Duty of One per Cent. or the whole Penalty of the Bonds; the ſame to be levied by Diſtreſs. And if any Money ſhall be Overplus, after 10000 l. firſt deducted out of the Moneys ariſing on the ſaid Bonds, the ſame ſhall be Repaid unto ſuch Perſons as ſhall pay in their Moneys before the ſaid 24*th* of this Month: And if ſuch Remainder will not fully reimburſe them, then they ſhall be paid what remains, out of the Moiety of the Moneys that ſhall be collected on the Ordinance now paſſed for Continuance of the ſaid Duty of a Fourth part of One per Cent. from the 10*th* of December next, unto the 10*th* of December 1646.

In purſuance therefore of the Commands of both Houſes of Parliament for the carrying on of this ſo pious a Work, This Committee doth think fit hereby to publiſh, That they intend and do appoint to meet conſtantly every day at Merchant-Taylors-Hall, between the Hours of Three and Six in the Afternoon. And hereof all whom it doth or may concern, are to take Notice accordingly.

The Parliament's Declaration to the States General Aug. 5. 1645.

A Declaration of the Parliament of England: Written to the High and Mighty Lords, The Lords States General of the United Provinces of the Low Countries: Concerning their laſt Embaſſy Extraordinary into England.

High and Mighty Lords,

THE Lords and Commons aſſembled in the Parliament of England, taking into their Conſideration the late Embaſſy directed from your Lordſhips unto them; and well knowing by the ſucceſſive Tranſaction of Affairs between this Kingdom, and the States of the United Provinces of the Low Countries, as by the notable Aſſiſtances given and received againſt the Enemies of each other, that from the very beginning of the Reſtoration of the Liberty of that Republick, even unto this time, there hath been a firm Union, and conſtant Intercourſe of Friendſhip and real Affection between this Kingdom and that State; and that the mutual Expreſſions thereof, by many Actions which each hath performed for the Good and Welfare of the other, have been by the Bleſſing of God very ſucceſsful for procuring great Additions of Happineſs unto both. And conſidering that the ſame Profeſſion of the true Reformed Proteſtant Religion, the Advantages of Traffick and Aſſiſtance, by reaſon of Situation, Commodities and Shipping, and the ſame common Enemies to both, which were the common Intereſts of Religion and State, that firſt combined them in this happy League, do ſtill continue: And that therefore upon the Obſervation of God's Bleſſing, and of the long Experience of the Fruits and happy Effects of it, they ought in reaſon be much more powerful now for the continuation thereof, than they were in the beginning; they have thought good to let your Lordſhips know, That as this pious and Strict Alliance was derived from their Anceſtors unto them, ſo they have nothing more in their Wiſhes and Deſires, than that the ſame may from themſelves be tranſmitted unto Poſterity, to be continued without intermiſſion from Age to Age, if God ſo pleaſe: And would have your Lordſhips reſt aſſured, That they will never willingly do any thing, nor ſuffer any thing to be done, if in their power, which may tend to the diminution thereof in the leaſt degree: But ſhall on the other ſide take all occaſions to let your Lordſhips know how much they deſire that by their means a foundation may be laid, if poſſible, of greater Aſſurances, and of a nearer Conjunction than heretofore hath been. And as they have herein manifeſted their own Intentions and Deſires; ſo they would have your Lordſhips further know, that they nothing doubt, but that your Lordſhips have the ſame, and that they look upon that Embaſſy as a clear Teſtimony thereof, and as proceeding from thoſe good reſpects which you have conſtantly born unto the Peace and Welfare of his Majeſty, and of all his Dominions; for which they return unto your Lordſhips their moſt hearty Thanks. And although when they call to mind their own Demeanor in all the Paſſages of the Negotiation upon that Embaſſy, and their Sincerity therein towards your Lordſhips and that State; they have no Cauſe to believe that your Lordſhips do conceive otherwiſe thereof, than that they have therein expreſſed themſelves with all due Reſpects unto your Lordſhips, and ſuch as might juſtly be expected from ſo good Friends, then engaged in a buſineſs intended and undertaken by you only for their good: Yet in regard the Embaſſy hath not produced the happy Ends intended by your Lordſhips, and which the Houſes of Parliament moſt earneſtly deſired and thirſted after (the compoſing the great Diſtractions within his Majeſty's Kingdoms); and in regard they have ſome cauſe to fear that the Proceedings on the part of the Parliament have been or may be repreſented unto you in ſuch manner as may cauſe ſome doubts in your Lordſhips, as well concerning their Carriage therein towards your Lordſhips, as concerning the Reality of their Endeavours for obtaining a ſafe and well-grounded Peace: They conceive themſelves bound to endeavour as much as in them lies, the prevention of any Miſtakings or Miſunderſtandings from your Lordſhips in matters of ſo high and tender a concernment: And therefore becauſe they know no better or more likely way for the preſent to effect

theſe their deſires, than to acquaint your Lordſhips with the truth of all the proceedings between themſelves, and the Honourable Perſons ſent from you upon that Embaſſy, and with the true Reaſons and Grounds thereof, they have made a Collection and true Narration of them as followeth.

When we firſt heard of the Arrival of your Ambaſſadors here, which was about the beginning of January, 1643. Although we knew not whether your Lordſhips had ſent them to the King, or Parliament, or to both; yet we received them with the Civilities and Reſpects which have been accuſtomed in the Entertainment of ſuch Ambaſſadors as have been moſt welcome to this Kingdom: After many Weeks ſtay in London, they went to Oxford, without any Addreſs to the Parliament, or other intimation of their Intentions, ſave only that they meant firſt to repair to his Majeſty, then at Oxford; and after about ſix Weeks abode there, they returned hither again; and upon the 18*th* of March, 1643. delivered a Paper to each of the Speakers of the Houſes of Parliament, with a Memorandum to that delivered to the Speaker of the Houſe of Peers, in theſe words, ‘Delivered by the Ambaſ‘ſadors of the Lords Eſtates, unto Monſieur the Baron Grey of Wark, Speaker, ‘to be committed to the Lords of the Parliament, this 14*th* day of March, 1643. The other to the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, with a Memorandum in theſe words, ‘Delivered by the Ambaſſadors of the Lords ‘Eſtates unto Mr. William Lenthal, Speaker, to be communicated to the S‘Commons of Parliament, this 14*th* of March, 1643.

To the matter of theſe Papers, the Lords and Commons could give no Anſwer, in reſpect they were not addreſſed to them in ſuch words, either for the matter or manner, as that they could legally, and according to the courſe of Parliament, take notice of them as directed to themſelves. And although they did not at this time, nor had at any time before, tendered any Letters of Credence from your Lordſhips to either of the Houſes, the ſame not being done until the Twelfth of July next following; Yet in regard the Papers purported an Embaſſy from your Lordſhips, they were readily received by the Lords and Commons; who were very much grieved that any thing ſhould make them uncapable of giving a ſpeedy and ſatisfactory Anſwer. And that pretence of miſtakes through want of knowledge of the Stile or manner of Addreſſes, might be taken away, the Houſes were willing that ſome of their Members ſhould repair to the Ambaſſadors to acquaint them therewith; who did accordingly, and left the ſame in writing with them; Although the Houſes had cauſe to believe, that the Ambaſſadors were not ignorant, that other Ambaſſadors from the French King, having tendred Papers to the Houſes, and in the Addreſs, (the ſame in ſubſtance with this) received no Anſwer to the matter of them. The Houſes after long expectation received nothing from the Ambaſſadors, and therefore the Eighth Day of April, 1644. returned this Anſwer to their Paper.

‘That the Lords and Commons aſſembled in the Parliament of England, will ‘always with due reſpect acknowledge ſuch affections as from the Lords the ‘States General of the United Provinces of the Low Countries, ſhall at any time ‘be Expreſſed to the King and his Kingdoms; profeſſing that they deſire ‘nothing more, than ſuch a Peace as may as well procure Honour and ‘Happineſs to the King, as the preſervation of the true Reformed Religion, ‘the privileges of Parliament, and the liberty of the Subjects in His Majeſties ‘three Kingdoms, according to the late Solemn League and Covenant; And ‘when they ſhall from and in the name of the ſaid Lords the States Gene‘ral of the United Provinces, propoſe any thing to the Lords and Commons ‘aſſembled in the Parliament of England, they will do thereupon that ſhall ‘be fit.

After they had received this Anſwer, there were many Diſpatches and Meſſages ſent and received to and from Oxford, by and from them; and upon the 4*th* of May, 1644. Ambaſſadors came to the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, and by him preſented their Service to the Parliament; proteſting their deſires to do good, but that they met with no ſucceſs; and ſo took their leave for Oxford again; whereupon the Speaker was appointed to give them a Viſit, and

An. 1645. and a Return of their Reſpects to the Houſe of Commons; which was performed; many of the Houſe of Commons accompanying him unto them.

But when they perceived a conſiderable Army (raiſed by Authority of Parliament) to come near unto Oxford, where they then were with the King, they came out with White Flags before them, and moved the Earl of Eſſex, the General of the Parliaments Forces, for a Treaty, to compoſe the differences between his Majeſty and the Parliament: His Excellency aſſured them (which we doubt not but they very well knew before) that it belonged only to the Parliament to appoint ſuch a Treaty: With which Anſwer, after civil Entertainment, they returned again to Oxford; and from thence they came with their White Flags, which were ſtill carried before them all the way as they paſſed, even in this City of London, which (notwithſtanding the bad effects that ſuch carriage might have produced, and eſpecially in the Army) they were willing to paſs by; as alſo the bringing of ſome perſons in their Train from Oxford, that durſt not otherwiſe ſee London; becauſe they did in truth moſt really deſire that to which themſelves and their Flag ſeemed ſo much to pretend.

After their return hither, about the 19*th* of June, 1644. they ſent Meſſages to the Houſes, that they had ſome thing to deliver unto them from your Lordſhips; Whereunto about 2 or 3 days after, this Anſwer was ſent them; ‘That the Houſes did expect that they ſhould make their demand of Audience in Writing, with which if the Houſes reſted ſatisfied, that they would come to them as to the Parliament of England, Audience ſhould be given them in each Houſe apart. Which they did by their Writing, Dated the 9*th* of July, whereby they preſented their Deſires as to the Lords and Commons Aſſembled in the Parliament of England, and thereupon had Audience given them in each Houſe the 18*th* day of the ſame Month, with a moſt Honourable and Reſpective Reception. At the ſame time they deliver'd their Letters of Credence from your Lordſhips, and offered their Interpoſition and Mediation for compoſing of the Differences between his Majeſty and the Parliament, which they left in Writing, together with a Memorial for reparation of Damages ſuſtained by ſome Merchants and Maſters of Ships of the United Provinces, in their Ships and courſe of Trading, with deſire that Commiſſioners might be appointed for ſetling of the things complained of.

In ſatisfaction to their deſires concerning the Ships and Trading, The Houſes the 24*th* of the ſame July, did make a Committee, conſiſting both of Lords and Commoners, to take the ſame into conſideration, with liberty to confer with the Ambaſſadors touching the matters under complaint. Of the proceedings of the Houſes concerning this of the Ships, they intend to give particular and ſpeedy notice to your Lordſhips, and to do that therein which they hope ſhall give full ſatisfaction.

To their other Paper concerning their Mediation, the Houſes returned this Anſwer the Sixth day of December after;

‘The Parliament of England do with all reſpectful Gratitude acknowledg the great and good Affection of the High and Mighty Lords, the States General of the United Provinces, expreſſed by their Ambaſſadors, towards the good Peace and happineſs of theſe his Majeſty's Dominions, and the Parliament; As alſo their friendly offer to interpoſe, and uſe their beſt endeavours for the effecting thereof, in caſe it be ſo deſired. Nor had there been ſo much time intermitted here, in the maintaining and ſeeking of Peace, having ever been our chief Aim; had we not before this offer of your Ambaſſadors, put our ſelves in a way of ſeeking to his Majeſty to reobtain a well grounded Peace, by preparing certain Propoſitions tending thereunto; which upon the common Intereſts of both Kingdoms, have until of late remained in the hands of the State of Scotland; and being returned from thence, are lately ſent and preſented by a Committee of both Kingdoms to his Majeſty, from whom we hope to receive a Gracious Anſwer, they tending both to his own, and alſo his Peoples good. However, we cannot but expreſs our due ſenſe of the good Reſpect from the High and Mighty Lords and States General of the United Provinces, to this Kingdom, in their deſires to advance the happy Peace, which will have ſo great an Influence into the future good or evil of all profeſſing the Proteſtant Religion; in particular, the High and Mighty States of the United Provinces, whoſe Proſperity, as our own, we ſhall with all true Affection promote.

Although the deſired Mediation be not hereby admitted, yet they hope the ſame will not ſeem ſtrange to your Lordſhips, when you ſhall conſider the poſture of our Affairs both at the time of their Audience, as likewiſe of this Anſwer, That the Two Kingdoms were united by ſolemn Covenant made to Almighty God, and by League each to other, as one entire Body, to proſecute this Cauſe; and that in purſuance thereof, Propoſitions for a ſafe and well-grounded Peace, were then preparing in a joint way, by the Parliaments of both Kingdoms; which they believe was not unknown unto the Ambaſſadors at the time of their Audience. As alſo when your Lordſhips, from what formerly hath been ſet forth, concerning their not acknowledging them the Two Houſes of Parliament until about Six Months after their coming into this Kingdom, and from their Carriage otherwiſe, ſhall conſider that they had juſt cauſe to ſuſpect that they did promote the Deſigns of the Enemies to the Parliament. For in this particular they may well believe that that which is ſo notoriouſly known to all who do but live amongſt us, was likewiſe known to them, That this Parliament was ſummoned according to the Fundamental Laws of the Realm, and made indiſſoluble ſave only by Act of Parliament, by a Law paſſed this Parliament with his Majeſty's Conſent; and when their Letters of Credence from your Lordſhips, which were made above Six Months before their acknowledging of the Parliament, directed (as by the Indorſement appears), To the Parliament of the Realm of England: And that as themſelves declared, they were charged by your Lordſhips to advance the Protection of the Laws of this Kingdom, without patronizing any Act which might tend to the enfeebling or Deſtruction of the ſame. Whereas their Carriage in not acknowledging of the Parliament in ſo long time, in reſpect that thoſe at Oxford have declared againſt it, did bear an Implication of doubt, whether the Laws and Statutes of this Realm were of any force, otherwiſe than according to the Will and Pleaſure of his Majeſty; this Parliament having received the firſt Being by the Common Laws of this Realm, and the Continuance by Act of Parliament; by which only this Kingdom is governed, and without which the whole Frame of Government would be diſſolved. Neither, my Lords, could the Houſes well interpret their employing of one Dillon, as one of their Secretaries and Interpreter, who was a Papiſt, and ſuſpected to have been an Iriſh Rebel in the preſent Rebellion of Ireland; and who upon all occaſions declared himſelf an Enemy unto the Parliament.

Thus having informed your Lordſhips in part what they did with us; we ſhall likewiſe intreat your Lordſhips to call to mind ſome publick Repreſentations which they have made unto your Lordſhips.

By their Letters from London, December 16 1644. Amongſt other things, ſpeaking of the Trial of the late Archbiſhop of Canterbury, they ſay, 'Mean 'while the Houſe of Commons is very eager to bring the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to his End, as we have formerly ſignified: And though there is no 'Law or Right in England, whereby his Actions that are laid to his Charge 'are declared High Treaſon, and worthy of Death; yet hath the ſaid Houſe 'now by an Order declared, that his Actions wherefore he is charged, are 'of ſo high a Nature; and therefore they did deſire that the Upper Houſe 'ſhould alſo give their Conſent to the ſaid Ordinance. But thereupon the 'Lords made ſome difficulty, and yet are deliberating about it: And this 'day ſeven-night the Houſe of Commons ſent one of their Members (by 'Name Mr. Stroud) to the Upper Houſe, to deſire the Lords to agree with 'the Commons in the buſineſs of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. And when 'the Lords gave anſwer, They had great Conſideration therein, ſo that they 'muſt not be haſtned; the ſaid Mr. Stroud is ſaid to have ſaid, The People of 'London ſhould come to haſten them.

The Houſe of Peers concurred in all things with the Commons in paſſing this Ordinance: And it ſeems ſtrange to the Houſes, that Ambaſſadors ſhould be ſo confident that they knew the Laws of this Kingdom better than the Parliament, as to charge them with Injuſtice in putting the Archbiſhop to Death: Or that they ſhould have the Houſe of Commons thought to have uſed any undue Carriage to the Houſe of Peers by that Meſſage, when in truth no words in that Meſſage, nor in any other concerning that Ordinance, could bear the ſenſe expreſſed in that Letter, nor any ſenſe to that purpoſe.

In the ſame Letter is this Expreſſion: ‘And indeed we cannot but with grief here complain, That there is here little Reſpect and Civility ſhewed to your Commiſſioners: We have heretofore oftentimes written that we might again return into the Low-Countries; and expect by the firſt Poſt your Highneſſes Anſwer and Reſolution.

‘January 6. There was alſo on Sunday in the Churches publickly prayed, That God would not ſuffer to ſucceed the Treaty of Peace betwixt France and Spain at Munſter; nor that between Sueden and Denmark.

‘The Common Council of the City of London hath lately been changed; about which changing there appears no ſign of any Impartialities; ſo that it is thought that this new-choſen Common-Council hath no better Inclination to Peace than the former.

The Common Council of the City of London, whereupon the Government of the City doth chiefly depend, is charged at leaſt with Suſpicion of Partiality and Diſaffection to Peace: A heavy Charge is laid upon the Reverend and Pious Divines: Neither of the Houſes have heard of ſuch Publick Prayers, neither do they believe that any ſuch Prayers were uſed by them: And therefore they leave it to your Lordſhips Conſideration, whether the Ambaſſadors had cauſe to ſend this Information.

In the ſame Letter: ‘A Herring-Buſſe belonging to the Burgmaſter Colſter at Rotterdam, having been taken by a Dunkirker, and again forſaken (becauſe there came near them an Engliſh Ship, which the Dunkirker did fear to be a Dutchman) was got here again free, as ſoon as ſhe was brought hither; but the Officers of the Admiralty will not now ſuffer her to come away, unleſs ſhe pay firſt Cuſtom for the Salt ſhe carrieth; and by ſuch diſhoneſty the ſaid Buſſe is already a long time ſtay'd.

My Lords, Whether the Ambaſſadors had not cauſe to have acknowledged a kind and good reſpect in taking of Cuſtom, or Silvage only, of that Ship, rather than to have charged Diſhoneſty upon the Juſtice of the Kingdom, they ſhall make appear to your Lordſhips when they ſhall ſend unto you their Proceedings concerning your Ships and Courſe of Traffick.

January 20. 1645. ‘The Lower Houſe hath cauſed the Chamber where they ſit in, to be hanged in Tapiſtry, which was heretofore never ſo; it is ſaid it is done, that the Lords changing their Chamber, ſhall come and ſit in the Houſe of Commons; and ſo to be both together reduced into one Body, and the better agree by Number of Votes. When heretofore the Parliament was full, then the Lords Chamber did conſiſt of about 126 or more Votes, and the Lower Houſe above 500 Votes; and they have always been in ſeveral Houſes, and the one could not conclude any thing for a Reſolution of the King, unleſs the other Houſe did alſo conſent; but now the King is abſent, and the Upper Houſe ſhould now be melted into the Lower; and in the Common Aſſembly of about 26 Lords which are now here, and ſome 200 Commoners, ſo the moſt Votes ſhould Rule and Ordain all Matters: Thus much we are told, and that it tends to ſhun many Diſputes and Hindrances which happen in their Reſolutions every day: The Lords remain conſtant to maintain their Right; and ſay, This is to take away all their Right and Prerogative, taking away their Houſe, and ſo bring all the Power under the Commons.

My Lords, The Commons are charged with Endeavour of altering the Fundamentals of Parliament, by taking away the Houſe of Peers, and melting it into the Houſe of Commons; when as there was never any Debate in the Houſe of Commons concerning any ſuch matter, nor was the ſame ever intended or deſired by the ſaid Houſe. The Proceedings of Parliament are endeavoured to be blemiſhed by the Abſence of the greateſt Number of the Members of both Houſes; when as they might as well informed your Lordſhips, That above Forty of the Houſe of Peers were Papiſts and Biſhops; and that the Biſhops by Act of Parliament, whereto his Majeſty gave his Aſſent, are taken out of the Lords Houſe: And that many of the Lords who formerly deſerted the Parliament; yet upon due Conſideration of their Error, they are returned again, though not admitted to ſit. And that the Houſe of Commons doth now conſiſt of a far greater Number than is in that Letter mentioned; above Two hundred and fifty having taken the late ſolemn National Covenant in the Houſes, beſides many that are employed otherwhere in the Affairs of the Parliament; and that many ſince the beginning of this Parliament, which is almoſt Five Years, are dead, and none ſince choſen in their places. The Houſes thought good to let your Lordſhips know thus much, that it might not be conceived from any Expreſſions in this Letter, that the greateſt part of the Members of Parliament had abſented themſelves out of diſlike of their proceedings.

My Lords, Though the Advertiſements were ſince the Anſwer to their deſire of Mediation, yet the Parliament hath farther Cauſe from thence to conceive that they were not then miſtaken; as likewiſe from the Contents of his Majeſty's Letter of the 26th of March laſt, ſent unto the High and Mighty Lords the States-General at the time of the return of the Ambaſſadors from hence, as followeth:

High and Mighty Lords, our good Friends and Allies; By theſe Preſents which Signior Borrel, and the Lord of Renſwood, Baron of Reed, will deliver unto you, we do declare more fully the great Subject of Confidence we have taken in the Juſtice and moſt ſincere Amity you our good Friends and Ancient Allies do ſhew us. For though we formerly had knowledge thereof in many ways, yet do we now receive a ſtronger Satisfaction; and we acknowledge to be far more ſatisfied than ever heretofore, with your Zeal for the good of our Perſon, and the true quietneſs of our Kingdoms, by this your employing towards us Two ſo accompliſhed and wiſe Perſons. And to teſtify the Juſtice of our Cauſe, and the Candor wherewith we proceed, we would have, and would yet gladly and willingly remit the diſpoſition thereof, and refer to the Judgment of thoſe of your State, and of that of our other Allies, the Accommodation of the Differences that trouble England and our other Realms.

The ſaid Ambaſſadors have very well learned the Conſtitution of the Affairs here on the one and the other part; they have behaved themſelves with a ſingular Impartiality and Conduct, ſo that we ought for ever greatly to praiſe them. And as at their Arrival they found us moſt ready to admit of their Interpoſition; ſo alſo at their parting they could well diſcern by what they lately did in our Name propoſe concerning the Point of Religion, our Conſtancy and Paſſion for the Peace: And therefore we do not doubt but you will lend us a good hand, with juſt means to attain the ſame; that ſo we may be reciprocally profitable unto you, as we here aſſure you of our moſt hearty deſire upon all occaſions and occurrences. We wiſh you would be pleaſed to hear at large theſe things, and other particulars which we have intruſted to the relation of your ſaid Ambaſſadors. And thus we pray God that he keep you, High and Mighty Lords, our good Friends and Allies, in his holy and worthy Guard. Given at Oxford, March 26. 1645.

Your very good Friend, Charles R.

And counterſign'd by his Majeſty's Command, Ed. Nicholas.

To the High and Mighty Lords, our good Friends and Allies, The States-General of the United Provinces of the Low-Countries.

My Lords, That they returned not this Anſwer ſooner, though their Buſineſſes were many and great, yet they would have your Lordſhips to conceive that they deſired to prefer none before the ſhewing of all due Reſpect to your Lordſhips: But they deferred it partly to ſee whether your Ambaſſadors upon further Information of themſelves, would expreſs a more indifferent Carriage: But eſpecially becauſe they were unwilling to give a denial to any thing propouuded unto them in the Name of your Lordſhips.

My Lords, We ſhall now go on: About the end of January laſt, the Ambaſſadors made ſhew of taking their laſt Leave of the Parliament; and re-

An. 1645. turning again to Oxford (as was ſaid) to do the like there, which was about the time of the beginning of the Treaty at Uxbridge. But about the breaking up of the Treaty they returned to London; and the ſame Morning that the Commons ſent from the Parliament, were expected in the Houſe to give an Account of their Proceedings, which was the 24*th* day of February laſt, the Ambaſſadors without any former Demand of Audience, according to the uſual courſe of Ambaſſadors, and as ſhould ſeem by the manner of it, with intent to anticipate the Account of the Commiſſioners to the Parliament that ſent them, came to the Speakers of both Houſes, and preſſed for a ſpeedy Audience that Morning; which being granted, they made theſe Propoſitions concerning the Treaty, and delivered them in Writing.

‘Right Honourable, We have heretofore as well particularly as in publick, demonſtrated the High and Mighty Lords, our Lords the States General of the United Provinces, their great Deſires and ſincere Endeavours they conſtantly continue; That in a happy hour they might ſee a good Accommodation betwixt the King and his Parliament, and Peace re-eſtabliſhed in theſe Kingdoms.

‘And your Honours by your Profeſſions by word of mouth, and of late given unto us in writing the 10*th* of December laſt paſt, have not only teſtified that the ſaid Deſires and ſincere Intentions of our Lords and Superiors were very acceptable unto you; but alſo you added, That your Honours did judge the ſaid Accommodation and deſired Peace, did as highly concern thoſe that make Profeſſion of the true Proteſtant Religion; and in particular our Lords and Superiors.

‘All theſe Motives ſuppeditated by your Honours, and our Duties, have continually wrought in us a very great care to fix an Eye upon his Majeſty's Proceedings and Yours: And now lately, upon the Conference and Treaty that at preſent is at hand at Uxbridge, where his Majeſty's and your Commiſſioners labour (as we hope) with Utility to obtain ſo much deſired Succeſs: We muſt alſo ſay, That at our being at Oxford we received the Honour, that his Majeſty hath ordered to communicate unto us all the Paſſages of that Conference: And by one and the other, we have obſerved in the firſt place, That his Majeſty above all things deſires an Accommodation with your Honours: And that his Majeſty entirely inclines to give all manner of Content, and aſſurance of his Affection, in all things which are Juſt and Honourable.

‘In the ſecond place, We are informed, That by the Anſwer to the Propoſitions of your Honours touching the Point of Church-Government, the Perſonal Exceſſes that may have been committed heretofore, were not to be feared for the future.

‘Thirdly, That if in the Form of Government it ſelf, and the Exerciſe thereof, and the Juriſdiction therein comprehended heretofore, any thing was to be excepted againſt; your Honours can judge if that be not prevented, by means of thoſe Offers his Majeſty hath made to that end.

‘And notwithſtanding, S^{rs}, we have ſeen that the Point of Church-Government was yet behind, and without Accommodation; wherefore we have been moved to conſider more exactly how your Honours in this Point might deſire any other or further Satiſfaction: And we are obliged to ſay, That this Conſideration is fallen out ſo well, that his Majeſty hath declared unto us, and permitted us to communicate unto you, That if your Honours are not contented with that which he hath offered by his Commiſſioners at Uxbridge unto yours there, that his Majeſty out of Abundancy is contented that a National Synod may be called and aſſembled, and thereunto the Deputies of all other Proteſtant Churches of Europe invited for their Advice: Which Synod ſhall examine all that which concerns the Point of Religion in the ſaid Government of the Engliſh Church, that might be contrary to the Word of God, whether in part or in general; That his Majeſty is contented to correct and redreſs it accordingly. And by that means, as by a common Conſent of all thoſe that make the ſame Profeſſion of Faith and Religion, to put a good end to all theſe preſent Diſtractions.

20 Caroli.

At this time they knew that the Parliament had not admitted of their Interpoſition: They knew that both the Kingdoms were mutually engaged in the Propoſitions and Treaty thereupon; and that neither could admit of their Mediation, without conſent of the other. But they will enforce it upon the Parliament; which if accepted, they knew might give cauſe of Exception to the Kingdom of Scotland; to which Kingdom they never made any Addreſs for their Interpoſition.

The Matter of the Paper carries a ſhew of making themſelves Judges of the Propoſitions treated upon; and inclines the Juſtice and Moderation upon the whole Cauſe to the other ſide, which only they had heard.

Their Propoſitions likewiſe imply, That his Majeſty hath offered that concerning Church-Government, which might in reaſon have given Satisfaction: Although the Government by Biſhops in this Kingdom ſhould have been conſented unto, contrary to the late Solemn and National Covenant which they knew both the Kingdoms had made and entred into: The Correction and Redreſs of which Government in England, is the whole matter for which the National Synod of all the Proteſtant Churches in Europe is by them propoſed. It is to be obſerved, that they propound the Correction and Redreſs of this Government in the Engliſh Church, by that National Synod, as a means, by common Conſent of all thoſe that make the ſame Profeſſion of Faith and Religion, to put a good end to all theſe preſent Diſtractions: When they are not ignorant, that this Government is not to be exerciſed within the Kingdom of Scotland, being wholly taken away by Act of Parliament, whereunto his Majeſty hath given his Royal Aſſent. And that not only that Kingdom, and the Members of both Houſes of Parliament here, but alſo many Thouſands of others his Majeſty's Subjects of England and Ireland, ſtand bound by their late National Covenant to endeavour the Extirpation of the Church Government by Biſhops, intended in that Paper, both in England and Ireland, and to hinder the ſetting of it up again in the Kingdom of Scotland. Neither do they conceive how the continuance of any Epiſcopal Government in this Realm, though moderated, ſhould (in the Ambaſſadors Apprehenſion) cauſe a nearer Union with the Churches of the United Provinces of the Netherlands, or any the Neighbouring Proteſtant Churches; the ſame not being exerciſed in them.

And in reſpect that the Ambaſſadors knew that the Aſſembly of Divines which the Parliament had called, and which is aſſiſted by Pious and Learned Divines from the Church of Scotland, had ſate Twelve Months and upwards, before this Propoſition of theirs was made; and that they might well know that the Aſſembly was to adviſe the Parliament not only in Church-Government, but in framing a Publick Directory to be uſed in the Worſhip of God, in a Confeſſion of Faith, and in a Catechiſm: Theſe to be had and uſed in his Majeſty's Three Kingdoms: And that they had finiſhed ſome of them, and had made a great Progreſs into all the reſt. They cannot conceive why this Propoſition for calling the National Synod by them propoſed, ſhould be made at this time; and that only to conſider of the Redreſs of the preſent Government of the Church of England; whenas the doing thereof in this Juncture of Affairs could not but caſt a Blemiſh upon the Proceedings of the Parliament, for deſiring to adviſe with the Divines, and upon the Piety and Learning of the Reverend Divines of the Aſſembly.

Not long after the making of theſe Propoſitions, the Ambaſſadors again deſired Audience of both Houſes, and were received with the ſame Honours and Reſpects as before. That which they ſpake was alſo delivered by them in writing, as followeth:

'Right Honourable; Two things have moved our Lords and Superiors to 'ſend us their Ambaſſadors Extraordinary into this Kingdom; (viz.) Their 'Duty, and your Service. The firſt conſiſted in their Power, and in the re'ſenting of the preſent Diſtractions: The other being altogether in your 'choice to accept, if you ſhould like of it.

'We have long ago and divers times ſpoken unto your Honours of the 'one and the other; as likewiſe unto the King, who hath honoured ſo much

'our

An. 1645. ‘our State, as to have accepted the Offers of our Interpoſition; but we are ſtill with your Honours upon the ſame Terms we were at the beginning, without any Certitude or Likelihood to be accepted.

‘We have already obtained our Leave from the King, and have left his Majeſty full of Good-will and Diſpoſition for a juſt and reaſonable Accommodation; likewiſe we parted from him well ſatisfied concerning the point of the Evangelick Proteſtant Religion, upon the Offer he hath lately permitted us to make. And as concerning the Royal Rights or Prerogatives, the Liberties and Privileges of this Kingdom, and the Parliament, and of all the Subjects, no doubt when that his Majeſty ſhall be ſatisfied, his Majeſty will alſo ſatisfy every one.

‘But, Sirs, we can ſtay no longer here, unleſs your Honours accept of our Interpoſition, without which we are uſeleſs. And from hence it is, our Lords and Superiors have charged us in ſuch a caſe to take our Leaves, and return to our own home. In performance of which laſt Duty, we are here come before you, aſſuring you we ſhall never ceaſe to wiſh unto this heretofore flouriſhing Kingdom, an Accommodation and Peace, which is and ever will be as profitable as neceſſary.

This Paper was not Subſcribed by Sir Alberte Joachimi: How far he concurred in the other parts of this Negotiation, is better known unto your Lordſhips than unto us.

My Lords, It is here acknowledged that the Mediation had not been accepted, and yet they make themſelves not only Mediators, but Judges, and pronounce Sentence againſt both Kingdoms, as being jointly concerned as well in the Treaty as in the War; neither being heard, nor having made any Addreſs to the Kingdom of Scotland.

The Words of the Paper do infer, That ſuch Acts of Injuſtice have been done unto his Majeſty, as that he may in Juſtice do as he doth, until Satisfaction given; and that the Blame and Injuſtice lies upon the Parliament, in reſpect they have not in the firſt place given this Satisfaction: Whenas they knew that in the Treaty, even with his Majeſty's own Conſent, the Propoſitions concerning Religion, the Militia, and Ireland, were firſt to be concluded.

And truly it ſeems ſtrange to us, how they ſhould ſo well know either the Privileges and Proceedings of the Parliament, which they have ſo much miſtaken in their Letters; or the Liberties of the Subject here; or come to be ſo well aſſured of his Majeſty's Intentions, as to pronounce ſo full a Judgment, That in this caſe his Majeſty will give Satisfaction: Whereas the Parliament, upon the obſervation of his Majeſty's Proceedings hitherto, doth not know how to give his Majeſty Satisfaction, unleſs it be by the renouncing of the Privileges of Parliament, and Liberties of the Subject.

Soon after the Delivery of this Paper to the Houſes, the ſame by the Direction of the Ambaſſadors was publiſhed in Print. And although it were ſpoken in the Houſes, and delivered to them only in the French Language, yet it was Tranſlated and Publiſhed by them only in Engliſh; which had the matter of that Paper concerned the Honour or Intereſt of their Superiors, it would not have ſeemed ſo ſtrange unto us, as it doth in this Caſe, which is only for interpoſing between others; whenas the ſame, for the Reaſon aforeſaid, could not be admitted by the one Kingdom, nor were ſo much as deſired from the other.

This was their Farewell from us: And when the Houſes knew their Intentions of repairing home, they gave Orders that the uſual Honours and Reſpects to Ambaſſadors ſhould be done unto them; which was accordingly performed.

My Lords; The Houſes of Parliament, out of their earneſt deſires to continue a right underſtanding between themſelves and your Lordſhips, have thought themſelves bound to make this true Relation, as that which by the Laws of Friendſhip (in ſuch a Caſe as this is) might juſtly be expected at their hands, from ſo good Friends and Ancient Allies; and that by the right knowledge of their Proceedings upon this Embaſſy, all cauſe or matter of Suſpicion might be taken from your Lordſhips: That the Offers of that State for a Mediation, were never by them conceived unacceptable; there being no other State in the World, to whom they had cauſe to give more Credit in this Caſe, without the leaſt Jealouſy, than unto that: And likewiſe that it might appear unto your Lordſhips, that no Actions of theirs in this Tranſaction (as they conceive) could give any juſt occaſion of laying the leaſt Blemiſh upon the Sincerity of their Endeavours for the obtaining of a good and happy Peace; which is the thing they have always moſt earneſtly deſired, and which they daily pray and labour for.

Concerning which particular they ſhould have thought it needleſs to have ſaid any thing unto your Lordſhips, had not the matter of the Two laſt Audiences from your Ambaſſadors required it: Becauſe we cannot conceive that your Lordſhips ſhould think otherwiſe of the Parliaments of both the Kingdoms, than that they were duely ſenſible of the Calamities of a Civil War; and that they could not but know that the Continuation of it, without any abſolute neceſſity, would moſt redound to the prejudice of the Subject, and ſo of themſelves, in reſpect they were to feel the Smart, and bear the Burthen of it more than others. And that your Lordſhips may know the better how to judge upon thoſe Papers, and upon the whole manner of the preſent Diſtractions and Calamities within this and his Majeſty's other Kingdoms; it may be uſeful to acquaint your Lordſhips at preſent in part with the Cauſe and Manner how they broke forth unto the preſent Diſtemper.

It is well known, that of a long time there hath been a Jeſuited Deſign of Papiſts and other ill-affected perſons to the Religion and Laws of theſe Kingdoms, to undermine, if not wholly to overthrow, the true Reformed Proteſtant Religion, the Laws of the Kingdom, and Liberty of the Subjects; and that the Deſign was far advanced long before this preſent Parliament: And that when former Parliaments endeavoured to apply a Cure, they were always broken. When they ſaw that within the Kingdom of Scotland they were not likely otherwiſe to prevail, they made trial of enforcing it there by open War in the Year 1638.

When they found they were not able for the preſent to carry it on that way, they made a Peace with Scotland, with an intent to get themſelves thereby into a better poſture of War. This Treaty was broken by them, and a Parliament is ſummoned in this Kingdom, to meet in April 1640. and Aid deſired for renewing the War againſt that Kingdom. And when they had cauſe to fear the Parliament would aſſiſt them in that Quarrel, the Parliament is broken, and the War renewed againſt Scotland, contrary to the Treaty. But being worſted, and the Scots Army entred this Kingdom, a Parliament is again ſummoned to meet in November following. The Parliament, though the War was undertaken for the purpoſes, and in the manner as is before expreſſed, yet out of their earneſt deſires of his Majeſty's Happineſs, and of the Peace of his Kingdoms, they took upon themſelves the Payment of both the Armies, and gave their beſt Aſſiſtance to compoſe the Differences: Both which by the Bleſſing of God were accordingly performed.

During the time of this Treaty, and notwithſtanding the Payment of both the Armies by the Parliament, yet under-hand Meſſages were ſent, and means uſed to have engaged both the Armies againſt the Parliament; and for the bringing them from the Northern Parts nearer London for that end. Their Endeavours therein with the Engliſh Army was prevented by a timely Diſcovery; and their Hopes from the Scots Army were fruſtrated by their denial of the great Offers with diſdain, which were made to them for that purpoſe. And when they ſaw that the Brotherly Reſpects from each Kingdom to the other, had begot a Union, and were out of hope that the Parliament of England would ſubmit to the Deſign, and that the Parliament could not be diſſolved, but by its own Conſent, they proſecute the Deſign by open Force in the Kingdom of Ireland, to the deſtruction of the greateſt part of the poor innocent Proteſtants there: And after Countenance given to the Rebels there, they procured his Majeſty to come unto the Houſe of Commons then ſitting, with Armed Men, to take away by Force Five of their Members; whereof failing, in regard that thoſe perſons were not then there, they afterwards declared againſt the Parliament of England by open War.

An. 1645.

War. And when the Kingdom of Scotland appeared with them in the Cauſe, they made uſe of the Iriſh Rebels, and the Papiſts, and Prelatical Party, againſt the Parliaments of both Kingdoms; and likewiſe of divers perſons accuſed in Parliament of high and great Crimes, long before this War.

When both Kingdoms had from hence, and otherwiſe, cauſe to believe that the Plotters and Fomenters of this Deſign could not in likelihood, by any Succeſſes, be removed from their Purpoſes, the Parliaments of both Kingdoms held it neceſſary, That the Subjects of his Majeſty's Three Kingdoms ſhould enter into the National Covenant before-mentioned; wherein the Sincerity of their Intentions is expreſſed.

For which cauſe they have herewithal ſent it unto your Lordſhips; as alſo that your Lordſhips may hereby underſtand, That they are reſolved, by the Aſſiſtance of Almighty God, never to deſert or abandon this Cauſe, out of any Worldly Reſpects whatſoever.

By this ſhort Relation, the conſtant Reſolutions and unwearied Endeavours of the Enemies of both Kingdoms will appear unto your Lordſhips, that when they could not, after much labour and time ſpent, effect their deſires under pretence of Law, that they attempted them above Seven Years ſince by open War; which had almoſt ever ſince been by them continued in ſome of his Majeſty's Dominions, until within theſe Eight Years it hath been brought into and continued in them all. And thence your Lordſhips may have cauſe to conſider, whether the Parliament of both Kingdoms have any other way or means left them for procuring of a Peace, other than the laying down of their Arms, and ſubmitting themſelves upon ſuch Terms as thoſe perſons will yield them: And whether the fomenting and cheriſhing of the Iriſh Rebellion, and the employing of thoſe Rebels, the Papiſts and the perſons accuſed, may be relied on as the means to preſerve the Proteſtant Religion, and Laws of the Kingdom, as is pretended by them. And likewiſe, in caſe they ſhould prevail within theſe Kingdoms, what may be expected by others who deſire to continue the Maintenance of the Proteſtant Religion, and the Laws of their Country, from the Example of the Innocent Proteſtants in Ireland, who had never given the leaſt cauſe of provocation, either by way of Oppoſition, or otherwiſe.

My Lords, The Houſe would not have your Lordſhips think that they have made this ſhort Relation, as that which ſhould fully ſet before you the whole Cauſe and Matter of the Quarrel; which for the clearer Satisfaction of your Lordſhips and of the World, concerning the Juſtneſs of their Cauſe, and the Neceſſity and Manner of their defending it, they refer unto a further time; and likewiſe the Proceedings upon the late Treaty of Peace at Uxbridge: But have done it only as in relation to your Embaſſy, and to the matter of the Two laſt Papers of your Ambaſſadors; whereby the Continuation of the preſent Diſtractions ſeems to be laid at the doors of the Houſes of Parliaments of both Kingdoms.

My Lords; The Parliament doth reſt moſt aſſured, That God in his good time will clear their Integrity in this Cauſe to all the World, as he hath already done in a great meaſure to all who have been Impartial Beholders of their Actions. They have ſent this Declaration out of their deſires that they may likewiſe ſtand right in the Judgment and Opinion of your Lordſhips therein, and in what concerns their Reception of your Embaſſy.

Die Sabbathi 5 Auguſti, 1645.

It is this day ordered by the Commons Aſſembled in Parliament, That the Declaration ſetting forth the Tranſactions between the Parliament and the States Ambaſſadors, be forthwith Printed; and that it be referred to the Committee of both Kingdoms, to take Care of the Printing hereof.

A Second

The Parliament's Second Declaration to the States-General, Sept. 15. 1645.

A Second Declaration of the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, of the whole Proceedings with the late Extraordinary Ambaſſadors from the High and Mighty Lords, the States General of the United Provinces; concerning Reſtitution of Ships, and the Courſe of Trade.

THE Lords and Commons aſſembled in the High Court of Parliament of England, having not long ſince diſpatch'd unto you, Moſt High and Mighty Lords, a Narrative of the Proceedings upon the late Embaſſy from your Lordſhips, in point of Interpoſition between the King and the Parliament, the Supreme Judicature and Repreſentative Body of this Kingdom, are confident that your Lordſhips remain moſt fully poſſeſſed of our real Intentions for a good Accommodation and Reeſtabliſhment of this preſent diſtreſſed and diſtracted Kingdom, in a bleſſed Peace. Nor do theſe deſires of ours bound themſelves here at home; but it is well known (we hope) unto your Lordſhips, with what reality of ſincere Affection we endeavour to maintain all good Correſpondency and Amity with your Lordſhips and the United Provinces, according to Ancient and Modern Treaties and Alliances; as alſo with what readineſs we have always upon all occaſions inclined to adminiſter Juſtice towards you and yours.

Yet leſt any evil-affected perſons, engaged either by private Paſſions and Reſpects, or out of other ſiniſter Intentions or private Intereſts, ſhould labour to ſow the Seed of Diviſion or Miſunderſtanding between us, by reaſon of ſome Obſtructions of late in Trade and Commerce, and according to our Engagement and Promiſe by the former Narration:

We ſhall now make a candid Declaration of our whole Proceedings with your late Ambaſſadors, concerning Reſtitution of Ships, and the Courſe of Trade.

My Lords; We finding that divers in Rebellion in theſe Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland, had poſſeſſed themſelves of divers Maritime Towns and Ports of the ſaid Kingdoms; and that under pretence of Trade and Commerce, great Quantities of Ordnance, Arms, and other Warlike Ammunition, with Victuals, and Contraband Goods of all ſorts and kinds, were frequently carried into thoſe parts, to the ſtrengthning of the ſaid Rebels, and lengthning of their unnatural Rebellion, and this deſtructive Civil War, did by our Publick Edict or Ordinance, bearing date the laſt day of November, 1643. prohibit all Trade and Traffick into certain Ports of theſe Kingdoms, then and yet in Rebellion and Defection to the King and Parliament, under Penalty of Confiſcation.

My Lords; Your Ambaſſadors having in the Month of July, 1644. Audience in both Houſes of Parliament, with their Offers of Mediation, preſented likewiſe a Paper, entituled, Ships, Merchandizes, and other Goods, of which the High and Mighty Lords, the States General of the United Provinces of the Netherlands, demand by their Ambaſſadors the due Reſtitution and Payment of all Damages and Intereſts. And in the beginning of Auguſt ſent to the Speakers of both the Houſe of Parliament, a Second Paper of Demands, entituled, Continuation: Other Ships, Merchandizes, and Goods, whereof the Ambaſſadors of the United Provinces demand Reſtitution, and Payment of Damages. And in the Cloſe of that Second Paper, made a Demand in theſe words following:

That the Parliament would pleaſe to give Letters of Licenſe or Paſſport to Thomas Cave and Edward Man, dwelling at Amſterdam, to withdraw their Merchandize and Goods which were then in the Town of Exeter, bought long ſince by their Order, and for their Account; and that they might lade them in a Ship, and carry them thence. And that the like Licenſe and Liberty be granted to all the Subjects and Inhabitants of the United Provinces (being deſired) for the future.

Upon Receit of theſe Demands, we did with all Reality and Readineſs appoint a ſelect Committee of the Lords and Commons of both Houſes, with full Power and Commiſſion to conſider thereof, and to Treat with your Lordſhips Ambaſſadors touching the Complaints of Damages and Matters aforeſaid. Hereupon ſeveral Conferences were by that Committee had with your Ambaſſadors; and after ſeveral Debates, the Demands concerning Reſtitution of Ships and Damages, were found by their Lordſhips own diſtinction, to be of theſe two ſeveral Natures; either concerning the Publick Intereſt of your State, or the private Intereſt of particular perſons.

Under the firſt Head they reduced only Four Ships: The Utrecht, Captain Kirkhove: The Thomas Bonaventure, Thomas Sharper Maſter: The Paul, Maſter William Smitts: And the Golden Parrot, Maſter Ditliffe Muller.

This Ship Utrecht, as was affirmed by your ſaid Ambaſſadors, was a Frigat belonging to the States-General, and by Order of the Council of the Admiralty of Roterdam, appointed to go Northward for the Guard and Convoy of their Fiſhermen: But the Ships in our Service meeting with her at Sea, upon Examination found on Board her one Colonel Ogle, a Man in Rebellion, and very active againſt the Parliament, and other Paſſengers, with Seventy Barrels of Powder, and Merchandize, to be carried to the Port of Scarborough, then held out by the Rebels againſt the Parliament; and had aboard her divers Letters directed to the Marqueſs of Newcaſtle, Sir Hugh Cholmly, and other perſons in Arms againſt the Parliament. Although this Action in it ſelf was moſt inconſiſtent with the Condition we then were in, and the ſame acknowledged by your Ambaſſadors, and the Laders were impriſoned and puniſhed by your State for that Offence; yet being moſt willing to continue the Ancient Friendſhip and Amity, or rather to oblige both States in a ſtronger Alliance; upon the bare Affirmation of your Ambaſſadors, That the Conveyance of theſe Rebels and Ammunition in that Ship, was a matter covertly tranſacted by the Captain and Company of the Utrecht, without the leaſt knowledge of the State, were moſt ready to give credit thereunto: And thereupon gave Power to that Committee to paſs an Order for her Diſcharge; which was accordingly effected: Which Order was as followeth:

Die Mercurii, 4. Sept. 1644.

Committee of the Lords and Commons appointed to treat with the States Ambaſſadors.

‘WE conceive that no man will deny, that a Ship carrying Powder and other Munition to a Port in Hoſtility to this State, not only the Munition, but the Ship it ſelf is by Law confiſcated: Yet foraſmuch as their Lordſhips have upon their Honours affirmed (which is held in great Eſteem by this Committee), That the Ship Utrecht is a Ship of War immediately belonging to their State: And that the Powder, Merchandize, and Letters found in her, were laden on board that Ship by a falſe and counterfeit Paſs, and without the knowledge of that State; and the Laders thereof have been impriſoned and puniſhed for that Offence: This Committee, in farther Teſtimony of their great deſire to maintain all good Correſpondence with thoſe from whom they are ſent, and the good Amity between this Kingdom and State, are well content the ſaid Ship with her Tackle and Furniture be reſtored.

The next Three Ships in order were, The Thomas Bonaventure, with her Lading of Coals; the Golden Parrot, with her Lading of Coals; and the Paul, with her Lading of Corn: Of which Ships with their Lading, your Ambaſſadors demanded Reſtitution; for they were taken by the Ships in the Service of the Parliament, within the Buoys and Juriſdiction of that State.

The firſt of theſe Ships, the Thomas Bonaventure, upon proof appeared to be a Ship of Newcaſtle, taken by the Ships in our Service as ſhe was coming with her Lading of Coals from Newcaſtle, then in the height of Hoſtility and Rebellion: Theſe Coals, upon proof, appeared to have been laden by Sir John Marley, the then Mayor of Newcaſtle, to be ſold, and the Return to be made him in Powder, Arms, and Ammunition: The Maſter, Thomas Sharper, a known Incendiary, and very active againſt the Parliament; againſt whom we had juſt cauſe to have proceeded upon a Charge of high Miſdemeanors, to have brought him to exemplary condign Puniſhment.

The ſecond of theſe Three, the Golden Parrot, upon proof, was found to have carried from Dunkirk Saddles, Match, and Bandaliers, for Newcaſtle, then in Rebellion; and returning with the Proceed of the ſame in Coals, was taken and condemned for good Prize, and ſold Two Months before this Demand.

The laſt of theſe Ships, the Paul, was taken laden with Corn to be carried to Dublin, ſince the pretended Ceſſation there; and had a Paſs from the Earl of Ormond, one of the chief Rebels of that Kingdom; and therefore was taken and brought in as Prize, though ſince diſcharged.

My Lords; We doubt not but that the bare repeating of the ſeveral Caſes of theſe Three Ships, doth give Satisfaction to your Lordſhips in point of Judgment, That they with their Lading were lawfully taken, and might as juſtly have been detained: And it did at firſt ſeem ſomething ſtrange to us, that your Ambaſſadors ſhould intereſt themſelves in the Ships, Goods, and Perſons of men in Rebellion againſt the Parliament. But becauſe they affirmed that thoſe Three Ships were taken in places within the Buoys of that State, and repreſented the ſame as an Infringement to the Liberties, and Derogation to the Honour of that State; although it appeared by your own written Laws, then produced to your Ambaſſadors, That the taking of thoſe Ships and Goods in thoſe places, did not render them no Prize; but was only a perſonal Offence in the Taker to your State, for which he had received Puniſhment in your State: Yet we being unwilling to allow of any Act that might in the leaſt manner prejudice either the Honour or Intereſt of that State, our Ancient Friends and Allies, and to demonſtrate how careful we were in all things to a good Compliance, not only yielded to Reſtitution of thoſe Three Ships, with Damages, but alſo, out of ſpecial Reſpects unto their Lordſhips, cauſed the ſaid Mr. Tho. Sharper to be releaſed out of Priſon where he lay, and his Perſon delivered up to their Lordſhips for their diſpoſal.

The Reſolutions of the Committee concerning Reſtitutions of theſe Three Ships, delivered on the 30*th* of Auguſt, 1644. to your Ambaſſadors in writing, were in hæc verba:

Die Veneris, 30. Auguſti, 1644.

'WE find that the Ship (Paul) with her Lading is already reſtored un-'to the Owners, by Sentence in the Admiralty Court, and no Da-'mages was demanded.

'As for the Thomas Bonaventure, we are contented to make Reſtitution of 'the Ship with her Lading, with Damages.

'And as to the Golden Faulcon, or Parrot, we find the Ship and her Lading 'diſpoſed of, and ſold, according to the Judgment of the Admiralty Court; 'wherefore we are contented to reſtore the Value of the Ship and Goods, 'with Damages: We expecting to receive the like Satisfaction from that 'State, in caſes of the like nature.

'Reſolved, That the pretended Damage for the Paul, is to be made ap-'pear by Proofs in the Court of Admiralty, to be tranſmitted to this Com-'mittee, and here adjudged.

But your Ambaſſadors, not willing to receive Contentment by this ſo clear Anſwer, held the Committee in diſpute many Weeks, to the great Obſtruction of the more publick Affairs of this Kingdom, preſſed for a farther Anſwer; which the Committee among other things delivered them, Sept. 23. 1644.

'The Committee doth now further add concerning the ſaid Ship the Paul, 'That it is already agreed, the 30*th* of Auguſt, 1644. upon Debate then 'had between the ſaid Lords Ambaſſadors, and the ſaid Committee, That 'the Damage for the Ship, the Paul, is to be made appear by Proofs in the 'Court of Admiralty, to be tranſmitted to this Committee, and here ad-'judged; which this Committee doth now de Novo aſſent unto, that it ſhall 'be performed. And for the ſaid Ship the Golden Faulcon, alias the Parrot, 'and her Lading, which are already ſold away and gone, they are, as for-

An. 1645.

‘merly they were, contented to reſtore the Value of the ſaid Ship and Goods, with Damages; the Value and Damages to be made appear by Proofs to be made and taken in the ſaid Court of Admiralty, to be tranſmitted to this Committee, and here adjudged. And they further add, That the Damages, if any be, which muſt be ſatisfied for the Goods in the Tho. Bonaventure, muſt likewiſe be made appear by Proofs made and taken in the ſaid Court of Admiralty, and tranſmitted to this Committee, and here adjudged.’

Notwithſtanding theſe ſeveral Anſwers inviting your Ambaſſadors to enable us to do them Juſtice, yet to this day there hath not been any Proofs made of the Value and Damages pretended in any the Ships aforeſaid, whereby we might make Satisfaction accordingly.

My Lords; By what is here faithfully ſet down to have been tranſacted touching the Reſtitution of thoſe Ships ſuggeſted to be belonging to that your State; your Lordſhips upon conſideration of all the Circumſtances, may clearly ſee how extraordinary our Compliance hath been therein, and truly ſuch wherewith we hoped to have greatly merited of your Lordſhips, and have given full contentment and ſatisfaction to the deſires of your Ambaſſadors: But contrary to our expectation, they (as though they intended nothing more than to beget Diſputes and Differences) preſented certain Notes or Papers of Damages delivered unto them by the intereſſed Complainants; and inſiſt, That Damages muſt be liquidated, and Satisfaction given, according to the Demands in thoſe Papers, and that without further Proof or Diſpute.

Theſe Papers our Committee, according to their former Reſolutions, deſire to refer to the High Court of Admiralty of this Kingdom, there to receive a Legal Proof, that all Parties intereſſed might be heard to the ſame. This, though moſt reaſonable and conſonant to the Rules of Juſtice, and Practice of all Countries, was by them utterly refuſed and denied, and thereupon Proteſtations made by them againſt us.

My Lords; Having in ſeveral Meetings ſpent many Weeks for the tranſacting the buſineſs concerning the Four former Ships, ſuggeſted to belong to that your State; we proceeded to the Conſideration of thoſe Ships and Goods that concerned the private Intereſt of particular men: Where in the firſt place your Ambaſſadors demanded Reſtitution of the Tyger of Roterdam, with her Lading, affirming her to belong to one Martin de Reuz, and Partners, all Natural-born Dutchmen; and offered to produce ſome Writings firmed in Holland, to prove the ſame: Whereupon that Committee intending nothing more than to give all manner of Satisfaction, did cauſe the Officers of the Admiralty-Court of this Kingdom to attend them at their next Meeting; who in their Lordſhips preſence produced the Record of the Proceeding in that Cauſe; by which it did evidently appear, That by the Judicial Proceedings of that Court, all Favour had been ſhewed unto thoſe of your Subjects who made the leaſt colourable pretence to the Ship, or for any of the Goods belonging to your State: And the Remainder, by pregnant Proof of Witneſſes upon Oath, were condemned as belonging to Ford and others, Subjects of this Kingdom, men very active againſt the Parliament. But their Lordſhips not willing to receive Satisfaction therein, did with ſome Paſſion inveigh againſt the Proceedings of that Court, and preſſed ſomewhat affectionately for a further Anſwer in writing; which at their next Meeting, viz. 18. Sept. 1644. was accordingly delivered in hæc verba:

An Anſwer to the Demand of the Lords Ambaſſadors from the High and Mighty Lords, the States-General of the United Provinces of the Netherlands, of Reſtitution of the Ship the Tyger of Roterdam, with her Goods and Lading.

‘FIrſt, That this is the Fifth particular Ship and Goods, upon which the Treaty hath been between their Lordſhips and the Committee of Lords and Commons; and that all the Four former Ships and their Ladings, by the Conſent of the ſaid Committee, out of the deſire of the ſaid Committee to comply with the ſaid Lords Ambaſſadors, eſpecially for that

‘ all the ſaid Four were wholly of Publick Intereſt, have been and are to be reſtored, according to their deſire; and that they ſhall be as forward to agree to the reſtoring of the Tyger and all her Lading, although this be of private Intereſt, as their Lordſhips deſire is, when they ſhall find juſt Cauſe.

‘ Secondly, That the ſaid Ship, and ſo much of the Goods as the Maſter of her, Cornelius Leinderſon Valk, would take his Oath were his, and ſo much of the Goods as were claimed by him, and ſworn by him to be the Goods of any Hollander, were ordered to be reſtored in the Court of Admiralty, without any further Proof, and without naming any Hollander, whoſe the ſaid Goods were.

‘ Thirdly, that all the Remainder of the Goods were proved in the Court of Admiralty to be the Goods of Mr. Yard, Mr. Ford, Mr. Baynam, Engliſhmen: Firſt, By the Depoſition upon Oath of the ſaid Cornelius Leinderſon Valk, taken firſt by the Lord High Admiral of England, and afterwards by the Judge of the Court of Admiralty. Secondly, By the acknowledgment of the ſaid Mr. Cornelius Leinderſon Valk, after his ſaid Examinations upon Oath, to John Iſaac, Servant to the ſaid Mr. Ford, That the ſaid Goods were laden for them at Roterdam, conſigned to them at Dartmouth: To which Acknowledgment the ſaid John Iſaac hath depoſed upon Oath in the ſaid Court.

‘ Thirdly, By divers other concurring Evidences depoſed of in the ſaid Court by the ſaid John Iſaac, to be by him written and ſent to Roterdam, to Richard Ford, Brother of the ſaid Mr. Ford; and by a Letter ſent from the ſaid Baynam to the Earl of Newcaſtle.

‘ Fourthly, Whereas the Lords Ambaſſadors object, That the ſaid Proceedings in the Admiralty were Illegal, becauſe no Citation proceeded, no Adverſe Party was firſt called: We anſwer, A Citation, per Edictum, to call all Parties whatſoever, intereſſed in the ſaid Ship and Goods, was ſet up publickly upon the Exchange, the 21*ſt* day of May, 1644. the Place for their Appearance named in the ſaid Citation; the ſaid Citation was there returned, and accordingly all ſuch Parties publickly called; and no body appearing to make Claim to any of the ſaid Goods, they were all condemned the Fourth of June following, and not before; ſo as Fourteen days were between the Citation and Sentence; and this hath been the uſual Courſe of Proceedings in that Court in ſuch Caſes, and is as we conceive moſt Legal, and the uſual Courſe of all Courts of the Admiralty of Holland, or elſewhere in the Chriſtian World.

‘ Fifthly, Whereas their Lordſhips have offered to ſhew ſome Papers, (viz.) Invoices, Bills of Lading, Polices of Aſſurance, and ſome Acts of Court, and Entries of the Cuſtom-houſe, and other Proceedings at Roterdam, or elſewhere in Holland, whereby it may appear (as their Lordſhips ſay), That all the ſaid Goods belong to Martin de Reuz, and Company, all Hollanders: The ſaid Committee ſtill deſiring to ſhew their extraordinary Forwardneſs to all good Compliance with their Lordſhips, notwithſtanding the ſaid Goods are already upon ſufficient Proof legally adjudged, are contented the matter to be re-examined in the ſaid Court of Admiralty, between the ſaid de Reuz and Company of the one Party, and the Takers on the other Party; and all the ſaid Papers there exhibited in the preſence of the Takers of the ſaid Ship, who are to have Power to object againſt them if they can; and that ſuch further Proofs be there made, and Examinations taken, as either Party may legally deſire: And after all this done, all to be tranſmitted to the ſaid Committee, by them to be debated and adjudged according to Right.

‘ Sixthly, Whereas their Lordſhips did at their laſt Meeting with the ſaid Committee make Expreſſions, that they expected that the ſaid Papers ſhould be accepted of for full Proof, without further Examination of the Buſineſs here; and thereupon did offer to proteſt againſt the Proceedings of the ſaid Committee, if they ſhould not preſently agree to the Reſtitution of the ſaid Goods: The ſaid Committee doth hold theſe Demands to be moſt unreaſonable, and no ways to be yielded unto; and do not doubt but their Proceedings will be juſtifiable to all Perſons whatſoever, againſt all ſuch Proteſtations.

An. 1645.

My Lords; We ſhall now appeal to your Lordſhips Judgments, with what Tenderneſs and Favour in relation to your State, that Court proceeded upon the Ship, and ſuch of the Goods as were claimed under the leaſt pretence of belonging to any of yours; and what unanſwerable Proof they had for Condemnation of the Remainder (with what Confidence claimed by your Ambaſſadors): Yet to give further manifeſtation of all poſſible Compliance upon your Ambaſſadors preſſing Importunities, and the Petition of Martin de Reuz and Company, claiming Property in the ſame, we were contented to let them have the ſaid Goods at Fifteen hundred Pounds under their true Value; upon this aſſurance, That they would proſecute their Claim in the Admiralty-Court, and make their Title and Propriety there appear: Which hath not hitherto been effected, nor hear we any further of their Proceedings in this Caſe; ſo that this State are ſo much clear Loſers by that buſineſs.

From this Ship your Ambaſſadors would have proceeded to the reſt: But our Committee taking notice of the great Expence of Time in the Debate of the Tyger and her Lading, and computing by that Rule how many Months would be neceſſarily ſpent in the reſt, repreſented the ſame unto both Houſes of Parliament. At this time, my Lords, we were engaged in very weighty Affairs, not only concerning the very Being of theſe Kingdoms, but alſo the flouriſhing of the Evangelick Proteſtant Religion both in this Kingdom and other Foreign States, (wherein your Lordſhips and the State had not the leaſt Intereſt), and upon theſe weighty occaſions requiring the continual Attendance of all our Members, thought it not reaſonable to lay aſide theſe our great Affairs (which we might have done) to have taken up the others into particular Examination. And while this matter was under Conſideration, your Ambaſſadors, by a Paper dated the 12*th* of December, ſent unto both Houſes Complaint, They could not hitherto obtain Juſtice: The contrary whereof, by what hath been hereby repreſented, we hope your Lordſhips are fully aſſured.

We therefore, on the former ſenſe of our Affairs, and ſeeing there was ſo natural and ſpeedy a way for the receiving of Juſtice in the Admiralty-Court, where the Demands had received ſome Proceedings, returned them our Anſwer; That we held it fit that the Parties Complainants ſhould have free liberty to proſecute their Intereſts in the High Court of Admiralty in this Kingdom, for ſuch as had not been before that time ſentenced; or by way of Appeal for ſuch as had been adjudged there. In which Courts we ſhould have taken Care for Right to be done them with all Expedition. The Parliament ſtill reſerving and engaging themſelves by Promiſe to ſupply any Defects of Juſtice in any the ſaid Courts, upon further Treaty thereon with your Ambaſſador; the Equity of which Courſe and Form of Proceedings, we ſhall not need here to inſiſt on, it being obſerved by your Lordſhips, and all other States and Republicks in Europe.

And as we thus endeavoured by all means both juſt and honourable, the removing of Obſtruction, and clearing all Miſunderſtandings for the time paſt, ſo no leſs careful were we for the maintenance of Amity and a good Correſpondence for the time to come: And thereupon taking into Conſideration your Ambaſſadors deſires of free Licenſe to the Merchants of your State, for the withdrawing of their Goods from the parts and places under the Power of the Enemy in Rebellion againſt the Parliament, did by a Publick Declaration, dated the 30*th* of Auguſt, 1644. provide, 'That notwithſtanding our former Ordinance, it ſhould and might be lawful to and for 'any Foreigner or Stranger, Subject to any Prince or State in Amity with 'his Majeſty, with ſuch and ſo many Ships or other Veſſels as ſhould be needful to ſail or go unto the Ports or Harbours of Exeter, Briſtol, Falmouth, 'Topſham, or any other Port or Place in this Kingdom of England, in Defection from the King and Parliament; and from thence by all lawful 'means and ways to withdraw, tranſport, and carry away their Goods and 'Eſtates. Which advantage notwithſtanding, at the ſame time by that Declaration we denied to the beſt-affected Subjects of this Kingdom.

My Lords, This Declaration was printed and ſent unto their Lordſhips; who not contented with that freedom, though granted upon (and full unto) their own Demands, make new Deſires, as from your Lordſhips, for an abſolute Free Trade and Commerce. We ſtill perſiſting in our conſtant Reſolutions in all things to correſpond, reſumed the matter into Conſideration: But in regard of the Weight and great Conſequence thereof, have not yet given any Reſolutions or Concluſions; which we hope in ſome ſhort time ſo to do, as may give Satisfaction to your Lordſhips and all the World.

My Lords; Since the Concluſion of the whole former Negotiation, your Lordſhips Ambaſſador in Ordinary, Sir Albertus Joachimi, at an Audience in both Houſes of Parliament, on the 2d of May laſt, did by expreſs Order from your Lordſhips, as he affirmed, repreſent unto us your good Affections to the Proſperity of this Kingdom; whereof, as we have ever been fully aſſured, ſo we ſhall never ceaſe to ſet a very high Eſteem both on your ſelves and it. At that time he likewiſe acknowledged, That true it was, ſome Ships formerly demanded by the late Extraordinary Embaſſy, were diſcharged, but not reſtored in the State they were when they were taken; and upon the whole deſired, That the Ships and Goods taken, and yet detained, might be reſtored; and all intereſſed by reaſon of the ſaid taking and detaining, might be indemnized of all Expences, Damages, and Intereſts, which they have ſuffered and ſhall ſuffer.

This we having taken into our ſerious Conſideration, and upon peruſal fear that our Proceedings have not been truly repreſented to your Lordſhips by your Extraordinary Ambaſſadors; but hope that upon your Lordſhips View of the aforegoing Paſſages, you will be moſt abundantly ſatisfied, That nothing hath at any time been wanting on our parts fairly to anſwer theſe Demands in all the Particulars; but the fault muſt wholly reſt on the Complainants, in being wanting to themſelves, when means and ways of Redreſs were and ſtill are offered; with this our further Proteſtation, That if we knew any ſuch Expedient for their Relief and Diſpatch, we ſhould moſt readily condeſcend thereunto.

My Lords; In Sum, The Utrecht, though bound with Ammunition to an Enemy's Port, is reſtored: The Thomas Bonaventure, though belonging to perſons in Rebellion; The Golden Parrot, though having furniſhed the Enemies with Arms; The Paul, though going with Corn for their Aſſiſtance, are all aſſented to be reſtored, or the Value of them, with Damages legally proved: The Maſter of the Thomas Bonaventure releaſed: The Goods of the Tyger delivered to the Claimers, though Fifteen hundred Pounds loſs accrue thereby to this State, and themſelves never ſo much as endeavoured to make good their Claim to this day: All other Demands put into a Legal way for a Relief in a Court of Juſtice, would your Ambaſſadors have acknowledged the Courts of Juſtice under the Power of the Parliament, which they from time to time refuſed, though to the prejudice of their own Claims, and Parties intereſſed. But, my Lords, we muſt tell you, That the men who have traded in the Enemies Ports, have added Fuel to our Inteſtine Fire; and ſhould your Lordſhips by your Wiſdom prevent them for the future, it may with God's Bleſſing be a means much conducing to the Re-eſtabliſhment of Peace amongſt us.

My Lords; Having thus cleared all things that concerned your Lordſhips or your State, in the point of Reſtitution of Ships and Goods, and of Free Trade; It is moſt reaſonable for us to reflect upon our ſelves, and the well-affected Merchants of Great Britain and Ireland, adhering to the Parliament; who all this while, and long before, have and ſtill continue languiſhing, by Damages and Wrongs done them by the Subjects of your State. The Claims of this nature our Committee did receive from the Parties Complainants, (Copies whereof are hereunto annexed), and by our Order delivered the ſame to their Lordſhips the Extraordinary Ambaſſadors; who returned this Anſwer, That they had no Power to treat upon the ſame, but would repreſent to your Lordſhips their Maſters and Superiors.

My Lords; We ſhall not inform you to how vaſt a Sum theſe our Claims amount; they will ſufficiently ſpeak for themſelves: We ſhall only ſay this, That as in all Cauſes concerning your State, we have taken ſpecial Care for Juſtice to be impartially adminiſtred with Diſpatch; ſo we deſire (yea, we are confident) that your Lordſhips will take the ſaid Complaints of Wrongs done unto the Subjects of theſe Kingdoms by yours, into your ſerious and ſpeedy Conſideration, and adminiſter them equal Juſtice and Proceedings to the World: So will it more and more oblige this our Nation to continue and perpetuate the moſt neceſſary and indiſſolvable Bond of Union and Amity between us.

An Abſtract of the particular Complaints from divers of the Engliſh Nation, Subjects of this Kingdom, of the Injuries, Wrongs, and Damages, done unto them by the Subjects of the United Provinces: Which Complaints have been, according to ſeveral Orders of the Houſes of Parliament, preſented to the Committee of Lords and Commons of Parliament, appointed to treat with the States Ambaſſadors, touching detaining of Ships and Goods: For all which Wrongs and Damages, it is demanded in the Names of the Lords and Commons of the Parliament of England, That due Reſtitution and Satisfaction be made, according to the ſeveral Petitions.

‘William Courteen, Eſq; That his Ship the Bona Eſperance of London, being laden with the ſaid Courteen's Goods, and with certain other Goods and Moneys of the Portugals, (with whom the ſaid States had proclaimed Peace in India with Drum and Trumpet, according to the Agreement made long before between the King of Portugal, and the ſaid States here in Europe) was upon the 26*th* of June 1643. ſailing upon her Voyage from Goa to China, in the Streights of Malaca, aſſaulted by Two Ships belonging to the Dutch Eaſt-India Company; and after a bloody Fight, and divers of the Company of the ſaid Bona Eſperance ſlain, ſhe and all her ſaid Lading and Goods was ſeized upon by the ſaid Aſſaulters to their own uſe, and the Men in her moſt inhumanely uſed: Which Ship might elſe have returned into England, and might have been worth to the Petitioner at leaſt 60000 l.

‘Robert Moulton of Redriff,   Clench of Ipſwich,   Goſnal of Ipſwich,   Chaplayn of Ipſwich, and ſome others, all Owners of the ſaid Ship the Bona Eſperance, make the ſame Complaint for the loſs of their Ship, the Value of the Ship Five Thouſand Pounds, and for the Loſs of their Fraight, which comes to 5000 l. more.

‘William Pennoyer, and Richard Hill, both of London, Merchants; That according to an Agreement made by them with the Committee of Lords and Commons in Parliament, for the Safety of the Kingdom, the 27*th* of December 1642. they bought for the Service of the Parliament in the Territory of Liege, a Parcel of Arms, which they brought down in the Veſſels into the Port of Dunkirk, in July 1643. from thence to be tranſported into England; but the then Admiral of the States Fleet, Minhier d' Wit, then riding before Dunkirk, being informed of the Premiſes, refuſed to let them paſs, but threatned to take or ſink them, if they offered; notwithſtanding Letters delivered to him from the Lord Admiral of England, to the ſaid Admiral of the States Fleet, to procure their free Paſſage, avowing the Arms to be for the uſe of the Parliament. After this the Lord Admiral of England writ other Letters to the ſame purpoſe to Sir Haperſon Trumpe, then Admiral of the States Fleet lying before Dunkirk, to procure the free Paſſage of the ſaid Arms, but could by no means effect it; but quite contrary to the deſire of the ſaid Lord Admiral of England, the ſaid Arms then laden in Two Free Engliſh Bottoms, and bound for London, were taken by the ſaid Sir Haperſon Trumpe, about the 16*th* of May laſt, and ſent into Zealand, and there detained, notwithſtanding the Houſe of Commons by their Letters, and Agent, and the Committee of Parliament of both Kingdoms, declared to the States-General, and to the States of Zealand, that the ſaid Arms were bought as aforeſaid for the Service of this Kingdom. The Value of the Arms 8000 l. The Charges occaſioned by the Stay of them 1500 l. The Intereſt-Money 700 l.

'Captain Whetſtone: That about February laſt, 1643. he having taken at Sea (viz.) within the Buoys near the Brill, but out of Command of any Ship or Fort of the States, a Scarborough Ship, called the Margery, Maſter William Cooper; which Ship ſailed from Scarborough, bound for Roterdam, laden with Lead, Cloth, Sheep-skins, and ſome Money: After they had taken he, Two Holland Men of War, ordered by the Ducch Admiral Van Trumpe ſo to do, took the Prize-Ship from Captain Whetſtone, carried his Ship the Cygnet into the Brill-Peer, and there took his Sails from the Yard, and carried away the Rudder: After Two Months Trouble and Attendance, the Cygnet was diſcharged without any Satisfaction at all for the Prize; the Value whereof was 6000 l.

'Captain Zachery: That about the beginning of March laſt, 1643. he riding with his Ship at the Fly in Holland, and having before taken Two Engliſh Prizes, (viz.) one whoſe Captain was Hickſon, which came from Scarborough, and was bound for Amſterdam, laden with Cloth, Lead, Wools, and ſome Moneys, all to the Value of 7000 l.; the other a Ketch laden with Ammunition, bound for Scarborough, from which Port ſhe firſt came, to the Value of 50 l. was ſurprized by Three States Men of War, Captain John Vanger being Commander of them all; who ſhot Forty Pieces of Ordnance at him, and commanded him aboard their Ships, and took his Sails from his Yards, and carried them aſhore to the Fly, and carried him to Amſterdam, and there kept him cloſe Priſoner Eleven Weeks, without Reſtitution of the ſaid Prizes, or any part of them.

'The Town of Yarmouth: That the 2*d* of July laſt, 1644. Three States Men of War gave Chaſe to one Peter Carline, Captain of a Dunkirker, and drove the ſaid Frigat into the Haven of Yarmouth, and followed them into the ſaid Haven, and there made ſeveral Shots at the ſaid Frigat, and killed Two of her men, and wounded more; and divers of the Shot coming on Shore, killed one of the Townſmen of Yarmouth, and like to have ſpoiled many more; and after this boarded the ſaid Veſſel in the ſaid Haven, and carried her with her Commander and all his Company into the Road of Yarmouth; where ſhe was afterwards reſcued by one of the Parliaments Ships, being at that time in the ſaid Road, with ſome Help from the ſaid Town.

'Ann Powlet, Widow of Robert Powlet, Gentleman: That in Jan. 1644. the ſaid Robert Powlet and his Partners were Pyratically robb'd of a Ship called the Dove of Minhead, and alſo of a Portugal Prize, with Store of Rich Goods, by one Captain Cornelius Skint, in a Ship called the Peter of Roterdam, and carried thither, and there diſpoſed. And notwithſtanding the ſaid Robert Powlet uſed his beſt Endeavours both by Legal Proceedings, and by Interceſſion of Agents of this State, in his Majeſty's Name and otherwiſe, yet no Reſtitution and Satisfaction can be obtained.

'Roger North, Eſq; That one Henry Jacobſon dying in Fluſhing, and being indebted to him the ſaid North, he commenced a Suit againſt the Widow of the ſaid Jacobſon, before the Magiſtrates of Fluſhing, and there appeared due to him 210 l. 15 s. and 7 d. which Sum was brought in before the ſaid Magiſtrates; but before the ſaid North could obtain the ſaid Money, the Bayliff of the Prince of Orange arreſted the ſame, and keepeth the ſame from the ſaid North, upon this only pretence, That the ſaid Henry Jacobſon dying Inteſtate, the ſaid Money belonged to the ſaid Prince; and ſo it was by the ſaid Magiſtrates ſentenced.

'The Merchants of Dover: That in September 1644. a Bark called the Fortune of Dover, Lawrence Brown Maſter, having taken in her full Lading of Piece Goods at Oſtend, to be delivered at Dover, the ſaid Ship and Goods coming from Oſtend with the ſafe Conduct of a Convoy-Ship of this State, was notwithſtanding ſurprized at Sea by a Ship of the States of Holland, whereof Adrian Galrice was Commander, and carried to Roterdam, where the ſaid Ship, Goods, and her Mariners remain without Reſtitution; although the Lord High Admiral of England, making Complaint thereof to your Lordſhips, received Anſwer, That you would write effectually to the States of Holland, that Satisfaction might be given to content: Yet are the Mariners there impriſoned, and threatned to continue ſo; unleſs they will affirm the Ship and Goods to belong to Flemings; and promiſed Reward if they will ſo affirm. The Value of the Ship and Goods is 15000 l. and Damages 2000 l.

‘John Marſton, of London, Merchant: That upon the 26*th* of September, 1639. there was riding at Anchor in the Road of Margaret, within Muſquet-ſhot of the Fort there, Two Engliſh Ketches, Maſters Roger Joyner and   Sturgeon, both freighted by order of the ſaid Marſton, with Staniards; and about Twelve a-Clock of the ſame day, there came into the ſame Road a Frigat or Ship of War, belonging to the States, Captain Peter Johnſon of Roterdam, having the King of England's Enſign on the Poop, the Union-Flag on the Boldſprit-end, and a Pendant on the Main-maſt-end; and being within Piſtol-ſhot of the ſaid Ketches, did then and there diſcharge Two Muſquets, and forthwith boarded them; and having entred his Men, weighed their Anchors, and did violently carry the ſaid Ketches and Soldiers aboard his own Ship, and that Night ſet ſail for Zealand. The Damage ſuſtained thereby by the ſaid Marſton, is valued at 1600 l.

‘James Gibbons Merchant-Adventurer: That in November 1637. there came conſigned unto him from London to Roterdam, in the Elizabeth of London, William Adkinſon Maſter, one Pack containing 17 Engliſh Coloured Cloths; which being arrived, were truly entred in the Cuſtom-houſe: And there was in the Ship another Pack directed to one Robert Velthuſen, a Merchant of Roterdam; who having ſecretly unladen the ſame by Night out of the ſaid Ship, to defraud the State of their Due, the Ship-Maſter was thereupon accuſed by the Advocate-Fiſcal in the Court of Admiralty, and by Sentence of Court condemned in the Forfeiture thereunto belonging: After which the ſaid Council did take the ſaid Gibbons's Pack out of the ſaid Ship inſtead of the ſaid Velthuſen's, and cauſed the ſame to be ſold with great Loſs, without hearing the ſaid Gibbons; nor could the ſaid Gibbons ever ſince procure Reſtitution of the ſame.

‘John Wood of London, Merchant: That he having this laſt Year ſet out for the Coaſt of Guinny the Ship Star; The   Merchant of the ſaid Ship in proſecution of the Voyage went to the Port of Cormantine on the Gold Coaſt in Guinny, where he found the Dutch had combined with the Natives of the Country to have clean expelled the Engliſh from their own Factory: Which had been effected, to the very great damage of the ſaid Wood and the whole Guinny-Company, had not that Ship arrived that very day at that Port. And afterwards the ſaid Ship coming to the Iſland of St. Thome, to recover again Debts due to the ſaid Wood, wherewith the Ship was to be re-laden; the Governor of the Iſland for the States-General commanded the Portugals Debtors not to pay any of their Debts unto the Engliſh, although they were both able and willing thereunto; whereby the ſaid Ship returned home dead Freight.

Beſides all theſe, we have received from the Eaſt-India Company of London, and the Muſcovy Merchants of London, by their ſeveral Petitions, Complaints of divers great Wrongs and Damages of great value done to them by the Dutch, Subjects to the ſaid States of the United Provinces; which we do not here ſet down, becauſe they are of a longer Date, and are or have been depending under Debate before Perſons thereunto particularly authorized and appointed; and we expect that in due time Right will be done.

21 Caroli.

The Aſſembly of Divines in the beginning of this Year had addreſs'd to the Parliament, That Perſons Ignorant and Scandalous might be ſuſpended from the Sacrament, and might be excommunicated: Which occaſion'd great and long Debates in the Houſe of Commons about the ſame: And amongſt the reſt, the Learned Mr. Selden delivered his Opinion ſomewhat to this Effect:

Mr. Selden's Speech touching Excom. and Suſpenſion from the Sacrament.

THat for 4000 Years there was no ſign of any Law to ſuſpend Perſons from Religious Exerciſes: For under the Law every Sinner was eo Nomine to come to offer as he was a Sinner: And no Prieſt or other Authority had to do with him, unleſs it might be made appear to them, whether another did repent or not; which was hard to be done. Strangers indeed were kept away from the Paſſover; but they were Pagans, and ſuch as were not of the Jewiſh Religion: The Queſtion is not now for keeping away Pagans in times of Chriſtianity, but Proteſtants from Proteſtant Worſhip. No Divine can ſhew that there is any ſuch Command as this to ſuſpend from the Sacrament. If after Chriſt ſuffered, the Jews had become Chriſtians, the ſame ground upon which they went as to their Sacrifices, would have been as to the Sacrament; and certainly no way nor Command to keep any one from partaking of it. No man is kept from the Sacrament, eo Nomine, becauſe he is guilty of any Sin, by the Conſtitution of the Reformed Churches, or becauſe he hath not made Satisfaction: Every man is a Sinner; the difference is only, the one is in private, and the other a Sinner in publick; but the one is as much againſt God as the other. Dic Eccleſiæ in St. Matthew, was the Courts of Law which then ſat in Jeruſalem. No man can ſhew any Excommunication, till the Popes, Victor and Zephorius, (200 Years after Chriſt) firſt began to uſe it upon private Quarrels: Thereby it appears Excommunication is but Human Invention; it was taken from the Heathen.

And Mr. Whitlock made the following Speech:

Mr. Whitlock's Speech on the ſame Subject.

Mr. Speaker,

THE Aſſembly of Divines have petitioned and adviſed this Houſe, That in every Presbytery or Presbyterian Congregation, the Paſtors and Ruling Elders may have the Power of Excommunication, and of ſuſpending ſuch as they ſhall judge Ignorant or Scandalous Perſons from the Sacrament. By Paſtors, I ſuppoſe they mean themſelves and others, who are or may be Preachers in the ſeveral Congregations, and would be Επίσκοποι, Biſhops or Overſeers of theſe Congregations. By Ruling Elders, I take their meaning to be a ſelect Number of ſuch as in every one of thoſe Congregations ſhall be choſen for the Execution of the Church-Government and Diſcipline therein reſpectively. They may properly enough be called Paſtors, from our Saviour's Charge to his Diſciples, Paſce Oves meas, Feed my Sheep; ſo that a Paſtor is to feed thoſe committed to his Charge with Spiritual Food, as the Shepherd feeds his Flock with Temporal: But if ſo, how improper then will it be, for thoſe who are to feed the Flock, to deſire the Power to excommunicate any, to keep them from Food; to ſuſpend any from the Sacrament; to drive them from feeding on the Bread of Life; to forbid any to eat of That, whereof Chriſt the great Shepherd of our Souls hath ſaid Take, Eat, &c. or to prohibit whomſoever they ſhall judge unworthy, when our Saviour himſelf ſaid, Drink ye all of this. And St. Mark, Chap. 14. ſaith, They all drank of the Cup; though Judas was one of them?

In the Old Teſtament; Ho every one that thirſteth, come ye to the waters; and he that hath no money, come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy milk and wine, without money, and without price; ſaith the Prophet Iſaiah: Yet now his Succeſſors would be authorized to ſay to ſome perſons, You do not thirſt, tho themſelves ſay they do; and do deny them Milk and Water, Bread and Wine, when they ſeek and requeſt it; ſurely therefore it is not proper for Paſtors, for Feeders of Flocks, to deny Food to any of their Flock who ſhall deſire it. But ſome have ſaid, That it is the part of a good Shepherd, if he ſee one of his Sheep going aſtray into a Ground where the Graſs will bring the Rot, to chaſe him out of that Paſture: And they apply it to Spiritual Paſtors ſuſpending thoſe

An. 1645. from the Sacrament whom they fear by the unworthy receiving of it, may eat and drink their own Damnation: This may be a charitable Simile, but will hardly be found a full Anſwer: For it is not the receiving of the Sacrament, but the Unworthineſs of the Receiver, that brings deſtruction; and whether he be unworthy or not, is not in the judgment of Paſtor, or any other, but of the Party only who is the Sinner; for no man can know his heart but himſelf; and a Commiſſion will ſcarce be produced, for any other man to be Judge thereof. The Perſon refuſed, may ſay to the Paſtor in this Caſe, Quis conſtituit te Judicem? Beſides, the Authority deſired is not only of Suſpenſion, but of Excommunication, which is a total driving or thundring away of the Party from all Spiritual Food whatſoever. And if a Shepherd ſhall chaſe away his Sheep from all Paſtures, that indeed will bring the Hunger-Rot upon them. Undoubtedly the more ignorant and ſinful Perſons are, the more they have need of Inſtruction; and where can they have it better, than from the Lips of the Learned and Pious Paſtors, which ought to preſerve Knowledge. But it hath been ſaid, That the Ruling Elders are to join with them: Let us enquire who they are: In ſome Congregations in Country Villages, perhaps they may not be very learned themſelves, yet the Authority to be given them is ſufficiently great. The word Elders amongſt the Hebrews ſignified the men of greateſt Power and Dignity. The Members of their great Sanhedrim were ſtiled Elders; ſo were the Princes of their Tribes. The Grecians had the Appellation in like eſteem; Πρεσβύτεροι, which we tranſlate Elders, was given to their greateſt men; and from thence is fetch'd the Name of Presbyters, or Prieſts; Presbytery, and Presbyterian Governement. The Phœnicians, Tyrians, and other particular Nations, uſed the word Elder in the like ſenſe, and ſtiled their Generals and Princes by the Name of Elders. The Romans did the like; their Senate and Senators, came all from Senes, Elders: And from them to this day the French, Spaniards, and Italians, retain the Titles of Seigneur, Seigniori, Seniori, and the like, for their greateſt men. And in England, we give the Name of Earls to our great Lords, from Elder; and to the King himſelf the Title of Sir, abſtracted from Seigneur, an Elder. In Towns they ſtill keep the Title of Aldermen, that is, Eldermen, for the Chief and Rulers of the Corporation: And ſo they may allow the Title of Elders to the chief and ſelect men of every Presbytery: Yet if this Power of Excommunication and Suſpenſion be allowed them, they may well challenge the Title of Elders in the higheſt ſignification. The Power of the Keys is a great Power; the Romiſh Church will acknowledge it, and the Foundation of their Supremacy to be built upon it: Whatſoever they bind or looſe on Earth, to be bound or looſed in Heaven, is a Power that may claim the higheſt Title imaginable.

And though I can never preſume that the Reverend and Pious Learned Gentlemen who aim at this Power, can have the leaſt ſuppoſition of any ſuch effect by it; yet if any Petitioners ſhould ſue to you to be made Judges or Juſtices, I believe you would judge their Petition the leſs modeſt, and them the leſs fit for ſuch Offices. But to this I make no Application, and I hope none ſhall make any uſe of it. But I am ſure the matter here deſired, deſerves great Conſideration: Power is deſired to be given to ſuſpend from the Sacrament two ſorts of perſons; and Who are they? The Ignorant and the Scandalous? Now I am ſure that I am a very Ignorant perſon; and I fear we are all more ignorant than we ought to be of the Truths of Chriſt, and ſome more than others; and the moſt Learned, I doubt, may be called in the large ſenſe Ignorant. Even perhaps amongſt the Paſtors and Ruling Elders in ſome places, the moſt Learned may in other places be adjudged Ignorant. But the more ignorant people are, the more ſome will blame their Paſtors, who ought to inſtruct them, and by private Conference inform them, and rectify their Underſtandings; and that is a good part of Spiritual Food. But to keep an Ignorant perſon from the Ordinances, is no way to improve his Knowledge.

Scandalous Perſons are likewiſe to be ſuſpended; and who ſhall be ſaid to be ſcandalous, is to be referred to the Judgment of the Paſtors and Ruling Elders. But where a Commiſſion is extant for them to execute this Judicature, will be hard to ſhew. Both Paſtors, and Elders, and People, are all ſcandalous in the general ſenſe; we are all of us groſs Sinners, and our beſt Performances, as far as they are imperfect, are but ſcandalous to the true and ſincere Profeſſion of the Goſpel of Chriſt. Thoſe who are ſcandalous Sinners ought to be admoniſhed to forſake their evil ways, and to amend their lives; and where can they receive this Admonition, and hope for more Conviction of their Conſciences, than by hearing good Sermons, and being admitted to be Partakers of the Holy Ordinances? But to excommunicate them, deprives them wholly of the beſt means for their cure. The beſt Excommunication is for Paſtors, Elders and People to excommunicate Sin out of their own Hearts and Converſations; to ſuſpend themſelves from all Works of Iniquity: This is a Power which put in execution, through the Aſſiſtance of the Spirit of God, will prevent all Diſputes about Excommunication and Suſpenſion from the Sacrament. A man may be a good Phyſician, tho he never cut off a Member from any of his Patients: A Body may be very ſound, tho no Member of it was ever cut off: And ſurely a Church may be a good Church, tho no Member of it hath ever been cut off. I have heard many Complaints of the Juriſdiction formerly exerciſed by the Prelates, who were but a few; here will be by the paſſing of this now deſired, a great Multiplication of Spiritual men in Government. Where the Temporal Sword (the Magiſtracy) is ſufficient for Puniſhment of Offences, there will be little need for this new Diſcipline, nor will it be ſo eaſily granted.

The Debate of this Affair, and other Points of Church-Government, took up at times the Debates of the Houſe for ſeveral Months.

Votes for Propoſitions to be ſent to the King for Peace, Aug. 7.

The Commons on Wedneſday, Auguſt 7. took into Conſideration the ſending of Propoſitions for Peace to the King; and paſſed the following Votes:

1. That to declare their Affections to the Peace of the Kingdom, and that there was nothing ſo much deſired by them as a firm Agreement between his Majeſty and both Houſes, they had concluded that ſome Propoſitions or Reſolutions tending to a firm and well-grounded Peace, ſhould be ſent to his Majeſty.
2. That in regard they had met with ſo many Deluſions in the way of Treaty, they would henceforth admit of no Treaty nor Debate by Commiſſioners.
3. That ſuch Propoſitions as ſhall be ſent, ſhall be drawn up into Bills, that ſo the Royal Aſſent being deſired and had thereunto, they may become Acts of Parliament.
4. That the Scotiſh Commiſſioners ſhould be acquainted with theſe their Votes and Reſolutions.

After which, the ſaid Votes being at a Conference communicated to the Lords, they concurred therein. And afterwards the Commons appointed the Tueſday and Thurſday in every Week to be ſet aſide for the debating the Propoſitions intended to be ſent; which held them in hand for many Weeks, even almoſt to the End of this Year.

An Ordinance for putting the Directory in execution, Aug. 23. 1645.

An Ordinance of the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, for the more effectual putting in execution the Directory for Publick Worſhip, in all Pariſh Churches and Chappels within the Kingdom of England, and Dominion of Wales: And for diſperſing of them in all Places and Pariſhes in England and Wales.

Whereas by an Ordinance of Parliament made the Third Day of January laſt paſt, and entituled, An Ordinance of Parliament for the taking away the Book of Common-Prayer, and for eſtabliſhing and putting in execution of the Directory for the Publick Worſhip of God; it was (amongſt other things therein contained) ordained, That the ſaid Book of Common-Prayer ſhould not remain or be from thenceforth uſed in any Church, Chappel, and Place of Publick Worſhip, within the Kingdom of England, and Dominion of Wales; and that the Directory for Publick Worſhip in the ſaid recited Ordinance ſet forth, ſhould be from thenceforth uſed, purſued, and obſerved, according to the true intent and meaning of the ſaid Ordinance, in all Exerciſes of the Publick Worſhip of God, in every Congregation, Church, Chappel, and

An. 1645.

Place of Publick Worſhip, within this Kingdom of England, and Dominion of Wales: Yet nevertheleſs in regard that in or by the ſaid recited Ordinance there was no ſpecial direction made or contained for the ſpeedy diſperſing of the ſaid Directory into the ſeveral Pariſhes within the Kingdom of England and Dominion of Wales, and publiſhing of the ſame Directory; nor any Puniſhment ſet down either for the uſing of the ſaid Book of Common-Prayer or for the non-uſing or depraving of the ſaid Directory; by means whereof there hath been as yet little fruit of the ſaid Ordinance: The Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, taking the Premiſes into ſerious Conſideration, do Ordain, That the Knights and Burgeſſes of the ſeveral Counties, ſhall ſend Printed Books of the ſaid Directory for God's Worſhip, fairly bound up in Leather, unto the Committees of Parliament reſiding in the ſaid ſeveral reſpective Counties; who ſhall with all convenient ſpeed ſend the ſame, and cauſe them to be delivered unto the ſeveral reſpective Conſtables or other Officers of all the ſeveral Pariſhes and reſpective Chappelries and Donatives within the Kingdom of England, and Dominion of Wales, and Port and Town of Berwick: (That is to ſay), One Book unto the reſpective Conſtables and other Officers of every one of the ſaid Pariſhes, Chappelries, and Donatives; to be paid for by the Inhabitants within the ſaid ſeveral Pariſhes and Chappelries.

And it is further hereby ordained by the Lords and Commons, That the ſeveral and reſpective Conſtables or other Officers, ſhall within one Week after their Receits of the ſaid Books of the Directory, deliver the ſaid Books unto the ſeveral and reſpective Miniſters of the ſaid Pariſhes; upon pain that every of the ſaid Conſtables or other Officers that ſhall make default therein, ſhall forfeit and pay for every ſuch default, the Sum of Five Shillings of lawful Engliſh Money.

And it is further hereby ordained by the ſaid Lords and Commons, That the ſaid ſeveral Miniſters ſhall on the next Lords Day after their Receipts of the ſaid Books of the Directory, before the Morning-Sermon openly read in their ſeveral Churches and Chappels, the ſaid Directory for the Publick Worſhip of God.

And it is further hereby ordained by the ſaid Lords and Commons, That if any Perſon or Perſons whatſoever ſhall at any time or times hereafter uſe, or cauſe the aforeſaid Book of Common-Prayer to be uſed in any Church, Chappel, or Publick Place of Worſhip, or in any private place or Family within the Kingdom of England, or Dominion of Wales, or Port and Town of Berwick, That then every ſuch perſon ſo offending therein, ſhall for the firſt Offence forfeit and pay the Sum of Five Pounds of lawful Engliſh Money: For the ſecond Offence the Sum of Ten Pounds: And for the Third Offence ſhall ſuffer One whole Year's Impriſonment, without Bail or Mainprize.

And it is further hereby ordained by the ſaid Lords and Commons, That the ſeveral and reſpective Miniſters of all Pariſhes, Churches, and Chappels, within the ſaid Kingdom of England, and Dominion of Wales, and Town and Port of Berwick, ſhall reſpectively from time to time, and at all times hereafter (as much as ſhall in them lye) purſue and obſerve the Directory for Publick Worſhip, eſtabliſhed by Ordinance of Parliament, according to the true intent and meaning thereof.

And it is further ordained, That every Miniſter which ſhall not henceforth purſue and obſerve the Directory for Publick Worſhip, according to the true intent and meaning thereof, in all the Exerciſes of the Publick Worſhip of God, within this Realm of England, and Dominion of Wales, and within the Town and Port of Berwick, ſhall for every time he ſhall ſo offend, loſe and forfeit the Sum of Forty Shillings of lawful Engliſh Money. And that what Perſon ſoever ſhall, with intent to bring the ſaid Directory into Contempt and Neglect, or to raiſe oppoſition againſt it, Preach, Write, Print, or cauſe to be Written or Printed, any thing in the derogation or depraving of the ſaid Book, or any thing therein contained, or any part thereof, ſhall loſe and forfeit for every ſuch Offence, ſuch a Sum of Money as ſhall at the time of his Conviction be thought fit to be impoſed on him by thoſe before whom he ſhall have his Trial; provided that it be not leſs than Five Pounds, nor exceeding the Sum of Fifty Pounds.

And be it further ordained by the Authority aforeſaid, That no perſon or perſons ſhall be at any time hereafter impeached or moleſted of or for any of the Offences laſt above mentioned, hereafter to be committed or done contrary to this Ordinance, unleſs he or they ſo offending be thereof Indicted at the next or ſecond General Seſſions, to be holden before any Juſtice of Oyer and Terminer, or Juſtices of Aſſize, or before the Juſtices of the Peace at their General Quarter-Seſſions next after any Offence committed or done, contrary to the Tenor of this Ordinance; and that he be thereof lawfully Convicted, according to the Laws of this Realm, by Verdict of Twelve Men, or by his own Confeſſion.

Provided alſo, and be it ordained by the Authority aforeſaid, That the Lord-Mayor of London, and all other Mayors, Bayliffs, and all other Head-Officers of all and ſingular Cities, Boroughs, and Towns Corporate, within this Realm, and Dominion of Wales, to the which Juſtices of the Aſſize do not commonly repair, and that have Commiſſions of Gaol-delivery directed to them, or are Counties of themſelves, ſhall have full Power and Authority by virtue of this Ordinance, to enquire, hear, and determine the Offences aforementioned, and every of them, Yearly, within Fifteen Days after the Twenty fifth day of March, and the Nine and twentieth Day of September, in like manner and form as Juſtices of Aſſize, and Oyer and Terminer, may do.

And it is further ordained by the Authority aforeſaid, That all Mulcts and Penalties inflicted by this Ordinance, not exceeding the Sum of Five Pounds, ſhall be levied and paid to the uſe of the Poor of the Pariſh where the ſaid Offence hath been committed; and that all other Fines exceeding the ſaid Sum of Five Pounds, ſhall be to the uſe of the Poor of the County, City, or Headborough reſpectively, where the ſaid Offences ſhall be committed; to be diſpoſed of by the Juſtices of the Peace, Mayors, or Bayliffs reſpectively, at the next General Seſſions where and when the ſaid Sums ſhall be adjudged.

It is further ordered and ordained, That all Common-Prayer Books remaining in Pariſh-Churches and Chappels, ſhall within a Month after the publiſhing of this Ordinance, be by the Churchwardens or Conſtables of the reſpective Pariſhes, under the Penalty of Forty Shillings, to be employed as aforeſaid, carried unto the Committees of the reſpective Counties where they ſhall be found, to be diſpoſed of as the Parliament ſhall direct.

By the KING.

His Majeſty's Proclamation concerning the Book of Common-Prayer, and the Directory for Publick Worſhip.

His Majeſty's Proclamation touching the Book of Common-Prayer and Directory, Nov. 13. 1645.

Whereas by a Printed Paper dated the Third of January laſt paſt, entituled, An Ordinance of Parliament for taking away the Book of Common-Prayer, and for eſtabliſhing and putting in execution of the Directory for the Publick Worſhip of God; it is ſaid to be ordained, amongſt other things, That the Book of Common-Prayer ſhould not remain, nor be from thence uſed in any Church or Chappel, or place of Publick Worſhip, within the Kingdom of England, and Dominion of Wales: And that the Directory for Publick Worſhip in that Paper ſet forth, ſhould be from thenceforth uſed, purſued, and obſerved, in all Exerciſes of Publick Worſhip of God, in every Congregation, Church, Chappel, and Place of Publick Worſhip. And by another printed Paper dated the 23*d* day of Auguſt laſt paſt, entituled, An Ordinance of the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, for the more effectual putting in execution the Directory for Publick Worſhip, &c. particular Directions are ſet down for the diſperſing, publiſhing, and uſe of the ſaid Directory in all Pariſhes, Chappels, and Donatives; for the calling in and ſuppreſſing of all Books of Common-Prayer, on the ſeveral Forfeitures and Penalties, to be levied and impoſed upon Conviction before Juſtices of Aſſize, or of Oyer and Terminer, and of the Peace; as by the ſaid Two printed Papers may appear.

And taking into our Conſideration, That the Common-Prayer which is thus endeavoured to be aboliſhed, was compiled in the times of Reformation, by the moſt Learned and Pious men of that Age, and defended and continued with the Martyrdom of many; and was firſt eſtabliſh'd by Act of Parliament in the time of King Edward the Sixth, and never repealed nor laid aſide, aſide, ſave only in that ſhort time of Queen Mary's Reign, and upon the Return of Popery and Superſtition. And in the Firſt Year of Queen Elizabeth it was again revived and eſtabliſhed by Act of Parliament; and the Repeal of it then declared by the whole Parliament to have been to the great Decay of the due Honour of God, and diſcomfort of the Profeſſors of the Truth of Chriſtian Religion; and ever ſince, it hath been uſed and obſerved for above Fourſcore Years together, in the beſt times of Peace and Plenty that ever this Kingdom enjoyed; and that it contains in it an excellent Form of Worſhip and Service of God, grounded upon the Holy Scriptures; is a ſingular means and help to Devotion in all Congregations; and that, or ſome other of the like Form ſimply neceſſary in thoſe many Congregations which cannot otherwiſe be ſupplied by Learned and Able Men, and keeps an Uniformity in the Church of England. And that the Directory, ſought to be introduced, is a means to open the way, and to give the liberty to all Ignorant, Factious, and Evil men, to broach their own Fancies and Conceits, be they never ſo wicked or erroneous; and to miſlead people into Sin and Rebellion; and to utter thoſe things, even in that which they make for long Prayer in their Congregations in God's preſence, which no Conſcientious man can aſſent or ſay Amen to. And be the Miniſter never ſo Pious and Religious, yet it will break that Uniformity which hitherto hath been held in God's Service, and be a means to raiſe Factions and Diviſions in the Church: And thoſe many Congregations in this Kingdom, where Able and Religious Miniſters cannot be maintained, muſt be left deſtitute of all help and means for the Publick Worſhip and Service of God. And obſerving likewiſe, That no Reaſon is given for this Inconveniency alledged in the general; And whether Pride and Avarice be not the Ground, whether Rebellion and Deſtruction of Monarchy be not the Intention of ſome, and Sacrilege and the Churches Poſſeſſions the Aims and Hopes of others; and theſe New Directories the means to prepare and draw the People in for all, we leave to him who ſearches and knows the hearts of men.

And taking into our Conſideration, That this Alteration is introduced by Colour of Ordinance of Parliament, made without and againſt our Conſent, and againſt an expreſs Act of Parliament ſtill in force: And the ſame Ordinances of Parliament made as perpetual binding Laws, inflicting Penalties and Puniſhments which were never (before theſe Times) ſo much as pretended to have been the Uſe or Power of Ordinances of Parliament, without any expreſs Act of Parliament, to which we are to be Parties. Now leſt our Silence ſhould be interpreted by ſome as Connivance or Indifferency in us, in a Matter ſo highly concerning the Worſhip and Service of God, the Peace and Unity of the Church and State, and the Eſtabliſh'd Laws of the Kingdom; We have therefore thought fit to publiſh our Proclamation, and do hereby require and command all and ſingular Miniſters, in all Cathedral and Pariſh-Churches, and other places of Publick Worſhip, within our Kingdom of England, or Dominion of Wales, and all others to whom it ſhall appertain, That the ſaid Book of Common-Prayer be kept and uſed in all Churches, Chappels, and places of Publick Worſhip, according to the ſaid Statute made in that behalf, in the ſaid Firſt Year of the ſaid late Queen Elizabeth. And that the ſaid Directory be in no ſort admitted, received, or uſed; the ſaid pretended Ordinances, or any thing in them contained to the contrary notwithſtanding. And we do hereby let them know, That whenſoever it ſhall pleaſe God to reſtore us to Peace, and the Laws to their due courſe, wherein we doubt not of his Aſſiſtance in his good time, we ſhall require a ſtrict Account and Proſecution againſt the Breakers of the ſaid Law, according to the Scope thereof. And in the mean time, in ſuch places where we ſhall come, and find the Book of Common-Prayer ſuppreſſed and laid aſide, and the Directory introduced, we ſhall account all thoſe that ſhall be Aiders, Actors, or Contrivers therein, to be perſons diſaffected to the Religion and Laws eſtabliſh'd: And this they muſt expect, beſides the great Loſs they ſhall ſuſtain by ſuffering themſelves to be deprived of the Uſe and Comfort of the ſaid Book.

To take away 5th Part from Delinquent's Wives and Children, Sept. 8.

WHereas by a late Ordinance of Sequeſtration, it is amongſt other things declared and ordained, That the Committees of the ſeveral Counties ſhall have power to aſſign Maintenance out of the Lands of Delinquents, to their ſeveral Wives and Children, ſo as the ſame exceed not the Fifth Part of the Lands or Goods ſo ſequeſtred: And whereas by occaſion hereof divers Wives and Children of Delinquents may reſort hither, only to obtain the ſaid Fifth Part, and may be ready to do Ill Offices to the Parliament: The Lords and Commons, to prevent the ſaid Miſchief, and other of like nature, do ordain, That no Wife, Child, or Children of any Delinquent, who ſhall come from their own Habitation into the Parliament Quarters, with or without their Fathers or Husbands, from the King's Quarters, ſhall have, hold, and enjoy any Fifth Part by the ſaid Ordinance. And therefore they do ordain, That all ſuch Allowances hereafter to be made to ſuch Wife or Children, ſhall be utterly void. And if any ſuch Wife, Child, or Children, ſhall return from the King's Quarters without leave of both Houſes; The Deputy Lieutenants and Committees of Parliament in the ſeveral Counties, or any Two of them, are hereby authorized and required to take care that they be commanded to return back into the King's Quarters: And if they ſhall not return upon Command given to them by the Deputy-Lieutenants, or Committee, or any Two of them, they ſhall hereby have power to Commit them, until they ſhall give Security to return. And be it further ordained, That no Children of any Delinquents ſhall have any Fifth Part, but ſuch as ſhall be Educated and brought up in the Proteſtant Religion.

A Declaration of the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, concerning the Inhabitants of Wales.

Ordinance concerning the Inhabitants of Wales, Sept. 8. 1645.

WHereas the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament are informed, That by the ſubtile and malicious Practices of a Popiſh and Malignant Party, oppoſite to God's Cauſe, and the Proſperity of this Kingdom, it hath been inſinuated and infuſed into ſundry of the Inhabitants of his Majeſty's Dominions of Wales, to diſaffect and poiſon them againſt the Proceedings of the Parliament, That it was their Intention to gratify our Brethren of Scotland for their Aſſiſtance in theſe our Extremities, drawn upon us by the ſaid Popiſh and Malignant Party, with the Eſtates and Lands of the ſaid Inhabitants; which is ſo abſolutely falſe, that it never entred into their thoughts, and conſequently needed no Refutation: Yet that the Subjects of this Kingdom, inhabiting within the ſaid Dominion of Wales, may receive full and befitting Satisfaction, and we and our Brethren of Scotland, in vindication againſt ſo foul and barbarous an Aſperſion, the ſaid Lords and Commons do teſtify and declare to all perſons whatſoever, to whom theſe ſhall come, That they do much abhor and deteſt an Act of ſuch Injuſtice and Inhumanity: And that they are ſo far from doing any ſuch thing, that if any of the ſaid Inhabitants, upon due ſenſe and ſorrow for any of their Crimes and Miſdemeanors committed againſt the preſent Parliament, ſhall ſubmit, and apply themſelves by humble Petition to the Parliament, and deſire the Favour of, and Reconciliation to the ſame, the ſaid Lords and Commons will be thereupon ready to receive any and all ſuch, upon ſuch reaſonable Terms, as the Wiſdom of the Parliament ſhall think in ſome meaſure proportionable to the qualities and degrees of their ſeveral Offences, and thereupon yield them all ſuch Aid and Aſſiſtance as they ſhall reaſonably deſire, and the Parliament be able to afford. Provided always, That this ſhall not extend to any that are excepted from Pardon, within the Propoſitions lately preſented to his Majeſty for a ſafe and well-grounded Peace.

An Ordinance of the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, about Suſpenſion from the Lord's Supper.

About Suſpenſion from the Sacrament.

THE Lords and Commons conſidering the wonderful Providence of God in calling them to this great and difficult work of reforming and purging his Church and People, his guidance and manifeſt protection of them in it, do acknowledge that never any of his Servants ſince the foundation of the World, had more high and ſtrong engagements heartily and ſincerely to endeavour the compleat Eſtabliſhment of Purity and Unity in the Church of God than they have; They do therefore require all Miniſters and Elders, That they be careful to walk with underſtanding in the Houſe of God; That by Example, Exhortations, and Admonitions, they endeavour to build up the People of the Lord in Love; That with Humility and Meekneſs of Spirit they adorn their holy Profeſſion, and win Souls to the love of the Truth; That they be diligent and faithful in the Work, as thoſe that muſt give an account. And where groſs Ignorance or notorious Scandal ſhall appear, for the Remedy thereof, and to prevent the Evils that may come thereby, the Lords and Commons do ordain, and it is hereby ordained, That the ſeveral Elderſhips reſpectively within their reſpective Bounds and Limits, have power to ſuſpend from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, all Ignorant and Scandalous perſons within the Rules hereafter following, and according to the ſaid Rules and Directions.

Rules and Directions concerning Suſpenſion from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, in caſe of Ignorance.

1. All ſuch perſons who ſhall be admitted to the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, ought to know that there is a God; That there is but one ever-living and true God, Maker of Heaven and Earth, and Governor of all things: That this only true God, is the God whom we worſhip: That this God is but One, yet Three diſtinct Perſons, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, all equally God.

2. That God created man after his own Image, in knowledge, righteouſneſs, and true holineſs: That by one man ſin entred into the world, and death by ſin, and ſo death paſſed upon all men, for that all have ſinned: That thereby they are all dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, and are by nature the children of wrath, and ſo liable to eternal death, the wages of every ſin.

3. That there is but one Mediator between God and Man, the Man Chriſt Jeſus, who is alſo over all, God bleſſed for ever; neither is there ſalvation in any other: That he was conceived by the Holy Ghoſt, and born of the Virgin Mary: That he died upon the Croſs to ſave his people from their ſins; That he roſe again the third day from the dead, aſcended into Heaven, ſits at the Right Hand of God, and makes continual Interceſſion for us; of whoſe fulneſs we receive all Grace neceſſary to Salvation.

4. That Chriſt and his Benefits are applied only by Faith: That Faith is the Gift of God, and that we have it not of our ſelves, but it is wrought in us by the Word and Spirit of God.

That Faith is that Grace whereby we believe and truſt in Chriſt for remiſſion of ſins, and life everlaſting; according to the promiſe of the Goſpel, That whoſoever believes not on the Son of God, ſhall not ſee life, but ſhall periſh eternally.

That they who truly repent of their ſins, do ſee them, ſorrow for them, and turn from them to the Lord; and that except men repent, they ſhall ſurely periſh.

That a godly life is conſcionably ordered according to the Word of God, in Holineſs and Righteouſneſs, without which no man ſhall ſee God.

That the Sacraments are Seals of the Covenant of Grace in the Blood of Chriſt: That the Sacraments of the New Teſtament are Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper: That the outward Elements in the Lord's Supper are Bread and Wine, and do ſignify the Body and Blood of Chriſt crucified, which the worthy Receiver by Faith doth partake of in this Sacrament, which Chriſt hath likewiſe ordained for a Remembrance of his Death: That whoſoever eats and drinks unworthily, is guilty of the Body and Blood of the Lord; and therefore that every one is to examine himſelf, leſt he eat and drink Judgment to himſelf, not diſcerning the Lord's Body.

That the Souls of the Faithful after death do immediately live with Chriſt in Bleſſedneſs, and that the Souls of the wicked do immediately go into Hell-Torments. That there ſhall be a Reſurrection of the Bodies both of the juſt and unjuſt at the laſt day, at which time all ſhall appear before the Judgment Seat of Chriſt, to receive according to what they have done in the body, whether it be good or evil: And that the righteous ſhall go into life eternal, and the wicked into everlaſting puniſhment.

And it is further ordained by the Lords and Commons, That thoſe who have a competent meaſure of underſtanding concerning the matters contained in theſe Articles, ſhall not be kept back from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper for Ignorance: And that the Examination and Judgment of ſuch Perſons as ſhall for their ignorance of the aforeſaid Points of Religion not to be admitted to the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, is to be in the power of the Elderſhip of every Congregation.

Rules and Directions concerning Suſpenſion from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, in caſes of Scandal.

The ſeveral and reſpective Elderſhips ſhall have power to ſuſpend from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper all Scandalous perſons hereafter mentioned, appearing to be ſuch upon juſt proof thereof made, in ſuch manner as is by this preſent Ordinance hereafter appointed, and not otherwiſe, until it be otherwiſe declared by both Houſes of Parliament, how notoriouſly ſcandalous perſons, other than ſuch as are herein expreſſed, ſhall be kept from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper: That is to ſay, All perſons that ſhall blaſphemouſly ſpeak or write any thing of God, his holy Word, or Sacraments. An Inceſtuous perſon. An Adulterer. A Fornicator. A Drunkard. A prophane Swearer or Curſer. One that hath taken away the life of any perſon maliciouſly. All Worſhippers of Images, Croſſes, Crucifixes, or Relicks: All that ſhall make any Images of the Trinity, or of any Perſon thereof. All religious Worſhippers of Saints, Angels, or any mere Creature. Any Perſon that ſhall profeſs himſelf not to be in charity with his Neighbour. Any Perſon that ſhall challenge any other Perſon by Word, Meſſage, or Writing, to fight, or that ſhall accept ſuch Challenge, and agree thereto. Any Perſon that ſhall knowingly carry any ſuch Challenge by word, meſſage, or writing. Any Perſon that ſhall upon the Lord's Day uſe any Dancing, playing at Dice or Cards, or any other Game: Maſquing, Wake, Shooting, Bowling, playing at Foot-ball, or Stool-ball, Wreſtling; or that ſhall make, or reſort unto any Plays, Interludes, Fencing, Bull-baiting, or Bear-baiting; or that ſhall uſe Hawking, Hunting, or Courſing, Fiſhing, or Fowling; or that ſhall publickly expoſe any Wares to ſale, otherwiſe than as is provided by an Ordinance of Parliament of the 6th of April, 1644. Any Perſon that ſhall travel upon the Lord's Day, without reaſonable cauſe. Any Perſon that keepeth a known Stews or Brothel-houſe, or that ſhall ſollicit the Chaſtity of any Perſon for himſelf or any other. Any Perſon, Father or Mother, that ſhall conſent to the Marriage of their Child to a Papiſt, or any Perſon that ſhall marry a Papiſt. Any Perſon that ſhall repair for any advice unto any Witch, Wizard, or Fortune-teller. Any Perſon that ſhall aſſault his Parents, or any Magiſtrate, Miniſter, or Elder, in the execution of his Office. Any Perſon that ſhall be legally attainted of Barretry, Forgery, Extortion, or Bribery. And the ſeveral and reſpective Elderſhips ſhall have power likewiſe to ſuſpend from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper all Miniſters that ſhall be duly proved to be guilty of any of the Crimes aforeſaid, from giving or receiving the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

And it is further ordained by the Lords and Commons, That the Elderſhip of every Congregation ſhall have power to examine any perſon complained of for any matter of Scandal aforeſaid; and upon confeſſion of the Party before the Elderſhip to have committed ſuch an offence, to ſuſpend any ſuch perſon from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The Elderſhip of every Congregation ſhall examine upon Oath ſuch Witneſſes as ſhall be produced before them, An. 1645. either for the acquitting or condemning of the Party accuſed of any of the ſcandalous Crimes aforeſaid, not capital. The Eldership of every Congregation ſhall judge the matter of Scandal aforeſaid, being not capital, upon the teſtimony of two credible Witneſſes at the leaſt. Satisfaction ſhall be given to the Elderſhip of every Congregation, by ſufficient manifeſtation of the Offenders Repentance, before a perſon lawfully convicted of ſuch matters of Scandal as aforeſaid, and thereupon ſuſpended from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, be admitted thereunto. If any perſon ſuſpended from the Lord's Supper, ſhall find himſelf grieved with the proceedings before the Elderſhip of any Congregation, he ſhall have liberty to appeal to the Claſſical Elderſhip, and from them to the Provincial Aſſembly, from thence to the National, and from thence to the Parliament. And be it further ordained by the Lords and Commons, That the ſeveral and reſpective Elderſhips in their ſeveral reſpective Proceedings, ſhall obſerve theſe enſuing Cautions.

Caution 1. That cognizance and examination of any capital Offence, ſhall be by the Magiſtrate thereunto appointed by the Law of the Kingdom, who if he ſhall commit the Party queſtioned to Priſon, or ſecure him or her by Bail, he ſhall thereof make a Certificate unto the Elderſhip of the Congregation where he or ſhe did laſt reſide, or to any other Neighbouring Elderſhip, who ſhall thereupon have Power to ſuſpend the Party from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

2. The Presbytery or Elderſhip ſhall not have cognizance of any thing wherein any matter of Payment, Contract, or Demand is concerned; or of any matter of Conveyance, Title, Intereſt, or Property, in Lands or Goods.

3. No uſe ſhall be made of any Confeſſion or Proof made before the Elderſhip, at any Trial at Law of any perſon for any Offence.

And it is further ordained, That the Members of both Houſes that now are Members of the Aſſembly of Divines, or any Seven of them, be a Standing Committee of both Houſes of Parliament, to conſider of Cauſes of Suſpenſion from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, not contained in this Ordinance; unto which Committee any Elderſhip ſhall preſent ſuch Cauſes, to the end that the Parliament, if need require, may hear and determine the ſame: That if any other notorious and ſcandalous Sins, beſides thoſe nominated in this Ordinance, which may be conceived to be a Cauſe to ſuſpend from the Lord's Supper, ſhall be certified to any Claſſis, either from any Congregational Elderſhip, or otherwiſe, which the ſaid Claſſis ſhall think fit to preſent to the ſtanding Committee of Parliament: That the ſaid Claſſis ſhall preſent the ſame to the ſaid Committee, to the end that the Parliament, if need require, may hear and determine the ſame.

Die Sabbathi, 8. Novemb. 1645.

An Ordinance of the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, for the Ordination of Miniſters.

WHereas the word Presbyter, that is to ſay, Elder, and the word Biſhop do in the Scripture intend and ſignify one and the ſame Function, altho the Title of Biſhop hath been by corrupt cuſtom appropriated to one, and that unto him aſcribed, and by him aſſumed, as in other things, ſo in the matter of Ordination, that was not meet; which Ordination notwithſtanding being performed by him, a Presbyter joined with other Presbyters, we hold for ſubſtance to be valid, and not to be diſclaimed by any that have received it; and that Presbyters ſo ordained, being lawfully thereunto appointed and authorized, may ordain other Presbyters. And whereas it is alſo manifeſt by the Word of God, that no man ought to take upon him the Office of a Miniſter, until he be lawfully called and ordained thereunto; and that the work of Ordination, that is to ſay, an outward ſolemn ſetting apart of perſons for the Office of the Miniſtry in the Church, by preaching Presbyters, is an Ordinance of Chriſt, and is to be performed with all due care, wiſdom, gravity, and ſolemnity. It is ordained by the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, and by the Authority of the ſame, (after Advice had with the Aſſembly of Divines now convened at Weſtminſter,) That the ſeveral and reſpective Claſſical Presbyters, which in their ſeveral and reſpective bounds may examine, approve,

approve, and ordain Presbyters, according to the Directory for Ordination, and Rules for Examination, hereafter expreſſed; that is to ſay, Firſt, That he that is to be ordained, muſt addreſs himſelf to the Presbytery, and bring with him a Teſtimonial of his taking the Covenant of the Three Kingdoms; of his Diligence and Proficiency in his Studies; what Degrees he hath taken in the Univerſity, and what hath been the time of his Abode there, and withal of his Age, which is to be Twenty four Years at leaſt; but eſpecially of his Life and Converſation.

Secondly, The Presbytery ſhall proceed to enquire touching the Grace of God in him, and whether he be of ſuch Holineſs of Life as is requiſite in a Miniſter of the Goſpel; and to examine him touching his Learning and Sufficiency, and touching the Evidence of his Calling to the holy Miniſtry, and in particular, his fair and direct Calling to that Place to which he is deſigned.

The Rules for Examination are theſe:

1. That the Party examined be dealt with in a brotherly way, with mildneſs of ſpirit, and with ſpecial reſpect to the gravity, modeſty, and quality of every one.
2. He ſhall be examined touching his skill in the Original Tongues; and that Trial to be made by reading the Hebrew and Greek Teſtament, and rendring ſome Portions of them into Latin; and enquiry alſo ſhall be made after his other Learning, and whether he hath skill in Logick and Philoſophy.
3. What Authors in Divinity he hath read, and is beſt acquainted with; and Trial ſhall be made of his knowledge in the chief grounds of Religion, and of his ability to defend the Orthodox Doctrine contained in them, againſt all unſound and erroneous Opinions, eſpecially thoſe of the preſent Age; of his skill in the ſenſe and meaning of ſuch places of Scripture as ſhall be propoſed unto him in Caſes of Conſcience, and in the Chronology of Scripture, and of the Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory.
4. If he hath not before preached in publick, with approbation of ſuch as are able to judge, he ſhall at a competent time aſſigned him, and before the Presbytery, expound ſuch a place of Scripture as ſhall be given him.
5. He ſhall in a competent time alſo frame a Diſcourſe in Latin, upon ſuch a common Place or Controverſy in Divinity, as ſhall be aſſigned him; and exhibit to the Presbytery ſuch Theſes as expreſs the Sum thereof, and maintain a Diſpute upon them.
6. He ſhall preach before the People; the Presbytery, or ſome of the Miniſters of the Word, appointed by them, being preſent.
7. The proportion of his Gifts in relation to the Place unto which he is called, ſhall be conſidered.
8. Beſides the Trial of his Gifts in preaching, he ſhall undergo an Examination in the Premiſſes Two ſeveral Days, or more, if the Presbytery ſhall judge it neceſſary.

Thirdly, After which, he being approved, is to be ſent to the Church or other place where he is to ſerve, (if it may be done with ſafety and conveniency), there to preach Three ſeveral days, and to converſe with the people, that they may have trial of his Gifts for their Edification, and may have time and leiſure to enquire into, and the better to know his Life and Converſation.

Fourthly, In the laſt of thoſe Three days appointed for the making known of his Gifts in preaching, there ſhall be ſent from the Presbytery to the Congregation, (if it may be done with ſafety and conveniency) a publick Inſtrument in writing, which ſhall publickly be read before the People, and after affixed to the Church-door, to ſignify ſuch a day any Member or Members of the ſaid Congregation, or any other perſon or perſons whatſoever, or any of them, may put in with all Chriſtian Diſcretion and Meekneſs, what Exceptions they have againſt him: And if upon the day appointed there be no juſt Exceptions againſt him, the Presbytery ſhall proceed to Ordination.

Fifthly, Upon the day appointed for Ordination (which is to be performed in that Church where he that is to be ordained is to ſerve, (if it may be done with ſafety and conveniency), a ſolemn Faſt ſhall be kept by the Congregation, that they may more earneſtly join in Prayer to God for a Bleſſing upon the Perſon and Labour of this his Servant, ſolemnly to be ſet apart to the Office of the Miniſtry for their good; the Presbytery ſhall come to the place, or ſome Miniſters of the Word, at the leaſt, ſhall be ſent from the Presbytery, whereof one ſhall preach to the people concerning the Office and Duty

An. 1645.

Duty of the Miniſters of Chriſt, and how the people ought to eſteem him for the Works ſake.

Sixthly, After the Sermon ended, the Miniſter which hath preached ſhall in the face of the Congregation, demand of him who is now to be ordained, concerning his Faith in Chriſt Jeſus, and his perſuaſion of the truth of the Reformed Religion, according to the Scriptures; his ſincere intentions and ends in deſiring to enter into this Calling; his reſolution to be diligent in Prayer, Reading, Meditation, Preaching, miniſtring the Sacraments, and doing all Miniſterial Duties towards his Charge, his Zeal and Faithfulneſs in maintaining the Truth of the Goſpel, and Purity of the Church, againſt Error and Schiſm; his care that himſelf and Family may be unblameable, and Examples to the Flock; and his reſolution to continue in his Duty, againſt all trouble and perſecution.

Seventhly, in all which having declared himſelf, profeſſed his willingneſs, and promiſed his Endeavours by the help of God; the Presbytery, or the Miniſters ſent from them, ſhall ſolemnly ſet him apart to the Office and Work of the Miniſtry, laying their hands on him, with a ſhort Prayer or Bleſſing, to this effect:

Thankfully acknowledging the great Mercy of God in ſending Jeſus Chriſt for the Redemption of his People, and for his Aſcenſion to the Right Hand of God the Father, and there pouring out his Spirit, and giving Gifts to Men, Apoſtles, Evangeliſts, Prophets, Paſtors, and Teachers, for the gathering and building up of his Church; and for fitting and inclining this Man to this great Work; to beſeech him to fill him with his Holy Spirit, who in his Name we * ſet apart to this holy Service, to fulfil the Work of his Miniſtry in all things, that he may both ſave himſelf, and the People committed to his Charge.

* Here let them impoſe their Hands upon his Head.

Eighthly, This or the like Form of Prayer or Bleſſing being ended, let the Miniſter who preached, briefly exhort him to conſider the Greatneſs of his Office and Work, the Danger of Negligence both to himſelf and his People; the Bleſſing which will accompany his Faithfulneſs in this Life, and that to come; withal let him Exhort and Charge the People in the Name of God, willingly to receive and acknowledge him as the Miniſter of Chriſt, and to maintain, encourage, and aſſiſt him in all the parts of his Office. And ſo by Prayer commending both him and his Flock to the Grace of God, after the ſinging of a Pſalm, let the Aſſembly be diſmiſſed with a Bleſſing.

Ninthly, Let ſuch as are choſen or appointed for the Service of the Army, or Navy, or Colleges, or other Charge, be Ordained as aboveſaid, in ſuch Church as the Claſſical Presbytery to which they ſhall addreſs themſelves ſhall think fit; and ſuch Alterations made by the Miniſter that Ordaineth from the Exhortation laſt before preſcribed, as the Circumſtance of Place and Perſon ſhall require.

And be it further Ordained by the ſaid Lords and Commons, and by the Authority aforeſaid, That every Perſon formerly Ordained a Presbyter, according to the Form of Ordination, which hath been held in the Church of England, and is to be removed to another Charge, do bring the Presbytery where he is to be placed, a Teſtimonial of his Ordination, and of his Abilities and Converſation, whereupon his Fitneſs for that Place where he is to be removed, ſhall be tried by his Preaching there, and (if it ſhall be judged neceſſary) by a further Examination; and ſo, without any new Ordination, he ſhall be admitted, if he be appointed as fit for that place. And if any Perſon ordained Miniſter in Scotland, or in any other Reformed Church, be deſigned to a Congregation in England, he is to bring from that Church to the Presbytery where he is to be placed, a ſufficient Teſtimonial of his Ordination, of his Life and Converſation while he lived with them, and of the Cauſes of his Removal; and to undergo ſuch a Trial of his Fitneſs and Sufficiency, and to have the ſame Courſe held with him in other particulars, as is ſet down in the foregoing Rule and Proviſion touching the Examination and Admiſſion of Perſons formerly ordained in England.

And it is further ordained, That Records be carefully kept by the Regiſter, to be nominated by the Presbytery, of the Names of the Perſons ordained, with their Teſtimonial of the Time and Place of their Ordination, and of the Miniſters who did ordain them, and of the Charge to which they are appointed; and that no Money or Gift, of what kind ſoever, ſhall be received from the Perſon to be ordained, or from any on his behalf, for Ordination, or ought elſe belonging to it, by the Presbytery or any of them, or any appertaining to any of them, upon what pretence ſoever; except to the Regiſter, for the Entry, Inſtruments, and Teſtimonials of his Ordination, which ſhall not exceed the Sum of Ten Shillings for each Perſon ordained.

And it is yet further ordained by the Authority aforeſaid, That all Perſons who ſhall be ordained Presbyters according to this Directory, ſhall be for ever reputed and taken to all intents and purpoſes, for lawful and ſufficiently authorized Miniſters of the Church of England, and as capable of any Miniſterial Employment in the Church, with the Rights and Profits belonging thereunto, as any other Presbyters whatſoever, already ordained, or hereafter to be ordained: And that all Presbyters who are hereby appointed and authorized to ordain, and ſhall (according to this preſent Directory) ordain any Presbyters, are hereby declared to perform an acceptable Service to this Church, and Kingdom, and ſhall have the Protection of both Houſes of Parliament for their Indemnity.

Provided, That this Ordinance ſhall ſtand in force for Twelve Months, and no longer: Any thing in this Ordinance contained to the contrary in any wiſe notwithſtanding.

Die Lunæ, Decemb. 1. 1645.

An Order againſt ſuch Members as take Money for any thing depending in the Houſe of Commons, Dec. 1. 1645.

THE Houſe of Commons doth declare, That it ſhall be an acceptable Service for any perſon or perſons to inform this Houſe of any Member or Members of this Houſe, that by himſelf or others, directly or indirectly, hath taken or received any Money or other thing, of any perſon or perſons, for any matter or thing depending in this Houſe, or any Committe of this Houſe, ſince the beginning of this Parliament: And the Houſe hath appointed a Committee to receive any ſuch Informations, who are to ſit in the Exchequer-Chamber upon Thurſday next in the Afternoon, and ſo from time to time: And the Members of this Houſe are hereby enjoined, if any of them know of any ſuch thing ſo taken in manner as aforeſaid, by any other of the Members, that they do repair to the ſaid Committee, and inform them of the ſame.

Charles R.

His Majeſty's Meſſage to both Houſes, Dec. 5. 1645.

HIS Majeſty being deeply ſenſible of the Continuation of this Bloody and Unnatural War, cannot think himſelf diſcharged of the Duty he owes to God, or the Affection and Regard he has to the preſervation of his people, without the conſtant application of his earneſt Endeavours to find ſome Expedient for the ſpeedy ending of theſe unhappy Diſtractions, doth therefore deſire, That a ſafe Conduct may be forthwith ſent for the Duke of Richmond, the Earl of Southampton, John Aſhburnham, and Jeffrey Palmer, Eſqs; and their Attendants, with Coaches, Horſes, and other Accommodations for their Journey to Weſtminſter, during their Stay there, and Return when they ſhall think fit: Whom his Majeſty intends to ſend to the Lords and Commons aſſembled in the Parliament of England at Weſtminſter, and the Commiſſioners of the Parliament of Scotland, furniſhed with ſuch Propoſitions as his Majeſty is confident will be the Foundation of a happy and well-grounded Peace. Given at the Court at Oxford the 5th of December, 1645.

For the Speaker of the Houſe of Peers pro Tempore.

Charles R.

His Majeſty's Meſſage, Dec. 15. in purſuance of the former.

HIS Majeſty cannot but extremely wonder, that after ſo many Expreſſions on your part of a deep and ſeeming Senſe of the Miſeries of this afflicted Kingdom, and of the Dangers incident to his Perſon during the continuance of this unnatural War; your many great and ſo oft repeated Proteſtations, That the raiſing of theſe Arms hath been only for the neceſſary Defence of God's true Religion, His Majeſty's Honour, Safety, and Proſperity, the the Peace, Comfort, and Security of his People; you ſhould delay a ſafe Conduct to to the Perſons mentioned in his Majeſty's Meſſage of the 5th of this inſtant December, which are to be ſent unto you with Propoſitions for a well-grounded Peace: A thing ſo far from having been at any time denied by his Majeſty whenſoever you have deſired the ſame, that he believes it hath been ſeldom (if ever) refuſed amongſt the moſt avowed and profeſſed Enemies, much leſs by Subjects to their King. But his Majeſty is reſolved that no Diſcouragements whatſoever ſhall make him fail of his part of doing his utmoſt Endeavours to put an end to theſe Calamities, which if not in time prevented, muſt prove the Ruin of this unhappy Nation: And therefore doth once again deſire, That a ſafe Conduct may be forthwith ſent for thoſe Perſons expreſſed in his former Meſſage: And doth therefore conjure you, as you will anſwer to Almighty God in that day when he ſhall make Inquiſition for all the Blood that hath and may yet be ſpilt in this unnatural War, as you tender the Preſervation and Eſtabliſhment of the true Religion, by all the Bonds of Duty and Allegiance to your King, or Compaſſion to your bleeding and unhappy Country, and of Charity to your ſelves, That you diſpoſe your hearts to a true ſenſe, and employ all your faculties in a more ſerious Endeavour, together with his Majeſty, to ſet a ſpeedy End to theſe waſting Diviſions; and then he ſhall not doubt but that God will yet again give the Bleſſing of Peace to this diſtracted Kingdom. Given at the Court at Oxford, the 15th of December, 1645.

NOtwithſtanding the ſtrange and unexpected Delays (which can be precedented by no former times) to his Majeſty's two former Meſſages, his Majeſty will lay aſide all Expoſtulations, as rather ſerving to loſe time, than to contribute any Remedy to the Evils which (for the preſent) do afflict this diſtracted Kingdom. Therefore, without further Preamble, his Majeſty thinks it moſt neceſſary to ſend theſe Propoſitions this way, which he intended to do by the Perſons mentioned in his former Meſſages; though he well knows the great diſadvantage which Overtures of this kind have, by the want of being accompanied by well-inſtructed Meſſengers.

His Majeſty conceiving that the former Treaties have hitherto proved ineffectual, chiefly for want of Power in thoſe Perſons that Treated, as likewiſe becauſe thoſe from whom their Power was derived (not poſſibly having the particular Informations of every ſeveral Debate) could not give ſo clear a Judgment as was requiſite to ſo important a Buſineſs: If therefore his Majeſty may have the Engagement of the Two Houſes at Weſtminſter, the Commiſſioners of the Parliament of Scotland, the Mayor, Aldermen, Common-Council and Militia of London; of the Chief Commanders in Sir Tho. Fairfax's Army, as alſo of thoſe in the Scots Army, for his Majeſty's free and ſafe coming to and Abode in London or Weſtminſter (with ſuch of his Servants now attending him, and their Followers, not exceeding in all the Number of Three hundred) for the ſpace of Forty Days; and after the ſaid time, for his free and ſafe Repair to any of his Gariſons of Oxford, Worceſter, or Newark (which his Majeſty ſhall nominate at any time before his going from London or Weſtminſter), his Majeſty propounds to have a Perſonal Treaty with the Two Houſes of Parliament at Weſtminſter, and the Commiſſioners of the Parliament of Scotland, upon all matters which may conduce to the reſtoring of Peace and Happineſs to theſe miſerably-diſtracted Kingdoms; and to begin with the Three Heads which were treated on at Uxbridge. And for the better clearing of his Majeſty's earneſt and ſincere Intentions of putting an end to theſe unnatural Diſtractions, (knowing that point of Security may prove the greateſt Obſtacle to this moſt bleſſed Work) his Majeſty therefore declares, That he is willing to commit the great Truſt of the Militia of this Kingdom, for ſuch Time and with ſuch Powers as are expreſs'd in the Paper delivered by his Majeſty's Commiſſioners at Uxbridge, the 6th of February laſt, to theſe Perſons following; viz.

The Lord Privy-Seal,
The Duke of Richmond,
The Marq. of Hartford,
The Marq. of Dorcheſter,
The Earl of Dorſet, Lord Chamberlain,
The Earl of Northumberland,
The Earl of Eſſex,
The Earl of Southampton,

Sir Gervaſe Clifton,
Sir Hen. Vane, Jun.
Mr. Rob. Wallop,
Mr. Tho. Chicheley,
Mr. Oliver Cromwell, and
Mr. Philip Skippon.

Suppoſing that theſe are Perſons againſt whom there can be no juſt Exception. But if this doth not ſatisfy, then his Majeſty offers to name the one half, and leave the other to the Election of the Two Houſes of Parliament at Weſtminſter, with the Powers and Limitations before-mentioned.

Thus his Majeſty calls God and the World to witneſs of his ſincere Intentions and real Endeavours for the compoſing and ſetling of theſe miſerable Diſtractions; which he doubts not but by the Bleſſing of God will ſoon be put to an happy Concluſion, if this his Majeſty's Offer be accepted. Otherwiſe he leaves all the World to judge who are the Continuers of this unnatural War. And therefore he once more conjures you by all the Bonds of Duty you owe to God and your King, to have ſo great a Compaſſion on the bleeding and miſerable Eſtate of your Country, that you join your moſt ſerious and hearty Endeavour with his Majeſty, to put an happy and ſpeedy end to theſe preſent Miſeries. Given at the Court at Oxford the 26th of December, 1645.

The Anſwer of both Houſes to his Majeſty's two former Meſſages of the 5th and 15th of Dec.

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,

THE Lords and Commons aſſembled in the Parliament of England at Weſtminſter, have received your Letters of the 5th and 15th of this Inſtant December; and having, together with the Commiſſioners of the Parliament of Scotland, taken the ſame into their ſerious Conſideration, do humbly return this Anſwer:

They have in all their Actions manifeſted to your Majeſty and the World, their ſincere and earneſt deſires that a ſafe and well-grounded Peace might be ſetled in your Three Kingdoms; and for the obtaining ſo great a Bleſſing, ſhall ever pray to God, and uſe their utmoſt Endeavours: And beſeech your Majeſty to believe, that their not ſending a more ſpeedy Anſwer, hath not proceeded from any Intention to retard the Means of putting an end to theſe preſent Calamities by a happy Peace; but hath been occaſioned by the Conſiderations and Debates neceſſary in a Buſineſs of ſo great Importance, wherein both Kingdoms are ſo much concern'd.

As to your Majeſty's deſire of a ſafe Conduct for the coming hither of the Duke of Richmond, the Earl of Southampton, John Aſhburnham, and Jeffrey Palmer, Eſqs. with Propoſitions to be the Foundation of an happy and well-grounded Peace; they finding that former Treaties have been made uſe of for other Ends, under the pretence of Peace, and have proved dilatory and unſucceſsful, cannot give way to a ſafe Conduct according to your Majeſty's deſire. But both Houſes of the Parliament of England having now under their Conſideration Propoſitions and Bills for the ſetling of a ſafe and well-grounded Peace, which are ſpeedily to be communicated to the Commiſſioners of the Kingdom of Scotland, do reſolve after mutual Agreement of both Kingdoms, to preſent them with all ſpeed to your Majeſty.

His Majeſty's Reply by Sir Pet. Killegrew, Dec. 29.

Charles R.

ALtho the Meſſage ſent by Sir Peter Killigrew, may juſtly require an Expoſtulatory Anſwer, yet his Majeſty lays that aſide, as not ſo proper for his preſent Endeavours; leaving all the World to judge whether his Propoſition for a Perſonal Treaty, or the flat Denial of a ſafe Conduct for Perſons to begin a Treaty, be greater Signs of a real Intention to Peace; and ſhall now only inſiſt upon his former Meſſage of the 26th of this December, That upon his Repair to Weſtminſter, he doubts not but ſo to join his Endeavours with his Two Houſes of Parliament, as to give juſt Satisfaction, not only concerning the Buſineſs of Ireland, but alſo for the ſetling of a way for the Payment of the Publick Debts as well to the Scots and the City of London, as others. And as already he hath ſhewn a fair way for the ſetling of the Militia, ſo he ſhall carefully endeavour in all other particulars, that none ſhall have cauſe to complain for want of Security, whereby juſt Jealouſies may ariſe, to hinder the continuance of the deſired Peace. And certainly this Propoſition of a Perſonal Treaty could never have entred into his Majeſty's Thoughts, if he had not reſolv'd to make apparent to all the World, That the Publick Good and Peace of this Kingdom is far dearer to him than the reſpect of any particular Intereſt. Wherefore none can oppoſe this Motion, without a manifeſt demonſtration, That he particularly envies his Majeſty ſhould be the chief Author in ſo bleſſed a Work, beſides the declaring himſelf a direct Oppoſer of the happy Peace of theſe Nations. To conclude; whoſoever will not be aſhamed that his fair and ſpecious Proteſtations ſhould be brought to a true and publick Teſt, and thoſe who have a real Senſe, and do truly commiſerate the Miſeries of their bleeding Country, let them ſpeedily and chearfully embrace his Majeſty's Propoſition for his Perſonal Treaty at Weſtminſter; which by the Bleſſing of God will undoubtedly to theſe now-diſtracted Kingdoms reſtore the Happineſs of a long-wiſh'd-for and laſting Peace. Given at the Court at Oxford the 29th Day of December, 1645.

BUT that theſe are Times wherein nothing is ſtrange, it were a thing much to be marvell'd at, what ſhould cauſe this unparallel'd long detention of his Majeſty's Trumpet, ſent with his Gracious Meſſage of the 26th of December laſt; Peace being the only Subject of it, and his Majeſty's Perſonal Treaty the Means propoſed for it. And it were almoſt as great a wonder, that his Majeſty ſhould be ſo long from enquiring after it, if that the hourly Expectation thereof had not in ſome meaſure ſatisfied his Impatience. But leſt his Majeſty by his long ſilence ſhould condemn himſelf of Careleſneſs in that which ſo much concerns the Good of all his People, he thinks it high time to enquire after his ſaid Trumpeter. For ſince all men who pretend any Goodneſs muſt deſire Peace, and that all men know Treaties to be the beſt and moſt Chriſtian way to procure it; and there being as little queſtion that his Majeſty's Perſonal Preſence in it is the likelieſt way to bring it to an happy Iſſue, he judges there muſt be ſome ſtrange variety of Accidents, which cauſeth this moſt tedious delay. Wherefore his Majeſty earneſtly deſires to have a ſpeedy Account of his former Meſſage, the Subject whereof is Peace, and the Means his Perſonal Preſence at Weſtminſter; where the Government of the Church being ſetled as it was in the Times of the happy and glorious Reigns of Q. Elizabeth and K. James, and full Liberty for the Eaſe of their Conſciences who will not communicate in that Service eſtabliſh'd by Law, and likewiſe for the free and publick Uſe of the Directory (preſcribed, and by Command of the Two Houſes of Parliament now practiſed in ſome parts of the City of London) to ſuch as ſhall deſire to uſe the ſame; and all Forces being agreed to be disbanded, his Majeſty will then forthwith (as he hath in his Meſſage of the 29*th* of December laſt already offered) join with his Two Houſes of Parliament in ſetling ſome way for the Payment of the Publick Debts to his Scots Subjects, the City of London, and others. And his Majeſty having propoſed a fair way for the ſetling of the Militia, which now by this long Delay ſeems not to be thought a ſufficient Security; his Majeſty (to ſhew how really he will employ himſelf at his coming to Weſtminſter, for making this a laſting Peace, and taking away all Jealouſies, how groundleſs ſoever) will endeavour upon Debate with his Two Houſes, ſo to diſpoſe of it (as likewiſe of the Buſineſs of Ireland, as may give them and both Kingdoms Satisfaction. Not doubting alſo but to give good Contentment to his Two Houſes of Parliament in the Choice of the Lord Admiral, the Officers of State, and others, if his Two Houſes by their ready Inclinations to Peace, ſhall give him Encouragement thereunto.

Thus his Majeſty having taken occaſion by his juſt Impatience ſo to explain his Intentions, that no man can doubt of an happy Iſſue to this ſucceeding Treaty; if now there ſhall be ſo much as a Delay of the ſame, he calls God and the World to witneſs who they are that not only hinder but reject this Kingdom's future happineſs: It being ſo much the ſtranger, that his Majeſty's coming to Weſtminſter (which was firſt the greateſt Pretence for taking up Arms) ſhould be ſo much as delayed, much leſs not accepted, or refuſed. But his Majeſty hopes that God will no longer ſuffer the Malice of wicked men to hinder the Peace of this too much afflicted Kingdom. Given at the Court at Oxford the 15th of January, 164⅚.

The Anſwer of both Houſes Jan. 13. to his Majeſty's two former Meſſages of the 26th and 29th of December.

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,

WE your humble and loyal Subjects of both Kingdoms, have received your Letters of the 26*th* and 29*th* of December laſt; unto which we humbly return this Anſwer, That there hath been no delay on our parts, but what was neceſſary in a buſineſs of ſo great a Conſequence as is expreſſed in our former Letter to your Majeſty. Concerning the Perſonal Treaty deſired by your Majeſty, there having been ſo much innocent Blood of your good Subjects ſhed in this War by your Majeſty's Commands and Commiſſions; Iriſh Rebels brought over into both Kingdoms, and Endeavours to bring over more into both of them, as alſo Forces from Foreign Parts; your Majeſty being in Arms in theſe Parts, and the Prince in the Head of an Army in the Weſt; divers Towns made Gariſons, and kept in Hoſtility againſt the Parliament of England; there being alſo Forces in Scotland againſt that Parliament and Kingdom, by your Majeſty's Commiſſion; the War in Ireland fomented and prolonged by your Majeſty; whereby the Three Kingdoms are brought near to utter Ruin and Deſtruction: We conceive that until Satisfaction and Security be firſt given to both your Kingdoms, your Majeſty's coming hither cannot be convenient, nor by us aſſented unto: Neither can we apprehend it a means conducing to Peace, that your Majeſty ſhould come to your Parliament for a few days, with any thoughts of leaving it, eſpecially with intentions of returning to Hoſtility againſt it. And we do obſerve, That your Majeſty deſires the Engagement not only of your Parliaments, but of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, Common-Council, and Militia of the City of London, the Chief Commanders of Sir Tho. Fairfax's Army, and thoſe of the Scots Army; which is againſt the Privileges and Honour of the Parliaments, thoſe being joined with them, who are ſubject and ſubordinate to their Authority. As to that which your Majeſty (againſt the Freedom of the Parliaments) inforces in both your Letters with many earneſt Expreſſions, as if in no other way than that propounded by your Majeſty, the Peace of the Kingdoms could be eſtabliſhed, your Majeſty may pleaſe to remember, That in our laſt Letter we did declare that Propoſitions from both Kingdoms were ſpeedily to be ſent to your Majeſty; which we conceive to be the only way for the obtaining an happy and well grounded Peace; and your Majeſty's Aſſent unto thoſe Propoſitions will be an effectual means for giving Satisfaction and Security to your Kingdoms, will aſſure a firm Union between the Two Kingdoms (as much deſired by each for other, as for themſelves), and ſettle Religion, and ſecure the Peace of the Kingdom of Scotland, whereof neither is ſo much as mentioned in your Majeſty's Letter. And in proceeding according to theſe juſt and neceſſary grounds for the putting an end to the bleeding Calamities of theſe Nations, your Majeſty may have the Glory to be a principal Inſtrument in ſo happy a Work, and we (however miſinterpreted) ſhall approve our ſelves to God and the World to be real and ſincere in ſeeking a ſafe and well-grounded Peace.

To the Speaker of the Houſe of Peers, &c. [Ut ſupra.]

Charles R.

HIS Majeſty thinks not fit now to anſwer thoſe Aſperſions which are return'd as Arguments for his Non-Admittance to Weſtminſter for a Perſonal Treaty, becauſe it would enforce a Stile not ſuitable to his End, it being the Peace of theſe miſerable Kingdoms: Yet this much he cannot but ſay to thoſe who have ſent him this Anſwer, That if they had conſidered what they had done themſelves in occaſioning the ſhedding of ſo much innocent Blood, by withdrawing themſelves from their Duty to him in a time when he had granted ſo much to his Subjects, and in violating the known Laws of the Kingdom, to draw an exorbitant Power to themſelves over their Fellow-Subjects, (to ſay no more, To do as they have done) ; they could not have given ſuch a falſe Character of his Majeſty's Actions. Wherefore his Majeſty muſt now remember them, That having ſome Hours before his receiving of their laſt Paper of the 13*th* of January, ſent another Meſſage to them of the 15*th*, wherein by divers Particulars he enlarges himſelf, to ſhew the Reality of his Endeavours for Peace, by his deſired Perſonal Treaty (which he ſtill conceives to be the likelieſt way to attain to that bleſſed End) he thinks fit by this Meſſage to call for an Anſwer to that, and indeed to all the former: For certainly no rational man can think their laſt Paper can be any Anſwer to his former Demands; the Scope of it being, That becauſe there is a War, therefore there ſhould be no Treaty for Peace. And is it poſſible to expect that the Propoſitions mentioned ſhould be the grounds of a laſting Peace, when the Perſons that ſend them will not endure to hear their own King ſpeak? But whatever the Succeſs hath been of his Majeſty's former Meſſages, or how ſmall ſoever his Hopes are of a better, conſidering the high ſtrain of thoſe that deal with his Majeſty, yet he will neither want Fatherly Bowels to his Subjects in general, nor will he forget that God hath appointed him for their King with whom he Treats: Wherefore he now demands a ſpeedy Anſwer to his laſt and former Meſſages. Given at our Court at Oxon this 17th of January, 1645.

His Majeſty's further Reply, Jan. 24.

To the Speaker of the Houſe of Peers, &c.

Charles R.

THE procuring Peace to theſe Kingdoms by Treaty is ſo much deſired by his Majeſty, that no unjuſt Aſperſions whatſoever, or any other Diſcouragements, ſhall make him deſiſt from doing his Endeavour therein, until he ſhall ſee it altogether impoſſible; and therefore hath thought fitting ſo far only to make Reply to that Paper or Anſwer which he hath received of the 13*th* of this Inſtant January, as may take away thoſe Objections which are made againſt his Majeſty's coming to Weſtminſter; expecting ſtill an Anſwer to his Meſſages of the 15*th* and 17*th*, which he hopes by this time have begotten better Thoughts and Reſolutions in the Members of both Houſes.

And firſt therefore, Whereas in the ſaid laſt Paper it is objected as an Impediment to his Majeſty's Perſonal Treaty, That much innocent Blood hath been ſhed in this War by his Majeſty's Commiſſions, &c. he will not now diſpute (it being apparent to all the World, by whom this Blood hath been ſpilt), but rather preſſeth that there ſhould be no more: And to that end only he hath deſired this Perſonal Treaty, as judging it the moſt immediate means to aboliſh ſo many horrid Confuſions in all his Kingdoms. And it is no Argument, to ſay that there ſhall be no ſuch Perſonal Treaty, becauſe there have been Wars; it being a ſtrong Inducement to have ſuch a Treaty, to put an end to the War.

2dly. That there ſhould be no ſuch Perſonal Treaty, becauſe ſome of his Iriſh Subjects have repaired to his Aſſiſtance, ſeems an Argument altogether as ſtrange as the other; as always urging, That there ſhould be no Phyſick, becauſe the Party is ſick. And in this particular it hath been often often obſerved unto them, That thoſe whom they call Iriſh, who have ſo expreſſed their Loyalty to their Sovereign, were indeed (for the moſt part) ſuch Engliſh Proteſtants as had been formerly ſent into Ireland by the Two Houſes, impoſſibilitated to ſtay there any longer, by the neglect of thoſe that ſent them thither, who ſhould there have better provided for them. And for any Foreign Forces, it is too apparent that Their Armies have ſwarmed with them, when his Majeſty hath had few or none.

And whereas for a Third Impediment it is alledged that the Prince is in the Head of an Army in the Weſt, and that there are divers Gariſons ſtill kept in his Majeſty's Obedience, and that there are Forces in Scotland; it muſt be as much confeſs'd, as that there is yet no Peace: And therefore it is deſired that by ſuch a Perſonal Treaty all theſe Impediments may be removed. And it is not here amiſs to put them in mind, how long ſince his Majeſty did preſs a disbanding of all Forces on both Sides: The refuſing whereof hath been the Cauſe of this Objection.

And whereas Exception is taken, that there is a Time limited in the Propoſition for his Majeſty's Perſonal Treaty, thereupon inferring that he ſhould again return to Hoſtility, his Majeſty proteſteth that he ſeeks this Treaty to avoid future Hoſtility, and to procure a laſting Peace: And if he can meet with like Inclinations to Peace in thoſe he deſires to Treat with, he will bring ſuch Affections and Reſolutions in himſelf, as ſhall end all theſe unhappy bloody Differences.

As for thoſe Engagements which his Majeſty hath deſired for his Security; whoſoever ſhall call to mind the particular occaſions that enforced his Majeſty to leave the City of London and Weſtminſter, will judge his Demand very reaſonable and neceſſary for his Safety. But he no way conceiveth how the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, Common-Council, and Militia of London, were either ſubject or ſubordinate to that Authority which is alledged, as knowing neither Law nor Practice for it: And if the Two Armies be, he believes it is more than can be parallel'd by any former Times in this Kingdom. Nor can his Majeſty underſtand how his Majeſty's ſeeking of a Perſonal Security can be any Breach of Privilege, it being likely to be infringed by hindring his Majeſty from coming freely to his Two Houſes.

As for the Objection, That his Majeſty omitted to mention the ſetling Religion, and ſecuring the Peace of his Native Kingdom, his Majeſty declares, That he conceives it was included in his former, and hath been particularly mentioned in his latter Meſſage of the 15*th* preſent. But for their better ſatisfaction, he again expreſſeth, that it was and ever ſhall be both his Meaning and Endeavour in this Treaty deſired. And it ſeems to him very clear, That there is no way for a final ending of ſuch Diſtractions as afflict this Kingdom, but either by Treaty or Conqueſt: The latter of which his Majeſty hopes none will have the Impudence or Impiety to wiſh for: And for the former, if his Perſonal Aſſiſtance in it be not the moſt likely way, let any reaſonable man judge, when by that means not only all unneceſſary Delays ſhall be removed, but even the greateſt Difficulties made eaſy. And therefore he doth now again earneſtly inſiſt upon that Propoſition, expecting to have a better Anſwer upon mature Conſideration. And can it be imagined that any Propoſitions will be ſo effectual, being formed before a Perſonal Treaty, as ſuch as are framed and propounded upon a full Debate on both ſides? Wherefore his Majeſty, who is moſt concerned in the good of his People, and is moſt deſirous to reſtore Peace and Happineſs to his Three Kingdoms, doth again inſtantly deſire an Anſwer to his ſaid former Meſſages, to which he hath hitherto received none. Given at our Court at Oxon the 24th of January, 1645.

His Majeſty's Meſſage, Jan 29.

To the Speaker of the Houſe of Peers, &c.

Charles R.

HIS Majeſty having received Information from the Lord Lieutenant and Council in Ireland, That the Earl of Glamorgan hath without his or their Directions or Privity, entred into a Treaty with ſome Commiſſioners on the Roman-Catholick Party there, and alſo drawn up and agreed unto certain Articles with the ſaid Commiſſioners, highly derogatory to his Majeſty's Honour and Royal Dignity, and moſt prejudicial unto the Proteſtant Religion and Church there in Ireland: Whereupon the ſaid Earl of Glamorgan is arreſted upon ſuſpicion of High Treaſon, and impriſoned by the ſaid Lord Lieutenant and Council, at the Inſtance and by the Impeachment of the Lord Digby, who (by reaſon of his Place and former Employment in theſe Affairs,) doth beſt know how contrary that proceeding of the ſaid Earl hath been to his Majeſty's Intentions and Directions; and what great prejudice it might bring to his Affairs, if thoſe Proceedings of the Earl of Glamorgan ſhould be any ways underſtood to have been done by the Directions, Liking, or Approbation of his Majeſty.

His Majeſty having in his former Meſſages for a Perſonal Treaty offered to give Contentment to his Two Houſes in the buſineſs of Ireland, hath now thought fitting, the better to ſhew his clear Intentions, and to give Satisfaction to his ſaid Houſes of Parliament, and the reſt of his Subjects in all his Kingdoms, to ſend this Declaration to his ſaid Houſes, containing the whole Truth of the Buſineſs; which is, That the Earl of Glamorgan having made Offer unto him to raiſe Forces in the Kingdom of Ireland, and to conduct them into England for his Majeſty's Service, had a Commiſſion to that purpoſe, and to that purpoſe only. That he had no Commiſſion at all to Treat of any thing elſe, without the Privity and Directions of the Lord Lieutenant, much leſs to capitulate any thing concerning Religion, or any Propriety belonging either to Church or Laity. That it clearly appears by the Lord Lieutenant's Proceedings with the ſaid Earl, that he had no notice at all of what the ſaid Earl had treated and pretended to have capitulated with the Iriſh, until by Accident it came to his knowledge. And his Majeſty doth proteſt, That until ſuch time as he had Advertiſement that the Perſon of the ſaid Earl of Glamorgan was arreſted and reſtrained as is aboveſaid, he never heard or had any kind of notice that the ſaid Earl had entred into any kind of Treaty or Capitulation with thoſe Iriſh Commiſſioners, much leſs that he had concluded or ſigned thoſe Articles, ſo deſtructive both to Church and State, and ſo repugnant to his Majeſty's publick Profeſſions, and known Reſolutions. And for the further Vindication of his Majeſty's Honour and Integrity herein, he doth declare, That he is ſo far from conſidering any thing contained in thoſe Papers or Writings, framed by the ſaid Earl and thoſe Commiſſioners with whom he treated, as he doth abſolutely diſavow him therein, and hath given Commandment to the Lord Lieutenant and the Council there, to proceed againſt the ſaid Earl as one who either out of Falſeneſs, Preſumption, or Folly, hath ſo hazarded the blemiſhing of his Majeſty's Reputation with his good Subjects, and ſo impertinently framed thoſe Articles of his own head, without the Conſent, Privity, or Directions of his Majeſty, or the Lord Lieutenant, or any of his Majeſty's Council there. But true it is, That for the neceſſary Preſervation of his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects in Ireland, whoſe caſe was daily repreſented unto him to be ſo deſperate, he had given Commiſſion to the Lord Lieutenant to treat and conclude ſuch a Peace there, as might be for the Safety of that Crown, the Preſervation of the Proteſtant Religion, and no way derogatory to his own Honour and Publick Profeſſions. But to the end his Majeſty's real Intentions in this Buſineſs of Ireland may be the more clearly underſtood, and to give more ample Satisfaction to both Houſes of Parliament, and the Commiſſioners of the Parliament of Scotland, eſpecially concerning his Majeſty's not being engaged in any Peace or Agreement there, he doth deſire, if the Two Houſes ſhall admit of his Majeſty's Repair to London for a Perſonal Treaty (as was formerly propoſed), That ſpeedy Notice be given thereof to his Majeſty, and a Paſs or ſafe Conduct with a Blank ſent, for a Meſſenger to be immediately diſpatch'd into Ireland, to prevent any Accident that may happen to hinder his Majeſty's Reſolution of leaving the managing the Buſineſs of Ireland wholly to the Two Houſes, and to make no Peace there but with their Conſent; which in caſe it ſhall pleaſe God to bleſs his Endeavours in the Treaty with Succeſs, his Majeſty doth hereby engage himſelf to do. And for a further Explanation of his Majeſty's Intentions in his former Meſſages, he doth now declare, That if his Perſonal Repair to London, as aforeſaid, ſhall be admitted, and a Peace thereon ſhall enſue, he will then leave the Nomination of the Perſons to be intruſted with the Militia, wholly to his Two Houſes, with ſuch Power and Limitations as are expreſſed in the Paper delivered by his Majeſty's Commiſſioners at Uxbridge, the 6th of February, 1644. for the Term of Seven Years, as hath been deſired, to begin immediately after the Concluſion of the Peace, the disbanding of all the Forces on both ſides, and the diſmantling of the Gariſons erected ſince theſe preſent Troubles; ſo as at the Expiration of the Time before-mentioned, the Power of the Militia ſhall entirely revert and remain as before.

And for their further Security, his Majeſty (the Peace ſucceeding) will be content, that pro hac vice, the Two Houſes ſhall nominate the Admiral, Officers of State, and Judges, to hold their Places during Life, or Quam diu ſe benè geſſerint, which ſhall be beſt liked, to be accountable to none but the King and the Two Houſes of Parliament. As for matter of Religion, his Majeſty doth further declare, That by the Liberty offered in his Meſſage of the 15th preſent, for the eaſe of their Conſciences who will not communicate in the Service already eſtabliſh'd by Act of Parliament in this Kingdom, he intends that all other Proteſtants behaving themſelves peaceably in and towards the Civil Government, ſhall have the free Exerciſe of their Religion according to their own way. And for the total removing of all Fears and Jealouſies, his Majeſty is willing to agree, That upon the Concluſion of Peace there ſhall be a general Act of Oblivion and Free Pardon paſs'd by Acts of Parliament in both his Kingdoms reſpectively.

And leſt it ſhould be imagined, that in making of theſe Propoſitions, his Majeſty's Kingdom of Scotland, and his Subjects there, have been forgotten or neglected, his Majeſty declares, That what is here mentioned touching the Militia, and the naming of Officers of State, and Judges, ſhall likewiſe extend to his Kingdom of Scotland. And now his Majeſty having ſo fully and clearly expreſſed his Intentions and Deſires of making a happy and well-grounded Peace; if any Perſon ſhall decline that Happineſs by oppoſing ſo apparent a way of attaining it, he will ſufficiently demonſtrate to all the World, his Intention and Deſign can be no other than the total Subverſion and Change of the Ancient and Happy Government of this Kingdom, under which the Engliſh Nation hath ſo long flouriſhed. Given at the Court at Oxford the 29th of January, 1645.

Charles R.

HIS Majeſty needs to make no Excuſe, tho he ſent no more Meſſages unto you; for he very well knows he ought not to do it, if he either ſtood upon Punctilio's of Honour, or his own private Intereſt; the one being already call'd in queſtion by his often ſending, and the other aſſuredly prejudg'd, if a Peace be concluded from that he hath already offered, he having thereby departed with many of his undoubted Rights. But nothing being equally dear to him to the Preſervation of his People, his Majeſty paſſeth by many Scruples, Neglects, and Delays, and once more deſires you to give him a ſpeedy Anſwer to his laſt Meſſage: For his Majeſty believes it doth very well become him (after this very long delay) at laſt to utter his Impatience, ſince that the Goods and Blood of his Subjects cries ſo much for Peace. Given at the Court at Oxford the 26th of February, 1645.

The King's Meſſage, March 23. 164 5/6.

To the Speaker of the Houſe of Peers, &c.

Charles R.

NOtwithſtanding the unexpected Silence, inſtead of Anſwer to his Majeſty's many and Gracious Meſſages to both Houſes, whereby it may appear that they deſire to attain their own Ends by Force rather than Treaty; which may juſtly diſcourage his Majeſty from any more Overtures of that kind; yet his Majeſty conceives he ſhall be much wanting in his Duty to God, and in what he oweth to the Safety of his People, if he ſhould not intend to prevent the great Inconveniences that may otherwiſe hinder a ſafe and well-grounded Peace. His Majeſty therefore now propoſeth, That ſo he may have the Faith of both Houſes of Parliament for the Preſervation of his Honour, Perſon, and Eſtate; and that Liberty be given to all thoſe who do and have adhered to his Majeſty, to go to their own Houſes, and there to live peaceably, enjoying their Eſtates, all Sequeſtrations being taken off, without being compell'd to take any Oath not enjoined by the undoubted Laws of the Kingdom, or being put to any other Moleſtation whatſoever; he will immediately diſband all his Forces, and diſmantle all his Gariſons; and being accompanied with his Royal, not his Martial Attendance, return to his Two Houſes of Parliament, and there reſide with them. And for the better Security of all his Majeſty's Subjects, he propoſeth, That he with his ſaid Two Houſes, immediately upon his coming to Weſtminſter, will paſs an Act of Oblivion and Free Pardon; and where his Majeſty will further do whatſoever they will adviſe him, for the Good and Peace of this Kingdom. And as for the Kingdom of Scotland, his Majeſty hath made no mention of it here, in regard of the great loſs of Time which muſt now be ſpent in expecting an Anſwer from thence; but declares, That immediately upon his coming to Weſtminſter, he will apply himſelf to give them all Satisfaction touching that Kingdom If his Majeſty could poſſibly doubt the Succeſs of this Offer, he could uſe many Arguments to perſuade them to it; but ſhall only inſiſt upon that Great One, of giving an inſtant Peace to theſe afflicted Kingdoms. Given at our Court at Oxford, the 23d of March, 1645.

Die Sabbathi, 14. Martii, 1645.

An Ordinance of the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament.

THE Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, being very ſenſible of the great Duty which lieth upon them to ſettle Matters concerning Religion, and the Worſhip of Almighty God; and having continually before their Eyes the Covenant which they have ſo ſolemnly taken for the performance thereof, and the manifold motives and encouragements thereunto, which are given them from God himſelf, by a ſpecial Hand of Providence, pouring forth daily Mercies upon them: In diſcharge of their Duty, and in purſuance of the ſaid Covenant, and in Thankfulneſs to God for all his Mercies, having diligently applied themſelves to that Work of his Houſe by his Grace and Aſſiſtance, they have made ſome progreſs therein, notwithſtanding the Exigency of other Affairs, accompanied oftentimes with great and imminent dangers; and notwithſtanding the great difficulty of the Work it ſelf in divers reſpects, and particularly in the right jointing of what was to be ſetled with the Laws and Government of the Kingdom, the want whereof hath cauſed cauſed much trouble in this and other States; yet by the merciful aſſiſtance of God, having removed the Book of Common-Prayer, with all its unneceſſary and burdenſome Ceremonies, and eſtabliſhed the Directory in the room thereof, and having aboliſhed the Prelatical Hierarchy by Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and their Dependants, and inſtead thereof laid the Foundation of a Presbyterial Government in every Congregation, with Subordination to Claſſical, Provincial, and National Aſſemblies, and of them all to the Parliament; Although it cannot be expected that a preſent Rule in every particular ſhould be ſetled all at once, but that there will be need of Supplements and Additions, and haply alſo of Alterations in ſome things, as Experience ſhall bring to light the neceſſity thereof; yet were the Fundamentals and Subſtantial Parts of that Government long ſince ſetled in Perſons, by and over whom it was to be exerciſed, and the nature, extent, and reſpective Subordination of their Power was limited, and defined; only concerning the Adminiſtration of the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, how all ſuch perſons as were guilty of notorious and ſcandalous Offences, might be ſuſpended from it, ſome difficulty ariſing, not ſo much in the Matter it ſelf, as in the Manner how it ſhould be done, and who ſhould be the Judges of the Offence: The Lords and Commons having it always in their purpoſe and intention, and it being accordingly declared and reſolved by them, That all ſorts of notorious ſcandalous Offenders ſhould be ſuſpended from the Sacrament; For the preventing of an indefinite and unlimited Power in the Elderſhips, they held it fit for the preſent, That the particular Caſes of ſuch ſcandalous Offences ſhould be ſpecified and enumerated, with expreſs Declaration, That further proviſion ſhould be made by Authority of Parliament, for ſuch Caſes as were left out of the ſaid Enumeration; which accordingly having ſince taken into their ſerious Conſideration, and having had ſeveral debates thereupon, as the difficulty of the Matter required, which hath taken up much time, for the avoiding, as far as poſſible may be, all Arbitrary Power; and that all ſuch Caſes wherein Perſons ſhould be ſuſpended from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, might be brought to the Cognizance, and paſs the Judgment of the Parliament, who were bound in Juſtice as well to take care that none be injuriouſly detained from that Ordinance, as to give Power whereby ſuch may be kept away who are unfit to partake therein: And to the intent alſo that a full and ſpeedy courſe may be ſetled to enable the ſeveral Elderſhips to ſuſpend all ſuch Offenders from the Lord's Supper, without having recourſe to the Parliament it ſelf from all parts of the Kingdom upon every ſuch emergent Caſe, which might prove troubleſome and tedious, and give liberty to ſuch notorious and ſcandalous Offenders to communicate a long ſpace in the ſaid Ordinance: And to the intent likewiſe, that all ſuch Caſes coming firſt from the particular Elderſhips, may after they have paſſed the Judgment of Parliament, return again to all the ſeveral Elderſhips within the Kingdom, to proceed upon them from time to time in like manner as in the Caſes enumerated. For the Ends and Purpoſes aforeſaid, and alſo for Supply of ſome Defects in the former Ordinance and Directions of Parliament, concerning the Choice of Elders, and ſome other Matters:

I Be it Ordained, That there be forthwith a Choice made of Elders throughout the Kingdom of England, and Dominion of Wales, in the reſpective Pariſh-Churches and Chappels, according to ſuch Directions as have already paſſed both Houſes, bearing date Auguſt the Nineteenth, One thouſand ſix hundred forty and five, and ſince that time: And all Claſſes and Parochial Congregations are reſpectively hereby Authorized and required forthwith effectually to proceed therein accordingly.

II. That notice of the Election of Parochial and Congregational Elders, and of the Time when it ſhall be, be given by the Miniſter in the publick Aſſembly, the next Lord's Day but one before; and that on the ſaid Lord's Day a Sermon be preached preparatory to that weighty Buſineſs.

III. That ſuch Elections ſhall be made by the Congregation, or the Major part of them then aſſembled, being ſuch as have taken the National Covenant, and are not Perſons under Age, nor Servants that have no Families.

IV. That the Triers of Elections of Elders, ſhall have power to receive, hear, and determine all Exceptions brought in to them concerning undue Elections; and to that end to call before them all ſuch perſons ſo elected, and accepting ſuch Election, and to ſend for ſuch Witneſſes as ſhall be nominated unto them by ſuch perſons as ſhall bring in ſuch Exceptions, and ſhall have power to examine upon Oath, both the perſons bringing in ſuch Exceptions, and the ſaid Witneſſes, concerning any undue proceedings in the manner of the ſaid Election, and concerning all matters of Ignorance or Scandal objected againſt the Party elected, and expreſſed in any Ordinance of Parliament to be a ſufficient cauſe of Suſpenſion from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper (and of which any Elderſhip by any Ordinance of Parliament hath Cognizance and Juriſdiction) and that ſhall be proved to have been been committed within one whole Year before the Exceptions exhibited; and that the perſons againſt whom the Exceptions are taken, ſhall have like liberty to produce Witneſſes to be examined in like manner on their behalf.

V. That the Triers ſhall have Power to examine whether the Elders that are to be choſen, be ſo qualified as is expreſſed in the Ordinance or Directions which hath paſſed both Houſes.

VI. That in caſe the Election of any Elder of a Congregation, upon juſt proof and examination be found by the Triers appointed for that purpoſe, to be unduly made; the ſaid Triers may order ſuch Elder to be removed, and another to be choſen in his place.

VII. That the Chappels or places in the Houſes of the King and his Children, ſhall continue free for the exerciſe of Divine Duties, to be performed according to the Directory, and not otherwiſe.

VIII. That the Chappels or places in the Houſes of the Peers of this Realm, ſhall have the like freedom.

IX. That the Savoy Pariſh ſhall be reckoned within the Eleventh Claſſis of London.

X. That the Chappel of the Rolls, the Two Serjeants Inns, and the Four Inns of Court, ſhall be a Province of themſelves.

That the Presbytery of the Chappel of the Rolls, the Two Serjeants Inns, and the Four Inns of Court, ſhall be divided into Two Claſſes.

That Lincolns-Inn, Grays-Inn, Serjeants-Inn in Chancery-Lane, and the Rolls, ſhall be one Claſſis: That the Two Temples, and Serjeants-Inn in Fleetſtreet, ſhall be the other Claſſis.

XI. That the Claſſical Aſſemblies in each Province ſhall aſſemble themſelves within one Month after they ſhall be conſtituted and this Ordinance publiſhed, and ſhall thenceforth hold their Meetings Monthly by Adjournment, or oftner if need be, in ſuch a certain place as ſhall be moſt convenient for the eaſe of the people.

XII. That out of every Congregational Elderſhip there ſhall be two Elders or more, not exceeding the number of four, and one Miniſter ſent to every Claſſis.

XIII. That all perſons guilty of notorious ſcandalous Offences, and more particularly all Renouncers of the true Proteſtant Religion, profeſſed in the Church of England; and all perſons that ſhall by preaching or writing maintain any ſuch Errors as do ſubvert any of thoſe Articles, the ignorance whereof do render any perſon excluded from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper; and all perſons that ſhall make any Images or Pictures of the Trinity, or of any Perſon thereof; and all perſons in whom malice appears, and they refuſe to be reconciled, and the ſame appearing upon juſt proof, all ſuch perſons may be ſuſpended from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

XIV. That in every Province perſons ſhall be choſen by the Houſes of Parliament, that ſhall be Commiſſioners to judge of ſcandalous Offences (not enumerated in any Ordinance of Parliament) to them preſented: And that the Elderſhip of that Congregation where the ſaid Offence was committed, ſhall upon examination and proof of ſuch ſcandalous Offence (in like manner as is to be done in the Offences enumerated) certify the ſame to the Commiſſioners, together with the proof taken before them; and before the ſaid Certificate, the Party accuſed ſhall have liberty to make ſuch defence as he ſhall think fit before the ſaid Elderſhip, and alſo before the Commiſſioners, before any Certificate ſhall be made to the Parliament. And if the ſaid Commiſſioners after examination of all parties, ſhall determine the Offence ſo preſented and proved, to be ſcandalous, and the ſame ſhall certify to the Congregation, gregation, the Elderſhip thereof may ſuſpend ſuch perſon from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, in like manner as in Caſes enumerated in any Ordinance of Parliament.

XV. That ſuch perſons as ſhall be choſen for Commiſſioners to judge of notorious and ſcandalous Offences as aforeſaid, ſhall be men of good underſtanding in matters of Religion, ſound in the Faith, prudent, diſcreet, grave, and of unblameable Converſation, and ſuch as do uſually receive the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, as Members of a Presbyterial Congregation.

XVI. That if any perſon ſhall commit any ſcandalous Offence (not enumerated in any Ordinance of Parliament) upon the day of the Adminiſtration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, in the face of the Congregation after it is aſſembled, the Miniſter of that Congregation may forbear to adminiſter the Sacrament to ſuch a perſon for that time; and he ſhall within eight days after certify the ſaid Offence and Forbearance unto the Commiſſioners aforeſaid; and upon Certificate ſo made, the ſaid Commiſſioners ſhall proceed thereupon as in other Caſes not enumerated, and ſhall make Certificate of the Caſe or Caſes, with their Opinions, to both Houſes of Parliament with all ſpeed: And thereupon the Parliament ſhall proceed to a final determination of the Caſe, and ſend the ſame determination thereof to the Pariſh where ſuch Offence ſhall have been committed: And as often as the like Caſe ſhall fall out in any Congregation, the Elderſhip thereof having notice of ſuch Determination, ſhall proceed thereupon as in caſe of Offences enumerated in any Ordinance of Parliament.

XVII. That the ſaid Commiſſioners, upon notice given to them, or any two of them, of any caſe of Scandal befallen (whereof they ought to have Cognizance by virtue of any Ordinance of Parliament) ſhall aſſemble themſelves in ſuch certain place within that Province, as may be moſt convenient for the eaſe of the people: And thereof ſhall give timely notice to the Miniſters of that Province whereof they are Commiſſioners, and being met ſhall adjourn their Meeting from time to time, for ſuch time as the Caſe ſhall require.

XVIII. That the Elderſhip of each Congregation, or the Major part of them, as alſo the Claſſis of each Province, or Major part of them, and alſo the Provincial Commiſſioners, or the Major part of them, after they ſhall be aſſembled, ſhall have power by Warrant under their hands (in all Caſes whereof they have Cognizance by any Ordinance of Parliament) to covent before them all perſons againſt whom any Complaint ſhall be brought by virtue of any ſuch Ordinance, and all ſuch Witneſſes as ſhall be named according to any ſuch Ordinance, for the diſcovery of the Truth of ſuch Complaint: And in caſe any ſuch perſon ſhall refuſe to appear, not being a Peer of this Realm, Member of the Houſe of Commons, or Aſſiſtant of the Houſe of Peers, or Officer of either of the Houſes of Parliament, then upon Complaint made to the next Juſtice of the Peace, the Party refuſing ſhall be brought before him; and in caſe of obſtinate perſiſting, ſhall be committed by the ſaid Juſtice of Peace till he ſubmit to order.

XIX. That if any Member of a Congregation ſhall, by virtue of any Ordinance of Parliament, for any Offence of Scandal be ſuſpended from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper; and being ſo ſuſpended, ſhall offer himſelf to any other Congregation to receive the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper together with them, ſuch Congregation having notice of ſuch Suſpenſion, ſhall not, without Certificate from the Congregation whereof he is a Member, admit him unto the Sacrament.

XX. That any Miniſter of a Congregation may be ſuſpended from giving or receiving, and any Elder from receiving the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, for the ſame Cauſes, and in the ſame Manner, and have the like Benefit of Appeal, as any other perſon may by any Ordinance of Parliament. And after ſuch Suſpenſion of the Elder from the Sacrament, the Elder ſo ſuſpended ſhall not execute that Office during his Suſpenſion, until the Appeal be determined; and if upon Appeal the Suſpenſion appear to have been juſt, then another to be choſen in his place.

XXI. That in all Caſes of Appeal to the Claſſical, Provincial, or National Aſſembly, they ſhall have power reſpectively to proceed thereupon by Examination of Witneſſes and otherwiſe, in ſuch manner as the Congregational Elderſhip from which the Appeal ariſeth are enabled to do by any Ordinance of Parliament, and ſhall certiſy their Proceedings unto the ſaid Elderſhip.

XXII. That in caſe of ſuch Suſpenſion of any Miniſter, the Claſſis whereunto the ſaid Congregation doth belong, ſhall appoint ſome fit perſon or perſons for the ſupply of ſuch place during ſuch Suſpenſion; and ſhall have power to allow convenient Maintenance for that end, out of the profits belonging to the Miniſter ſo ſuſpended; and have hereby power to ſequeſter and employ the ſame for that purpoſe.

XXIII. That in all Caſes of Suſpenſion of any perſon from the Sacrament, the party ſuſpended (upon manifeſtation of his or her Repentance before the Elderſhip by whom the party was ſuſpended) ſhall be admitted again unto the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and the Suſpenſion thenceforth ſhall be void.

Provided, That if the ſaid Commiſſioners, or any Two of them, ſhall not determine the Caſe ſo certified as aforeſaid to them from the Elderſhip, within Six Weeks after the Certificate to them made, the Party is hereby enjoined to forbear coming to the Sacrament, until the Cauſe ſhall be determined, or until he give Satisfaction to the Elderſhip.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Affairs in and relating to Scotland, 1645.

WE have before in the Year 1644. given ſome Account of the Victorious Proceedings of the Marqueſs of Montroſs in that time: And to proſecute the Actions of that Nobleman, will comprehend the moſt remarkable Occurrences of that Kingdom in this Year, he making the principal Figure therein at this time.

Montroſs worſted at Dundee, April 4.

His firſt Attempt then was on the Town of Dundee; to which, upon (falſe) Intelligence that the Covenanters Army, under Sir John Hurray, General of Horſe, and Lieutenant-General Bailey (which before were quartered ſome on the South-ſide, and the other on the North-ſide of the River Tay) were all gone over to the other ſide of the River, he march'd about Midnight, April 3. from Dunkelden with ſo much Expedition, that he was at Dundee by Ten of the Clock next morning, and ſummon'd the Town, who ('tis ſaid) had notice of his Advance, and promiſe of ſpeedy Relief from Hurray; and ſo the Townſmen and Inhabitants, there being few Soldiers there, got themſelves in a Poſture of Defence. Montroſs ſent down the greateſt part of his Forces, who ſtorm'd the Town in Three places at once, gain'd one of the Forts, and poſſeſſing themſelves of the Ordnance therein, turned them upon the Town, and ſet fire on the Suburbs in ſeveral places: In the mean time Montroſs with about 500 Men ſtood on a Hill at ſome ſmall diſtance, not doubting of being Maſter of the whole Town, till his Scouts brought him word that Hurray with 3000 Foot and 800 Horſe was near approaching; whereupon he immediately gave Orders to his Men in the Skirts of the Town to retreat; which was difficultly obey'd, as being unwilling to part from that Booty, and eſpecially the Strong Drink they there met with: But in fine he got them off, the Enemy being almoſt within Muſquet-ſhot, and ſo as well as he could retreated, himſelf with his Horſe bringing up the Rear: But in the Aſſault and Retreat loſt great Numbers of his Men; and with much ado, and the Policy of a ſudden wheeling to the Southweſt to baulk the Purſuers, Night growing on, and then next Morning turning Northward, and paſſing over South-Eſk at a place not far from Careſton Caſtle, and ſo to Brechin, he made his Eſcape to the Mountains. And tho this Expedition was unfortunately (by the Miſinformation of his Scouts) attended with Loſs, yet conſidering all things, as to the Valour and Prudence of the General, and the Hardineſs and Patience of his Soldiers, who for Threeſcore Miles together were either in Fight, or upon a March, without any Refreſhment, it may be numbred amongſt one of the moſt remarkable Exploits of thoſe Times.

Fight between Montroſs and Hurray at Alderne, May 4.

His next Riſque was at a Village called Alderne in Murray, near Innerneſs, May 4. where being preſſed by Hurray, and fearing on the other ſide to be encompaſſed by Bailey's Forces (for after the Battel of Dundee they had divided their Troops) he reſolv'd by neceſſity to engage Hurray, chuſing the beſt advantage of the Ground, whereon to expect the Enemy: Out of whoſe view, in a Valley, drawing up his Forces, and planting a few choice Foot with his Ordnance, he committed the Right Wing to Alexander Mac-Donnel, with 400 Foot, and lodg'd them in places fortified to their hand with Banks and Ditches, Shrubs and great Stones, enjoining him not to depart thence, but lye ſafe there, as a Reſerve upon any occaſion; withal committing to him the Royal Standard, which Montroſs himſelf had uſually born before him; hoping by the ſight of that to engage the Enemy that way to their diſadvantage, whilſt he took the opportunity to infeſt them elſewhere: And this partly ſucceeded according to his Wiſh; only Mac-Donnel by a too raſh Courage advancing out of his Natural Advantages, to meet and charge the Enemy, was overborn and put to flight: Tho the Enemy's Wing, which Montroſs himſelf charged, was alſo routed: So that it ſeem'd a kind of drawn Game, and both Sides, as they had fought ſtoutly, pretended to the Victory, there being about 2000 Men ſlain upon the place.

In the mean time the Parliament met at Edinburgh, to whom the Parliament of England ſent Commiſſioners: And the Aſſembly of the Kirk were buſy, and drew up the following Remonſtrance, which about the latter end of June was preſented to the King at Hereford.

To the King's moſt Excellent Majeſty.

The Humble Remonſtrance of the General Aſſembly of the Kirk of Scotland.

A Remonſtrance of the Kirk of Scotland, preſented to his Majeſty at Hereford, about the 25th of June, 1645.

As our Record is on high, and our Conſciences bear us witneſs, ſo the many former Supplications and Remonſtrances to your Majeſty from this Kirk and Kingdom, our ſolemn Covenants, and the whole courſe of our Proceedings from time to time, in proſecution of this Cauſe, do make known to the World, and we truſt alſo to your own Conſcience, our Loyalty and faithful Subjection, and how far our Intentions are from the Diminution of your Majeſty's juſt Power and Greatneſs.

And altho the Succeſs of many of our humble Addreſſes to your Majeſty hath been ſuch as did fruſtrate our Deſires and Hopes, yet this hath not blotted out of our hearts our Loyalty ſo often profeſſed before God and the World; but it is ſtill our Souls deſire, and our Prayer to God for you, That your Self and your Poſterity may proſperouſly Reign over this your Ancient and Native Kingdom, and over your other Dominions.

And now as we have publiſhed a ſolemn and free Warning to the Noblemen, Barons, Gentlemen, Boroughs, Miniſters, and Commons of this Kingdom, concerning the preſent Affliction of this Nation, and their Sins procuring the ſame; ſo when we call to mind that God accepteth not the Perſons of Men, and that the Greateſt are not to be winked at in their Sins, we aſſure our ſelves that the beſt and moſt real Teſtimony which we can give at this preſent of the Tenderneſs and Uprightneſs of our Affection to your Majeſty's true Happineſs, is this our humble and faithful Repreſentation of your Majeſty's great and growing Dangers, and the Cauſes thereof: Of which, if we ſhould be ſilent, our Conſciences would condemn us, and the Stones themſelves would immediately cry out.

The Troubles of our Hearts are enlarged, and our Fears increaſed in your Majeſty's behalf, perceiving that your Peoples Patience is above meaſure tempted, and is like a Cart preſſed down with Sheaves, and ready to break; while as beſides many former Deſigns and Endeavours to bring Deſolation and Deſtruction upon us, which were (and we truſt all of that kind ſhall be) by the marvellous and merciful Providence of God, diſcovered and diſappointed: Our Country is now infeſted, the Blood of divers of our Brethren ſpilt, and other Acts of moſt barbarous and horrid Cruelty exercis'd by the curſed Crew of the Iriſh Rebels and their Complices, under the Conduct of ſuch as have Commiſſion and Warrant from your Majeſty. And unleſs we prove unfaithful both to God and to your Majeſty, we cannot conceal another Danger which is infinitely greater than that of your Peoples Diſpleaſure: Therefore we the Servants of the moſt High God, and your Majeſty's moſt Loyal Subjects, in the Humility and Grief of our Hearts, fall down before your Throne, and in the Name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who ſhall judge the World in Righteouſneſs, both great and ſmall, and in the Name of this whole Kirk which we repreſent, we make bold to warn your Majeſty, That the Guilt which cleaveth faſt to your Throne is ſuch, as (whatſoever flattering Preachers or unfaithful Counſellors may ſay to the contrary) if not timely repented, cannot but involve your ſelf and your Poſterity under the Wrath of the Everliving God: For your being guilty of the ſhedding of the Blood of many Thouſands of your Majeſty's beſt Subjects: For your permitting the Maſs and other Idolatry both in your own Family and in your Dominions: For your Authorizing by the Book of Sports the Prophanation of the Lord's Day: For your not puniſhing of Publick Scandals, aud much Prophaneneſs in and about your Court: For ſhutting of your Ears from the humble and juſt Deſires of your faithful Subjects: For your complying too much with the Popiſh Party many ways, and namely by concluding the Ceſſation of Arms in Ireland, and your embracing the Counſels of thoſe who have not ſet God nor your good before their eyes: For your reſiſting and oppoſing this Cauſe, which ſo much concerneth the Glory of God, your own Honour and Happineſs, and the Peace and Safety of your Kingdoms: And for what other Cauſes your Majeſty is conſcious, and may beſt judge and ſearch your own Conſcience; (nor would we have mentioned any Particulars, if they had not been publickly known.) For all which it is high time for your Majeſty to fall down at the Footſtool of the King of Glory, To acknowledge your Offences, To repent timely, To make your Peace with God through Jeſus Chriſt (whoſe Blood is able to waſh away your great Sins) and to be no longer unwilling that the Son of God reign over you and your Kingdoms in his pure Ordinances of Church-Government and Worſhip.

Theſe things if your Majeſty do, it ſhall be no Grief of Heart unto you afterwards: A Bleſſing is reſerved for you, and you ſhall find Favour with God, and with your People, and with all the Churches of Chriſt. But if your Majeſty refuſe to hearken to this wholſome Counſel (which the Lord forbid) we have diſcharg'd our Conſciences; we take God and Men to witneſs, That we are blameleſs of the ſad Conſequences which may follow; and we ſhall wait upon the Lord, who when he maketh Inquiſition for Blood, will not forget the Cry of the humble. In the mean while beſeeching your Majeſty to take notice, That we are not ſtaggering or fainting through Diffidence of the Succeſs of this Cauſe and Covenant of the Three Kingdoms; unto which, as God hath given manifold Teſtimonies of his Favour and Bleſſing, ſo it is our ſtedfaſt and unſhaken Confidence, That this is the Work and Cauſe of God, which ſhall glorioully prevail againſt all Oppoſition; and from which, with the Aſſiſtance of the Grace of God, we ſhall never ſuffer our ſelves to be divided or withdrawn; but ſhall zealouſly and conſtantly in our ſeveral Vocations, endeavour with our Eſtates and Lives the purſuing and promoving thereof.

Montroſs defeats Bailey at Alford, July 2

The next Engagement Montroſs had was with Bailey, at a place called Alford, on the Second of July; where he gave the Command of his Right Wing (on which ſide the Enemies Horſe were moſt ſtrong) unto the Lord Gordon, with Nathanael Gordon, an Old Commander, to be his Aſſiſtant: The Left Wing he diſpos'd to the Earl of Abony, to whom was alſo joined Sir William Rollock: The Main Body were led by Glengar, and Drumond of Ball the Younger, unto whom he added George Graham, Maſter of the Camp, an expert Soldier: And the Reſerve, which was altogether hid behind a Hill, was commanded by his Nephew Napier. Thus judiciouſly appointed, they ſmartly charged the Enemy, and after a brisk Diſpute forced them to retreat. The Loſs which Montroſs moſt regretted, being that of the Lord Gordon, who was there ſlain.

Montroſs's great Victory at Kilſythe.

But if Montroſs had here the Advantage, it was nothing comparable to that which not long afterwards he obtain'd at Kilſythe, not far from Sterling, where he utterly defeated Baily's Forces, and had the killing of them for Fourteen Miles together, and took all their Ordnance, Ammunition, Arms, and Spoil. Argyle (who was there) eſcaping to the Scotiſh Fryth, ſhipp'd himſelf in a Veſſel and got out to Sea. Sir William Murray of Bleke, James Arnot, Brother to the Lord Burghley, Col. Dice, Col. Wallis, and others, were taken Priſoners.

And Montroſs's Men gave out, That that day they ſlew no fewer than 6000 of their Enemies, and that they themſelves loſt but Six Perſons, whereof Three were Gentlemen of the Family of the Ogilby's, who had the beſt ſhare in acquiring this Victory.

Noblemen that join'd with Montroſs.

Priſoners at Edinburgh releaſed, and the City begs favour of Montroſs,

The next day Montroſs march'd into Cluidſdale, and ſo to Glaſcow, taking that City into his Protection, and quarter'd his Army for ſome time at Bothwell, where ſeveral of the Nobility came in to him; as the Marqueſs of Dowglas, the Chief of that Name; the Earls of Limmuck, Annandale, and Hertfield; the Lord Barons of Seton, Drummond, Fleming, Maderty, Carnegy, and Johnſton, Hamilton of Orbeſton, Charter of Hempsfield, Tours of Innerliegh, Stuart of Roſyth, and Dalyel a Brother of the Earl of Carnwarths; and indeed the whole Country ſeem'd to be at his Devotion; inſomuch that he ſending Col. Nathaniel Gordon, and a commanded Party of Horſe to Edinburgh, to ſummon that City, and command them to ſet the Priſoners that were there detained, at Liberty, viz. Lodowick Earl of Crawford, Chief of the Lindſeys, James Lord Ogilby, Son to the Earl of Airley, and others; the City immediately diſcharged the ſaid Priſoners, and ſent Delegates with them to Montroſs, beſeeching his Favour to the City, and promiſing all Obedience to the King: Upon which, and for that the Plague was then very rife in that City, he forbore marching thither with his Army.

David Leſley, with the Horſe out of England, croſſes the Tweed, Sept. 6.

The Scots Army in England hearing of theſe great Succeſſes of Montroſs at home, raiſed their Siege from before Hereford, and diſpatch'd Lieutenant-General David Leſley with moſt of their Horſe for Scotland. And by Order of the Two Houſes, the 5*th* of September was kept at London as a Day of Humiliation and Prayer, for the Ceſſation of the Plague, and other preſent Calamities of that Kingdom. The 6*th* of September Leſley paſs'd the Tweed, and in Scotland muſter'd Nine Regiments of Horſe, Two Regiments of Dragoons, and Eight hundred Foot, which were taken out of the Gariſon of Newcaſtle, and other Forces rallied in that Kingdom.

Montroſs had Inſtructions from the King to march towards the Tweed, to be ready there to join with a Party of Horſe which ſhould be ſent him out of England: But theſe being the Horſe under Digby and Langdale, which were ſo unfortunately routed at Carliſle-Sands, as we have mentioned before, his Expectation therein was fruſtrated: And therefore fearing the Enemy would block up his Paſſage into the North and Highlands, reſolved with thoſe few Men he had (for many of the Highlanders, according to their Cuſtom, having got ſtore of Spoil, were run home therewith) to march into Niddiſdale, and Annandale, and the Countrey of Aire, that he might there raiſe what Horſe he could; and ſo marched towards Selkirke, where he quarter'd his Horſe in a Village called Philip-haugh, and his Foot in a Wood hard by, reſolving to make uſe of all Advantages of Ground, having on the one hand a deep Ditch, on the other Dykes and Hedges, which he cauſed to be lined with Muſqueteers; and 'tis like had been better prepar'd, if he had not been deceiv'd by the Miſtake of his Scouts, who aſſured him no Enemy was near. For tho Leſley, after a Muſter on Gladeſmors, a Plain in Lothianſhire, had quarter'd the Night before within Four Miles of Selkirk, yet Montroſs had no notice thereof till about Ten a Clock the next Morning, being Saturday the 13*th* of September, his Scouts came almoſt breathleſs to inform him, that Leſley was marching up within a Mile of him; and ſoon after came in view; whereupon Montroſs ſent out a Party of 200 Muſqueteers, who were forced to retreat in great Diſorder; and then Leſley's Van advanced, and for about an Hour (being from about Eleven a Clock till Twelve) the Battel was very fierce; Leſley's Horſe endeavouring to break through, and Montroſs's Men with great Reſolution maintaining their Ground; till at length Leſley charging very deſperately at the Head of his own Regiment, broke the Body of Montroſs's Foot, and put them into Confuſion, and then his Horſe being few, could make little oppoſition; ſo that the Foot were almoſt all cut off, or taken Priſoners, amongſt whom about an Hundred were Iriſh, who afterwards were all ſhot at a Poſt. Montroſs fought very bravely, and rallied his Horſe, and charged the Purſuers once or twice, and by that Bravery loſt more Men than otherwiſe he would have done. Here were taken Priſoners, the Earl of Traquaire, the Lords Seton, Drummond, Ogilby, Gray, and Linton; the Lord Napier's pier's Eldeſt Son, Sir William Rollock, O Cahen, Lieutenant-Colonel to the Iriſh, and many other Perſons of Quality. All the Baggage, and with it the Marquiſs's Commiſſion from the King to be Governor of Scotland, and a Roll, wherein were the Names of all that either were come in to, or held Correſpondence with Montroſs; which occaſioned trouble to many perſons afterwards.

Montroſs routted at Philip-haugh, near Selkirk, Sept. 13.

An. 1645.

Priſoners taken.

Montroſs gets to the Mountains.

Montroſs with his ſhatter'd Forces being got beyond purſuit, made a Halt at a Town call'd Peblis, to refreſh his Men, and by break of day next morning (by the Conduct of Sir John Dalyel) paſſed over Cluid at a Ford, reſolving to make what haſte he could into Athole, that taking his Riſe there, he might draw what Forces he could raiſe of the Highlanders: Therefore paſſing firſt over the Forth, and then the Ern, and marching through the Sheriſdom of Perth by the Foot of the Mountains, he came thither, having ſent before Douglas and Airley with a Party of Horſe into Angus, and the Lord Areskin into Marr, that they might raiſe their Friends and Dependants in thoſe parts; and alſo diſpatch'd Sir John Dalyel unto the Lord Carnegy, with Commiſſions for the ſame purpoſe. But tho he uſed all poſſible Endeavours, he could not afterwards raiſe any very conſiderable Army; tho ſtill he kept up his Forces, and by ſudden Marches and Attempts did continually alarm and vex the Covenanters, who cauſed ſeveral of his Friends whom they had taken Priſoners, to be executed; viz. Col. Nath. Gordon, Sir William Spotſwood (lately Principal Secretary of Scotland) Andrew Guthery, Son of the Biſhop of Murray, and William Murray, Son to the Earl of Tullibardin: But the Lord Ogilby made ſhift to eſcape; for pretending himſelf ſick, on that occaſion got leave for his Mother, Wife, and Siſters to viſit him, and one of the Siſters lay down in the Bed in his ſtead with his Cap on, and he putting on her Gown, went freely away with the other Ladies: The Siſter was queſtion'd and much threatned for this Contrivance; but by the help of the Hamiltons and Lindſey, to whom ſhe was related, was after ſome time diſcharged.

Royaliſts put to Death in Scotland.

Montroſs was extremely grieved for the Death of theſe his Friends, and endeavoured to revenge the ſame: And when at laſt, after the King's going to the Scotiſh Army in England, he received his Majeſty's Order to diſmiſs his Forces, and retire out of the Kingdom, he ſubmitted thereunto (tho not without ſome Reluctance, as believing thoſe Commands extorted from the King), and with ſeveral of his choiceſt Friends embark'd at the Haven of Stunhyve, and ſailed into Norway on the 3*d* of September, 1646. and in the Four and thirtieth Year of his Age.

Right Honourable,

YOur ſeveral Addreſſes to the Honourable Houſes of Parliament, and the relation of our Commiſſioners, hath given us ſo perfect knowledge and deep impreſſion of your affection and true zeal for the Reformation of Religion, and Uniformity of Church-Government, as hath much refreſhed us in our greateſt difficulties, and doth far exceed our acknowledgments.

Your conſtant care of advancing and furniſhing very great Sums of Money to the Armies who ſtand for defence of Religion, and the juſt publick Liberty of the Subjects in all the Three Kingdoms, is an evident demonſtration how much you prefer the Good of the Publick to your private Intereſt: And your ſpecial regard in chearfully ſupplying the Armies of this Kingdom with Money and other neceſſary Proviſions, in the times of their moſt urgent Neceſſities, hath ſo greatly endeared unto us the Brotherly Affection of that famous City, as will not only be a real Tye of Amity for the preſent, but will likewiſe lay a firm foundation of reciprocal Kindneſs and inviolable Friendſhip for all ſucceeding Ages. And as the many real proofs of your Affection and Fidelity, in doing and ſuffering for the Cauſe of God, gives unto us full perſuaſions and confidence of your Conſtancy for promoting thereof, till (by God's Bleſſing upon the joint Endeavours of both Nations) Truth with a juſt Peace (which is the higheſt of our deſires) be ſettled in all the Kingdoms: So do we conceive it ſuitable to your Deſerts, and agreeable to the Gratitude of this Kingdom, to return you moſt hearty Thanks; and to aſſure you, That all our Actions ſhall witneſs the Candor and Sincerity of our Intentions, and moſt earneſt deſires to embrace and improve all opportunities which may conduce to the Proſperity of your City, and teſtify the Brotherly Affection of

THE large and abundant Proof you have given now a long time of your Sincerity, Conſtancy, and unwearied Painfulneſs in advancing and ſetling the Affairs of Chriſt, together with your Vigilancy and Circumſpection againſt every Way deſtructive to the Unity deſired and intended in our Solemn League and Covenant, remonſtrated to us by the General Aſſembly, and their Commiſſioners from time to time; as it doth comfort us in all the ſad Sufferings of this Land, ſo ſhall you receive the ſweet reward of your toilſome Labours in that Work ſo acceptable to God; and thereby your Name ſhall be famous to all Churches abroad, and your Memory gracious to Poſterity.

And altho the Honourable Houſes of Parliament in that Kingdom are exerciſed with ſuch difficulties as occaſion theſe long delays of eſtabliſhing the Government of the Church agreeable to the Word of God, and the beſt Reformed Churches; yet are we confident, that (by the bleſſing of God upon the Endeavours of the Honourable Houſes) their Wiſdom and Zeal will break through all difficulties and delays, for ſetling that Government to our common Joy, whereby the hearts of the Lord's People fainting under languiſhing Expectation, may be comforted, the Adverſaries fruſtrated of their vain hopes, deluding Errors ſuppreſſed, dangerous Schiſms may be prevented, and groſs Prophanity, and every thing which is againſt the Power of Godlineſs may be baniſhed away; for which we have more fully repreſented our moſt earneſt deſires to the Honourable Houſes; and withal, do certify our Confidence and firm Reſolution by the Lord's Aſſiſtance, from his All-ſufficiency, That we ſhall give conſtant and real Teſtimony to our dear Brethren of England, and to all the World, who ſhall impartially conſider our Proceedings, that no difficulties, no dangers, nor ſufferings whatſoever, ſhall make us ſwerve from the mutual League and Covenant, nor from the active proſecuting the Ends thereof, by all poſſible and lawful means, to the utmoſt of our power. A Letter from the Parliament of Scotland to the two Houſes of Parliament in England, Feb. 3. 164$\frac{5}{6}$.

Right Honourable,

THE Eſtates of Parliament of this Kingdom have conſidered the Deſires of the Honourable Houſes concerning the Gariſons placed by the Scotiſh Army, in the Towns and Caſtles of Carliſle, Newcaſtle, Tinmouth, Hartlepool, Stockton, Warkworth and Thirlwal, expreſſed in the Letter of the 13*th* of November laſt; and have ſent Inſtructions to their Commiſſioners to give ſuch an Anſwer to the Honourable Houſes, as they are confident may ſerve moſt for promoting the Cauſe wherein both Kingdoms are ſo highly engaged, and carrying on the War to the beſt advantage.

They have further given direction to their Commiſſioners to make known to the Honourable Houſes, the earneſt Deſires of this Kingdom for the ſetling of Religion and Church Government (which, as it was the principal ground of their Engagement in this Cauſe, ſo will the perfecting of it be their chiefeſt joy, and glory of both Kingdoms) and their propenſion for carrying on the War with the united affection, and Forces of both Kingdoms; And that no good means be left un-aſſayed for attaining a firm and laſting Peace, it being the conſtant Reſolution of this Kingdom againſt all oppoſition, to ſtrengthen and cheriſh the unity and Brotherly kindneſs between the Kingdoms; and Peace ſetled with Truth, and theſe things performed by the Honourable Houſes (which by Treaty they are obliged unto) to recall the Scotiſh Army with as great Alacrity as they were ready to ſend the ſame into England for the Aſſiſtance of their Brethren.

The Inconſtancy of the Weather in this Seaſon hath been an Impediment to the Paſſage betwixt this and Ireland, ſo as they have not yet had an Anſwer to their Letters ſent hither concerning Belfaſt; but they have commanded their Committee to return Anſwer to the Honourable Houſes in that particular, how ſoon they ſhall receive Information concerning the ſame. Another Letter from the ſame to the ſame, dated alſo the ſame day.

Right Honourable,

AS the Parliament of this Kingdom doth acknowledge the Zeal and Endeavours of the Honourable Houſes of Parliament, for the good progreſs already made towards Reformation of Religion, and Uniformity of Church-Government: So it is expected, that (when they ſhall ſeriouſly conſider the Brotherly Affection and great Sufferings of this Kingdom, who from a peaceable Condition which we formerly enjoyed, did engage our ſelves in a dangerous and Bloody War with England, againſt their Enemies, when their Affairs were in the hardeſt and loweſt condition, upon a mutual League and Covenant to ſettle Religion and Church-Government, according to the Word of God, the Practice of the beſt Reformed Churches, and as might draw the neareſt Uniformity betwixt the Two Kingdoms, which was acknowledged to be the chief ground of craving Aid and Aſſiſtance from this Kingdom) the Honourable Houſes will now (after ſo mature deliberation) add their Authority and Civil Sanction without further delay, to what the Pious and Learned Aſſembly of Divines, upon mature and accurate Debates, have adviſed to be moſt agreeable to the Word of God; and perfect what remains to be done in the Work, according to the Covenant; which I am commanded by the Parliament of this Kingdom to demand, and do accordingly in their Names demand of the Honourable Houſes of Parliament of England: The performance whereof will be moſt acceptable to this Kirk and Kingdom, as a ſpecial Recompence of the Labours and Blood which hath been ſhed in aſſiſting you to promote the Cauſe of God, and will be a mean to procure God's bleſſing upon the Proceedings and Undertakings of both Kingdoms. And the Parliament of this Kingdom is perſuaded, That the Piety and Wiſdom of the Honourable Houſes will never admit Toleration of any Sects or Schiſms, contrary to our Solemn and Sacred Covenant.

The next deſire of the Parliament of this Kingdom (and which of all things next to Truth is moſt deſirable) is, That all lawful means be uſed for attaining a juſt and well-grounded Peace: For which end, I am commanded to deſire, and do accordingly in the Name of the Parliament of this Kingdom deſire, That the Propoſitions of Peace be diſpatched to his Majeſty, and may be ſo purſued and managed, as may beſt procure the ſetling of Truth and Peace, that there may be an end of the great Diſtractions and unnatural War of all the Three Kingdoms.

This Kingdom lieth under the Burthen of great and vaſt Expence in raiſing and entertaining Armies; and hath with the loſs of the Lives of many precious men, ſet their own Houſes on fire to quench the flame of yours, and almoſt deſtroyed their own Nation to preſerve yours. And ſeeing the ſeaſonable Aſſiſtance afforded by this Kingdom to you, and by the late Succeſſes wherewith God hath bleſſed your Armies, you are in a great meaſure freed of your Trouble, and are in a far better Capacity to pay the Money due to our Armies in England and Ireland, than you were at any time ſince the beginning of theſe Wars, I am likewiſe commanded by the Parliament of this Kingdom to demand, and accordingly do in their Name demand of the Honourable Houſes of Parliament, to make Payment before the Third of May next.

next, of the Sums of Money duly owing by them to this Kingdom, and their Armies in England and Ireland, according to the Treaties between the Two Kingdoms (the Account whereof will be given in by our Comiſſioners) that this Kingdom may be thereby relieved of the great Burthens and Preſſures of our Debts contracted in this Cauſe, and be enabled and encouraged for joint carrying on of the War, till the Church of God be ſetled in Purity and Peace.

And it is further craved from the Juſtice of the Honourable Houſes of Parliament, That they will take into their ſerious Conſideration the great Loſſes ſuſtained by this Kingdom at Sea, through the not attendance of their Ships upon our Coaſts, according to the Treaty, and make Reparation thereof; and of the Loſſes which Scotland hath ſuſtained by the Iriſh Invaſion, which the Kingdom of England is bound to ſuppreſs by the large Treaty. In all which, the Deſires of the Parliament of this Kingdom are no other than, That Religion and Church Government may be ſetled according to our Covenant: That the War may be carried on with Brotherly and conſtant Affection, by the joint Counſels and Forces of both Kingdoms: That a well-grounded and durable Peace may be endeavoured betwixt the King and his Subjects: That Payment be made of the Sums due to this Kingdom and our Armies by Treaty; and that (againſt the Malice of our open Enemies, and ſecret Plots of ſuch as for their own Ends are labouring to ſow Sedition betwixt Brethren tied by ſo many Relations) mutual Amity and Union between the Kingdoms may be ſtrengthned and perpetuated to all Poſterity. A Letter from a Committee of the Parliament of Scotland to the Two Houſes of Parliament in England, Feb. 10. 164⅘.

Right Honourable,

BEing appointed by the Parliament of this Kingdom, now adjourned, to keep Correſpondence with the Honourable Houſes of Parliament of England, and being intruſted with the purſuance of their Deſires for the furtherance of the Common Cauſe, and the publick and mutual good of both Kingdoms; We do in the Name of the Parliament, and by their Authority certify, That this Kingdom, notwithſtanding all their ſufferings and diſcouragements, are not moved or ſhaken from their former Reſolutions and Vows, but will live and dye with their Brethren of England, in the proſecution of the Ends expreſſed in the Solemn League and Covenant: Being confident of the like Inclination and Reſolution of the Parliament and Kingdom of England, againſt all ſuch groundleſs Suſpicions and needleſs Jealouſies to the contrary, as bad Inſtruments from the beginning to this day, have been, from their Envy of our common Happineſs, and for their own private Ends, inventing and ſuggeſting; that all the common Troubles which both Kingdoms have endured, may end in a publick Tragedy, to the Scandal and Grief of the Reformed Churches, the hardning and ſtrengthning of our common Enemies, the making of our ſelves the Inſtruments of our own mutual Ruin and Deſtruction; and, which is moſt of all, the Diſhonour of the Great Name of our God, with whom we have entred in Covenant for the Propagation of the Goſpel, and the Advancement of the Kingdom of his Son.

For the preſent, according to the Truſt committed unto us, we make our Addreſs to both Houſes in the Particulars following, and do not doubt but we ſhall receive ſuch Satisfaction as may be a real Teſtimony of their Juſtice and Brotherly Kindneſs. Upon Information from our Commiſſioners there, the Parliament before their adjourning did underſtand what was written by one calling himſelf Robert Wright, and informed by another whoſe Name was kept in the dark, and confirmed by a Letter of Mr. Jermin to the Lord Digby, againſt this Kingdom, their Army in England, and their Commiſſioners there. The Accuſations are of ſo high a nature, and ſo ſophiſtically Inſinuated, that the Parliament, which during their ſitting were upon all occaſions endeavouring the beſt ways of the preſerving the happy Conjunction of the Two

An. 1645. Kingdoms, were much affected therewith, as a matter wherein they were much concerned, both for their own Vindication, and the Satisfaction of their Brethren. If there ſhall be any matter or ground of ſuch Accuſation found againſt any Perſon of this Kingdom, or our Army, or any of our Commiſſioners, we are no leſs willing that it be examined, and puniſhed to the full, than we deſire and expect that the like be done againſt any in England, that tranſgreſs in that kind; which is conform to our Covenant, wherein we all ſwear, With all Faithfulneſs to endeavour the Diſcovery of all ſuch as have been or ſhall be Incendiaries, Malignants, or Evil Inſtruments, by hindring the Reformation of Religion, dividing the King from his People, or any of the Kingdoms from the other, that they may be brought to publick Trial, and receive condign Puniſhment, as the degree of their Offences ſhall require or deſerve. But let us deſire and expect from our Brethren, all Charity, Tenderneſs, and Reſpect to this Kingdom, our Army, and Commiſſioners, of whoſe Faithfulneſs they have had ſo large and manifold Experience, and in their ſeveral Letters to this Kingdom did give them ſo ample Teſtimonies; that no Aſperſion or Suſpicions lye upon them, by concealing the Names of any Perſons who can be diſcovered. And therefore, according to the Truſt committed unto us, we do deſire in Name of the Parliament and Kingdom of Scotland (if that Robert Wright be not yet found out, who he is; and that hidden Knight, after ſo long a time be not yet unſecreted, and made known by name) all means may be uſed for diſcovering the one, whoſe Letters have been ſo frequently produced before the Committee of both Kingdoms; and revealing the other to our Commiſſioners, which is in the power of ſome of the Members of the Houſe of Commons to do; that both Kingdoms may be ſatisfied when the Truth is brought to light, and all ſuch Jealouſies and Miſunderſtandings may be prevented for the future.

We do alſo repreſent to the Honourable Houſes of Parliament, That this Kirk and Kingdom is more ſcandalized and grieved in the matter of Religion, which immediately concerneth God and his Honour, than in any thing on Earth touching themſelves and their own Name.

A Directory for the Worſhip of God is agreed upon in the Aſſembly, and authorized by both Kingdoms, and practiſed carefully by this Church; but the Service-Book ſtill retained in ſome Places of England under the Parliament's Power, and the Directory very much ſlighted, and by ſome avowedly written againſt. Inſtead of the intended Unity in Religion, Blaſphemous Errors, Hereſies, Sects, and Schiſms, are increaſed and multiplied through the want of Church-Government. The National Aſſembly of this Kirk in their Anſwer to the Declaration of the Parliament of England, of the date July, 1642. profeſs, That themſelves and all the well-affected within the Kingdom, are exceedingly grieved and made heavy, becauſe the Reformation of Religion had moved ſo ſlowly, and ſuffered ſo great interruption. And the Lords and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, in their Reply did profeſs, That the miſerable Eſtate of the Church and Kingdom was not able to endure any longer delay. Like as in their Declaration ſent to the general Aſſembly, they profeſs, That they do not doubt but to ſettle ſuch a Reformation of the Church, as ſhould be moſt agreeable to God's Word. And in the aforementioned Reply they declare, That their purpoſe is to conſult with Godly and Learned Divines, that they may ſettle ſuch a Government as may be moſt agreeable to God's moſt holy Word.

Some Commiſſioners from this Kirk have attended the Aſſembly of Divines there, for the ſpace of Two Years and a half; and long ago the Aſſembly have offered their Advice to both Houſes, yet can we hear nothing of the ſetling of a Government; but upon the contrary, of a real Growth of all Sects and Errors, and of great Endeavours for Toleration thereof; which maketh us and this Church and Kingdom, who cannot underſtand where the difficulty and obſtruction lieth, to wonder at ſo long a delay; wherein we are very much intereſted, not only in relation to the Glory of God, our mutual League and Covenant, and the Peace and Happineſs of that Church and Kingdom; but alſo in regard of the Unity of Religion amongſt our ſelves, and of the Peace of this Kingdom, which cannot be long preſerved from ſo dangerous Contagion; which would be more grievous and intolerable unto us, than all our Troubles and Sufferings have been: And therefore from all theſe Conſiderations, in Name of this Kingdom and Parliament, we do in all earneſtneſs deſire, That Church-Government may now at laſt, without further delay, be ſetled according to the Covenant.

We do in like manner preſs what hath been ſolicited by our Commiſſioners for the ſpace of Eight Months paſt, That the Propoſitions of Peace, after ſo much Debate and Deliberation agreed upon unanimouſly by both Kingdoms, the moſt material whereof have been fully Treated upon at Uxbridge, may be forthwith ſent to his Majeſty; wherein this Kingdom is the more earneſt, that they know not the cauſe why the ſending of theſe Propoſitions is ſo long ſuſpended: They long for the end of this unhappy War, by the happy ſettling of Religion and Peace; and ſo much the more, that they do perceive ſome would make uſe of the Continuance of theſe Wars, to raiſe and foment Jealouſies and Differences betwixt theſe Kingdoms, and to ſeparate thoſe whom God hath ſo ſtrictly tied for ſo good Ends, by ſo many Bonds and Relations; and we are confident will never ſuffer to be divided, but ſtill continue them in a firm and bleſſed Conjunction againſt all Machinations of Satan and his Inſtruments: Which ſhall ever be the ſetled Reſolution and conſtant Endeavour of Letter from the General Aſſembly of the Presbytery in Scotland, to the Aſſembly of Divines at Weſtminſter, Feb. 12. 164$\frac{5}{6}$.

Right Honourable and Reverend,

YOur Letter of the 15*th* of January did refreſh us not a little; for therein we beheld (that which we alſo heard by the particular Relation of the Right Honourable the Lord Chancellor, and the Lord Wareſton, Witneſſes of all) the Work of your Faith, the Labour of your Love, the Patience of your Hope, your Conſtancy in Well-doing, your Sympathy and Bowels of Love towards us your Beloved and Covenanted Brethren; your holy Zeal for the Lord, your Painfulneſs and Diligence to have his Temple purged of all Errors and Schiſms, and his Government eſtabliſhed and ſetled on the right Foundation; your Watchfulneſs to hold faſt our ſolemn League and Covenant, to entertain that Brotherhood and Unity between the Nations, to ſhun every thing deſtructive thereof, and contrary thereunto: For all the lively and lovely Expreſſions whereof, we cannot but bleſs the Lord, rejoice in your behalf, and gather hopes of a very rare Bleſſing to enſue upon your faithful Labours.

We are confident that the Maſter-builder ſhall appoint and reward your Work, and ſtrengthen your Hearts and Hands, that you ſhall ſee with comfort the ſweet fruits of all your pains, and tranſmit to Poſterity that which ſhall make your Name to be had in everlaſting remembrance, and to ſmell as a precious oyntment to After-Ages. We are not ignorant with how many difficulties you are compaſſed; but we truſt, that your ſeeking of the Lord ſhall not be in vain; for not by might, nor by power, but by the Spirit of the Lord of Hoſts ſhall the Mountains be made plain, and the Head-ſtone of the Building be brought forth with ſhoutings. Many go about to cut aſunder the Staves of Beauty and Bonds, and to break the Brotherhood between Judah and Iſrael; but bleſſed be the Lord your God, who hath filled your hearts with a better Spirit, even his own Spirit, a Spirit of Wiſdom and Underſtanding, a Spirit of Unity and Verity; the fruits and operations whereof, as they have been hitherto, ſo we doubt not they ſhall be hereafter manifeſted more and more in your conſtant Care and Endeavours with the Honourable Houſes of Parliament, for eſtabliſhing the Government of the Church conform to the Word of God, and the Example of the beſt Reformed Churches, and for removing all Jealouſies, and preſerving entire Unity between the Kingdoms; which hath been, and ever ſhall be among the chiefeſt of our deſires and travels here.

We do and ſhall rejoice in all our Undertakings, Engagements, and Sufferings for you and with you, and are reſolved to ſpend and be ſpent for your good, for promoting and ſetling the great Affairs of the Kingdom of our Lord among you, and for making his Jeruſalem a Praiſe in the Earth; that all with one heart and one conſent may ſerve and glorify him in the Unity of Doctrine, Worſhip, and Government. This is the Sum of all our Deſires and Deſigns, which this worthy Bearer the Lord Waryſton, can at greater length make known unto you. Now unto our God, who will perfect that which he hath begun, and haſten the Day wherein all the Sons and Daughters of Judah ſhall rejoice, and cry with ſhouting, Jeruſalem is built, and Babylon is fallen; we recommend you and your Labours in this great Work.

CHAP. VII.

Occurrences in the Kingdom of Ireland, or relating thereunto, in the Year 1645.

OF the Ceſſation made in Ireland, as alſo of the Lord Inchiquin's oppoſing it, and ſiding with the Parliament, we have before, in the Year 1644. given an Account: Which Ceſſation, tho not well obſerved by the Iriſh, yet being ſtill continued, much Action cannot be expected; thoſe that adhered thereunto, ſpending the time in Treaties, in order to the concluding of a Peace; and for thoſe that renounced the ſaid Ceſſation, many of the Scots, by reaſon of Montroſs's Succeſſes there, were recalled home, and Supplies as yet came but ſlowly from England, ſo that they were not able to effect much; yet ſome Rancounters did occur, which are here to be mentioned.

The Britiſh Forces of Ulſter make an Expedition into Connaught, June, 1645.

The Britiſh Army in Ulſter having received a Month's Victuals from the Parliament of England, about the 17*th* of June 1645. advanced out of their ſeveral Quarters, with about 4000 Foot and 600 Horſe (not being able to march with Ordnance, for want of Carriages): They came to a Rendezvouz near Augher, June 20. Sir Robert Stewart (by conſent) commanding in Chief for that Expedition. Then they paſs'd over at Iniskillin, and ſent a Party of 500 Foot and 100 Horſe to James-Town, over the Moſſes, the neareſt way, to join the Connaught Forces in the Gariſons thereabouts, and to advance into the County of Roſcommon, to ſeek for Booty for Relief of the Army, and to come up to a Rendezvouz five or ſix days after with the Army at Bellinaſad, near the Abby of Boyle. The Main Body marched June 24. to Mannor-Hamilton, and ſent out a Party of Horſe commanded by the Lord Montgomery, who advanced to the Borders of the County of Mayo; but underſtanding the Country was all deſerted, his Lordſhip attended the coming up of the Army at Aghaconry, near which place ſeveral Caſtles were kept by the Rebels, which fired upon that Party in their paſſage by; but moſt of them were either taken by the Army as they marched up, or deſerted: Amongſt which one ſtrong Caſtle, held by Captain O Hara, was taken by the Soldiers without Command; for being at a Halt near it about Twelve a Clock, and ſeeing ſome Poultry under the Walls, ſome of the Soldiers ran down to get them for their Dinners; and ſome Shots being made at them by the Caſtle, they anſwered them again; which cauſed others to advance to their Reſcue; and ſo after an Hours Service, and Two or Three kill'd, and ſome hurt without and within, they forced the Rampire, and put Fire to the Gate; whereupon Quarter was earneſtly called for, and granted at diſcretion: In the place they found good Store of Proviſion, about Fifty Cows, and ſome Arms and Ammunition.

June 29. The Army marched towards their Rendezvouz at Ballinaſad, where the Lord Montgomery and his Party came up again to them with a Booty of 500 Cows; and the Connaught Horſe joined with them, being Five good good Troops, and a Hundred Dragoons; and ſo ſending out Parties to forage the adjacent Countries, having got great Numbers of Cows, Sheep, Horſes, &c. they came up to Sligo about the beginning of July, and took that Town after two days Battery with Three or Four Pieces, which they took from aboard the Ships that brought the Preſident of Connaught's Proviſion: There were ſlain about 160 of the Iriſh Party; the Proteſtants loſt about 12 at the entring of the Breach, and ſome wounded. There were 500 Soldiers placed in Gariſon under Sir Robert Stewart, and a proportion of Victuals aſſigned them out of the Booty, and the reſt divided amongſt the Army, being in all near 3000 Head of Cattel: And ſo the Ulſter Forces retreated homewards to their Quarters, where they arrived about July 13.

The Archbiſhop of Tuam ſlain.

But the Iriſh were reſolved to attempt the regaining of that Town; and therefore on Sunday the 17*th* of October, 1645. ſurrounded it with above 1000 Foot, and 300 Horſe; whereupon the Gariſon conceived it abſolutely neceſſary to hazard the fighting with them with their own Strength, and Sir William Cole's, Troops, rather than to ſtarve themſelves, and loſe their Out-Gariſons, which were blocked up, the Enemy lying between them; ſo Captain Coote and Captain Cole commanding out 200 Horſe, charged the Rebels Horſe very reſolutely, and beat them within the Diviſions of their own Foot: And Lieutenant-Colonel Sanderſon at the ſame time ſallying out of the Town with his Foot, and Sir Francis Hamilton coming in the Nick of time with his Troop, they had all Execution upon them for Five Miles; and took 150 Horſe, with their Arms, their Tents, and other Ammunition; ſeveral Colours of Horſe and Foot, and many Officers of Note, to the Number of about 28 Priſoners, and about 200 kill'd, and amongſt them the Archbiſhop of Tuam, the Rebels Preſident of Connaught, and one of their Supreme Council of Kilkenny, who attended their Army at this time to viſit his Dioceſs, and to put in execution an Order for the Arrears of his Biſhoprick granted to him by the ſaid Council: Which Order, together with a Bull of the Popes, and ſeveral Letters of Correſpondence between him and his Agents from Rome, Paris, and other Parts, were found amongſt his Baggage; and particularly, the Copy of certain Articles of Agreement, purporting to have been made between the Earl of Glamorgan and ſeveral of the chief of the Rebels the Auguſt before, in theſe Words:

'WHereas in theſe Articles touching the Clergy-Livings, the Right Honourable the Earl of Glamorgan is obliged in his Majeſty's behalf to ſecure the Conceſſions in theſe Articles by Act of Parliament: We holding that manner of ſecuring thoſe Grants as to the Clergy-Livings, to prove more difficult and prejudicial to his Majeſty, than by doing thereof and ſecuring thoſe Conceſſions otherwiſe; as to the ſaid Livings, the ſaid Earl undertaking and promiſing in the behalf of his Majeſty, his Heirs and Succeſſors, as hereby he doth undertake, to ſettle the ſaid Conceſſions, and ſecure them to the Clergy and their reſpective Succeſſors in another ſecure way, other than by Parliament, at preſent, till a fit opportunity be offered for ſecuring the ſame, do agree and condeſcend thereunto: And this Inſtrument by his Lordſhip ſigned, was before the perfecting thereof intended to that purpoſe as to the ſaid Livings, to which purpoſe we mutually ſigned this Indorſement: And it is further intended, That the Catholick Clergy ſhall not be interrupted by Parliament or otherwiſe, as to the ſaid Livings, contrary to the meaning of theſe Articles.

When this Treaty came to be known, the Earl of Glamorgan was committed to Priſon by the Lord Digby, one of the Principal Secretaries of State to his Majeſty, who was then in Ireland, and gave the following Account thereof to Secretary Nicholas.

To Secretary Nicholas.

Lord Digby's Letter to Secretary Nicholas, Jan. 4. 164$\frac{5}{6}$.

My good Brother,

YOU will receive by this Diſpatch a particular Account from my Lord Lieutenant, of the State of the Treaty here, and of thoſe Conditions upon which he was hopeful ſuddenly to have concluded ſuch a Peace, as would have afforded his Majeſty powerful and timely Aids from this Kingdom, had not the Unfortunate Madneſs (for I can give it no other name) of my Lord of Glamorgan, and the neceſſary proceeding thereupon, caſt all things back into a poſture as uncertain and more dangerous than ever: You will receive from my Lord Lieutenant and the Council here, a punctual Relation of the Matter of Fact; and it is referred to me to convey unto you, and by you to his Majeſty, the Circumſtances and Reaſons of the whole proceeding againſt his Lordſhip.

About Ten days ſince, matters of the Treaty growing near to a Concluſion, and in confidence thereof Preparations being made by my Lord of Glamorgan and the Iriſh, (as they aſſured us) for the ſpeedy ſending over of Three thouſand Men for the Relief of Cheſter, which were to be made up Ten thouſand before the beginning of March: It was thought neceſſary that we ſhould confer with the ſaid Earl of Glamorgan and ſome of the Iriſh Commiſſioners, to the end that before my Lord Lieutenant's final Conſent to the Articles of the Treaty, the buſineſs of the King's Supply might be reduced from Diſcourſe to a Certainty, and directed in the moſt advantageous way for his Service: To which end (we little ſuſpecting then what was ſince diſcovered) the ſaid Earl of Glamorgan, and ſome of the Iriſh Commiſſioners then at Kilkenny, were earneſtly invited hither both by my Lord Lieutenant and my ſelf.

Upon Monday laſt, the day before the ſaid Earl of Glamorgan was expected in Town, my Lord Lieutenant received out of the North, from an honeſt and well affected Perſon, the Copy which is ſent you of my Lord of Glamorgan's Articles and Oath with the Confederate Catholicks, aſſured to have been found in the Titular Bp of Tuam's Pocket, killed in October laſt at Sligo. At firſt the thing appeared ſo impoſſible, as that we were apt to think it a Forgery and Plot againſt the King, of the Parliamentary Rebels; till conſidering the Circumſtances, Formalities, and Punctualities thereof, we grew to apprehend ſomewhat more in the matter; and ſoon after, a Second and Third Copy of the ſame coming to other Perſons, all with Letters to the Effect of this incloſed, it was then thought high time to take the buſineſs into moſt ſerious Conſideration: Which being done by my Lord Lieutenant and my ſelf, aſſiſted by ſome of the wiſeſt and beſt affected Perſons here, we ſoon concluded, That if theſe things were once publiſhed, and that they could be believed to be done by his Majeſty's Authority, they could have no leſs fatal an Effect, than to make all men, ſo believing, conclude all the former Scandals caſt upon his Majeſty, of the the inciting this Iriſh Rebellion, true: That he was a Papiſt, and deſigned to introduce Popery, even by ways the moſt Unkingly and Perfidious: And conſequently that there would be a general Revolt from him of all good Proteſtants, with whom this Opinion could take place.

Now when we conſidered the Circumſtances convincing the Truth of this Tranſaction on my Lord of Glamorgan's part, and how impoſſible almoſt it was for any man to be ſo mad, as to enter into ſuch an Agreement, without Powers from his Majeſty; and there being ſome kind of a formal Authority vouched in the Articles themſelves; we did alſo conclude, That probably the greateſt part of the World, who had no other knowledge of his Majeſty than by outward appearances, would believe this true, and do according to that belief, unleſs his Majeſty were ſuddenly and eminently vindicated by thoſe who might juſtly pretend to know him beſt. Upon this ground it was alſo concluded by us, That leſs than an Arreſt of the Earl of Glamorgan upon Suſpicion of High Treaſon, could not be a Vindication of his Majeſty eminent or loud enough; and that this part could not properly nor effectually be performed by any other Perſon than my ſelf, both in regard of my Place and Truſts near his Majeſty: That the Buſineſs of Ireland had paſſed for the moſt part through my hands: That I attended his Majeſty about the time of the Date of his Majeſty's pretended Commiſſion: That ſince that time I had by his Majeſty's Command written to the Iriſh Commiſſioners a Letter, whereof I ſend you a Copy, ſo diametrically oppoſite to the ſaid Earl's Tranſactions: And laſtly, in regard that my Lord Lieutenant, to whom otherwiſe his Majeſty's Vindication in this kind might properly have belonged, was generally thought to be unworthily cozened and abuſed in the matter, in caſe there were any ſuch ſecret Authority given by his Majeſty to the Earl of Glamorgan.

This being our unanimous Judgment of what was fit to be done, and by whom, the only queſtion then remaining, was to the point of time; in which we were alſo of opinion, That if it were deferred till the buſineſs growing publick otherwiſe, ſhould begin to work its miſchief, his Majeſty's Vindication would loſe much of its force, and be thought rather applied to the Notoriety than to the Impiety of the thing; and rather to the pernicious Effects, than to the deteſtable Cauſe it ſelf: Notwithſtanding, I muſt confeſs unto you, That the conſideration of fruſtrating the Supplies of Three thouſand Men, which were ſo confidently affirmed to be in readineſs for the Relief of Cheſter, in caſe the Condition of that Place could not bear the Delay which this might occaſion, wrought in us a very great ſuſpenſion of Judgment, whether the Proceedings againſt my Lord of Glamorgan ſhould not be forborn till that ſo neceſſary Supply were ſent away. But the Caſe being more ſtrictly examined, we found, Firſt, That by the Lord of Glamorgan's Oath, the Forces were not to be hazarded till his Majeſty's Performance of the ſaid Earl's Conditions. And Secondly, That the Supply was never intended by my Lord of Glamorgan and the Iriſh, till the Articles of Peace were conſented; which the Lord Lieutenant durſt in no wiſe do, without a preceding Vindication of the King's Honour, ſince this Tranſaction of my Lord of Glamorgan's was known unto him, and known to be known unto him, by thoſe who wanted neither Art nor Malice to make uſe of it. So that the neceſſary Forbearance to conclude the Treaty, fruſtrating as much the Relief of Cheſter, as the ſudden and vigorous proceeding againſt my Lord of Glamorgan could do, our Reſolutions did in the end determine upon that Courſe; when at the inſtant to remove all Objections, Information was brought us, That the thing was already publick throughout the Town, and began to work ſuch dangerous effects, as in truth I do not believe that my Lord Lieutenant, or any of the King's faithful Servants could have been many hours ſafe in the delay of this his Majeſty's and their Vindication: Which has now been ſo reaſonably applied, as that it hath wrought here not only a general Satisfaction in all moderate men, but even ſuch a Converſion in many leſs well-inclined, that whereas before a Peace with the Iriſh, even by thoſe unavoidable Conditions upon which my Lord Lieutenant muſt needs within few days have concluded, it would hardly have been publiſhed in this Place without very much danger; mens minds are ſo ſecured and ſetled by this proceeding, as that I believe the Peace now would be embraced upon thoſe, and perhaps upon harder Terms, without much Mutiny or Repining. This being ſo, our chief remaining Fear is, leſt what hath been done againſt my Lord of Glamorgan ſhould ſo far incenſe the Iriſh, as to drive them to ſudden Extremes; Things here on his Majeſty's part being in ſo ill a Condition to enter again upon a War: Unto this Danger the beſt Preventives we could think of, are applied; this incloſed Letter written to my Lord of Muskerry by my Lord Lieutenant; apt Perſons employed to Kilkenny, to acquaint them with the Reaſons and Neceſſities of this proceeding: And laſtly, The Articles of Peace ſent unto them, with my Lord Lieutenant's Aſſent, in the very Terms propoſed and acquieſced in by themſelves in the laſt Reſults of this long Treaty: Which in all probability will have one of theſe two effects; Either to make them conclude a Peace, notwithſtanding this intervening Accident, whereby Cheſter will be ſpeedily relieved, and his Majeſty further ſupplied this Spring: Or make it break ſo foully on their ſide, as to divide from them the moſt conſiderable of their Party. Whatever the Event be, my Lord Lieutenant and I ſhall comfort our ſelves with this Satiſfaction, That we have done what belonged to Men of Honour, Faithful to their King and to their Religion, and as wiſely as ours and our beſt Friends Underſtandings could direct us; leaving the reſt to God Almighty, whom we beſeech to direct his Majeſty to that Courſe herein on his part, which may be correſpondent to our faithful Endeavours; and that he will bleſs them with as good Effects upon the Minds of all honeſt Men towards his Majeſty's Vindication in that Kingdom, as I make no doubt but what we have done will have in this, when ſeconded and purſued by thoſe further Directions from his Majeſty, which I am ſure his own Wiſdom and Princely Indignation to find his Honour, Conſcience, and Piety, thus infamouſly traduced, will dictate unto him, without further Advice from

Yours,

Dublin, Jan. 4. 1645. George Digby.

I believe you will be as much ſtartled as I was, to find the Signet mentioned in my Lord of Glamorgan's Tranſactions; but it ſeems that was miſtaken, and that he now pretends to ſome kind of Authority under the King's Pocket-Seal; which I certainly believe to be as falſe as I know the other.

The Earl of Glamorgan's Treaty with the Iriſh Catholicks, Aug. 25. 1645.

WHereas much time has been ſpent in Meetings and Debates betwixt his Excellency James Lord Marqueſs of Ormond, Lord Lieutenant and General Governor of his Majeſty's Kingdom of Ireland, Commiſſioner to the King's moſt Excellent Majeſty Charles, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, &c. for the Treating and Concluding of a Peace in the ſaid Kingdom with his Majeſty's Humble and Loyal Subjects, the Confederate and Roman-Catholicks of the ſaid Kingdom of Ireland, of the one part; and the Right Honourable Donogh Lord Viſcount Muskerry, and others, Commiſſioners deputed and authorized by the ſaid Confederate Roman-Catholick Subjects, of the other part: And thereupon many Difficulties did ariſe, by occaſion whereof ſundry matters of great Weight and Conſequence, neceſſarily requiſite to be condeſcended unto by his Majeſty's ſaid Commiſſioner, for the Safety of the ſaid Confederate Roman-Catholicks, were not hitherto agreed upon; which retarded, and doth as yet retard the Concluſion of a firm Peace and Settlement in the ſaid Kingdom: And whereas the Right Honourable Edward Earl of Glamorgan is intruſted and authorized by his moſt Excellent Majeſty to grant and aſſure to the ſaid Confederate Catholick Subjects, further Grace and Favours, which the ſaid Lord Lieutenant did not as yet in that Latitude as they expected, grant unto them: And the ſaid Earl having ſeriouſly conſidered of all Matters, and due Circumſtances of the great Affairs now in Agitation, which is the Peace and Quiet of the ſaid Kingdom, and the Importance thereof in order to his Majeſty's Service, and in relation to a Peace and Settlement in his other Kingdoms; and here, upon the place, having ſeen the ardent deſire of the ſaid Catholicks to aſſiſt his Majeſty againſt all that do or ſhall oppreſs his Royal Right, or Monarchick Government; and having diſcerned the Alacrity and Cheerfulneſs of the ſaid Catholicks to embrace Honourable Conditions of Peace, which may preſerve their Religion and other juſt Intereſts: In purſuance therefore of his Majeſty's Authority under his Highneſs's Signature Royal and Signet, bearing date at Oxon the 12*th* day of March, in the Twentieth Year of his Majeſty's Reign, granted unto the ſaid Earl of Glamorgan; the Tenor whereof is as followeth; viz.

Charles R.

CHarles, By the Grace of God, of England, Scotland, France and Ireland; Defender of the Faith, &c. To our Truſty and Right Well-beloved Couſin Edward Earl of Glamorgan, Greeting. We repoſing great and eſpecial Truſt and Confidence in your approved Wiſdom and Fidelity; Do by theſe (as firmly as under our Great Seal, to all Intents and Purpoſes) authorize and give you Power to Treat and Conclude with the Confederate Roman-Catholicks in our Kingdom of Ireland, if upon neceſſity any be to be condeſcended unto, wherein our Lieutenant cannot ſo well be ſeen in, as not fit for us at the preſent publickly to own: Therefore we charge you to proceed according to this our Warrant, with all poſſible Secreſy: And for whatſoever you ſhall engage your ſelf, upon ſuch valuable Conſiderations as you in your Judgment ſhall deem fit, we promiſe on the Word of a King and a Chriſtian, to ratify and perform the ſame that ſhall be granted by you, and under your Hand and Seal; the ſaid Confederate Catholicks having by their Supplies teſtified their Zeal to our Service. And this ſhall be in each particular to you a ſufficient Warrant. Given at our Court at Oxford, under our Signet and Royal Signature, the 12th day of March, in the Twentieth Year of our Reign, 1644.

My Deareſt Heart,

I Hope theſe will prevent any News ſhall come unto you of me, ſince my Commitment to the Caſtle of Dublin; to which I aſſure thee I went as chearfully and as willingly as they could wiſh, whoſoever they were by whoſe means it was procured; and ſhould as unwillingly go forth, were the Gates both of the Caſtle and Town open unto me, until I were cleared, as they are willing to make me unſerviceable to the King, and lay me aſide, who have procured for me this Reſtraint. When I conſider thee a Woman, as I think I know you are, I fear leſt you ſhould be apprehenſive; but when I reflect that you are of the Houſe of Thomond, and that you were once pleaſed to ſay theſe Words unto me, That I ſhould never in Tenderneſs of you deſiſt from doing what in Honour I was obliged to do; I grow confident that in this you will now ſhew your Magnanimity, and by it the greateſt Teſtimony of Affection that you can poſſibly afford me: And am alſo confident that you know me ſo well, that I need not tell you how clear I am, and void of Fear, the only effect of a good Conſcience; and that I am guilty of nothing that may teſtify one Thought of Diſloyalty to his Majeſty, or of what may ſtain the Honour of the Family I come of, or ſet a Brand upon my future Poſterity. Courage, (my Heart!) Were I amongſt the King's Enemies, you might fear; but being only a Priſoner amongſt his Friends and faithful Subjects, you need doubt nothing, but that this Cloud will be ſoon diſſipated by the Sunſhine of the King my Maſter; and did you but know how well and merry I am, you would be as little troubled as my ſelf, who have nothing that can afflict me, but leſt your Apprehenſion might hurt you; eſpecially ſince all the while I could get no Opportunity of ſending, nor yet by any certain probable means, but by my Couſin Brereton, Mr. Mannering's, our Couſin, Conſtable of the Caſtle, and my Lord Lieutenant's Leave: And I hope you and I ſhall live to acknowledge our Obligation to them, there being nothing in this World that I deſire more, than you ſhould at leaſt hear from me: And believe it (Sweet Heart) were I before the Parliament in London, I could juſtify both the King and my ſelf in what I have done: And ſo I pray acquaint my Father, who I know is ſo cautious, that he would hardly accept a Letter from me; but yet I preſume moſt humbly to ask his Bleſſing, and as heartily as I ſend mine to Pretty Mall: And I hope this day or to-morrow will ſet a Period to my Buſineſs, to the ſhame of thoſe who have been Occaſioners of it. But I muſt needs ſay, from my Lord Lieutenant and the Privy-Council here, I have received as much Juſtice, Nobleneſs, and Favour, as I could poſſibly expect. The Circumſtances of theſe Proceedings are too long to write unto you; but I am confident all will prove to my greater Honour; and my Right Honourable Accuſer, my Lord Digby, will be at laſt rectified and confirmed in the good Opinion which he is pleaſed to ſay he ever had of me hitherto; as the greateſt Affliction that he ever had, did do what his Conſcience enforced him to; and indeed did wrap up the bitter Pill of the Impeachment of Suſpicion of High Treaſon in ſo good words, as that I ſwallowed it with the greateſt Eaſe in the World; and it hath hitherto had no other Operation, than that it hath purged Melancholy: For as I was not at the preſent any way diſmay'd, ſo have I not ſince been any way at all diſheartned: So I pray let not any of my Friends that's there, believe any thing, until ye have the perfect Relation of it from my ſelf. And this Requeſt I chiefly make unto you, to whom I remain a moſt Faithful and moſt paſſionately Devoted Husband and Servant,

Glamorgan.

Remember my Service to my Brother, my Couſin Brown, and the reſt of my good Friends.

About the time of the ſaid Battel at Sligo, viz. on the 22*d* of October, 1645. arrived in the River of Kilmare the Pope's Nuncio John Baptiſt Rinuccini, Archbiſhop of Fermo, in a Frigat of 21 Guns, and 26 Italians of his Retinue, beſides divers Regular and Secular Prieſts, and bringing with him (as was reported) beſides Apoſtolical Benedictions, ſome Arms, Ammunition, and Spaniſh Gold. It was alſo Voted, That all Treaties with the Rebels in Ireland, without the Conſent of both Houſes of Parliament, ſhould be annull'd: And that the Proſecution of the War againſt the ſaid Rebels, ſhall be managed by the Two Houſes of Parliament; and that no Governor ſhall be placed there, but by the Conſent of both Houſes of Parliament.

The Earl of Glamorgan's Letter to his Majeſty, Feb. 23. 164⅚.

For his Sacred Majeſty.

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,

I Am now at Waterford, providing Shipping immediately to Tranſport 6000 Foot; and 4000 more are by May to follow them: I hope theſe will yet come opportunely to the Relief of Cheſter. What hath been the Occaſion of ſo long Delays, and yet ſuffers not your Majeſty's Service herein to proceed with that Advantage it might do, I conceive not ſo fit to commit to Paper; but I ſhortly ſend my Brother, who ſhall fully inform your Majeſty with all Particulars, and thereby rectify your Opinion, and give you true knowledge who are your faithful Servants. I hope long e're this, Captain Bacon hath arrived with you ſince my Enlargement; and therefore I need only tell your Majeſty, That my further Services intended for you, will, I hope, without further Croſſes, be ſuffered to go on: Though ſtrange is the Induſtry uſed by many ſeeming Friends to hinder me therein; but I am confident it ſhall not lye in their power, your Majeſty remaining ſtill conſtant; as I doubt not but you will, to your favourable Opinion, and right Interpretation of my poor Endeavours, which if they may take place, will procure you to be a glorious and happy Prince; I having no other Ends, but to approve my ſelf,

SIR,

CHAP. VIII.

Containing all Tranſactions Military and Civil, from the beginning of the Year 1646. till the King's coming to the Scotch Army, May 5. And ſome Paſſages depending thereupon.

THE moſt eminent Tranſactions of this Year may conveniently be divided into thoſe that happened before his Majeſty's going to the Scots Army; and ſuch as occurred afterwards upon that ſudden and unexpected Turn of Affairs: And accordingly we ſhall deliver them.

The Reader, from the foregoing Collections, will remember, That at the beginning of this Year his Majeſty's Affairs were reduced to a very low Ebb; the Enemy every where Maſters of the Field, and no viſible Force left able to oppoſe them; the Royal Gariſons yet remaining in the Weſt, in no poſſibility of holding out long againſt Fairfax; and after taking them in, Oxford (where his Majeſty at preſent made his Reſidence) could not but expect to be next beleaguer'd, as Newark was already actually beſieged by the Scots, and Major-General Poyntz, and other Engliſh Forces.

This Exigency of Affairs, together with his Majeſty's many preſſing Meſſages to come to a free Perſonal Treaty with the Two Houſes, occaſioned Rumours to be ſpread, as if his Majeſty intended to come privately to London; whereupon the Two Houſes on the 31ſt of March paſſed ſeveral Votes to this Effect.

Votes paſs'd March 31. 1646. on a Rumour of his Majeſty's intending to come privately to London.

1. THAT in caſe the King ſhall, contrary to the Advice of both Houſes of Parliament already given to him, come or attempt to come within the Lines of Communication, That then the Committee of the Militia of London ſhall have Power, and are hereby enjoined, upon Advice had with the Committee of Lords and Commons for the Army, to raiſe ſuch Forces as they ſhall think neceſſary to prevent any Tumult that may ariſe by his Majeſty's coming, and to ſuppreſs any that ſhall happen.

2. That in caſe the King ſhall come to any of the Guards about the City, the Officer that commands that Guard, with ſuch Aſſiſtance as may be procured, cured, ſhall conduct his Majeſty unto St. James's Houſe, with a Guard to ſecure his Perſon from Danger, and to prevent Reſort unto him.

An. 1646.

3. That in ſuch caſe, the Committee for the Militia are forthwith to ſend ſuch other Officers as ſhall be ſufficient there to ſecure his Perſon from Danger, and prevent Reſort unto him, until the Houſes ſhall be acquainted therewith, and take further Order. And until thoſe other Forces ſhall come to St. James's, the firſt Guard is to tarry there.

4. That for ſuch Perſons as ſhall come with the King, the Officer that commands the Guard (with ſuch Aſſiſtance as may be procured) ſhall apprehend and ſecure them in ſuch Priſons and other places as the Committee of the Militia ſhall think fitting, until the Houſes ſhall take further Order.

5. That the Officer that commands the Guards ſhall prevent the Reſort of any Perſon unto the King; and in caſe any ſhall endeavour in a forcible manner to have Acceſs unto him, That the Officers ſhall apprehend and ſecure them until further Order from the Houſe.

6 That if there be any Reſiſtance in any the Caſes aforeſaid, the Officer and Soldiers ſhall by Force of Arms, according to the courſe of War, obſerve theſe Directions in purſuance of the Ordinance of Parliament.

7. That upon this occaſion the Committee of the Militia ſhall ſtrengthen their Guards both within and without the City, and employ ſuch men as for their Fidelity and Ability they can confide in.

The ſame Day they alſo paſs'd the following Order:

An Order for all that have born Arms againſt the Parliament to depart from London, &c. March 31.

THE Lords and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, taking notice of the great Confluence and Reſort of Papiſts Officers, and Soldiers of Fortune, and ſuch as have born Arms againſt the Parliament of England, from the Enemies Gariſons and Quarters, unto the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and other parts within the Lines of Communication, Do, for the prevention of ſuch Inconveniences as may thereby ariſe, think fit to order, and it is hereby ordered by the ſaid Lords and Commons, That all Papiſts whatſoever, and all Officers and Soldiers of Fortune, and other perſons that have born Arms againſt the Parliament of England, not being under Reſtraint, do before the end of the 6th day of April, 1646. depart out of the ſaid Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Lines of Communication. And if any ſuch perſon ſhall continue within the ſaid Lines after that time, ſuch perſon is hereby declared a Spy, and ſhall be apprehended, impriſoned, and proceeded againſt as a Spy, according to the Rules of War. And the ſaid Lords and Commons do further order, That all ſuch perſons do forbear, upon the Penalty aforeſaid, to return or come within the ſaid Lines, without Licenſe under the Hands of the Committee appointed for Compoſitions at Goldſmiths-Hall. And the Committee of the Militia of London, and their Sub Committees in their ſeveral Limits reſpectively, are hereby required to keep ſtrict Guards and Watches, and cauſe frequent Searches to be made, and to take care for the due Execution of this Order. Provided, That this Order, nor any thing therein contained, ſhall extend to any perſon or perſons who ſhall obtain Licenſe under the Hands of the Committee of Goldſmiths-Hall, to continue within the Limits aforeſaid. Provided, That this Order, or any thing herein contained, ſhall not extend to any perſon or perſons who came in to the Parliament before the Firſt of June laſt, and are cleared by both Houſes of Parliament from their Delinquency. Provided alſo, That no Peer of this Realm ſhall reſort unto the Committee of Goldſmiths-Hall for Licenſe to continue within the Limits aforeſaid; but ſhall repair only to the Houſe of Peers for their ſaid Licenſe. This Order to continue for the ſpace of One Month after the ſaid 6th of April, and no longer.

The Scots Army being ſet down before one ſide of Newark, and Col. Poyntz with conſiderable Engliſh Forces on the other; the Committee of both Kingdoms reſiding there with the Armies, ſent in the following Summons:

Summons to the Gariſon at Newark, March 28.

WE the Committee of both Kingdoms, being ſent and authorized to uſe our beſt Endeavours for the reducing of the Town and Gariſon of Newark, do hereby (in the Name of both Houſes of the Parliament of England, land, and for the uſe of the King and Parliament) demand of you, That you forthwith ſurrender the ſame into their hands. It is the pious Care of the Parliament to prevent the Effuſion of Chriſtian Blood, the waſting of the Country, and the deſtruction of Towns. We ſhall eſteem our ſelves happy in being Inſtruments to avert thoſe Miſeries, and ſhall therefore grant to you, the Gentlemen with you, and the Town, Honourable Conditions; which if you ſhall now neglect, and will let nothing but experimental Sufferings declare unto you your unavoidable Ruin, you are to give an Account to God, to this preſent Age, and to Poſterity, for all the Blood that ſhall from henceforth be ſhed, for the waſting of your Native and Neighbouring Country, and deſtruction of ſo conſiderable a Place. You may not, nor can in any reaſon expect (and moſt aſſuredly on the Faith of honeſt men you ſhall not hereafter obtain from us) ſuch Terms as we are now willing to afford you. We ſent no Summons, until you and all with you might ſee we were able by Force to attain what we much rather deſire by Treaty. The Parliament have 16000 Horſe and Foot at preſent before your Town, Soldiers of Experience, united, and in Health and Courage. This is no way mentioned, as if we truſted in the Arm of Fleſh (God the Lord of Hoſts hath manifeſted that we fight his Battels); but to ſhew you the vaſt Expences which will be occaſioned by the Continuance of this Siege (for which your Eſtates muſt anſwer); and that your holding out may not further tempt the Almighty. And though you ſhould not regard your own Ruin, and though ſome others ſhould be of that your Opinion, Shall yet that Wealthy Town be ſack'd, and others periſh with you, that ſee their own miſery, and would avoid it? A prudent man, a Soldier, cannot live or dye in Reputation or Peace of Spirit, to maintain a Place not ſo long tenable as till it can be relieved; of which you cannot have the leaſt Hope: Flatter not your ſelves; Relief is not to be had: Cheſter was nearer Succours, and conſiderable Armies for them in the Weſt and in Wales; now ſcarce ſeen what remains of either. Was not that ſtrong City of great Importance? Were they not very often promiſed? Did not all Aſſurances to be relieved come to them? They had none; That Place is ſurrendred. Your Wealth (if you rightly conſider in what State you are) promoves your ſudden and certain Deſtruction. You are prepar'd in ſome things for Defence; you know (and we know) you are not for ſome other. Conſider theſe things ſeriouſly, and you cannot but through them ſee your Ruin to be inevitable, if you do not avoid it by accepting what is now offer'd. We ſhall expect your Anſwer on Monday next by Eleven of the Clock in the Forenoon at Balderton.

Balderton, March 28. 1646.
For the Governor of the Town and Gariſon of Newark, the Gentlemen there; and the Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgeſſes of that Town.

Sign'd in the Name, and by the Warrant of the Committee of both Kingdoms, by Rutland. Lothian.

The Governor's Anſwer.

HAving received a Paper ſubſcribed by the Committee of both Kingdoms, directed as to a Committee-Governor, by putting the Gentlemen and Corporation in equal Commiſſion with me (though the joining us together was with the intention to divide us) I ſhall in Anſwer thereof deſire you to reflect upon the King's Letter of the 23*d* of March, ſent to the Two Houſes of Parliament (which I received from your own Quarters) where in a full Compliance with all their deſires, upon the moſt gracious Conditions that ever Prince propounded, he offers to diſband his Forces and diſmantle his Gariſons: To what end then do you demand that of the Steward, whereof the Lord and Maſter makes a voluntary Tender? I conceive it my Duty to trace his Commands, not to outſtrip them: So that though Honour and Conſcience would permit the Delivery, yet Civility would retard it, leſt his Majeſty's Act of Grace ſhould be fruſtrated by my over-haſty Speed. I ſhall wave the Arguments wherewith you endeavour to evince my Conſent: I am neither to be ſtruck into Apoſtacy by the mention of fair Conditions in a miſty Notion; nor to be frighted into Diſhonour by your running diviſion upon the Fate of Cheſter. For as I do not meaſure my Allegiance by my Intereſt to the former, ſo I do diſdain that Poverty of Spirit, as by reſemblance of Cheſter, to ſuffer by Example: I can be Loyal without that Copy, and I hope this Gariſon ſhall never be the Tranſcript of their Calamity. You may do well to uſe your Fortune modeſtly; and think not that God Almighty doth applaud your Cauſe by reaſon of your Victories, or that he hath not a Bleſſing in ſtore for ours. Whereas you urge the Expence of the Siege, and the Preſſures of the Country in ſupporting your Charge there (ſince occaſion'd by your ſelves) I am not concern'd: Yet in order to their Eaſe, if you will grant a Paſs to ſome Gentlemen to go to the King, and return, I may then know his Majeſty's Pleaſure, Whether according to his Letter he will wind up the Buſineſs in general, or leave me to ſteer my own Courſe; then I ſhall know what to determine. Otherwiſe I deſire you to take notice, That when I received my Commiſſion for the Government of this Place, I annexed my Life as a Label to my Truſt.

Newark, March 31. J. Bellaſyſe.

To the Committee of both Kingdoms.

Dennington Caſtle ſurrendred to the Parliament, April 1.

The ſtrong Caſtle of Dennington near Newbury having for ſome time been beſieged, was on the firſt of April ſurrendred, upon Articles, That Sir John Boyce the Governor, with all his Officers, Gentlemen, and Soldiers, ſhould march out with Colours flying, and Drums beating, the Governor with Four Horſes and Arms, and every Field-Officer with Two, and every Captain One: The Lieutenant-Colonel of Horſe with Two Horſes and Arms, and the other Officers and Reformado-Officers of Horſe with One Horſe and Arms apiece; a Hundred of the Foot-Soldiers to march with Arms Two Miles, and then Fifty of them to lay down their Arms; the other Fifty to continue their Arms, and march with Colours flying, Drums beating, light Matches, Bullets in mouth, and Bandaliers filled with Powder; and all to have a Convoy to Wallingford Caſtle; but ſuch of the Officers as deſire it, to have Paſſes to go beyond Sea, and thoſe that pleaſe, to their own Homes. There were taken in this Caſtle Six Pieces of Ordnance, about Twenty Barrels of Powder, with Match and other Ammunition proportionable.

An Ordinance for eſtabliſhing a Court-Martial, April 3. 1646.

IT is ordained, and be it ordained by the Lords and Commons in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, That Sir Tho. Fairfax, Knt. General of the Forces raiſed by the Houſes of Parliament, Serjeant-Major-General Skippon, Col. Rowland Wilſon, [and between Thirty and Forty others, therein particularly named, conſiſting for the moſt part of Officers, ſome Civilians, and Two or Three Common Lawyers,] or any Twelve or more of them, ſhall be Commiſſioners, and are hereby authorized according to the Courſe of War, to execute Martial Law within the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Lines of Communication, upon all Gunners, Matroſſes and Soldiers there in pay; and alſo upon all ſuch perſons as ſhall offend againſt the Articles following, or any of them.

1. That none ſhall voluntarily go from London or Weſtminſter, or any of the Parliament's Quarters, to the King, Queen, Lords of the Council, or any Commander or Officer of the King's Army, or hold any Intelligence with any in Arms againſt the Parliament, without Conſent of both Houſes, or the Committee of both Kingdoms, or the General or Commander in chief of the ſaid Forces, upon pain of Death, or other Corporal Puniſhment at diſcretion.

2. Whoever ſhall plot, contrive, or endeavour the betraying, ſurrendring, or yielding, or ſhall contrary to the Rules of War ſurrender any City, Town, Magazine, Fort, Gariſon, or Forces, which now are, or hereafter ſhall be under the Power of the Parliament, ſhall be puniſhed with Death.

3. No perſon ſhall voluntarily relieve any in Arms againſt the Parliament, or harbour or receive them, knowing them to have been ſo in Arms, upon pain of Death, or other Corporal Puniſhment at diſcretion.

4. No Officer or Soldier ſhall make any mutinous Aſſemblies, or be aſſiſting thereunto, upon pain of Death.

5. No Guardian or Officer of any Priſon ſhall wilfully ſuffer any Priſoner of War to eſcape, under pain of Death; or negligently, under pain of other Puniſhment at diſcretion.

6. Whoever ſhall voluntarily take Arms againſt the Parliament, having taken the National Covenant, ſhall dye without Mercy; ſo likewiſe ſhall all Deſerters.

7. Whoever ſhall come out of the King's Quarters, or hath been there in a Month paſt, or born Arms againſt the Parliament, and ſhall come into London, Weſtminſter, or the Lines of Communication, or any other of the Parliament's Gariſons, without a Paſs from both Houſes, or Sir Tho. Fairfax, or without Drum or Trumpet, and not within 48 Hours render himſelf to the Speakers, or the Committee of both Kingdoms, or the Committee at Goldſmiths-Hall, or Committee of Examinations, or Commander in Chief of ſuch Gariſon, ſhall be proceeded againſt as a Spy, and dye without Mercy. And whoever ſhall come as a Spy, and by virtue of any former Ordinance or Declaration ſhall be found to be a Spy, ſhall be liable to ſuch Puniſhment as by the Courſe of War is uſual.

And the ſaid Commiſſioners are enabled to ſend out their Warrants for Delinquents and Witneſſes, and to commit ſuch as be refractory; and to ſit as often as they ſhall think fit, and appoint a Judge-Advocate and a Provoſt-Marſhal; which Judge-Advocate is hereby authorized to receive all Accuſations, Articles, Complaints and Charges againſt any ſuch Offenders; to examine them, adminiſter Oaths to Witneſſes, &c. And all Mayors, Sheriffs, &c to be aiding and aſſiſting.

Provided, This Ordinance not to extend to Peers, or Members of the Houſe of Commons, but they to be left to the Judgment of both Houſes. Provided alſo, That no Sentence ſhall paſs, but upon the Teſtimony of Two Credible Witneſſes, or the Party's own Confeſſion. And no Execution as to Death ſhall be, until Six Days after Notice given of the ſaid Sentence unto both Houſes. All the Commiſſioners to take the Covenant: And this Ordinance to continue Three Months, and no longer.

The Scots ſcruple the joining in the Propoſitions to be ſent to the King.

The Two Houſes having for ſeveral Months been buſy in framing Propoſitions to be ſent to his Majeſty touching Peace, and having now paſſed the ſame; and they being about this time communicated to the Commiſſioners of the Kingdom of Scotland reſiding at London for their Concurrence; the ſaid Commiſſioners unſatisfied with ſome Articles therein, delivered in ſeveral Papers ſpecifying their Reaſons of Diſſent. Which Papers are too tedious to be here recited at large; being in all Four in Number, under theſe Titles:

The Subſtance of the Scots Papers delivered in to the Two Houſes, touching the Propoſitions, April, 1646.

1. The Firſt Paper delivered in to the Houſes of Parliament by the Commiſſioners of Scotland; containing their Anſwer to the whole Propoſitions of Peace.
2. Their Second Paper; containing Reaſons touching the Militia.
3. Their Third Paper; containing the Citations of ſeveral Paſſages out of the ſeveral Declarations of the Houſes concerning the Militia, and Uniformity in Religion.
4. Their Fourth Paper; containing their Reaſons why the Reſult of the Committee of both Kingdoms at Edinburgh, 28. Nov. 1643. is a Treaty.

The main Exceptions they took, were to the Propoſitions touching Religion, and concerning the ſetling the Militia, and touching the future Conduct and ordering of the Scots Forces in Ireland.

The Scots Firſt Paper.

As to the firſt, they Remonſtrate, That as the matter of Religion, by reaſon of the Neceſſity and Incomparable Excellency thereof, deſerveth the firſt place, and before all other matters to be conſidered; ſo it hath been always in all our Undertakings, the prime and chiefeſt of our Intentions and Deſires, and in all our Actions and Sufferings our greateſt Comfort and Encouragement; and which being eſtabliſhed according to the Covenant, we are very confident to give and receive Satisfaction in all other matters; and without which the Church and Kingdom of Scotland having been from the Corruption of this Fountain overwhelm'd with a deluge of miſeries, altho they had had all things beſide, cannot be ſatisfied, nor think themſelves ſecured. And we confeſs, that it is to us, and to that Church and Kingdom, no ſmall matter of ſorrow, that after ſo ſolemn a Covenant, and ſo many Proteſtations and Declarations, the Reformation of Religion ſhould ſo long ſtick, and be ſo much obſtructed in this Kingdom; which we hoped in the beginning when both Kingdoms entred in Covenant, ſhould long before this time not only been eſtabliſhed here, but propagated alſo to other Nations, groaning under, or in danger of the Yoke of Antichriſtian Tyranny; and which upon the appearing of the Light, and the new dawnings of the Day in this Iſland, were beginning to lift up their heads in expectation of their Deliverance and Comforts. We do therefore deſire particularly and explicitely to know the Articles of Reformation, and Uniformity of Church-Government, contained under the general Propoſitions; all of them, after much debate, being long ſince offered by the Aſſembly of Divines unto, and a great part of them reſolved upon by both Houſes; which may alſo in a ſhort time reſolve upon the remnant. By this mean we ſhall proceed the more diſtinctly and aſſuredly; and theſe Articles formed up in a Model, may be conſidered and granted by the King with the clearer knowledge; which is very neceſſary, not only in other Propoſitions, which are framed as particularly as may be, but alſo and eſpecially in the matter of Religion.

This was the Courſe approved and obſerved at the Treaty at Uxbridge; where ſo much as was at that time prepar'd for ſetling Religion, was preſented. If we ſhould without the knowledge of particulars reſt upon the general Propoſition, Peace might be ſetled without the ſetling of Religion, except in ſo far as by the King's Conſent the Power of Reformation is to be in the Houſes, and Uniformity of Religion is placed in the Parliaments of both Kingdoms; which doth not anſwer our Covenant, binding both Kingdoms to the Exerciſe of their Power, by their Endeavours in the Particulars therein ſpecified. Nor will this General give ſatisfaction to any of the Reformed Churches, eſpecially to the Church of Scotland; nor will it be able to cure the preſent Diſtempers of Religion in the Church of England, which call for a preſnt Reformation; nor ſecure them or us from altering of that which is already ordained; nor be any Recompence of the many Labourrs and Sufferings, and the much Expence of Treaſure and Blood in this Cauſe.

Having peruſed the ſeveral Ordinances, Directions, and Votes of the Honourable Houſes concerning Church-Government delivered unto us, which we conceive will be the matter of the Propoſitions of Religion, and in this ſenſe only we ſpeak to them, we do agree to the direction for the preſent Election of Elders, to the Subordination of Congregational, Claſſical, Provincial, and National Aſſemblies, and to the direction concerning the Members of which they are conſtitute, and the times of their Meeting: Only we deſire, That no Godly Miniſter be excluded from being a Member of the Claſſical Presbytery; nor any Godly Miniſter, having lawful Commiſſion, from being a Member of the Provincial and National Aſſemblies, there being the greater need of their preſence and aſſiſtance in ſuch Aſſemblies, that there are no Ruling Elders to join with and aſſiſt them. And we deſire that a fixed time be appointed for the ordinary meeting of the National Aſſembly, with power to the Parliament to ſummon them when they pleaſe; and with liberty to the Church to meet oftner, if there ſhall be neceſſary cauſe; the ordinary meeting thereof being moſt neceſſary for preſerving Truth and Unity in the whole Church, againſt the Errors that may ariſe and multiply in the Church, and againſt the diviſions and differences that may diſtract the Inferior Aſſemblies of the Church, and for receiving and determining Appeals from Provincial Aſſemblies, which otherwiſe will be infinite, and lye over long without determination, and the Exigence of Religion ſometimes being ſuch, that it will require an extraordinary Meeting.

We agree to the Rules and Direction concerning Suſpenſion from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, in caſes of Ignorance and Scandal: Only we deſire that the Congregational Elderſhips may have power to judge in caſes of Scandal not enumerated, with liberty to the perſon grieved to appeal, as in other Reformed Churches. This we conceive to be a Power no more Arbitrary in this Church, than in them who are limited by the Rules expreſſed in in Scripture, and do exerciſe this their Power with ſuch Moderation, as is a comfort, help, and ſtrengthning of Civil Authority: The appointing of Provincial Commiſſioners, ſuch as are appointed in the Ordinance, will miniſter occaſion to ſuch Debates and Diſputes in this and other Churches, as will be very unpleaſant to Parliaments and Civil Powers, will make a great Diſconformity betwixt this and other Churches, and a preſent Rent and Diviſion in this Church; is ſuch a Mixture in Church-Government as hath not been heard of in any Church before this time; may prove a Foundation of a new Epiſcopacy, or of a High Commiſſion: And the Work may be better done by the Aſſemblies of Miniſters and Ruling-Elders, who have this in their Eccleſiaſtical Charge, and will be no leſs tender of the Honour of Parliament, by whoſe Laws they live and are protected, and as able and willing to give juſt ſatisfaction to the people, whoſe Conſciences and Converſation are beſt known unto them, as any other perſons whatſoever. Concerning the Suſpenſion of the Miniſters themſelves, altho Scandal in them deſerveth double Cenſure, yet we conceive it to be moſt agreeable, that they have their Cenſure from the Claſſical, or other Superior Aſſemblies of the Church, where there be Miniſters to judge them. We do alſo agree to the Ordinance of Ordination of Miniſters; only we deſire it may be provided, That it ſtand in force for all time to come.

There be other matters contained in the Ordinances; as, The manner of Subordination of the Aſſemblies of the Church to the Parliament, ſo much ſubject to miſtake: The ſeeming Exemption of ſome ſorts of perſons from the juſt Cenſures of the Church: The miniſtring the Sacrament to ſome perſons againſt the Conſcience of the Miniſtry and Eldership: Concerning publick Repentance to be only before the Elderſhips, and ſuch like; which may be taken into Conſideration, and with ſmall labour and alteration be determined to the great ſatisfaction of many. As for the Remnant, concerning the perpetual Officers of the Church, and their Offices; the Order and Power of Church-Aſſemblies; the Order of publick Repentance, and of proceeding to Excommunication and Abſolution; we deſire they may be agreed upon according to the Covenant, and the Advice of the Divines of both Kingdoms, long ſince offered to both Houſes; which being done, they may be preſently drawn in a method, and formed up in a Model of Church-Government in three days, to the quieting the minds of all the Godly, concerning the particular meaning of both Kingdoms in the matter of Religion, to the great Content of the Reformed Churches, and which will both make us diſtinctly to know what we demand, and the King what he doth grant.

As to the 18th Propoſition touching the Militia, they ſay, We deſire that the Militia may be ſo firmly ſetled, as neither the King nor any other be able to diſturb or infringe the Peace now to be agreed upon; and altho it be our Judgment, That the former Propoſitions (viz. thoſe of Uxbridge) are a more firm Security for conſerving the Peace, and a ſtronger Bond of Unity betwixt the Kingdoms than the New, and are therefore deſirous the Houſes would be pleaſed to ſend the former; which being granted by his Majeſty, we think the Militia perfectly ſecured, and that the War ſhould not be continued by inſiſting upon the New Propoſitions; yet leſt our diſagreement herein with the Houſes ſhould be a hindrance to the ſending of Propoſitions, that we may teſtify how deſirous we are, ſo far as in us lies, to give the Houſes Satisfaction, and how much we value the ſpeedy ſetling of the Peace of theſe Kingdoms above our own Intereſt, provided that it be underſtood to be without prejudice to the Right and Intereſt of the Crown, which we underſtand to be conjoined with the reſpective Parliaments in the Militia of both Kingdoms, and not to be abſolutely in the King himſelf; and that the King and his Poſterity be not totally excluded, and rendred incapable to concur with their Parliaments for protecting of their Subjects, and oppoſing the Enemies of the Kingdoms: And provided that it be without prejudice to the ſeveral Treaties between the Kingdoms, we do conſent that the Power, Exerciſe, and managing of the Militia in each Kingdom, be ſetled in the Parliaments of either Kingdom reſpectively, for ſuch a time as ſhall be mutually agreed upon: And after the expiration of that term, That the Militia be ſetled and exerciſed in ſuch manner and by ſuch ways and means as ſhall be agreed upon by his Majeſty and and the Parliaments of either Kingdom reſpectively; whereby the Power of the Militia of England and Ireland, which by the former Propoſitions was in Commiſſioners of both Kingdoms, will be in the Houſes of Parliament; the People will be ſecured from all apprehenſions of dangers by reaſon of the late Troubles; and the King, who is one of the Three Eſtates of the Kingdom, will not be for ever excluded from that juſt Power and Intereſt in the Militia, by which he may concur with the Parliament in defence of the Kingdom.

The Second Paper.

And for this in their Second Paper they aſſign particular Reaſons: As 1. That by the Fundamental Laws and conſtant Practice of the moſt Legal and beſt-regulated Kingdoms, and by the Laws and Practice of theſe Kingdoms, declared to the World by the Honourable Houſe, the Power of War and the Militia is placed in the King and Parliament; and ſo acknowledged by all that write upon this Subject for Parliaments: Which is directly contrary to this New Propoſition, by which the whole power of the Militia is ſolely placed in the Houſes of Parliament, and the Crown excluded for ever. 2dly, Becauſe in the Petitions, Meſſages, and Declarations ſent to the King, emitted to the Kingdom and to all the World, we have profeſſed, That no more was ſought concerning the Militia, but that it might be intruſted to ſuch perſons as the Parliament ſhould nominate or approve, and might confide in, without diminution of the King's Authority or juſt Power; and profeſſions to preſerve and defend the King's Perſon and Authority; that the World may bear Witneſs with our Conſciences of our Loyalty, and that we have no Thoughts or Intentions to diminiſh his Majeſty's juſt Power and Greatneſs, was uſed as a ſpecial Argument to perſuade Scotland to join with England in this War; and the ſame is a part of the Third Article of our Covenant: And now to exclude the King and his Poſterity for ever from the Militia, will be underſtood to be an alteration of the Fundamental Government, contrary to the former Reſolutions and Declarations of both Kingdoms, and not agreeable to our Covenant. 3dly, Becauſe the ſetling of the Militia according to the New Propoſition, may diſable the Crown from ever performing that Duty which all Kings by their Royal Office and Oath of Coronation are bound to perform, and their Subjects by their Oath of Allegiance bound to aſſiſt, for the protection of their Subjects and the Laws, and oppoſing their Enemies, and keeping Friendſhip and Correſpondence with their Allies. 4thly, Becauſe hereby in one Age or another differences may hence ariſe between the Kingdoms, being ſeparated in their Militia; yea, in any one of the Kingdoms, the King's Poſterity reflecting on the Power of their Predeceſſors, may be ſoon incited to endeavour by new Stirs to regain it: Whereas the Power remaining in them, with the Advice of their Parliaments, may preſerve the Kingdoms in Peace, Quo æquiorem eo firmiorem pacem. Laſtly, The ſending this Propoſition is like to cut off all hopes of Peace; ſince his Majeſty in ſeveral Declarations hath avowed, That albeit he were vanquiſh'd and made Priſoner, he would quit both his Eſtate and Life, before he would thus uncrown the Crown, and depoſe his Poſterity: And then let any judge if this be the fitteſt way for a ſpeedy and durable Peace: Which with Truth is the Sum of all our deſires.

The Scots Third Paper.

Their Third Paper was only a Collection out of ſeveral Declarations of the Two Houſes, of Profeſſions of their Reſolutions for Uniformity of Religion, and ſtating the Militia to be in the King and Parliament conjunctly, &c.

The Scots Fourth Paper.

Their Fourth Paper was to prove, That the Reſult of the Committee of both Kingdoms at Edinburgh, Nov. 28. 1643. was a Treaty: And the ground of controverting thereof was, becauſe in the 13*th* Propoſition now offered to them, it is propoſed, That the Two Houſes at Weſtminſter ſhall have the Command of all the Forces in England and Ireland: Whereas by the Reſult aforeſaid, the Scots Army in Ireland was to be commanded by the Parliament of Scotland, and ſuch as they ſhould appoint. To avoid which, the Parliament of England now diſown'd That to be a Formal Treaty between the Two Kingdoms, but only a Temporary Conceſſion of the Committee: And the Scots inſiſted it was, and had all the neceſſary Formalities and Corroborations of a Treaty.

Beſides theſe Exceptions to the Propoſitions drawn by the Two Houſes, the Scots Commiſſioners alſo deſired an Addition of Two more, relating to the Advantage of their Nation; viz. 1. That in regard of the great advantage which a Kingdom enjoyeth by the Royal Preſence and ordinary Reſidence of their Sovereign with them, and the great Loſs and Prejudice which the other Kingdom doth ſuſtain through their Abſence, by their not underſtanding the diſpoſition of their People, or condition of their Affairs, but from the Informations of others; beſides many other Prejudices; we do therefore earneſtly deſire the Conſent of the Honourable Houſes for ſending to his Majeſty a Propoſition, That the King and the Prince, and after them, their Heirs and Succeſſors, ſhall at leaſt One Year of Three reſide in Scotland, where they may perſonally diſcharge that Duty they owe to the Subjects of that Kingdom, where Conſcience cannot allow them to be always Non-Reſidents, nor the Welfare of the Kingdom diſpenſe with their conſtant Abſence.

2. Upon the like Cauſes and Grounds, we deſire the Honourable Houſes to concur with us in a deſire to his Majeſty, That in all Places of Truſt, and Offices about the King, Queen, and Prince, and reſt of his Royal Children, the equal Half, or at leaſt the Third part, may be of the Scottiſh Nation, leſt by time they become Strangers each unto other, which muſt needs produce many Inconveniences. And this we truſt will not be interpreted as the caſting in of any Let or Hindrance to retard the Propoſitions; ſith the Honourable Houſes have given us ſo good hopes of their Conſent, without debate, to ſuch Propoſitions as we conceive to be conducible for the Good and Security of the Kingdom of Scotland.

The Two Houſes are incens'd at the printing the Scots Papers.

Soon after the Delivery of theſe Papers, and before the Two Houſes had return'd any Anſwer, the ſame were publiſhed in Print (ſuppoſed to be done by the Order or Connivance of the Scots Commiſſioners) but with a Preface or Epiſtle as from a private Hand, pretending to ſtate the Caſe between the Parliament and the ſaid Commiſſioners. The Houſes being informed of this Publication, did on the 14*th* of April concur in a joint Vote, That the Matter contained in the ſaid Printed Papers was falſe and ſcandalous againſt the Parliament and Kingdom of England: That they ſhould be burnt by the Common Hangman; and that a Declaration ſhould be drawn up, which ſhould hold forth to the whole World the Untruths therein contained, and the Innocency and Integrity of the Parliament: And that the Author or Publiſher was an Incendiary between the Two Kingdoms. And on the 21*ſt* of the ſame Month, the Preface to the ſaid Pamphlet, entituled, The Scotch Commiſſioners Papers, and the ſtating of the Queſtion about the Propoſitions for Peace, was accordingly burnt by the Common Hangman, but not the Scotch Commiſſioners Papers. And in the mean time, on the 17*th* the Two Houſes publiſh'd the following Declaration.

The Preface to the Book of the Scotch Papers burnt by the Common Hangman, April 21.

Die Veneris 17. April. 1646.

A Declaration of the Commons of England aſſembled in Parliament, of their true Intentions concerning the Ancient and Fundamental Government of the Kingdom, the Government of the Church, the preſent Peace, ſecuring the People againſt all Arbitrary Government, and maintaining a right underſtanding between the Two Kingdoms of England and Scotland, according to the Covenant and Treaties.

A Declaration of both Houſes of their true Intentions to maintain the Fundamental Government, &c. April 17.

WE the Commons in Parliament aſſembled, well remembring that in the beginning of this War, divers Proteſtations, Declarations, and Suggeſtions, were ſpread abroad by the King, and thoſe that did adhere to him, whereby our ſincere Intentions for the Publick were miſrepreſented, and the minds of many poſſeſſed with a belief, that our Reſolutions and Proceedings were grounded upon needleſs Fears and Jealouſies, and that there was no neceſſary and juſt Cauſe of the preſent War; the Untruth and Deceitfulneſs whereof, by the good hand of God miraculouſly diſcovering the Secrets of our Enemies, diſpoſing and bleſſing our Affairs, Time and Experience have ſince fully manifeſted, to the undeceiving of thoſe that were ſeduced thereby: Which Miſtakes of the People, by this Artifice and Cunning of the Enemy, for ſome time much blemiſhed the Juſtice of this Cauſe, and not only propagated the War, but hazarded the Succeſs thereof: And if the Enemy by theſe means had prevailed, how dangerous the Conſequences would have been, is moſt apparent.

And now obſerving that it has pleaſed God ſo to bleſs our Endeavours, and the Actions of our Forces and Armies, as that the Enemy is in deſpair to accompliſh his deſigns by War, and we are brought into good hopes of attaining and enjoying that which with ſo much Expence of Blood and Treaſure we have contended for; there are ſtill the ſame Spirits ſtirring, and Humours working, as in the beginning, tho under other diſguiſes, and upon other grounds, putting falſe Conſtructions as well upon what hath already paſſed the Houſes, as upon the things under preſent debate, and miſrepreſenting our Intentions in the uſe we deſire to make of this great Succeſs which God has given us, and the happy opportunity to ſettle Peace and Truth in the Three Kingdoms; not ceaſing as well in Print as otherwiſe, to beget a belief that we now deſire to exceed or ſwerve from our firſt Aims and Principles in the undertaking this War, and to recede from the Solemn League and Covenant, and Treaties between the Two Kingdoms; and that we would prolong theſe uncomfortable Troubles, and bleeding Diſtractions, in order to alter the Fundamental Conſtitution and Frame of this Kingdom, to leave all Government in the Church looſe and unſetled, and our ſelves to exerciſe the ſame Arbitrary Power over the Perſons and Eſtates of the Subjects, which this preſent Parliament hath thought fit to aboliſh, by taking away the Star-Chamber, High-Commiſſion, and other Arbitrary Courts, and the exorbitant Power of the Council-Table.

All which ſeriouſly conſidered by us, altho our Actions and Proceedings from time to time ſince the beginning of this Parliament, and particularly in the managing of this great Cauſe, are the beſt Demonſtrations of our Sincerity and Faithfulneſs to the Publick; yet foreſeeing that if Credit be given to ſuch dangerous Inſinuations and falſe Surmiſes, the ſame will not only continue the preſent Calamities, and involve us into new and unexpected Embroilments, but likewiſe inevitably endanger the happy Iſſue and Succeſs of our Endeavours, which by God's Bleſſing we may otherwiſe hope for.

We do declare, That our true and real Intentions are, and our Endeavours ſhall be, to ſettle Religion in the Purity thereof, according to the Covenant; to maintain the Ancient and Fundamental Government of this Kingdom; to preſerve the Rights and Liberties of the Subject; to lay hold on the firſt opportunity of procuring a ſafe and well-grounded Peace in the Three Kingdoms; and to keep a good Underſtanding between the Two Kingdoms of England and Scotland, according to the grounds expreſſed in the Solemn League and Covenant, and Treaties; which we deſire may be inviolably obſerved on both parts.

And leſt theſe Generals ſhould not give a ſufficient Satisfaction, we have thought fit, to the end men may be no longer abuſed into a misbelief of our Intentions, or a miſunderſtanding of our Actions, to make this further Enlargement upon the Particulars.

And firſt, Concerning Church-Government, we having ſo fully declared for a Presbyterial Government, having ſpent ſo much time, taken ſo much pains for the ſetling of it, paſſed moſt of the Particulars brought to us by the Aſſembly of Divines (called only to adviſe of ſuch things as ſhall be required of them by both or either of the Houſes of Parliament) without any material Alteration, ſaving in the point of Commiſſioners: And having publiſhed ſeveral Ordinances for putting the ſame in execution; becauſe we cannot conſent to the granting of an Arbitrary and Unlimited Power and Juriſdiction to near Ten thouſand Judicatories to be erected within this Kingdom; and this demanded in ſuch a way as is not conſiſtent with the Fundamental Laws and Government of the ſame, and by neceſſary conſequence excluding the Power of the Parliament of England in the Exerciſe of that Juriſdiction, and whereof we have received no Satisfaction in point of Conſcience or Prudence, which differ not in any Fundamentals of Religion, may be ſo provided for, as may ſtand with the Word of God, and the Peace of the Kingdom.

It muſt therefore ſeem very ſtrange to us, if any ſober and modeſt men ſhould entertain a Thought that we ſhould ſettle no Government in the Church, when our Unwillingneſs to ſubject our ſelves and the People of this Land to this vaſt Power, has been a great Cauſe that the Government hath not been long ſince eſtabliſhed. And we deſire it may be obſerved, That we have had the more reaſon, by no means to part with this Power out of the hands of the Civil Magiſtrate, ſince the Experience of all Ages will manifeſt, That the Reformation and Purity of Religion, and the Preſervation and Protection of the People of God in this Kingdom, hath under God been by the Parliaments, and their Exerciſe of this Power. And our full Reſolutions ſtill are ſincerely, really, and conſtantly, through the Grace of God, to endeavour the Reformation of Religion in the Kingdoms of England and Ireland, in Doctrine, Worſhip, Diſcipline and Government, according to the Word of God, and the Examples of the beſt-Reformed Churches, and according to our Covenant.

Whence it may appear to all men, That thoſe Rumors and Aſperſions whereby the minds of men are ſo diſturbed for want of the preſent ſetling of Church-Government, are to be applied to thoſe who having a ſufficient Power and Direction from the Houſes on that behalf, have not as yet put the ſame in execution.

And whereas a ſafe and good Peace is the right end of a juſt War, there is nothing we have more earneſtly deſired, nor more earneſtly laboured after; and to that purpoſe both Houſes of Parliament have framed ſeveral Propoſitions to be ſent to the King, ſuch as they hold neceſſary for the preſent and future Safety and Good of this Kingdom; ſome of which are tranſmitted from both Houſes to our Brethren of Scotland, where they now remain: Whoſe Conſent that they may be ſpeedily ſent to the King, we ſhall not doubt to obtain, ſince the Parliament of England is and ought to be ſole and proper Judge of what may be for the Good of this Kingdom; the ſame Liberty having been always by us admitted to the Kingdom of Scotland in all things that concern that Kingdom; wherein we are ſo far from altering the Fundamental Conſtitution and Government of this Kingdom by King, Lords, and Commons, that we have only deſired, that with the Conſent of the King, ſuch Powers may be ſetled in the Two Houſes, without which we can have no aſſurance but that the like or greater Miſchiefs than theſe which God hath hitherto delivered us from, may break out again, and engage us in a ſecond and more deſtructive War.

Whereby it plainly appears our Intentions are not to change the Ancient Frame of Government within this Kingdom, but to obtain the end of the Primitive Inſtitution of all Government, The Safety and Weal of the People; not judging it wiſe or ſafe, after ſo bitter Experiences of the bloody Conſequences of a pretended Power of the Militia in the King, to leave any colourable Authority in the ſame, for future Attempts of introducing an Arbitrary Government over this Nation, and protecting Delinquents, Enemies of our Religion and Liberties by Force from the Juſtice of Parliament; the firſt and chiefeſt Grounds of the Parliament's taking up Arms in this Cauſe.

And altho the Neceſſity of War hath given ſome diſturbance to Legal Proceedings, ſtopped the uſual Courſe of Juſtice, enforced the Parliament for the preſervation of this State, to impoſe and require many great and unuſual Payments from the good Subjects of this Kingdom, and to take extraordinary ways for procuring of Moneys for their many preſſing Occaſions; it having pleaſed God to reduce our Affairs into a more hopeful Condition than heretofore: We do declare, that we will not, nor any by colour of any Authority derived from us, ſhall interrupt the ordinary Courſe of Juſtice in the ſeveral Courts and Judicatories of this Kingdom, nor intermeddle in caſes of private Intereſt otherwhere determinable, unleſs it be in caſes of Male-Adminiſtration of Juſtice, wherein we ſhall ſee and provide that Right be done, and Puniſhment inflicted as there ſhall be occaſion, according to the Laws of the Kingdom, and the Truſt repoſed in us. And as both Houſes have already for the eaſe and benefit of the People, taken away the Court of Wards and Liveries, with all Tenures in Capite, and by Knight-Service, ſo we will take ſpecial Care that as ſpeedy and as great eaſe may be had in future Levies of Money, by reducing of Gariſons, and other ways, as the preſſing Occaſions of the Kingdom can poſſibly admit; and will provide, by bringing Delinquents to due Puniſhment (who have unnaturally fomented and maintained this preſent War againſt the Parliament and Kingdom) that there may be a fair poſſibility of ſatisfying the Diſburſements, clearing the Engagements, and repairing the

Loſſes of thoſe who have faithfully and chearfully laid out themſelves, and ſuffered for the Publick Service, unleſs by too great Credulity given to falſe Suggeſtions, we ſhall be diſabled from effecting what we deſire.

Laſtly, Whereas both Nations have entred into a Solemn League and Covenant, and Treaties have been made and concluded between the Two Kingdoms of England and Scotland, we have had an eſpecial regard of the Treaties, and have not (to our beſt Judgments) failed of the performance of any thing which was on our part to be performed. And for the Covenant, we have been and ever ſhall be very careful duly to obſerve the ſame; that as nothing hath been done, ſo nothing ſhall be done by us, repugnant to the true meaning and intention thereof; and do preſume no interpretation of it (ſo far as it ſhall concern the Kingdom of England) ſhall by any be endeavoured to be impoſed on us, other than we our ſelves do know to be ſuitable to the firſt juſt Ends for which it was agreed: And we do expect, that the People of England ſhould not receive impreſſions of any forced Conſtructions of that Covenant; which in caſe of any doubt ariſing, is only to be expounded by them by whoſe Authority it was eſtabliſhed in this Kingdom, who will not depart from thoſe Grounds and Principles upon which it was framed and founded.

The Commons order 10000 l preſent, and 10000 l. per Ann. to be paid for the Support of the Queen of Bohemia, Apr. 20.

A Report being made to the Houſe of Commons, concerning the Stipend to be allowed from the Kingdom of England to her Majeſty the Queen of Bohemia (a Daughter of this Crown) and finding ſome Inconveniences in the manner of raiſing the ſame out of ſeveral Delinquents Eſtates, as was formerly propoſed, it was therefore ordered, That the Committee of Goldſmiths-Hall ſhould advance the Sum of Ten thouſand Pounds for the preſent Support of that Queen; and likewiſe for her future Accommodation, That the Sum of 10000 l. per Ann. ſhould be advanced and paid by the Committee of the Revenue, to her ſaid Majeſty, or ſuch as ſhe ſhould appoint to receive the ſame.

Woodſtock ſurrendred, April 26.

Col. Rainsborough and Col. Fleetwood had for ſome time ſtreightned Woodſtock, whereupon the Gariſon deſired a Parley, and a ſafe Conduct for Commiſſioners to come from Oxford to Treat with an equal Number of the Beſiegers: Which being granted, there came from Oxford the Earl of Southampton, Earl of Lindſey, Sir William Fleetwood, and Col. Aſhburnham; who were met by Col. Rainsborough, Col. Fleetwood, Major Harris, and Major Desborough; and after ſome Treaty, came to an Agreement, That the ſaid Gariſon, with the Arms and Ammunition, ſhould be ſurrendred to the uſe of the Parliament; the Field-Officers to march away with their Swords, the other Officers and Soldiers without Arms, and to have a Convoy to Oxford.

800 l. per An. to be allowed to the Biſhop of Durham, April 27.

The Commons having paſs'd a Vote for the Allowance of 800 l. per Ann. to the Biſhop of Dureſme, ſent the ſame up to the Houſe of Peers for their Concurrence; who conſented thereunto.

Hiarchal ſurrendred.

The Committee of Shropſhire were at this time active, towards the end of March, 1646. Some Forces ſent forth by them, brought the Gariſon of Hiarchal to ſurrender, with all the Arms and Ammunition: The Officers and Gentlemen, being in number about Forty, had Conditions to march out with Horſe and Arms, with a Convoy to Worceſter. From thence the Parliament's Shropſhire Forces marched to Bridgnorth, and ſummoned the Town and Caſtle: Col. Billingſley, who commanded in Chief in the Town, would return no Anſwer; but Col. Howard, Governor of the Caſtle, gave a fair Denial: Hereupon the Beſiegers prepared to ſtorm, wherein they ſucceeded ſo far, that they made themſelves Maſters of the Town, but the Caſtle held out near a Month longer, and at laſt ſurrendred upon Conditions to march away without Arms; and Col. Lloyd was appointed Governor there.

Bridgnorth taken by the Parliament's Forces.

Queſtions put by the Commons to the Aſſembly of Divines, about the Jus Divinum of Preſbytery, April 30. 1646.

Queſtions propounded to the Aſſembly of Divines by the Houſe of Commons, touching the Point of Jus Divinum in the matter of Church-Government.

WHereas it is Reſolved by both Houſes, That all Perſons guilty of notorious and ſcandalous Offences, ſhall be ſuſpended from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper; the Houſe of Commons deſires to be ſatisfied by the Aſſembly of Divines in the Queſtions following:

1. Whether the Parochial and Congregational Elderſhips, appointed by Ordinance of Parliament, or any other Congregational or Presbyterial Elderſhips, are Jure Divino, and by the Will and Appointment of Jeſus Chriſt? And whether any particular Church-Government be Jure Divino? And what that Government is?

2. Whether all the Members of the ſaid Elderſhips, as Members thereof, or which of them, are Jure Divino, and by the Will and Appointment of Jeſus Chriſt?

3. Whether the Superior Aſſemblies or Elderſhips, viz. the Claſſical, Provincial, and National, whether all, or any of them, and which of them are Jure Divino, and by the Will and Appointment of Jeſus Chriſt?

4. Whether Appeals from Congregational Elderſhips to the Claſſical, Provincial, and National Aſſemblies, or any of them, and to which of them, are Jure Divino, and by the Will and Appointment of Jeſus Chriſt? And are their Powers upon ſuch Appeals Jure Divino, and by the Will and Appointment of Jeſus Chriſt?

5. Whether Oecumenical Aſſemblies are Jure Divino? And whether there be Appeals from any of the former Aſſemblies to the ſaid Oecumenical, Jure Divino, and by the Will and Appointment of Jeſus Chriſt?

6. Whether by the Word of God the power of judging and declaring what are ſuch notorious and ſcandalous Offences, for which perſons guilty thereof are to be kept from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and of conventing before them, trying, and actual ſuſpending from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper ſuch Offenders accordingly, is either in the Congregational Elderſhip or Presbytery, or in any other Elderſhip, Congregation, or Perſons; and whether ſuch Powers are in them only, or any of them, and in which of them, Jure Divino, and by the Will and Appointment of Jeſus Chriſt?

7. Whether there be any certain and particular Rules expreſſed in the Word of God, to direct the Elderſhips, or Presbyteries, Congregations or Perſons, or any of them, in the Exerciſe and Execution of the Powers aforeſaid; and what are thoſe Rules?

8. Is there any thing contained in the Word of God, That the Supreme Magiſtracy in a Chriſtian State may not judge and determine what are the aforeſaid notorious and ſcandalous Offences, and the manner of Suſpenſion for the ſame; and in what particulars concerning the Premiſſes is the ſaid Supreme Magiſtracy by the Word of God excluded?

9. Whether the proviſion of Commiſſioners to judge of Scandals not enumerated (as they are authorized by the Ordinance of Parliament) be contrary to that way of Government which Chriſt hath appointed in his Church; and wherein are they ſo contrary?

In Anſwer to theſe Particulars the Houſe of Commons deſires of the Aſſembly of Divines, their Proofs from Scripture, and to ſet down the ſeveral Texts of Scripture in the expreſs Words of the ſame: And it is ordered, That every particular Miniſter of the Aſſembly of Divines, that is or ſhall be preſent at the Debate of any of theſe Queſtions, do upon every Reſolution which ſhall be preſented to this Houſe concerning the ſame, ſubſcribe his reſpective Name, either with the Affirmative or Negative, as he gives his Vote: And that thoſe that do diſſent from the Major part, ſhall ſet down their poſitive Opinions, with the expreſs Texts of Scripture upon which their Opinions are grounded.

Fairfax marches back out of Cornwal, until his coming before Oxford.

His Majeſty's Forces in Cornwal, under the Lord Hopton, being, purſuant to the Treaty, wholly disbanded by the End of the Year 1645, Sir Thomas Fairfax the Parliament's General, with his Army, prepared to march back; and on the 31*ſt* of March, 1646. drew up before Exeter, and ſent in the following Summons.

Fairfax's Summons to the City of Exeter, March 31, 1646.

Sir,

BEing return'd with my Army from the Weſt, where God in his Wiſdom ſaw it good to beſtow a dry and bloodleſs Victory upon me, to the great Quiet and Peace of thoſe Parts; and conceiving it my Duty likewiſe to endeavour the Good of this Country, which by the occaſion of your Gariſon is neceſſarily obſtructed; I thought fit once more to ſend you a Summons to deliver up to me the City of Exeter, with the Caſtle, Forts, Arms, Ammunition, and Magazine belonging to the ſame; believing that by this time you are ſatisfied of no Relief from the Prince's Army, and may equally be of all Relief to come from any other place, if your Intelligence and Knowledge were the ſame with ours. There is nothing more induceth me hereunto, than an unfeigned Zeal againſt any Bloodſhed, and as much as in me lies to preſerve that City, which hath already ſuffered deeply in theſe unnatural Diſtractions, from further or greater Miſery. Tho I ſhall not boaſt of my Numbers or Strength, yet I muſt tell you, that I doubt not but the ſame Power which hath formerly made difficult things eaſy, will anſwer this, and will acquit me from being accounted the Occaſion of thoſe Inconveniences and Miſeries which neceſſarily will enſue upon your Refuſal. I ſhall expect your ſpeedy and poſitive Anſwer herein, and reſt, Your Servant,

March 31. 1646. Tho. Fairfax.

Fairfax's Second Letter, April 1.

SIR,

I Have received yours, whereby I underſtand that in purſuance of my Demand in my Summons, you have determined to treat with me by Commiſſioners; and in order to that have ſent a Liſt of Ten Gentlemen, which you deſire for Commiſſioners on your behalf; of which there is none in particular that I take Exceptions unto; yet becauſe I deſire to carry on the buſineſs with Clearneſs and Expedition, which by ſo great a Number cannot be ſo well effected, I thought fit to propound unto you the Number of Six, that being as many as conveniently can be uſed in a Buſineſs of this Nature. Upon Conſent hereto, and Anſwer, I ſhall, according to your deſire, ſend you a ſafe Conduct for a proportionable Number of Commiſſioners; and in the mean time ſhall reſt, Your Servant,

XXII. That for the further and clearer underſtanding of the preſent Articles, it is hereby declared, that the true meaning of them is, That all perſons comprized within theſe Articles, ſhall quietly and peaceably enjoy all their Goods, Debts, and Moveables during the ſpace of Four Months next enſuing, and be free from all Oaths, Covenants, and Proteſtations, and have liberty within the time of the ſaid Four Months, in caſe they ſhall not make their Compoſition with the Parliament (and ſhall be reſolv'd to go beyond Seas) to diſpoſe of their ſaid Goods, Debts, and Moveables, allowed by the Articles, and to depart the Kingdom, if they ſhall think fit, and to have Paſſes for that purpoſe, or otherwiſe to ſtay in the Kingdom.

I do hereby ratify and confirm the Articles aboveſaid, agreed on by the Commiſſioners on my part.

April 9. 1646. Tho. Fairfax.

An. 1646.

Whilſt this Treaty was in hand, Fairfax ſent Commiſſary-General Ireton, with his own Regiment, and Col. Rich's, and ſome other Regiments of Horſe towards Oxford, to hinder Proviſions from being carried in thither. And on Friday, April 10. himſelf advanced to Barnſtaple, and ſummoned that Town, who not being in a capacity to make a long Defence, came to a Capitulation, which was concluded on Sunday the 12*th*. the Articles being in effect much the ſame as thoſe of Exeter: To which place Fairfax return'd on the 15*th*, and ſtay'd there four days, for ſetling the Affairs of that City, where he appointed Col. Hammond Governor. And on the 18*th* began his March towards Oxford, quartering that night at Chard, and the next night to Dorcheſter, and on Monday the 20*th* to Salisbury, waiting there till the 23*d* for the coming up of all his Foot, and Train of Artillery; where he received ſundry Complaints of the Violation of Cornwal and Exeter Articles, by the Committee's Troops of ſeveral Counties taking from divers their Horſes and Arms, and other Neceſſaries, which by the Articles they were to carry away with them.

Barnſtaple ſurrendred to Fairfax, &c. April 12.

Fairfax marches towards Oxford.

On the 24*th* of April part of his Army advanced to Andover, whither he went himſelf the next day, and on Monday the 27*th* came to Newbury.

His Majeſty being at Oxford, obſerving the ill poſture of his Affairs, had reſolv'd to betake himſelf to the Scots Army before Newark. Touching the Grounds and Motives of which unexpected Reſolution, his Majeſty gave this Account in a Lettter to the Marqueſs of Ormond, dated the 13*th* of April; though the ſame was not publickly known till a conſiderable time after; as ſhall be mentioned in its due place.

His Majeſty's Letter to the Marq. of Ormond, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, from Oxford, April 13. 1646. touching his going to the Scots.

Charles R.

RIght Truſty and Entirely beloved Couſin and Counſellor, we greet you well. Having uſed all poſſible and honourable means, by ſending many Gracious Meſſages to the Two Houſes of Parliament; wherein we have offered them all they have heretofore deſired; and deſired from them nothing but what they themſelves (ſince theſe unhappy Wars) have offered, to procure our Perſonal Treaty with them for a ſafe and well-grounded Peace: And having inſtead of a dutiful and peaceable Return to our ſaid Meſſages, received either no Anſwer at all, or ſuch as argues nothing will ſatisfy them, but the Ruin, not only of us, our Poſterity, and Friends, but even of Monarchy it ſelf: And having lately received very good Security, That We, and all that do or ſhall adhere to us, ſhall be ſafe in our Perſons, Honours, and Conſciences, in the Scotiſh Army; and that they ſhall really and effectually join with us, and with ſuch as will come in unto us, and join with them for our Preſervation, and ſhall employ their Armies and Forces to aſſiſt us to the procuring of an happy and well grounded Peace, for the good of us and our Kingdoms, in the Recovery of our juſt Right: We have reſolved to put our ſelves to the hazard of paſſing into the Scots Army, now lying before Newark: And if it ſhall pleaſe God that we come ſafe thither, we are reſolved to uſe our beſt Endeavour, with their Aſſiſtance, and with the Conjunction of the Forces under the Marqueſs of Montroſs, and ſuch of our well-affected Subjects of England as ſhall riſe for us, to procure, if it may be, an honourable and ſpeedy Peace with thoſe who have hitherto refuſed to give Ear to any means tending thereunto. Of which our Reſolution we held it neceſſary to give you this Advertiſement, as well to ſatisfy you, and our Council, and Loyal Subjects with you, (to whom we will that you communicate theſe our Letters); that failing in our earneſt and ſincere Endeavours by Treaty to put an end to the Miſeries of theſe Kingdoms, we eſteemed our ſelf obliged to leave no probable Expedient unattempted, to preſerve our Crown and Friends from the Uſurpation and Tyranny of thoſe whoſe Actions declare ſo manifeſtly their Deſigns to overthrow the Laws and happy eſtabliſhed Government of this Kingdom. And now we have made known to you our Reſolution, we recommend to your ſpecial Care the diſpoſing and managing of our Affairs on that ſide, as you ſhall conceive moſt for our Honour and Service; being confident the Courſe we have taken (tho with ſome hazard to our Perſon) will have a good Influence on that our Kingdom, and defer, if not altogether prevent the Rebels tranſporting of Forces from them into that Kingdom. And we deſire you to ſatisfy all our well-affected Subjects on that ſide, of our Princely Care of them, whereof they ſhall receive the effect, as ſoon as God ſhall enable us. We deſire you to uſe ſome means to let us and our Council at Oxon hear frequently from you, and of your Actions and Condition there: And ſo God proſper your Loyal Endeavours. Given at our Court at Oxon the 13th of April, 1646.

By his Majeſty's Command,

Edw. Nicholas.

King leaves Oxford, April 27. 1646.

Purſuant to the aforeſaid Reſolution of leaving Oxford, his Majeſty on Monday, April 27. (the ſame day Fairfax came to Newbury) about Midnight, did in Diſguiſe go out of that City, in Company only of Dr. Hudſon a Divine, and Mr. John Aſhburnham, and rode as Servant to the latter, with a Cloak-bag behind him: And the more to conceal which way he intended to take, 'twas ſaid there was Order given, That Three Perſons ſhould about the ſame Hour go out of each of the other Gates of the City. Concerning the Courſe of this his Majeſty's Journey, Dr. Hudſon being afterwards taken, upon his Examination declared to this Effect: That they came to Henley, Brentford, and Harrow on the Hill, where he ſtay'd ſome time: From thence he went towards St. Albans, and was upon the Road overtaken by a Drunken Man well horſed, and riding violently; which put the King and the Two Gentlemen with him into ſome Apprehenſions that they were diſcovered and purſued: But that Fear being ſoon over, they turned paſt St. Albans out of the common Road; and the moſt remarkable place they ſtay'd at next, was Harborough in Leiceſterſhire, where they expected Monſieur Montril the French Agent, or ſome Horſe from him, to meet them, and conduct his Majeſty to the Scots Army, as it ſeems the ſaid Agent had before promiſed to Dr. Hudſon; who failing therein, his Majeſty went to Stamford, where he lay one Night, and from thence paſſed to Downham in Norfolk, where he lay from Thurſday, April 30. to Monday, May 4. And in the mean time ſent Dr. Hudſon to the French Agent, to know the reaſon why he did not meet at Harborough, and to adviſe with him what was now to be done. Here his Majeſty going to be Trimm'd, the Barber found much fault with the unevenneſs of his Hair (which had been cut, to prevent his being known) and told him, the Barber that laſt Trimm'd him, was much to blame for it. Upon Dr. Hudſon's return, his Majeſty repaired to the French Agent, who lay at Southam, and thence ſent to General Leven, and was conducted by a Troop of Horſe to the Lieutenant-General David Leſley's Quarters at Kellam, on Tueſday, May 5. and notice thereof was given by the Scots to the Engliſh Commiſſioners reſiding with their Army.

The King's Journey.

King comes to the Scots Army, May 5.

In the mean time the Deſign was kept ſo ſecret, that thoſe at Oxford, tho they ſoon knew of his Majeſty's being gone, yet could not gueſs whither he intended his Courſe; but it was generally reported that he was gone for London; of which the Two Houſes having notice from Sir Thomas Fairfax, (who had now drawn up his Army before Oxford) they on Monday, May 4. cauſed an Order to be publiſhed by Beat of Drum and Sound of Trumpet, throughout London and Weſtminſter, to this effect: Ordered, That it be, and it is hereby declared by the Lords and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, That what Perſon ſoever ſhall harbour and conceal, or know of the harbouring or concealing of the King's Perſon, and ſhall not reveal it immediately to the Speakers of both Houſes, ſhall be proceeded againſt as a Traytor to the Commonwealth, forfeit his whole Eſtate, and dye without mercy.

King reported to be come to London.

Order for diſcovering the King, May 4.

And on this occaſion, whereas there had been appointed a General Training of the City Forces, to be held in Hide-Park, May 5. the ſame was put off by Order of the Houſes to another day. And alſo they paſſed the following Ordinance:

Order for Papiſts and Cavaliers to depart 20 Miles from London, May 5.

WHereas the Lords and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, by an Ordinance of the 31*ſt* of March laſt, for the Reaſons therein mentioned, have ordered, That all Papiſts whatſoever, and all Officers and Soldiers of Fortune, and other Perſons that have born Arms againſt the Parliament, not being under Reſtraint, ſhould before the end of the 6*th* day of April laſt paſt, depart out of the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Lines of Communication; the ſaid Order to continue for the ſpace of one Month after the ſaid

An. 1646.

6th day of April, under divers Penalties, Limitations, and Proviſoes in the ſaid Ordinance mentioned, whereunto relation being had, doth and may appear. And whereas the Lords and Commons do take notice, That divers Perſons, in obedience to the ſaid Ordinance, have departed the ſaid Cities and Lines of Communication, and yet do remain in the Towns and Villages near adjoining, who upon all Attempts that might be made to the diſturbance of the Peace of the ſaid Cities, can ſoon draw themſelves together for Action, and put themſelves into a condition to act any miſchievous Deſign that may be againſt the ſaid Cities: The ſaid Lords and Commons, for the Safety of the Parliament, and Cities of London and Weſtminſter, do conceive it moſt neceſſary, that further Care and Proviſion ſhould be had, to prevent the great Inconveniences that may ariſe by the continuance of the ſaid Perſons in the ſaid Places, or their preſent Reſort to the ſaid Cities, do ordain and declare, That the ſaid Ordinance, and all and every Clauſe, Article, and Proviſo thereof, ſhall continue and be in force to all Intents and Purpoſes, under the Penalties therein mentioned, againſt all and every ſuch Perſon and Perſons, for the ſpace of one Month more, from the End and Expiration of the aforeſaid Month, as if the ſaid Ordinance had been made to have continued for Two Months from the ſaid 6th day of April. And it is further ordained, That all perſons that have born Arms againſt the Parliament, and all Papiſts whatſoever which went out of the Lines of Communication, in obedience to the ſaid Ordinance, and all other ſuch perſons as aforeſaid, as have ſince come from the Enemies Quarters to or near the ſaid Cities, ſhall by the 12th day of this inſtant May depart and remove themſelves Twenty Miles at the leaſt, diſtant from the ſaid Cities and Lines of Communication, under the Penalties mentioned in the ſaid recited Ordinance: And of the places whither they intend to reſort, ſhall give or ſend particular notice under their hands in writing, unto the Committee at Goldſmiths-Hall, mentioned in the ſaid recited Ordinance, before the ſaid 12th day of May.

The Two Houſes on the 6th of May received Intelligence of the King's being in the Scots Army, by Letters from Col. Poyntz, and from their Commiſſioners before Newark: And after a long Debate the Commons paſſed theſe ſeveral Votes:

Votes touching the diſpoſal of the King, May 6.

That the Commiſſioners and General of the Scots Army be deſired, That his Majeſty's Perſon be diſpoſed of as both Houſes ſhall deſire and direct.

That his Majeſty be thence diſpoſed of, and ſent to Warwick-Caſtle.

That Mr. Aſhburnham, and the reſt of thoſe that came with the King into the Scots Quarters, ſhould be ſent for as Delinquents by the Serjeant at Arms attending the ſaid Houſe, or his Deputy. And that the Commiſſioners for the Parliament of England, reſiding before Newark, ſhould acquaint the Scots General with theſe Votes; and alſo make a Narrative of the manner of the King's coming into the Scots Army, and preſent it to the Houſe.

Forces order'd into Holy-Iſland, May 7.

The Houſe of Commons being informed, That Holy-Iſland in Northumberland was in great danger, and lay open to an Enemy, if ſpeedily ſome Forces were not ſent thereunto, ordered a Letter to the Committee of that County, to require them forthwith to ſend ſome Forces to maintain the ſaid Iſland, it being of ſuch great Conſequence to the Northern parts of this Kingdom.

A Letter from the Scots General and Committee of Eſtates, to the Committee of both Kingdoms, touching the King's coming into their Army, dated May 6.

Right Honourable,

THE earneſt deſire which we have to keep a right underſtanding between the Two Kingdoms, moves us to acquaint you with that ſtrange Providence wherewith we are now ſurprized, together with our Carriage and Deſires thereupon. The King came into our Army yeſterday in ſo private a way, that after we had made Search for him, upon the Surmiſes of ſome Perſons who pretended to know his Face, yet we could not find him out in ſundry Houſes. And we believe your Lordſhips will think it was matter of much Aſtoniſhment to us, ſeeing we did not expect he would have come in any Place under our Power. We conceived it not fit to enquire into the Cauſes that perſuaded him to come hither, but to endeavour that his being here might be improved to the beſt advantage, for promoting the Work of Uniformity, for ſetling of Religion and Righteouſneſs, and attaining of Peace, according to the League and Covenant, and Treaty, by the Advice of the Parliaments of both Kingdoms, or their Commiſſioners authorized for that effect. Truſting to our Integrity, we do perſuade our ſelves, that none will ſo far miſconſtrue us, as that we intended to make uſe of this ſeeming advantage, for promoting any other Ends than are expreſs'd in the Covenant, and have been hitherto purſued by us with no leſs Conſcience than Care. And yet for further ſatisfaction, we do ingenuouſly declare, That there hath been no Treaty nor Capitulation betwixt his Majeſty and us, nor any in our Names; and that we leave the ways and means of Peace unto the Power and Wiſdom of the Parliaments of both Kingdoms. And ſo far as concerns us, as we have a Witneſs in Heaven, we are confident to make it appear to the World, That there is nothing more in our deſires, than in all our Reſolutions and Proceedings to adhere to the Covenant and Treaty. Our graveſt Thoughts ſhall be taken up jn ſtudying, and our utmoſt Abilities employed in acting thoſe things that may beſt advance the Publick Good, and common Happineſs of both Kingdoms; wherein by the help of the moſt High we ſhall labour to uſe ſo much Tenderneſs and Care, that we hope it ſhall ſoon appear that our Actions have been the Iſſue and Reſult of honeſt and ſingle Intentions. And further, we cannot (in a matter of ſo deep Conſequence and common Intereſt) but ſeek your Lordſhips Advice; for which effect we have alſo written to the Committee of Eſtates of Scotland, with intentions to move by your joint Councils and Reſolutions; that we at laſt, after a Seed-time of many Afflictions, may reap the ſweet Fruits of Truth and Peace. And in this Confidence we remain,

Southwell, May 6. 1646. Your Lordſhips Humble Servants,

Leven, Dumferming, Lothian,
Belcarris, S. D. Hume, Sir Th. Carre,
R. of Freeland, W. Glendowyn, John Johnſton.

Immediately upon the King's coming to the Scots, General Leven had ſome Treaty with his Majeſty about the Surrender of Newark, deſiring him to give Order to the Lord Bellaſis, Governor thereof, to ſurrender; and his Majeſty offered to ſurrender it to them; but General Leven anſwered, That to remove all Jealouſies, it muſt be yielded to the Parliament of England: Whereupon his Majeſty was prevailed with, to ſend Order to the Governor to that purpoſe: Which was by Commiſſioners appointed by each ſide, agreed on the following Articles.

Articles for the Surrender of Newark, May 6. 1646.

Articles agreed and concluded the 6th of May, 1646. between the Commiſſioners hereunder named, authorized by the Committee of the Parliament of both Kingdoms of England and Scotland, on the one part: And the Commiſſioners hereunder named by the Governor of Newark, Lieutenant-General to his Majeſty of the Counties of Nottingham, Lincoln, and Rutland, and Governor of the Town and Caſtle of Newark, of the other party: Touching the yielding and ſurrendring of that Gariſon, and the Caſtle, Forts, and Sconces thoreunto belonging, to the Committee of both Kingdoms, for the uſe of the Parliament of England.

1. THat the Town and Gariſon of Newark, with the Caſtle, Forts, Sconces, Ordnance, Mortar-pieces, Arms, Ammunition and Proviſions, and Neceſſaries of War (not herein after excepted) be ſurrendred on Saturday next at Ten of the Clock, into the hands of the Committee of both Kingdoms, or whom they ſhall appoint, for the uſe of the Parliament of England, without embezling any of them.

2. That the Governor of the ſaid Gariſon ſhall march away with his Servants, Horſes, Arms, and proper Goods, to any Gariſon he ſhall name, not beſieged or block'd up, or to his own Houſe, there to remain unmoleſted, ſubmitting to all Ordinances of Parliament. And alſo that the ſaid Governor ſhall have liberty, upon deſire, any time within Three Months to paſs beyond Seas, and to have Paſſes granted for himſelf and Servants accordingly.

3. That all Officers in Commiſſion, or that have been formerly in Commiſſion, ſhall march away with their Horſes, Arms, and their proper Goods; the Common Soldiers of Horſe and Foot, with their Money, Cloaths, and Swords, to any Gariſon not beſieged or block'd up, or to their own Houſes, as they ſhall make choice of. And thoſe that have not Money, to have Free Quarter in their March, and not to march above Ten Miles in one day, unleſs they pleaſe; and to have a Convoy and Carriages provided for the carrying away their Goods; Hoſtages being given for the Return of the Convoy and Carriages: And ſuch Goods as cannot be removed, the Owners ſhall have Three Months liberty to diſpoſe of them.

4. That all ſuch Officers and Gentlemen now in the Gariſon, who ſhall deſire to depart this Kingdom, ſhall, upon ſignification thereof to the Commiſſioners of both Kingdoms any time in Three Months, have Paſſes for that purpoſe for themſelves and Servants; engaging themſelves during their ſtay, to do no Diſſervice to the Parliament.

5. That all ſuch Officers and Soldiers as by reaſon of Sickneſs, Wounds, or otherwiſe, are not able to march out at the ſame time appointed, ſhall have liberty to ſtay in the Town, or ſome other convenient place, till they be recovered; and ſuch as are not able to provide Maintenance for themſelves, ſhall have Care taken of them.

6. That all Noblemen and Gentlemen in the ſaid Gariſon ſhall have liberty to march forth with their Horſes and Arms, and their known Menial Servants, and Swords, to their own Houſes, there to remain unmoleſted, ſubmitting to all Ordinances of Parliament; and to have liberty to carry away their own proper Goods, then or at any time within Three Months; or to have Paſſes for themſelves and Servants to go beyond Sea within Three Months; and in the mean time to engage themſelves to do nothing to the Diſſervice of the Parliament.

7. That all Clergymen in the Gariſon ſhall have liberty with their Horſes, Servants, and their own proper Goods, to march to any Gariſon unblock'd up, or nor beſieg'd, or to their own Houſes, there to remain unmoleſted, ſubmitting to all Ordinances of Parliament.

8. That the Mayor, Aldermen, and Inhabitants of the ſaid Gariſon ſhall not be moleſted in their Perſons, Privileges, Goods or Eſtates, (ſubmitting to all Ordinances of Parliament) and to enjoy the ſame Liberty, and to have the ſame Protection as all other Towns have, which are in the Power of the Parliament.

9. That the Ladies, Gentlewomen, Wives, Widows, Children and Servants, belonging to any of the Perſons mentioned in the former Articles, or any other, ſhall have liberty to march forth of the ſaid Gariſon, with their Coaches, Horſes, and proper Goods, as in the 6th Article: And if any of them, by reaſon of Sickneſs, or any other juſt reaſon, cannot march away, then they ſhall have liberty to ſtay there till their Recovery, and then to depart unmoleſted.

10. That all Priſoners now in the ſaid Gariſon, Caſtle, or Forts, or any other Priſoners of War taken by either Party ſince the Siege began, ſhall forthwith upon ſigning theſe Articles be ſet at liberty, unleſs they be detained for Criminal Offences charged upon them, not as Soldiers.

11. That all Perſons compriſed within theſe Articles, grounded upon the Summons of the 27*th* of April, which began this preſent Treaty, be recommended to compound with the Parliament for their Eſtates, as coming in before the 1*ſt* of May; ſo as they do effectually proſecute their Compoſitions within Two Months next enſuing the Date hereof.

12. If any of the Perſons above-mentioned ſhall violate any of theſe Articles, or any part of them, they ſhall loſe the benefit of all the ſaid Articles.

13. That for the Performance of theſe Articles, Hoſtages may be mutually given, and a Ceſſation of Arms continued by both ſides, till the time of Surrender, according to the Articles; and that Guards and Convoys be appointed to protect the Gentry and Soldiers, in their March, from Violence.

Newark ſurrendred May 8.

The Sickneſs being very hot in the Town, occaſioned the Surrender thereof a day ſooner than was agreed upon; ſo that it was yielded up on Friday the 8*th* of May, the Officers and Soldiers marching to their own reſpective Homes, there being ſcarce any Gariſon of the King's unbeſieg'd, to which they might reſort. There were found in the Town,

One very great Piece of Ordnance, commonly called Sweetlips, and 11 other great Pieces of Ordnance, 2 Mortar-pieces, divers Drakes, and ſmall Pieces. Four Thouſand Arms, 40 Barrels of Gunpowder, great ſtore of Bullets, Match, and other Ammunition.

The Scots march Northwards, and carry the King with them.

The next day after the Articles of Newark were ſign'd, the Scots Army took their March Northwards, his Majeſty being with Lieutenant-General Leſly in the Van of them; and on Wedneſday, May 13. came into Newcaſtle; a Lane of Muſquets and Pikes being, by Order from Sir James Lunſdale the Governor, made from Gateſhead (the place where his Majeſty entred the Town) all along the Streets to the General's Quarters, where his Majeſty took up his Reſidence.

Col. Poynz with a Party of Horſe and Dragoons followed after into Yorkſhire.

The Scots Commiſſioners, ſoon after their riſing from Newark, ſent to the Parliament's Commiſſioners, to deſire a Meeting with them on Monday the 11*th* of May, to give them an Account of their ſo ſudden departure, and their Reaſons for not delivering up Mr. Aſhburnham according to the Order of Parliament But before that day, Mr. Aſhburnham made his Eſcape, and ſo the Scots Commiſſioners did not meet at the ſaid place appointed: And Dr. Hudſon endeavouring likewiſe to eſcape, was for the preſent ſecured in Newcaſtle. And touching that buſineſs, the Committee of Eſtates with the Scots Army ſent afterwards to the Two Houſes the following Paper, by their Commiſſioners in London.

The Scots Paper of their Reaſons for not delivering up Col. Aſhburnham and Dr. Hudſon, May 25.

THE Committee of Eſtates with the Scots Army having received a Vote of the Honourable Houſe of Commons, incloſed in a Letter from the Commiſſioners of both Houſes, demanding the Perſons of Mr. John Aſhburnham, and all others that came with the King into the Scots Army before Newark, to be delivered up; did ſeriouſly take into deliberation how they might return a Satisfactory Anſwer to the Deſire of the Houſe of Commons; wherein they found themſelves preſſed with no ſmall Difficulties, ariſing from the Conſideration of the Vote which did require Mr. John Aſhburnham and others to be delivered up, upon this Narrative and Reaſon, That they came into the Scotiſh Army before Newark with his Majeſty; there being no other Cauſe of Delinquency made known unto the Committee of Eſtates, and no more being expreſſed concerning Mr. John Aſhburnham, than other Perſons who were Guides to his Majeſty in his Way thither: It did appear unto them, that they were no more obliged to deliver up Mr. John Aſhburnham, his Majeſty's ordinary Servant, and others, only for their attending the King to the Scotiſh Army, than the Parliament of England ſhould have been obliged in the like Caſe to deliver up any Subject of Scotland for attending his Majeſty, if he had gone into Sir Tho. Fairfax's Army, or come to London. And it did very much weigh with their Lordſhips, That the delivering up of theſe Perſons merely for their coming with his Majeſty into the Scotiſh Army, would import, that they did acknowlege it to be unlawful for themſelves to receive his Majeſty, coming unexpectedly, without any Invitation, into their Army, ſith he could not come without one Servant or other to attend him.

But if Mr. John Aſhburnham, or any other that came with his Majeſty, had been declared by the Parliament to be Incendiaries, Malignants, or evil Inſtruments, by hindring the Reformation of Religion, dividing the King from his People, or one of the Kingdoms from another, or making any Factions or Parties amongſt the People, contrary to the Solemn League and Covenant, then it was their Reſolution, and they were ready therein to give Satisfaction to the Honourable Houſes.

Upon theſe and other Grounds they did deſire to confer with the Commiſſioners of both Houſes, to the end they might either give or receive Satisfaction; and accordingly wrote unto them for this purpoſe, leaving unto them to appoint the place of Meeting. It was alſo conſidered what ſhould be done in the Interim, till upon Conference and mutual Conſultation with the Commiſſioners of Parliament, the matter ſhould be determined. And tho for the coming of theſe Perſons with the King to the Scots Army (no other Cauſe of Offence being known, or Crime objected againſt them) the Committee of Eſtates could not in Honour and Juſtice, nor without Reflection upon themſelves for receiving his Majeſty, put a Reſtraint upon them; yet leſt the buſineſs ſhould be divulged, and upon apprehenſion of the Iſſue thereof any of them ſhould make an Eſcape, the Committee thought fit, and did accordingly enjoin Secreſy in the whole matter.

While they were expecting an Anſwer from the Commiſſioners of both Houſes, they received Advertiſement, That 5000 Horſe and Dragoons were upon their March Northwards towards them, no Enemy being in thoſe Parts; and that Two Meſſengers ſent from us to them were intercepted and ſearched. Whereupon they judged it neceſſary, and did write to the Commiſſioners of Parliament to delay the intended Meeting till the Army ſhould come to a more convenient place, being unwilling that the Forces of the Two Kingdoms ſhould engage upon a Miſtake: And ſo ſoon as they came to Burrowbriggs, they renewed their deſires to the Commiſſioners of Parliament for a Conference about this buſineſs, to which the Commiſſioners by reaſon of their other occaſions did not agree.

In all which the Committee of Eſtates conceive that they have uſed their beſt Endeavours to give Satisfaction to the deſire of the Honourable Houſe of Commons, eſpecially ſeeing upon the very firſt notice they had of Mr. Aſhburnham and Mr. Hudſon their Endeavour to eſcape, they ſent forth on all hands Orders to apprehend them; and ſuch diligence was uſed, as Mr. Hudſon was apprehended, and is now in Newcaſtle, in the Cuſtody of the Deputy-Mayor: And as a Worthy and Noble Lord, the Lord Balcarras, lately come hither, hath by Order of the Committee made known unto us, his Lordſhip and all the reſt of that Honourable Committee can declare upon their Honour, That directly nor indirectly they were no ways acceſſary to Mr. Aſhburnham's Eſcape, nor had any knowledge thereof, whatſoever may be ſuggeſted to the contrary. All which being conſidered, together with the Letters and Papers to be preſented this day to the Houſe, from the Committee of both Kingdoms, we are confident that Honourable Houſe will reſt ſatisfied with their Carriage in this particular, and with their other Proceedings.

Soon after this, the King's Letter of the 13*th* of April before-recited, to the Marqueſs of Ormond, was by the Marqueſs communicated to Major-General Monroe, the Scots Commander in Chief, by a Letter in theſe words:

The Marq. of Ormond's Letter to Monroe, May 21.

SIR,

HAving this Morning received a Diſpatch from his Majeſty, and Command to impart it not only to his Council, but to all his Loyal Subjects; I am confident you have ſo good a Title to a Knowledge thereof, that I have held it my part inſtantly to diſpatch it unto you by an Expreſs: And ſo, Sir, wiſhing you all Happineſs, I reſt, Your Aſſured Humble Servant,

Dublin-Caſtle, May 21. 1646. Ormond.

Monroe communicated the ſame to the Commiſſioners of Parliament in Ulſter, who ſent Copies of the ſaid Letter, as printed at Dublin, over to the Two Houſes by Sir Robert King, one of the ſaid Commiſſioners; and the ſame was read in the Houſe of Commons on Saturday, June 6. whereupon on the Monday following, the Commiſſioners of the Parliament of Scotland, reſiding at Weſtminſter, delivered in the following Letter or Declaration to the Houſe of Peers.

The Scots Commiſſioners Declaration, June 8. 1646. touching the King's Letter of the 13*th* of April, to the Marq. of Ormond.

For the Right Honourable the Speaker of the Houſe of Peers pro Tempore.

Right Honourable,

THis incloſed Paper having very lately come to our hands, which altho it hath not ſo much as colour enough to deceive, yet nevertheleſs as General-Major Monroe, in teſtimony of his Integrity, did communicate the thing to the Commiſſioners of Parliament in Ulſter; ſo we, for preventing miſtakes (many Copies of the ſame thing being ſpread among the people) have thought good to communicate the ſame to the Honourable Houſes, with our ſenſe upon it, that by their wiſdom and reciprocal care, a right underſtanding in all things may ſtill be preſerved between the Kingdoms. Whether any ſuch Letter was ſigned by the King at Oxford, or whether it was invented of purpoſe to ſupport a declining Party, we do not know: What may concern the King in it, we leave to himſelf, who as he hath ſince the date of that Paper expreſſed contrary Intentions and Reſolutions in his Meſſages to both Kingdoms, ſo he can beſt tell what he wrote at that time; we are only to ſpeak to the matter of the Paper, which cometh from the hand of Secretary Nicholas; unto whoſe Informations, what Credit ought to be given, the Houſes very well know. It doth conſiſt in our perfect knowledge (and we declare it with as much confidence as ever we did or can do any thing), That the matter of the Paper, ſo far as concerneth any Aſſurance or Capitulation for joining of Forces, or for combining againſt the Houſes of Parliament, or any other private or publick Agreement whatſoever, between the King upon the one part, and the Kingdom of Scotland, their Army, or any in their Name, and having Power from them, upon the other part, is a moſt damnable Untruth. We ſhall not need to expreſs how improbable it is, if there had been any ſuch Agreement, that the King about the ſame time ſhould have ſent a Meſſage to both Houſes, offering to come to London, and to follow their Advice in all things, without offering any Satisfaction to the Kingdom of Scotland: And that before he received the Anſwer of the Houſes, he ſhould write ſuch a Letter to Ireland, and give Order to make it known, not only to his Privy-Council, but to his other Subjects of that Kingdom. Nor will we inſiſt how improbable it is, that the King ſhould make this known to the Marqueſs of Ormond, and neglect to acquaint the late Earl of Montroſs, who had been much more concerned, and who would, no doubt, if he had known any ſuch thing, have communicate the ſame to General-Major Midleton, and prevented the defeating of himſelf, his Aſſociates and Forces, about the middle of May, after the King was with the Scottiſh Army. Nor how unlikely it is, that he who is for the time Commander in Chief for the Scottiſh Forces in Ireland, ſhould be for the ſpace of ſeven or eight Weeks totally ignorant of any ſuch Agreement; or if he had known any ſuch thing, that he would have communicated it to the Commiſſioners of the Parliament, and immediately marched himſelf to the Fields againſt the Enemy. Nor ſhall we need to call to mind the Expreſſions in the Lord Digby's intercepted Letters, which gave our Nation the Character of ſuch as could not be gained to that ſide, no, not after all Applications uſed. There are other more ſure and more publick Teſtimonies, ſince the date of that lying Paper, which makes the Falſhood of it more than palpable, as if Divine Providence had purpoſely ordered all the late Actions of the Kingdom of Scotland, and of their Forces, both before and ſince the Third of April, to be ſo many real Confutations of that groundleſs Invention: We mean, ſeveral late Fights with the Rebels under the late Earl of Montroſs, and Allaſter Mac Donald; the delivery of Newark, the reſtraining and debarring of Delinquents and Malignants from the King's Perſon, and from our Army, the late publick Declarations of the Church and State of Scotland in the beginning of April, as likewiſe of the General and Committee with the Army, agreed upon about the end of April, and publiſhed the 15*th* of May in Scotland, againſt a Band of the Earl of Seaforth and his Aſſociates; as for other reaſons, ſo eſpecially for this, that the ſaid Band did tend to the weakning of the Confidence and Union between the Two Kingdoms, firmly joined and mutually engaged for aſſiſtance to each other in this Cauſe, as may appear more fully by the Declaration herewith preſented. Nor can we paſs the Paper delivered to the King by the Committee of Eſtates upon the 15*th* of May laſt, That if his Majeſty ſhould delay to go about the readieſt ways and means to ſatisfy both his Kingdoms, they would be neceſſitated for their own Exoneration to acquaint the Committee of both Kingdoms at London, that a courſe might be taken by joint Advice of both Kingdoms, for attaining the juſt Ends expreſſed in the Solemn League and Covenant. We ſhall ſay no more of this particular, God hath his own time to make manifeſt who have dealt ſincerely, and who falſly; and as our Nation did refuſe to join with the Enemy's Forces when they were ſtrongeſt, and did join with our Brethren of England in their weakeſt and moſt neceſſitous Condition; ſo we ſhall never look for a Bleſſing from God upon either Nation, longer than they continue faithful to God and to each other, according to the Covenant and Treaty. And we do confidently expect from the Wiſdom and Juſtice of the Honourable Houſes, that this and ſuch like Papers ſhall find no more Credit here, than Papers and Declarations againſt themſelves did formerly find in Scotland; and that Declarations and Publick Papers from the Kingdom of Scotland, or their Committees or Commiſſioners, ſhall have ſuch Acceptation with both Houſes, as they deſire Declarations from themſelves, or Papers from any in their Name, may have with their Brethren of Scotland. Nor do we doubt but God will diſſipate all theſe Clouds of Calumnies and Miſunderſtandings endeavoured thereby, and will give ſuch a frame of Spirit to both Nations, as may continue them in a Brotherly Accord, and mutual Confidence for the good both of this, and of the ſucceeding Generations, which hath been, is, and ſhall be moſt earneſtly wiſhed and faithfully endeavoured by

Your very Affectionate Friends, and Humble Servants, of June, 1646.

Hen. Kennedy,
Robert Barclay.

We have ſent your Lordſhips here incloſed an Order of the Committee of Eſtates at the Army, which will evidence their Care to remove out of that Army, all ſuch againſt whom any juſt Complaints have been made by the Country.

But before this, his Majeſty ſent the following Meſſages.

His Majeſty's Meſſage to the Two Houſes, after his coming to the Scots Army, May 18

Charles R.

HIS Majeſty having underſtood from both his Houſes of Parliament, That it was not ſafe for him to come to London (whither he had purpoſed to repair, if ſo he might, by their Advice, to do whatſoever may be beſt for the Good and Peace of both Kingdoms) until he ſhall firſt give his Conſent to ſuch Propoſitions as were to be preſented to him from them; and being certainly informed, that the Armies were marching ſo faſt up to Oxford, as made that no fit Place for Treating, did reſolve to withdraw himſelf hither, only to ſecure his own Perſon, and with no intention to continue this War any longer, or to make any Diviſion between his Two Kingdoms; but to give ſuch Contentment to both, as by the Bleſſing of God he might ſee a happy and well-grounded Peace, thereby to bring Proſperity to theſe Kingdoms, anſwerable to the beſt Times of his Progenitors.

And ſince the ſetling of Religion ought to be the chiefeſt Care of all Counſels, his Majeſty moſt earneſtly and heartily recommends to his Two Houſes of Parliament, all the ways and means poſſible for ſpeedy finiſhing this pious and neceſſary Work; and particularly that they take the Advice of the Divines of both Kingdoms, aſſembled at Weſtminſter.

Likewiſe concerning the Militia of England, for ſecuring his People againſt all Pretenſions of Danger, his Majeſty is pleaſed to have it ſetled as was offered at the Treaty at Uxbridge; all the Perſons being to be named for that Truſt by the Two Houſes of the Parliament of England for the ſpace of Seven Years; and after the Expiration of that Term, That it be regulated as ſhall be agreed upon by his Majeſty and his Two Houſes of Parliament.

And the like for the Kingdom of Scotland.

Concerning the Wars in Ireland, his Majeſty will do whatſoever is poſſible for him, to give full Satisfaction therein.

And if theſe be not ſatisfactory, his Majeſty then deſires that all ſuch of the Propoſitions as are already agreed upon by both Kingdoms, may be ſpeedily ſent unto him; his Majeſty being reſolved to comply with his Parliament in every thing that ſhall be for the Happineſs of his Subjects, and for the removing of all unhappy Differences, which have produced ſo many ſad Effects.

His Majeſty having made theſe Offers, he will neither queſtion the thankful Acceptation of them; nor doth he doubt but that his Two Kingdoms will be careful to maintain him in his Honour, and in his juſt and lawful Rights; which is the only way to make a happy Compoſure of theſe unnatural Diviſions: And likewiſe will think upon a ſolid way of conſerving the Peace between the Two Kingdoms for time to come; and will take a ſpeedy courſe for eaſing and quieting his afflicted People, by ſatisfying the Publick Debts, by diſbanding of all Armies, and whatſoever ſhall be judged conducible to that end; that ſo all Hindrances being removed, he may retuan to his Parliament with mutual Comfort.

Southwell, May 18. 1646.

Poſtſcript.

His Majeſty being deſirous to ſhun the further Effuſion of Blood, and to evidence his real Intentions to Peace, is willing that his Forces in and about Oxford be diſbanded, and the Fortifications of the City diſmantled, they receiving Honourable Conditions; which being granted to the Town and Forces there, his Majeſty will give the like Order to the reſt of the Gariſons.

The King's Letter to the City of London from Newcaſtle, May 19.

Charles R.

RIght Truſty and Well-beloved, we greet you well. Having expreſſed our Reſolution to the Two Houſes of our Parliament of Scotland, to give all juſt Satisfaction to the joint Deſires of both Kingdoms, we have now likewiſe thought fit to aſſure the Two Chief Cities of both our Kingdoms, That nothing is more grievous to us than the Trouble and Diſtractions of our People; and that nothing on Earth is more deſired by us, than that in Religion and Peace, with all the comfortable Fruits of both, they may henceforth live under us in all Godlineſs and Honeſty. And this Profeſſion we make for no other end, but that you may know immediately from our ſelves our Integrity and full Reſolution to comply with our Parliaments in every thing for ſetling Truth and Peace, and our deſire to have all things ſpeedily concluded, which ſhall be found requiſite for that end: That our Return to that our Ancient City may be to the ſatisfaction of our Parliament, the good liking of you and all our good People, and to our own greater Joy and Comfort. We bid you heartily farewell.

From Newcaſtle, the 19th of May, 1646.

To our Right Truſty and Well-beloved, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council of our City of London.

The King's Meſſage to both Houſes from Newcaſtle, June 10. 1646.

Charles R.

HIS Majeſty looking with Grief of Heart upon the ſad Sufferings of his People in his Three Kingdoms for ſome Years paſt, and being afflicted with their Diſtreſſes, and unquiet Condition, through the Diſtractions about Religion, the keeping of Forces on foot in the Field and Gariſons, the not ſatisfying of Publick Debts, and the fears of the further Effuſion of Blood by the continuance of an unnatural War in any of theſe Kingdoms, or by rending and dividing theſe Kingdoms, ſo happily united; and having ſent a gracious Meſſage unto both Houſes of Parliament, and the Commiſſioners of the Parliament of Scotland, expreſſing the neceſſary Cauſes of his coming from Oxford unto the Scotiſh Army (without any intention to make a Diviſion) where he is in freedom and right capacity to ſettle a true Peace, and containing ſuch Offers as he conceived would have been accepted, with a general Clauſe of complying with their Deſires: And being impatient of Delays, and not acquainted with the Particulars which may give Contentment to them, his Majeſty doth earneſtly deſire, that the Propoſitions of Peace ſo often promiſed, and ſo much expected, may be ſpeedily ſent unto him; that upon Conſideration of them, he may apply himſelf to give ſuch Satisfaction as may be the foundation of a firm Peace. And for the better and more ſpeedy attaining thereunto, his Majeſty doth further propound, That he may come to London with Safety, Freedom, and Honour, where he reſolves to comply with his Houſes of Parliament in every thing which may be moſt for the Good of his Subjects, and perfect what remains for ſetling both Kingdoms and People in an happy Condition; being likewiſe moſt confident, that they, according to their reiterated Declarations, and ſolemn Proteſtations, will be zealous in the Maintenance of his Honour, and juſt and lawful Rights. And as his Majeſty deſires the Houſes of Parliament to disburthen the Kingdom of all Forces and Gariſons in their power, except ſuch as before theſe unhappy Times have been maintained for the neceſſary Defence and Safety of this Kingdom; ſo he is willing forthwith to disband all his Forces and Gariſons within the ſame, as the incloſed Order herewith ſent will evidence. And if upon theſe Offers his Majeſty ſhall have ſuch Satisfaction, as he may be confident a firm Peace ſhall enſue thereon, his Majeſty will then give Order for his Son the Prince his preſent Return.

Newcaſtle, the 10*th* of June, 1646.

His Majeſty's Warrant to Sir Tho. Glenham, &c. to ſurrender their Gariſons, June 10. 1646.

To our Truſty and Well-beloved, Sir Tho. Glenham, Sir Tho. Tildeſley, Col. H. Waſhington, Col. Tho. Blagge, Governors of our Cities and Towns of Oxford, Litchfield, Worceſter, and Wallingford, and all other Commanders of any Towns, Caſtles, and Forts, in our Kingdom of England.

Charles R.

HAving reſolved to comply with the Deſires of our Parliament in every thing which may be for the good of our Subjects, and leave no means uneſſay'd for removing all Differences amongſt us: Therefore we have thought fit, the more to evidence the reality of our Intentions of ſetling an happy and firm Peace, to require you, upon Honourable Terms, to quit thoſe Towns, Caſtles, and Forts intruſted to you by us, and to disband all the Forces under your ſeveral Commands.

Newcaſtle, the 10*th* of June, 1646.

CHAP. IX.

Of the Surrender of Oxford, Worceſter, Wallingford-Caſtle, Raglan, and Pendennis-Caſtle.

WHilſt the Scots are at eaſe, quartering on the Northern Counties (whence lamentable Complaints daily arrived of the Grievances the poor Inhabitants ſuffered by them) and whilſt his Majeſty is under their Power reſiding at Newcaſtle, let us look back to the Proceedings of Fairfax and his Army in other Parts of the Kingdom.

Fairfax before Oxford, May 1. 1646.

On the Firſt of May, 1646. being that day Twelvemonth that the new-model'd Army firſt took the Field, General Fairfax came the ſecond time before Oxford, wherein were Prince Rupert, Prince Maurice, and many of the Prime Nobility and Gentry of England. The Foot were drawn to a Rendezvouz between Abington and Garſington, where Major-General Skippon, who had lain ill of his Wounds ever ſince the Battel at Naſeby, being now well recovered, came to the Army, and was received with great Acclamations of the Soldiers.

The next day was a General Rendezvouz, both Horſe and Foot, and thence the Forces were diſtributed to their ſeveral Quarters at Hedington, Marſton, and the Towns thereabouts.

The General ſurveys Oxford and conſiders its Strength.

The 3*d* of May the General with the Officers of the Army took a Survey of Oxford, which they found to have received many material Alterations and Additions of Advantage, ſince their laſt being before it: And though it was always juſtly accounted a Place of great Strength, yet now it was made incomparably more ſtrong than ever: (Which is very eaſy to be believed, if you do but conſider it had been from the beginning of the Wars, the King's Head-Quarters and Gariſon, his chief place of Reſidence and Retreat, where his Council, and moſt of the Nobility that had left the Parliament, attended him. Its place, being almoſt in the Center of the Kingdom, gave it no ſmall advantage for the ſending out of Parties upon any deſign: Beſides, that it was ſurrounded about with many ſmall Gariſons of the King's, as Radcoat, Farring- ton, Wallingford, Sherborn-Houſe, Borſtal, (which were as ſo many Outworks unto it.) The Situation of it in reference to the Ground it ſtood upon, rendred it very apt for defence, being placed betwixt the two Rivers Iſis and Charwell. Upon the Weſt ſide of it ran ſeveral Branches of the River Iſis, ſome of which running cloſe by the Town-Walls, was a great defence to it: Upon the Eaſt-ſide ran the River Charwell, which by making Locks at Clement's-Bridge, they had cauſed to overflow the Meadows; ſo that round the City, to the extent of three parts of it (all, except the North-ſide, that was ſomewhat higher Ground) was ſurrounded with Water, and abſolutely unapproachable: To this the Line about the City (newly finiſh'd) they found to be very high, having many ſtrong Bulwarks ſo regularly flanking one another, that nothing could be more exactly done; round about, the Line both upon the Bulwarks and the Curtin, was ſtrongly ſet with Storm-Pales; upon the outſide of the Ditch round the Line it was ſtrongly palliſadoed; and without that again, were digged ſeveral Pits in the Ground, that a ſingle Footman could not without difficulty approach the brink of the Ditch. Within the Town there was Five thouſand good Foot, moſt of them of the King's old Infantry, which ſerved him from the beginning of the Wars; and withal, they were well ſtored with a plentiful Magazine of Victuals, Ammunition, and Proviſions for War; in a word, whatever Art or Induſtry could do to make a Place impregnable, was very liberally beſtowed here. All which Strength being apprehended and conſidered by General Fairfax, he concluded that this was no place to be taken at a running Pull, but likely rather to prove a buſineſs of Time, Hazard, and Induſtry. Whereupon at a Council of War at Hedington, it was reſolved to fix his Quarters: The firſt Quarter to be upon Hedington-Hill, where was ordered to be made a very large and great Work or Intrenchment, of capacity to receive and lodge 3000 men: As alſo, that a Bridge ſhould be laid over the River Charwell, cloſe by Marſton, that another Quarter might be gone in hand withal between the Rivers, wherein it was intended moſt of the Foot ſhould be lodged, that being all the ground they had to approach on. Warrants were ſent out unto the Country round about, for Spades, Pickaxes, &c. for that purpoſe. As alſo a Letter to the Committee for the Army, to haſten more Ammunition, with all Requiſites for the Siege, as Tents for Soldiers, &c. from London; which was no ſooner come from thence, but the great Work upon Hedington-Hill was inſtantly fallen in hand withal, and finiſhed in three or four days time, the Soldiers being paid ſo much by the Rod for working thereat: This Work was committed to Major-General Skippon. In the mean time the Bridge intended was made over the River Charwell, near Marſton, where another Quarter was poſſeſſed, and a Line drawn from Iſis to Charwell, and a great Work made on that ſide the Water: Col. Rainsborough commanded this Work. There was a Third under the Command of Col. Lambert; the Fourth, of Col. Herbert; and a Line was begun to be drawn from the great Fort on Hedington-Hill, over-againſt St. Clements.

The management and carrying on of theſe Works, Lines, and Approaches, was recommended to the Care and Skill of Major-General Skippon.

By the Intelligence of divers that came out of the City, Fairfax was further ſatisfied and confirmed concerning their great Strength within, and Proviſion for to hold out.

Fairfax prepares for the Siege of Oxford.

So ſoon as the ſeveral Poſts were aſſigned to the Army before Oxford, ſeveral Forces were taken forth and deſigned for the blocking up of other Gariſons; viz. Some for Faringdon, under the Command of Col. Sir Robert Pye: Others for Radcot, under the Command of Col. Cook; and others for Wallingford, under the Command of Col. Paine and Col. Berkeſtend, on Berkſhire-ſide; and Col. Temple on Oxfordſhire-ſide; others for Borſtal-Houſe; and as many Horſe as could be ſpar'd, were ſent towards Worceſter for the ſtraitning of that Gariſon, till ſuch time as the Army were at liberty to advance thither: An Account of all which ſeverally ſhall be given in due place.

But firſt an Account of the Surrender of Banbury-Caſtle, comes next to be given in.

The taking of Banbury.

Banbury, a great and fair Market-Town, had from the beginning of the Troubles been in the King's Poſſeſſion, without almoſt any Intermiſſion; which happen'd to it partly through the Commodiouſneſs of its Situation, as lying lying but Eighteen Miles North from Oxford, and in ſuch a convenient place as gave it a Command into divers other Counties, viz. Northamptonſhire, Warwickſhire, &c. from out of which it gathered large Contributions for Oxford.

The Forces now employed in the reducing that Place, were about 1000 Foot, and ſome Four Troops of Horſe, all under the Command of Col. Whaly: They lay Eleven Weeks before the Caſtle: So ſoon as they came before it, they intrench'd themſelves by a Line drawn round the Town, for their better ſecurity from any Force without; which done, they ſapt up towards the Caſtle, ran ſeveral Galeries over the outmoſt Moat, and ſo wrought into the Works belonging to the Caſtle; who countermining them, ſprang one Mine upon them, but did no great hurt; and alſo flinging down Stones upon them, and Hand-Granadoes amongſt them, bravely repulſed them. Yet they wrought ſo far, as put them out of all hopes of keeping the Caſtle; which conſtrained them to a Parley, and Surrender of the Caſtle, Arms, and Ordnance, Ammunition and Victuals, upon theſe enſuing Articles; viz.

Articles for the Surrender of Banbury, May 6. 1646.

1. THE Governor Sir William Compton, and Sir Charles Compton, his Brother, to march forth with one Horſe and Arms apiece, two Servants attending them, and to have Two Months liberty to go beyond Sea.
2. All Captains to march forth with one Horſe apiece and their Swords.
3. All the reſt to march forth without Arms, to be disbanded a Mile from the Town; to have Paſſes to march to their ſeveral Homes, or to go beyond Sea; and to have Free Quarter, marching Ten Miles a day.
4. All both Officers and Soldiers to leave half their Moneys behind them.

There were found in the Caſtle Eleven Pieces of Ordnance, Eleven Barrels of Powder, and Four hundred Arms.

But to return to Oxford. The Four Quarters being ſetled under Cannon-ſhot, and a Line begun to be drawn from the great Fort on Hedington-Hill, round St. Clements, (lying without Magdalen-Bridge) Fairfax ſent in a Summons to Sir Thomas Glenham the Governor, requiring the Surrender of that Gariſon. The Copy thereof followeth:

SIR,

I Do by Theſe ſummons you to deliver up the City of Oxford into my hands, for the uſe of the Parliament. I very much deſire the preſervation of that Place (ſo famous for Learning) from Ruin; which inevitably is like to fall upon it, except you concur. You may have Honourable Terms for your ſelf and all within the Gariſon, if you ſeaſonably accept thereof. I deſire your Anſwer this day, and remain,

Your Servant,

May 11. 1646. Tho. Fairfax.

The ſame day alſo he ſent a Summons to the Governor of Borſtall-Houſe, to the ſame effect for the Subſtance: The Copy whereof followeth;

SIR,

I Do by Theſe ſummons you to deliver up the Gariſon of Borſtall-Houſe into my hands, for the uſe of the Parliament. You may have Honourable Terms for your ſelf and all within your Gariſon, if you ſeaſonably accept thereof. I deſire your Anſwer this day.

May 11. 1646. Tho. Fairfax.

As alſo the like to Radcoat. And the ſame to Wallingford.

Sir Tho. Glenham, Governor of Oxford, returned Anſwer to the Summons the ſame day as followeth:

SIR,

I Have received your Letter, ſummoning me to ſurrender the City, which was given me in Truſt for his Majeſty's uſe; but in reſpect there are many Perſons of Eminency, I muſt deſire you to receive for Anſwer a Requeſt, That you will be pleaſed to ſend a ſafe Conduct for Sir John Mounſon, and Mr. Philip Warwick, to repair unto you at ſuch a Time and Place as you ſhall appoint, by whom you ſhall underſtand what for the preſent is deſired. I remain,

May 11. 1646. Your Humble Servant, Tho. Glenham.

Acccording

According as was deſired, Paſſes were granted for Sir John Mounſon, and Mr. Philip Warwick, to come out of Oxford that day, and meet Fairfax's Commiſſioners, Col. Rainsborough, Col. Harlow, and Col. Lambert, who were ready to receive them at the Time and Place appointed. That which they had in Commiſſion, was a deſire from the Governor Sir Tho. Glenham, of liberty to ſend to the King to know his pleaſure; upon ſignification whereof from his Majeſty, they would return a poſitive Anſwer to his Excellency immediately.

Fairfax's Commiſſioners endeavoured to perſuade them the Vanity of any ſuch deſire, and the General's Impatiency of any ſuch delay; adviſing them rather to take the preſent opportunity, leſt they afterwards fell ſhort of thoſe Terms they might now have by preſent Compliance.

Whereupon Sir John Mounſon and Mr. Warwick returning to Oxford, took time till the morrow, promiſing more then. One of the General's Trumpeters was appointed to go with them into Oxford, to bring their Anſwer the next morning.

On Tueſday, May 12. the Trumpeter returned with a deſire from Sir Tho. Glenham, that in regard there were, beſides the Duke of York, and the Two Princes, many other Perſons of Eminency, Lords, Knights, and Parliament-men, and other Gentry and Clergy, beſides the Inhabitants, all concerned in the buſineſs (to whom things could not poſſibly be repreſented fully in ſo ſhort a time) that further time might be granted.

The ſame day Prince Rupert, and with him near an Hundred Horſe went forth of Oxford on Col. Rainsborough's ſide, to take the Air; Prince Rupert riding without Boots, only in his Shooes and Stockins. A Party of the Beſiegers marched up towards them, and fired upon them; in which Skirmiſh Prince Rupert had a Shot in the Right Shoulder (but pierced no Bone) whereupon they retreated to Oxford: Which was the more taken notice of, becauſe ſuch an Accident had been by Lilly the Aſtrologer foretold in Print, likely about that time to befal his Highneſs.

On Thurſday 14. the Governor of Oxford ſent to make known his deſire to Treat by Commiſſioners, which was accepted of; and a Council of War being called, it was concluded that Mr. Crook's Houſe at Marſton ſhould be the Place, and on Monday following the Treaty to begin.

May 15. The Beſiegers made another Sally, and kill'd ſome of the Enemy.

Commiſſioners to Treat about the Surrender of Oxford.

Lord's-Day, May 17. The Governor of Oxford ſent forth the Names of the Commiſſioners for Treaty on his behalf, deſiring Fairfax to return the like Number.

The Names of both were:

On Sir Tho. Glenham's part,		On his Excellency Sir Tho. Fairfax's part,
Sir John Mounſon,	Col. Tyllier,	L. Gen. Hamond,	Major Desborough,
Sir John Heydon,	Dr. Zouch,	Col. Ireton,	Major Hariſon,
Sir Tho. Gardner,	Tho. Chiſley, Eſq;	Col. Lambert,	Mr. Herbert,
Sir Geo. Binion,	Mr. John Dutton,	Col. Rich,	Mr. Waller.
Sir Rich. Willis,	Mr. Jeffrey Palmer,	Col. Harley,	Four more to be named afterwards.
Sir Ste. Hawkins,	Mr. Phil. Warwick,	Scoutmaſter-Gen. Watſon,
Col. Goſnold,	Capt. Robert Mead.

Upon the receit of the Names of the Oxford Commiſſioners, Sir Geo. Binion was excepted, as being exempted from Pardon by the Parliament's Propoſitions.

A Treaty being reſolved and accepted on both Sides, and to begin Monday the 18*th*, Sir Tho. Glenham ſent to the General, deſiring, That in regard it was uſual at all Treaties to have a Secretary on each part, that Mr. H. Daviſon, his Secretary, might have a Paſs to come forth with their Commiſſioners, which was aſſented unto, and Mr. William Clark was appointed to aſſiſt the Commiſſioners on Fairfax's part. The Commiſſioners on the behalf of the Governor and Gariſon of Oxford, made their Demands; which Fairfax ſent up to the Parliament by Col. Rich, and Scoutmaſter-General Watſon, Two of the Commiſſioners for the Treaty on his Excellency Sir Tho. Fairfax's part; putting off the Treaty till the pleaſure of the Parliament was known concerning them. The Heads of ſome of the principal of them were theſe; viz.

Demands of the Gariſon.

1. To have liberty to ſend to the King, to know his Majeſty's pleaſure, whether they ſhall ſurrender or not.
2. That Prince Rupert and Prince Maurice have Protection to remain in any part part of this Kingdom; to have no Oath impoſed on them; to be at liberty to do as ſhall ſeem good unto them at any time hereafter.

An. 1646.

3. The Governor, and all Officers and Soldiers, to march out in as full Equipage as any ſince theſe Wars; with Six Guns, Ten Barrels of Powder, and to have Thirty Days time to know the King's pleaſure how he will diſpoſe of them.

4. The Privy Seal and Great Seal to go to the King; and ſuch as theſe.

The Houſe of Commons, upon reading of them, conceived them ſo high, that they thought not fit ſo much as to debate them, but referred it to the General, in what way he thought fit to proſecute the reducing of that Place.

About May 24. was Radcoat-Houſe ſurrendred, after it had endured great Extremity by Granadoes; one whereof falling upon the Top of a Tower, made fearful work, tearing it into a thouſand pieces, and ſending it ſeveral ways; and at laſt falling into the Cellar, let out all their Beer. There were an hundred men in it, who were to go to their ſeveral Homes, leaving their Arms behind them.

General Fairfax, upon the aforementioned return from the Parliament, prepared Propoſitions to offer to the Gariſon, and ſent them into Oxford on Saturday, May 30. Whereupon the Treaty was renewed again; they ſubmitting therein (as themſelves ſaid) to the Fate of the Kingdom, rather than any way diſtruſting their own Strength, or the Gariſon's Tenableneſs.

Letters intercepted, going to the King.

During this Treaty, a Captain of the Gariſon of Oxford was taken (in a Fiſherman's Habit) carrying Letters to the King from Sir Tho. Glenham and Secretary Nicholas, relating the Condition of the Gariſon, and how long probably they could hold out.

A few days before the Treaty ended, when the Beſieged perceived it was like to ſucceed, they play'd with their Cannon day and night into our Leaguers and Quarters, diſcharging ſometimes near 200 Shots in a day at random as was conceived, rather to ſpend their Powder, than to do any great Execution; though they ſhewed good skill, in that they levelled their Pieces ſo, as that they ſhot into the Leaguer on Hedington-Hill (and on that ſide Lieutenant-Colonel Cotſworth was ſlain with a great Shot), and likewiſe into the Leaguer on Col. Rainsborough's ſide, where they killed with their Shot a Sutler and others in their Tents. On the other ſide, the Cannon in recompence play'd fiercely upon the Town, and much annoy'd them in their Works and Colleges, till at laſt a Ceſſation of Great Shot was agreed to on both ſides.

Articles for Surrender of Oxford, Anno 1646. June 20.

Fairfax* ſhall appoint, be lock'd up in a Cheſt, and left in the Publick Library. And if any of the aforenamed Particulars ſhall not be then accordingly produced, the default thereof ſhall not be charged upon any other perſon than ſuch as hath the Cuſtody thereof, and ſhall wilfully detain or imbezzle the ſame.

5. That Sir Tho. Glenham, Knt. Governor of Oxford, with his Servants, and all that to him belong, and all Officers and Soldiers of Horſe and Foot, and of the Train of Artillery (as well Reformed Officers and Soldiers, as others) with their Servants, and all that pertain unto them, ſhall march out of Oxon with their Horſes and compleat Arms, that properly belong unto them, proportionable to their preſent or paſt Commands, flying Colours, Trumpets ſounding, Drums beating, Matches lighted at both ends, Bullet in their mouths, and every Soldier to have Twelve Charges of Powder, Match and Bullet proportionable, and with Bag and Baggage, to any place within Fifteen Miles of Oxford, which the Governor ſhall chuſe; where ſuch of the Common Soldiers as deſire to go to their own Home, or Friends, ſhall lay down their Arms, which ſhall be delivered up to ſuch as the General Sir Thomas Fairfax ſhall appoint to receive them. That all the Perſons now in Wallingford (not being of the Soldiery of the Gariſon) ſhall have liberty and Protection for their Perſons and Goods to ſtay in the Town of Wallingford one Month after the rendring, if they deſire it, and then to have the General's Paſs and Protection, as others going out at the rendring, upon the like Engagement: And that any perſon whatſoever (who being ſick or wounded cannot at preſent remove) ſhall have liberty to ſtay till they be recovered, or able to go away; and ſhall have fit Accommodation and Subſiſtence provided for them during ſuch their ſtay, and then ſhall enjoy the benefit of theſe Articles.

6. That no perſon whatſoever comprized in this Capitulation, ſhall be reproached, reviled, affronted, plunder'd or injur'd in their March, Rendezvouz, or Quarters, Journeys, or Places of Abode, by theſe Articles allowed; nor ſhall be compelled to bear Arms, nor be impriſoned, reſtrained, ſued, moleſted, or damnified, for any matter whatſoever of publick or private Concernment, relating to the preſent War, the matter or grounds thereof, ariſing before the rendring of the Gariſon, during the ſpace of Six Months after the rendring thereof; nor be compelled to take any Oaths, or other Engagement than what is mentioned in the ſecond Article, during the time of Six Months; and to have liberty during the ſaid time to travel about their lawful Affairs.

7. That all Horſes and other Goods now in Wallingford, taken as lawful Prize of War, or properly belonging to the Governor or Officers of the Gariſon, riſon, before or during the Siege, ſhall be continued in the poſſeſſion of the preſent Poſſeſſors, except ſuch as are to be delivered up by the Tenor of theſe Articles.

8. That ſuch Houſhold-ſtuff and Goods now in Wallingford, as ſhall appear to the General, or ſuch as he ſhall depute for that purpoſe, to have been borrowed by any Officer or Gentleman in the Gariſon, for their uſe and accommodation in the Gariſon, ſhall be reſtored back to the Owners.

9. That if any perſon or perſons ſhall wilfully violate theſe Articles in any part, the Guilt thereof ſhall be imputed to ſuch perſon or perſons only, and ſhall not prejudice any other, not acting or conſenting to the ſame.

10. That the Governor and Three more ſuch Officers and Gentlemen as he ſhall name, ſhall have Paſſes from the General for themſelves, with Two Servants apiece, their Horſes, Swords, Piſtols, and Neceſſaries, to go to the King to give him an Account of the ſaid Gariſon, and to return to their Homes or Friends; and that Five Weeks ſhall be allowed for this Journey, which ſhall not be reckoned any part of the Six Months mentioned in the Sixth Article, but he and they ſhall be allowed Six Months after the end of the ſaid Five Weeks.

11. That no Officer, Soldier, or other perſon, who by the Articles are to march out of the Caſtle or Town of Wallingford (or ſhall march in) ſhall plunder, ſpoil, or injure any Inhabitant or other perſon therein, in their Perſons, Goods, or Eſtates, or carry away any thing that is properly belonging to any of them.

12. That all perſons comprized within theſe Articles, ſhall peaceably and quietly enjoy all their Goods, Debts, and Moveables, and to depart the Kingdom with the ſame, as they ſhall think fit and deſire; and ſhall have Paſſes from his Excellency for their Tranſportation accordingly.

13. That all perſons comprized in theſe Articles ſhall upon Requeſt have a Certificate under the hand of the General, or ſuch as he ſhall appoint, That ſuch perſons were in the Town and Caſtle of Wallingford at the time of the Rendring thereof, and are to have the benefit of theſe Articles.

14. That the Townſmen and Inhabitants of the Town of Wallingford ſhall not be troubled or queſtioned for any thing ſaid or written by any of them, nor the Corporation thereof prejudiced for any thing done by any of them by expreſs Command ſince it was a Gariſon; and that they ſhall have the benefit of theſe Articles in all things that may concern them.

Tho. Fairfax.

After the Articles were ſigned and ſealed, and the day of Surrender agreed upon, a Party of Officers and Soldiers, upon ſome diſcontent, mutinied againſt the Governor; and dividing themſelves from the reſt, came in a threatning way, preſenting their Muſquets at him, if they might not have their Wills and Demands granted; whereupon the Governor was neceſſitated privately to ſend for the Paſſes, and to deliver the Caſtle a day ſooner than intended; and Lieut. Col. Jackſon was enforced to draw in his Regiment into the Town, between the Two Parties (the Mutiniers and the Governor's Party) to enforce an orderly delivery of the Gariſon. The Government of this Gariſon was by Fairfax committed to Adjutant-General Evelyn.

The Siege of Ragland.

Next followed the Reduction of Ragland, a ſtrong Caſtle in Wales, Gariſon'd for the King, under the Marqueſs of Worceſter, whoſe proper Houſe it was, being ſituated very conveniently to command all parts of South-Wales. It had been ſtreightned by ſome Forces of Sir Trevor Williams, and Major-General Langhorn, before Col. Morgan was ordered thither from Worceſter to Command in Chief, who had but 1500 men firſt, and the Gariſon conſiſted of 800, who made divers gallant Sallies, and in one kill'd a Cornet of Morgan's, and carried away the Colours: But after the Rendition of Oxford, Morgan being reinforced with 2000 men, ſent in the following Summons.

Col. Morgan's Summons to Ragland, June 28.

My Lord,

BY his Excellency's Command, this is my Second Summons, whereby you are required forthwith to deliver to me to the uſe of both Houſes of Parliament, the Caſtle of Ragland, with all Ordnance, Arms, Ammunition, and and Proviſions, and all other Neceſſaries that belong to War, that are now in it; which if you will be pleaſed to do, you may haply find Mercy, as other Gariſons have had; and if you do refuſe, expect but the Ruin of your ſelf, your Family, and this poor diſtreſſed Country. For I muſt acquaint your Lordſhip, That his Excellency Sir Tho. Fairfax having now finiſh'd his Work over the Kingdom, except this Caſtle, hath been pleaſed to ſpare his Forces for this Work, which are now upon their March this way with all Materials fit for it; though I made no doubt but I had of mine own ſtrength ſufficient to effect it. If your Lordſhip will deny to ſubmit to this Summons, and that more Blood muſt be ſpilt, your Lordſhip may be confident that you ſhall receive no Favour from both Houſes of Parliament. So expecting your Anſwer this Night by Nine of the Clock, I reſt,

From the Leaguer before Rag-
land, June 28. 1646.
Your Lordſhip's Servant,
Tho. Morgan.

Upon the Faith and Honour of a Soldier, this is a True Copy of his Majeſty's Letter to the Governor of Oxford, Litchfield, Wallingford, and Worceſter, and all other Gariſons in England and Wales; which I thought fit to preſent to your Lordſhip, that you may clearly ſee what probability of Relief you are like to have.

The Marq. Anſwer.

SIR,

I Have received this day Two Advertiſements from you; the firſt I did read, containing, as you would have me believe, a true Copy of his Majeſty's Warrant to ſeveral Gariſons upon Honourable Terms to quit, &c. But truly, Sir, it is not in the power of man to make me think ſo unworthily of his Majeſty, That to one, in the opinion of the World that hath given himſelf and Family ſo great a Remonſtrance and Teſtimony of his and their Faith and Fidelity towards him, that he would not pleaſe ſo much as to name his Name, or Ragland: I intreat you give me leave to ſuſpend my belief. And for your ſecond Summons, it makes it too evident, that it is deſired that I ſhould dye under an Hedge like a Beggar, having no Houſe left to put my Head into, nor means left to find me Bread. Wherefore to give you Anſwer, I make choice (if it ſo pleaſe God) rather to dye Nobly, than to live with Infamy: Which Anſwer if it be not pleaſing unto you, I ſhall not think you worthy to be ſtiled by me.

From my Houſe at Rag-
land, June 28. 1646.
Your Loving Friend and Servant,
H. Worceſter.

Morgan's Second Letter.

My Lord,

SInce it is not in my power to make you nor your Son believe any thing concerning the Surrender of thoſe Gariſons by his Majeſty's Order, that comes from me or any of our Party; once more, and the laſt, before I ſend your Anſwer to his Excellency Sir Tho. Fairfax, I ſhall give your Lordſhip way to ſend an Officer, with another of mine, to thoſe Lords in Oxford to whom his Majeſty's Letters were directed, for your better Satisfaction. This I do, my Lord, to prevent your utter Ruin, and that of this poor Country, ſo much occaſioned by your Lordſhip's Obſtinancy. I expect your preſent Anſwer, and reſt,
Your Servant,
June 28.
Tho. Morgan.

SIR,

IN reſpect of your mentioning of any Reſpect or Kindneſs towards me, leſt to be divulged to the World might do you any prejudice, I have thought fit in your own Letter to return you Thanks for the ſame. And for Sir Tho. Fairfax, if he were here with all his Army, he ſhould receive no other from me than you have had. I hope I ſerve (tho not ſo well as I ſhould) a Maſter that is of more Might than all the Armies in the World; and to his holy Will and Pleaſure I ſubmit my ſelf, and your ſelf to do what you think fitting; and ſo reſt,

From my Dwelling at Rag-
land, June 28.
Your Friend and Servant,
H. Worceſter.

Some time after this, General Fairfax came in Perſon thither from Bath to quicken the Siege, which was in great Forwardneſs both for Works and Approaches; and then ſent in this Summons to the Caſtle.

My

Fairfax's Summons to the Marq. of Worceſter, Aug. 7.

My Lord,

BEing come into theſe Parts with ſuch a Strength as I may not doubt but with the ſame good Hand of Providence that hath hitherto bleſſed us, in ſhort time to reduce the Gariſon of Ragland to the Obedience of the Parliament; I have in order thereto thought good to ſend your Lordſhip this Summons, hereby requiring you to deliver up to me for the Parliament's uſe the ſaid Gariſon and Caſtle of Ragland; which as it only obſtructs the Kingdoms Univerſal Peace, the Rendition may beget ſuch Terms, as by Delay or Vain Hopes cannot hereafter be expected. I remain, My Lord,

Leaguer before Ragland, Your Lordſhip's moſt Humble Servant,
Aug. 7. 1646. Tho. Fairfax.

Your Lordſhip's ſpeedy Anſwer to this Summons is deſired.

The Marq. Anſwer.

SIR,

ALtho my Infirmities might juſtly claim Privilege in ſo ſudden an Anſwer, yet becauſe you deſire it, and I not willing to delay your time, to your Letter of Summons to deliver up my Houſe, and the only Houſe now in my poſſeſſion to cover my Head in; Theſe are to let you know, that if you did underſtand the Condition I am in, I dare ſay out of your Judgment you will not think it a reaſonable Demand. I am loth to be the Author of mine own Ruin on both ſides, and therefore deſire leave to ſend to his Majeſty to know his Pleaſure what he will have done with his Gariſon. As for my Houſe, I preſume he will command nothing; neither am I knowing how either by Law or Conſcience I ſhould be forced out of it. To this I deſire your Return, and reſt,

From my poor Cottage at Your Excellency's Humble Servant,
Ragland, Aug. 7. 1646. H. Worceſter.

Fairfax's Reply.

My Lord,

TOuching your ſending to his Majeſty, it is that which hath been denied to the moſt conſiderable Gariſons of England, further than an Account to his Majeſty of the Thing done, upon the Surrender; which I do alſo freely grant to your Lordſhip. And for that diſtinction which your Lordſhip is pleaſed to make, That it is your Houſe; if it had not been formed into a Gariſon, I ſhould not have troubled your Lordſhip with a Summons; and were it diſgariſon'd, neither you nor your Houſe ſhould receive any Diſquiet from me, or any that belong unto me.

This I thought good to return to yours, and thereby to diſcharge my ſelf before God and the World, of all Extremities and ſad Conſequences that will enſue upon the Refuſal of the Rendition of your Gariſon upon my Summons. I remain, Yours,

Tho. Fairfax.

Another Letter of the Marqueſs's to Fairfax.

SIR,

I Do much confide in your Honour, as that being at ſtake. Concerning leave to ſend to his Majeſty, I will at this time forbear to make further Motion in it; only one thing, which is extraordinary, I offer to your Conſideration, for the juſt cauſe, beſides my Allegiance, of my reaſonable Requeſt; which is, That upon his Majeſty's Promiſe of Satisfaction, I am above 20000 Pounds out of Purſe; and if I ſhould do any thing diſpleaſing unto him, I am ſure all that is loſt, and no benefit to the Parliament. If you knew how well known I was in Henry Earl of Huntington's time unto your Noble Grandfather at York, I am aſſured I ſhould receive that Favour at your hands that ſafely you might afford. God knows, if I might quietly receive my means of Subſiſtence, and be in Security, with the Parliament's Approbation, and freed from the Malice of thoſe Gentlemen that are of the Committee within this County, I ſhould quickly quit my ſelf of the Gariſon; for I have no great cauſe to take delight in it. I have that high Eſteem of your Worth, Nobleneſs, and true Judgment, that knowing you will offer nothing ignoble or unworthy for me to do, as the Caſe ſtands with me, I deſire to know what Conditions I may have, and I will return you preſent Anſwer; and in the mean time I reſt,

Your Humble Servant,
Aug. 8. 1646. H. Worceſter.

An. 1646.

Fairfax's Anſwer.

My Lord,

ACcording to your Lordſhip's deſire I have returned you Conditions, ſuch as may be fit and ſatisfactory to the Soldiery. To your Lordſhip and Family I have granted Quiet and Security from all Violence of any that belongs to me. I would perſuade your Lordſhip not to fear any Ill or Diſreſpect from the Committee of this County, (I ſhall eaſily reconcile that Party) or that they will do any thing but as they ſhall receive Order from the Parliament. By this means you are at liberty to ſend to the Parliament; and upon a preſent Surrender and Submiſſion to their Mercy and Favour, your Lordſhip cannot but think to receive better Terms for your ſelf, than if you ſtand it out to the laſt Extremity, when beſides the hazard of your Perſon, and of thoſe in your Family (which I do preſume are dear to you) and the Spoil of the Caſtle, which cannot be avoided in extreme Undertakings againſt it. Your Lordſhip hath no reaſon to expect better than the Marqueſs of Wincheſter received, who in making good Baſing-houſe to the laſt, narrowly eſcaped in his own Perſon, loſt his Friends, ſubjected thoſe that eſcaped to great Frights and Hazard, his Houſe and Eſtate to utter Ruin, and himſelf to Extremity of Juſtice. Touching your Lordſhip's 20000 l. your Lordſhip hath liberty to ſolicit about that by the ſame hands your Lordſhip ſhall give an Account of the Surrender to his Majeſty. I deſire your Lordſhip, upon Receit of theſe, to diſmiſs my Trumpeter, and to return Anſwer by one of your own.

Tho. Fairfax.

A Third Letter of the Marqueſs's to Fairfax, Aug. 11.

SIR,

THE difficulty of Reſolution by the Soldiers and Officers (other than I thought) cauſeth my Requeſt for your Patience, in not giving you full Anſwer to the Conditions you ſent me yeſterday; but as ſoon as I ſhall obtain it, you ſhall not be long without it: But one thing, and that of moment, I deſire to be ſatisfied in, Whether if any Concluſion ſhould be made, that afterward I ſhall be left to the Mercy of the Parliament, for Alteration at their Will and Pleaſures; and if it be ſo, I ſhall endeavour in vain to ſtudy more about it: For Example, in my Lord of Shrewsbury's Caſe, and divers others, how Conditions have been broken, doth a little affright me. I know by your Will and Conſent it ſhould never be; but Soldiers are unruly, and the Parliament unqueſtionable, and therefore I beſeech you pardon my juſt Cauſe of Fear, and I will reſt, Your Humble Servant,

Aug. 11. H. Worceſter.

Fairfax's Anſwer.

My Lord,

I Have peruſed your Letter of this 11*th* of Auguſt: As to your Scruple wherein you deſire to be ſatisfied (ſo far as I underſtand it) I can only give you this Reſolution, That what I grant, I will undertake ſhall be made good. As to the Inſtance you give in my Lord of Shrewsbury's Caſe, the Actors in that Breach (who were none of my Army) have received their Cenſure, and by this time, I believe, the Execution. But here, if any Concluſion be made while I ſtay, I dare undertake there ſhall be no ſuch thing; or if any, there ſhall be Reparation.

Aug. 11. 1646. Tho. Fairfax.

A Fourth Letter of the Marqueſs's to Fairfax, Aug. 15.

SIR,

FOR the better Accommodation of theſe unhappy Differences, if you pleaſe that there may be a Ceſſation of Arms and working, and to engage your Honour for the Return of my Commiſſioners, To-morrow by Ten of the Clock they ſhall wait upon you in your Leaguer, where they ſhall vindicate me for being the only Obſtruction of the General Peace. So in expectation of your ſudden Anſwer, I reſt, Your Humble Servant,

Aug. 13. 1646. H. Worceſter.

Fairfax's Anſwer.

My Lord,

HAving not yet received in any of your Letters a direct Anſwer to the Conditions I ſent you, I have no Grounds or Conſideration for ſuch a Ceſſation of Arms and working as in your Letter you deſire; but if it be your purpoſe to return your Anſwer by Commiſſioners, I ſhall by the Hour you mention appoint Commiſſioners of mine own to receive the ſame in the Leaguer, as you deſire, and engage my ſelf for the ſafe return of yours, not exceeding Six Commiſſioners, and as many Servants; and in order to this I ſhall be content there be a Ceſſation of Arms and working from Nine of the Clock To-morrow Morning, till Two in the Afternoon.

Uske, Aug. 14. Yours, Tho. Fairfax.

The Marq. Fifth Letter to Gen. Fairfax, Aug. 14.

SIR,

HAD I not thought you had been in the Leaguer, to the end that Propoſitions from the Place, in Anſwer to yours, might have been firſt preſented unto you, and to avoid Delays, which I thought your Side would beſt like of, it was reſolved to ſend Commiſſioners together with our Propoſitions; but conſidering it was otherwiſe, I have ſent you ſuch as I am adviſed unto, to take into your Conſideration: And becauſe there is ſome Addition to yours, I would have been glad you had heard the juſt Reaſons thereof, to the end you might not have been perſuaded to ſlight them without juſt Cauſe. Your Pleaſure for the ordering of Buſineſs, I at your Leiſure expect; and, if you pleaſe, the Diſmiſſion of this Meſſenger; and ſo reſt,

Your Humble Servant, H. Worceſter.

Fairfax's Reply.

My Lord,

I Have peruſed the Propoſitions ſent out by your Commiſſioners, which I find ſuch as deſerve no Anſwer. I have offered your Lordſhip and the reſt Conditions which you may yet have, if you accept in time: If there be any thing in them obſcure, needing Explanation, or wanting Circumſtantials, for the better performing of the things intended therein, I ſhall be willing to appoint Commiſſioners on my part to Treat with yours to that purpoſe, upon thoſe Propoſitions of mine: Provided you ſend Commiſſioners inſtructed with Power to treat and conclude, and return your Reſolution herein by Six of the Clock in the Evening.

Aug. 14. 1646. Yours, &c. Tho. Fairfax.

In the mean time the Beſiegers went on with their Approaches toward the Caſtle, their main Works being not above ſome 60 Yards diſtant, and had planted Four Mortar-pieces in one place, and Two Mortar-pieces at another, each Mortar-piece carrying a Granado-Shell Twelve Inches Diameter.

Auguſt 14. Fairfax appointed a new Approach; which the Engineer, Captain Hooper, had ſo far proceeded in, as to throw up Approaches of an Hundred Yards in Circuit, making exact running Trenches (as ſecure as if they were Works againſt a Storm) coming within Sixty Yards of their Works.

Auguſt 15. The Marqueſs ſent forth his deſire to Treat upon the General's Propoſitions; whereupon the Treaty was appointed at Mr. Oats's Houſe (about a Mile and a half from Ragland), to begin at Two of the Clock that Afternoon. Fairfax's Commiſſioners were Col. Birch, Mr. Herbert, Quartermaſter-General Graſvenor, Lieutenant-Colonel Aſhfield, and Major Tulida.

By Monday, Aug. 17. the Treaty was concluded, according to the enſuing Articles.

The Articles for Surrender of Ragland, Aug. 17. 1646.

Articles concluded and agreed on between his Excellency Sir Tho. Fairfax, Knt. General of the Forces raiſed by the Parliament, on the one part; and the Right Honourable the Marqueſs and Earl of Worceſter, Governor of the Caſtle and Gariſon of Ragland, on the other part; for and concerning the Surrender of the Caſtle and Gariſon of Ragland.

1. THat the Caſtle and Gariſon of Ragland, with all the Ordnance, Arms, Ammunition and Proviſion of War thereunto belonging, ſhall be delivered up without wilful Spoil, unto his Excellency Sir Tho. Fairfax, or ſuch as he ſhall appoint to receive the ſame, on Wedneſday next, being the 19th day of this Inſtant Auguſt, by Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon, in ſuch Form as ſhall be expreſſed in the enſuing Articles.

2. That upon the ſaid 19th day of Auguſt, the Officers, Gentlemen, and Soldiers of the Gariſon, with all other perſons therein, ſhall march out of the ſaid Gariſon with their Horſes and Arms, with Colours flying, Drums beating,

An. 1646. ing, Trumpets ſounding, Matches lighted at both ends, Bullet in their mouths, and every Soldier with Twelve Charges of Powder, Match and Bullet proportionable, and Bag and Baggage, to any Place within Ten Miles of the Gariſon, where the Governor ſhall nominate; where, in reſpect his Majeſty hath no Gariſon in England, nor Army any where within this Kingdom, and Dominion of Wales, their Arms ſhall be delivered up to ſuch as his Excellency ſhall appoint to receive them, where the Soldiers ſhall be diſbanded; and that all, both Officers, Gentlemen, and Soldiers, ſhall have the benefit of theſe enſuing Articles, except perſons excepted from Pardon and Compoſition, they engaging themſelves not to bear Arms hereafter againſt the Parliament, nor do any thing during their Abode in the Parliament's Quarters, prejudicial to their Affairs.

3. That ſuch as deſire to go to their own Homes, or to their private Friends, ſhall have the General's Paſs and Protection for their peaceable Repair to and Abode at the ſeveral Places they ſhall deſire to go unto; the Officers and Gentlemen to paſs with their Horſes and Arms; alſo ſuch Officers or Gentlemen, reformed or not reformed, that want Horſes, ſhall march with their Arms; and all Officers, Gentlemen, Soldiers, and others, ſhall paſs with Bag and Baggage.

4. That all Officers, Gentlemen, and others comprized within this Capitulation, ſhall have Three Months time allowed them to remain in any place within the Parliament's Quarters, for the endeavouring their Peace and Compoſition. And all Gentlemen that deſire to go beyond the Seas, ſhall have their Paſſes for themſelves and their Servants, and all other Neceſſaries, to any Seaport to ſhip themſelves, they paying the uſual Rate: Provided they go within Three Months after the ſaid Surrender. And that all Gentlemen, Officers, and others, as ſhall deſire to take Foreign Entertainment, ſhall without exception have Paſſes for themſelves and Servants to go to London or elſewhere, to treat with any Ambaſſador or other to that purpoſe, with their Bag and Baggage, to march to any Port, to be tranſported whither they pleaſe, they likewiſe paying the uſual Rates.

5. That ſuch as are either wounded or ſick, ſhall either have liberty to ſtay in the Caſtle, or be removed to ſuch other places as the Governor ſhall chuſe for their Recovery.

6. That no Officers, Gentlemen, or Soldiers, during theſe Three Months, ſhall be queſtion'd for any Words ſpoken, or Acts done, relating to this War ſince the Commencement of it. That no perſon compriſed in theſe Articles be reproached, affronted, plunder'd or injur'd in their March, Quarters, or places of Abode; or any perſon that ſhall receive them, ſhall be moleſted, or ſuffer any prejudice therefore, but ſhall have liberty during the limited time, to paſs about their lawful Occaſions; provided they act nothing to the prejudice of the Parliament. And in caſe any of theſe Articles be broken by any particular perſon, That the Puniſhment extend no farther than the Party ſo offending; and that all theſe Articles may be faithfully obſerved, according to the true intent thereof, without any Cavil or mental Reſervation to infringe them, or any of them.

On Wedneſday, Auguſt 19. the Caſtle was ſurrendred, according to Agreement, to Sir Tho. Fairfax, for the uſe of the Parliament. The Gariſon was no ſooner marched forth, but Fairfax entred the Caſtle, took a view of it, had ſome Conference with the Marqueſs, and afterwards went that Night to Chepſtow, where he was entertained by the Committee there; from whence on Thurſday 20. he returned to his Quarters at Bath.

This Caſtle of Ragland was a very ſtrong Place, having a deep Moat encompaſſing it, beſides the River running by it. There were delivered up with it Twenty Pieces of Ordnance, only Three Barrels of Powder, but they had a Mill with which they could make a Barrel a day: There was found great ſtore of Corn and Malt, Wine of all ſorts, and Beer: The Horſes they had left were not many, and thoſe that were, almoſt ſtarv'd for want of Hay; ſo that the Horſes had like to have eaten one another for want of Meat, and therefore were tied with Chains: There was alſo great ſtore of Goods and Rich Furniture found in the Caſtle, which Fairfax committed to the Care and Cuſtody of Mr. Herbert, Commiſſioner of the Army, Mr. Roger Williams, and Major jor Tuliday, to be Inventoried: And that in caſe any of the Country could make a juſt Claim to any of them, as having been violently taken from them, or they compelled to bring them in thither, they ſhould have them reſtor'd.

There marched out of the Caſtle the Marqueſs of Worceſter, who was then above Fourſcore Years of Age; the Lord Charley, the Marqueſs's Son; the Counteſs of Glamorgan, the Lady Jones, Sir Philip Jones, Dr. Bailey, Commiſſary Gwilliam, 4 Colonels, 82 Captains, 16 Lieutenants, 6 Cornets, 4 Enſigns, 4 Quartermaſters, 52 Eſquires and Gentlemen.

Pendennis Caſtle ſurrender'd.

Much about the ſame time was Pendennis-Caſtle ſurrender'd to the Parliament, being a very ſtrong place, ſituate in the utmoſt part of Cornwall, ſtanding upon the Sea, and commanding in a great part the Harbour of Falmouth. It had been Gariſon'd for the King by the Honourable John Arundel of Treriſe, Eſquire, and was beleaguer'd by part of Fairfax's Army, under the Command of Col. Forteſcue by Land, and by Capt. Batten, the Parliament's Vice-Admiral, by Sea: And after a conſiderable Siege, and gallant Reſiſtance, was ſurrender'd on theſe Articles.

1. THat the Caſtle of Pendennis, with all Fortreſſes, Forts, Fortifications thereunto belonging, the Ships and all other Veſſels lying under the Caſtle, with the Furniture and Proviſions unto them appertaining, all Ordnance of all ſorts, with their Equipage, and all Arms, Ammunition, Proviſions, and all other Implements of War, Neceſſaries and Commodities of and belonging to the ſaid Caſtle and Gariſon (except what otherwiſe ſhall be diſpoſed by theſe Articles), ſhall without any manner of diminution, ſpoil, or imbezzlement, be deliver'd upon Monday the 17*th* day of this Inſtant Auguſt, at Two of the Clock in the Afternoon, into the hands and cuſtody of the Two Commanders in Chief by Sea and Land reſpectively, or ſuch perſon or perſons as ſhall be by them appointed for receiving of the ſame. And that immediately upon ſigning the ſaid Articles, the ſaid perſons ſhall be admitted into the Caſtle, to ſee the juſt performance of the Premiſes, and Hoſtages given for the due obſervance of them.

Paſſes

An. 1646.

Paſſes from the Commanders in Chief, to paſs to their ſeveral Dwellings, or to ſuch other places under the Power of the Parliament, or beyond the Seas, as they ſhall deſire, and not be plunder'd, ſearched, or injured in their March, or after, they not doing any thing to the prejudice of the Parliament's Affairs; and no man to be prejudic'd for giving any of the perſons comprized in the ſaid Articles, Entertainment in their Houſes: And that the old Gariſon-Soldiers who have Houſes in the Caſtle, ſhall have 28 days after the Surrender, for the removing and diſpoſing of their Goods.

3. That the Princes Servants, with their Arms, and all Commanders, Officers, Gentlemen, Ladies, Gentlewomen, Clergymen, and all others, with their Retinue, that deſire it, ſhall have liberty to paſs with their Bag and Baggage, and what elſe is allow'd in the Articles, beyond the Seas; and to that purpoſe there ſhall be provided by the Vice-Admiral a ſufficient Number of Navigable Veſſels, with a Convoy for their ſafe Tranſporting from the Haven of Falmouth, within 28 days after the Surrender of the ſaid Caſtle, to be landed at St. Maloes in France; and in the mean time to be aſſigned Free Quarters at convenient places by Col. Forteſcue, Commander in Chief; and during the ſaid time, that they be not plunder'd or injur'd, they acting nothing prejudicial to the Parliament-Affairs.

4. That Col. Wiſe, and all Officers and Soldiers of his Regiment, or as many of them as deſire it, be ſhipt in Falmouth-Harbour, in Veſſels to be provided by the Vice-Admiral, and landed at Swanſey in Wales: And that ſuch as are of the County of Cornwal, be ſhipt and landed at Looe; and thoſe that be of Devon, to be landed at Yalme; and all to be ſhipt with Bag and Baggage, and ſuch Arms as formerly allowed them, nor to be plunder'd nor injur'd in their Paſſage.

5. That whereas by reaſon of the long Siege of the Caſtle of Pendennis, many of the Officers and Soldiers of the ſaid Gariſon are grown into great neceſſity of all ſuch things as might enable them to march to their ſeveral dwellings, many ſick and wounded; and to the intent they may be ſupplied with Neceſſaries for their Accommodations within the time limited to them by theſe Articles, it is promiſed and conſented unto by the Commiſſioners for the Leaguer, to and with the Commiſſioners for the Caſtle, That Five hundred Pounds Sterling ſhall be deliver'd into the hands of the Commiſſioners of the Caſtle, or any Three of them, at 8 of the Clock To-morrow morning at Penrin, to be diſtributed among the Officers and Soldiers aforeſaid, as they ſhall think fit; and they are not to take any Free Quarter in their Marches.

6. That all Goods taken from any perſon for the accommodation of this Gariſon, or any perſon therein, ſhall be reſtored to their proper Owners, or ſuch as they ſhall appoint; and all Goods now in the Caſtle that properly belong to any other perſons, ſhall be reſtored to the Owners thereof: And if any perſon carry away any Goods not properly belonging unto him, and deny to deliver them upon demand, in preſence of any Officer in Commiſſion, he ſhall loſe his Bag and Baggage, and have ſuch Puniſhment as the now Governor of the Caſtle, and the Commander in Chief, or any Two of them, ſhall think fit: But all perſons may retain whatſoever was taken from perſons in Arms, as lawful Prize of War.

7. That the Governor, and all Field Officers, with their ſeveral Retinues, ſhall be allow'd Carriage by Sea and Land, to carry away their ſaid Goods to any place within their Country.

8. That no Officer, Soldier, or other perſon comprized within theſe Articles, ſhall be reproached, or have any diſgraceful Words or Affronts offered, or be ſtopt, ſearched, plunder'd or injur'd in their Marches, Rendezvouz, Quarters, Journeys, Places of Abode, or Paſſages by Sea or Land; and if any ſuch thing be done, Satisfaction to be made, according to the Judgment of any Two Commiſſioners or more, being of equal number of each Party: Nor ſhall any of the Perſons aforeſaid be compell'd to take up Arms againſt the King, nor be impriſon'd for any Cauſe of publick or private Concernment, during the ſpace of 28 days after the Surrender of the ſaid Caſtle; nor for any Cauſe of Publick Concernment, for 28 days after the ſaid 28 days are ended.

9. That if any perſon within the Gariſon be ſick or wounded, that they cannot not take the benefit of the Articles at preſent, they ſhall have liberty to ſtay, and be provided for at convenient places until they recover, and then they ſhall have the fruit and benefit of theſe Articles.

10. That all perſons comprized in this Capitulation, ſhall enjoy their Eſtates Real and Perſonal, they ſubmitting to all Orders and Ordinances of Parliament, and ſhall fully enjoy the benefit of theſe Articles.

11. That all Priſoners of War of either ſide be ſet at liberty; and that liberty be given immediately after the Surrender of the ſaid Caſtle, to the Governor thereof, to give notice to their Friends of the Surrender of the ſaid Caſtle; and that no Veſſel coming with Relief within Ten days after the Surrender, ſhall be made Prize.

12. That if any of theſe Articles ſhall in any Point be broke or violated by any perſon or perſons in Pendennis, or compriz'd within this Capitulation, the fault and puniſhment ſhall be upon them or him only who made the Breach or Violation, and ſhall not be imputed or charged on any other not aſſenting thereunto, or acting therein.

13. That all perſons comprized in theſe Articles, ſhall upon requeſt have Certificates under the hands of the Commander in Chief reſpectively, That ſuch Perſons were in the Caſtle at the time of the Surrender thereof, and were otherwiſe to have the benefit of theſe Articles.

14. That the Commanders in Chief reſpectively ſhall give Paſſes to one or two Meſſengers with their Servants, not exceeding Six, to go to the King by Sea or Land, from the Governor, to give an Account to him of the Proceedings of this Treaty, and Concluſion thereof; and to return and receive the benefit of theſe Articles.

15. That Commiſſioners be appointed on both ſides for the performance of the Articles, and Places appointed for the Accommodation of Sick Men.

16. That Confirmation of all the precedent Articles ſhall be procured from the Parliament, or from his Excellency Sir Tho. Fairfax, within Forty Days after the ſigning of theſe Articles.

The Archbiſhop of York takes up Arms for the Parliament.

Some time before this, Major-General Mitton took the Town of Conoway in North-Wales, wherein he was much aſſiſted by Dr. Williams, Archbiſhop of York: For that Prelate about April 1646. had quitted the King's Party, declared for the Parliament, and betaking himſelf to his Houſe at Penrin, near Conoway, put a Gariſon therein for the Parliament, and perſuaded the Country not to pay Contribution any longer to Conoway; which incenſing that Gariſon, the Lord Byron, upon notice of ſuch his Revolt, ſent out a Party from Conoway to beſiege him in his Houſe; but he ſending to Col. Mitton for Aſſiſtance, Mitton diſpatch'd a Party thither to interpoſe and help him; and the Biſhop became active on that ſide in Perſon, ſo that he received a Wound on the ſide of the Neck, before Conoway, but not dangerous: And Mitton being drawn before that Town, his Grace the Archbiſhop aſſiſted at a Council of War on the 8*th* of Auguſt, where it was reſolved to ſtorm the Town; which was accordingly attempted, and with ſome Loſs accompliſhed, and ſome days after the Caſtle ſurrender'd; as alſo Flint-Caſtle, and all other places in Wales.

Conoway Town ſtorm'd, _Aug._ 9. 1646.

So that now there was not one Gariſon in England or Wales remaining, but what was reduced to the Power of the Two Houſes, ſave only thoſe in the North, which remained in the hands of the Scots.

CHAP. X.

Civil Tranſactions after his Majeſty's being at Newcaſtle, between him and the Two Houſes, and the Scots: With the Propoſitions tender'd to him there; and his Majeſty's Anſwer thereunto, &c.

THE Two Houſes being now poſſeſs'd of the Strength of the Kingdom, were buſy in compleating their Propoſitions for Peace, which they deſigned to ſend to his Majeſty, and which had been retarded by the Diſagreement of the Scots Commiſſioners; but now at laſt they thought fit to concur therein, expreſſing their Conſent in the following Paper; which was delivered with this following Speech of the Marqueſs of Argyle, together with ſome other Papers; which for fuller Satisfaction we ſhall give you in the ſame order as they were then delivered.

The Lord Marqueſs of Argyle his Speech to a Grand Committee of both Houſes, June 25. 1646.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

THough I have had the Honour to be named by the Kingdom of Scotland in all the Commiſſions which had relation to this Kingdom ſince the beginning of this War, yet I never had the happineſs to be with your Lordſhips till now; wherein I reverence God's Providence, that he hath brought me hither at ſuch an opportunity, when I may boldly ſay, it is in the power of the Two Kingdoms, yea, I may ſay in your Lordſhips power, to make us both happy, if you make good uſe of this occaſion, by ſetling Religion, the Peace and Union of theſe Kingdoms. The work of Reformation in theſe Kingdoms is ſo great a work, as no Age nor Hiſtory can parallel ſince Chriſt's days; for no one Nation had ever ſuch a Reformation ſet forth unto them, much leſs Three Kingdoms: So that this Generation may truly think themſelves happy if they can be inſtrumental in it. And as the Work is very great, ſo it cannot be expected but it muſt have great and powerful Enemies, not only Fleſh and Blood, which hate to be reformed, but Principalities and Powers, the Rulers of the darkneſs of this world, and ſpiritual wickedneſſes in high places. As the dangers are great, we muſt look the better to our duties; and the beſt way to perform theſe, is to keep us by the Rules which are to be found in our National Covenant, principally the Word of God, and in its own place, the Example of the beſt Reform'd Churches. And in our way we muſt beware of ſome Rocks, which are temptations both upon the right and left hand, ſo that we muſt hold the middle path. Upon the one part we would take heed not to ſettle lawleſs Liberty in Religion, whereby inſtead of Uniformity we ſhould ſet up a thouſand Hereſies and Schiſms, which is directly contrary and deſtructive to our Covenant. Upon the other part, we are to look that we perſecute not Piety and peaceable men, who cannot through ſcruple of Conſcience come up in all things to the common Rule: But that they may have ſuch a forbearance as may be according to the Word of God, may conſiſt with the Covenant, and not be deſtructive to the Rule it ſelf, nor to the Peace of the Church and Kingdom; wherein I will inſiſt no further, either to wrong your Lordſhips Patience or Judgments, who, I doubt not, will be very careful to do every thing according to our Covenant.

As to the other point, concerning the Peace and Union of the Kingdoms, I know it is that which all profeſs they deſire; I hope it is that all do aim at; ſure I am, it is that which all men ought to ſtudy and endeavour. And I think it not amiſs to remember your Lordſhips of ſome former Experiences, as an Argument to move us to be wiſe for the future. If the Kingdom of England in the 1640 year of God, then ſitting in Parliament, had concurred as they were deſired, againſt the Kingdom of Scotland, no queſtion we had been brought to many difficulties, which bleſſed be God was by the Wiſdom of the Honourable Houſes prevented. So likewiſe, when this Kingdom was in difficulties, if the Kingdom of Scotland had not willingly, yea chearfully ſacrificed their Peace, to concur with this Kingdom, your Lordſhips all know what might have been the danger. Therefore let us hold faſt that Union which is ſo happily eſtabliſhed betwixt us; and let nothing make us again two, who are ſo many ways one; all of one Language, in one Iſland, all under one King, one in Religion, yea one in Covenant; ſo that in effect, we differ in nothing but in the Name (and ſo do Brethren), which I wiſh were alſo removed, that we might be altogether one, if the Two Kingdoms ſhall think fit: For I dare ſay, not the greateſt Kingdom in the Earth can prejudice both, ſo much as one of them may do the other.

I will forbear at this time to ſpeak of the many Jealouſies I hear are ſuggeſted; for as I do not love them, ſo I delight not to mention them: Only one I cannot forbear to ſpeak of, As if the Kingdom of Scotland were too much affected with the King's Intereſt. I will not deny but the Kingdom of Scotland, by reaſon of the Reign of many Kings, his Progenitors, over them, hath a Natural Affection to his Majeſty, whereby they wiſh he may be rather Reformed than Ruined: Yet experience may tell, that Perſonal Regard to him hath never made them forget that common Rule, The Safety of the People is the Supreme Law. So likewiſe their love to Monarchy makes them very deſirous, that it may be rather regulated than deſtroyed: Which I hope I need not to mention further to your Lordſhips, who, I truſt, are of the ſame mind.

I know likewiſe there are many Jealouſies and unjuſt Aſperſions caſt upon the Scotiſh Armies in England and Ireland: I can (if it were needful) preſently produce Heads of a Declaration intended by the Army in England, for vindicating themſelves from ſuch Injuries, and ſhewing the clearneſs of their Reſolution and Integrity, both in the Cauſe, and towards this Kingdom; wherein their Undertakings, and coming in at ſuch a Seaſon of the Year, their hard Sufferings, and conſtant Endeavours ſince, may be ſufficient Teſtimonies. Therefore I am the more bold to deſire your Lordſhips, That ſo long as they ſtay in England (which I wiſh may be for a ſhort time) they may be ſupplied with ſome Moneys, and their Quarters enlarged, leſt their lying in too narrow Quarters make the burthen inſupportable to that exhauſted Corner of the Country where they now remain, and ſo beget Outcries againſt them, when they are not enabled to diſcharge their Quarters, as other Armies within the Kingdom.

As for the Army in Ireland, I have been an Eye-witneſs to their Sufferings, and ſo may ſpeak of it likewiſe upon certain knowledge, That never men have ſuffered greater hardſhips, who might have been provided for: They have lived many times upon a few Beans meaſured out to them by number, and never had any other Drink but Water: And when they were in ſome better condition, they had but an Iriſh Peck of rough Oats for a whole Week: And now at their beſt Condition, when they are quarter'd upon the Country (which is able to entertain them only for a very ſhort time) they have only an Iriſh Peck of Oatmeal, or a Shilling, in the Ten days, both for Meat and Drink. Therefore, according to the many deſires given in to the Honourable Houſes for that end, I humbly intreat that your Lordſhips will take care to provide for them, ſo long as it is thought fit they remain in that Kingdom.

For a renewed Teſtimony of our earneſt deſires to comply with the Honourable Houſes for ſetling the Peace of theſe Kingdoms, ſo much longed for, we do return unto your Lordſhips the Propoſitions of Peace (which we received on Tueſday laſt) with our Conſent thereunto, wiſhing they may be haſted to his Majeſty, who hath ſo often called for them. And I likewiſe offer to your Lordſhips the Copy of his Majeſty's Letter to my L. Ormond, diſcharging him from any further medling in any Treaty with the Rebels in Ireland, I hope in order to his Majeſty's further condeſcending to the ſetling of that Propoſition concerning Ireland, and the reſt of the Propoſitions now to be ſent unto him. Another Paper there is, which concerns the ſupplying of the Scotiſh Armies in England and Ireland, and the perfecting of the Accounts between the Kingdoms, together with a Letter from Gen. Major Monroe, to the Committee of Eſtates of the Kingdom of Scotland, concerning the State of Affairs in Ireland. All which when your Lordſhips have conſider'd, I truſt ye will take ſuch courſe therein, as may ſatisfy our juſt deſires, may put an end to our preſent Troubles, and ſettle theſe Kingdoms in a happy Peace.

An. 1646.

The Paper wherein the Commiſſioners for the Kingdom of Scotland conſent to the Propoſitions of Peace.

IT is above a Twelvemonth ſithence we did earneſtly preſs the ſending of Propoſitions to the King for a ſafe and well-grounded Peace. In anſwer whereunto, the Honourable Houſes were pleaſed to acquaint us, That they had reſolved Propoſitions ſhould be ſent to his Majeſty, but did intend to make ſome Alterations in the former Propoſitions; and after Eight or Nine Months deliberation, we received from the Honourable Houſes ſome of thoſe Propoſitions: And tho we did find therein very material Additions, Alterations, and Omiſſions, which for their great Importance, and the intereſt of the Kingdom of Scotland therein, might very well have required the delay of an Anſwer until the Eſtates of that Kingdom had been conſulted; yet ſo unwilling were we to retard the means of Peace, that in a Fortnights time we returned an Anſwer upon the whole Propoſitions: And the Houſes of Parliament not reſting ſatisfied therewith, in leſs than Ten days we prepared a further Anſwer, wherein we did very much comply with the Deſires of the Honourable Houſes, eſpecially in the matter of the ſetling of the Militia of England and Ireland, and in other things did ſhew our readineſs to hear or propoſe ſuch Expedients as might determine our Differences: So that in a whole Years time the Propoſitions have not remained in our hands the ſpace of Four Weeks (which we only mention to clear our Proceedings from Miſtakes and Aſperſions.) And the Houſes having now, after Two Months further deliberation, delivered unto us, upon the 23*d* of this Inſtant June, all the Propoſitions they intend to ſend to the King at this time, we do without any delay return ſuch an Anſwer and Reſolution thereupon, as will be to the preſent and future Generations one undeniable Teſtimony (beſides many others) of the Integrity and Faithfulneſs of the Kingdom of Scotland, in their ſolemn League and Covenant, of their love to Peace, and earneſt deſire to ſatisfy their Brethren of England in thoſe things which concern the Good and Government of this Kingdom: Being further reſolved, touching the Kingdom of Scotland, That as nothing of ſingle or ſole Concernment to that Nation did engage them in this War, ſo nothing of that nature ſhall continue the ſame. Altho theſe Propoſitions now to be ſent, do much differ from the Propoſitions formerly agreed upon by the Parliaments of both Kingdoms, and the moſt material Additions, Omiſſions and Alterations, are in ſuch particulars as concern the joint Intereſt and mutual Confidence and Conjunction of both Kingdoms, which were, as we conceive, much better provided for and ſtrengthned by the former Propoſitions than by theſe: Altho the particular Propoſitions preſented by us, concerning the Kingdom of Scotland, are not yet agreed unto by the Houſes of Parliament, as was offered in their Paper of the 10*th* of April: Altho divers Propoſitions of joint concernment be now ſuperſeded, and the ſending of them delayed to a more convenient time, as is expreſſed in the Votes of both Houſes the 26*th* of March: And altho (which is to us more than all the reſt) thoſe Ordinances of Parliament unto which the Fifth and Sixth Propoſitions do relate (and were therefore communicated unto us, upon our deſire to ſee what the Houſes had already agreed upon concerning Religion) do not contain the Eſtabliſhment of ſuch a Reformation of Religion, and Uniformity as was expected, and was the chief end of our Engagement in this War. And as all theſe Ordinances put together, come ſhort of what was wiſhed, ſo there are ſome Particulars which we conceive to be inconſiſtent with the Word of God, and the Example of the beſt-Reformed Churches, and therefore cannot in our Conſciences conſent unto them; which Particulars were expreſſed to both Houſes in the Remonſtrance of the Commiſſioners of the Church of Scotland, of the date, March 26. 1646. Yet nevertheleſs we do ſo earneſtly deſire, and ſo highly value the eaſing of the heavy Preſſures under which both Kingdoms groan, and the bringing of this bloody laſting War to a ſpeedy and happy end; conſidering withal, that not only the Book of Common-Prayer, and the Prelatical Government are aboliſhed, and a common Directory of Worſhip eſtabliſhed in both Kingdoms, but that likewiſe the Ordinances aforementioned do contain divers parts of a poſitive Reformation and Uniformity in Church-Government, unto which we formerly gave our Conſent in our Anſwer upon the whole Propoſitions of Peace of the 20*th* of April; and for ſo happy beginnings, and ſo good a foundation laid for the future, we heartily thank God, and do acknowledge the Zeal, Piety, and Wiſdom of the Honourable Houſes therein; remembring alſo that theſe Ordinances do not contain the whole Model of Church-Government; and that the Houſes have been pleaſed to expreſs, [That it cannot be expected that a perfect Rule in every particular ſhould be ſetled all at once, but that there will be need of Supplements and Additions, and haply of Alterations in ſome things, as Experience ſhall bring to light the neceſſity thereof.]

Upon theſe Conſiderations, as we do chearfully conſent to many material parts of theſe Propoſitions, ſo we reſolve to make no Lett, but to give way to the ſending of ſuch other Particulars therein contained, with which we are unſatisfied in the matter, for the Reaſons formerly repreſented to both Houſes; of which ſome ſtill ſtand in force, though others of them be taken away by the new Expedients. It being always underſtood, that our not diſſenting from, nor oppoſing of the ſending of the Propoſitions as they now ſtand, ſhall be no prejudice nor impediment to all or any one of the Articles of the Solemn League and Covenant, eſpecially to the firſt Articles, concerning the preſervation of the Reformed Religion in the Church of Scotland, in Doctrine, Worſhip, Diſcipline, and Governmenment, againſt our common Enemies; the Reformation of Religion in the Kingdoms of England and Ireland, in Doctrine, Worſhip, Diſcipline, and Government, according to the Word of God, and Example of the beſt Reformed Churches; and the bringing of the Churches of God in the Three Kingdoms, to the neareſt Conjunction and Uniformity in Religion, Confeſſion of Faith, Form of Church-Government, Directory for Worſhip, and Catechiſing; which things both Kingdoms are by Covenant obliged ſincerely and really to endeavour; and that not for a time, but conſtantly; ſo that neither of the Kingdoms can be looſed or acquitted from the moſt ſtrict and ſolemn Obligation of their continued and conſtant endeavouring theſe good Ends, ſo far as any of them is not yet obtained: It being alſo underſtood, that our concurrence to the ſending of the Propoſitions, ſhall be without prejudice to any Agreement or Treaty between the Kingdoms, and ſhall not infringe any Engagement made to the Kingdom of Scotland, nor be any hindrance to our inſiſting upon the other Propoſitions already made known to the Houſes: And it being underſtood that it is not our Judgment, that every Particular and Circumſtance of theſe Propoſitions is of ſo great Importance to theſe Kingdoms, as Peace and War ſhould depend thereupon. Upon theſe Grounds (which we make known only for clearing our Conſciences, and for diſcharging our ſelves in the Truſt put upon us, without the leaſt Thought of retarding the ſo much long'd-for Peace) we condeſcend and agree that the Propoſitions as they are now reſolved upon, be in the Name of both Kingdoms preſented to the King; whoſe Heart we beſeech the Lord wholly to incline to the Counſels of Truth and Peace.

By the Command of the Commiſſioners
for the Kingdom of Scotland,

John Cheiſley.

Another Paper, wherein the Commiſſioners for the Kingdom of Scotland deſire their Armies in England and Ireland to be ſupplied, the Accounts to be perfected, and all Armies disbanded, &c.

HAving ſo often repreſented by Papers, and now by word to the Honourable Houſes, the extreme Neceſſities of our Armies in England and Ireland, we ſhall not trouble them with unneceſſary Repetition, but only mention thoſe Deſires which require their very ſpeedy Conſideration.

1. We deſire, That for eaſing the Countrey of their great Preſſures, and preventing many dangerous Inconveniences, the quarters of the Scotiſh Army in the North of this Kingdom may be enlarged, and a conſiderable Supply of Money diſpatched unto them.

2. That Money, Proviſions, and Ammunition may be ſent to the Scotiſh Army in Ireland, and the ſame Care taken in providing for them, as for other Forces employed in that Kingdom.

3. That the 5000 Arms long ſince promiſed, and in an Ordinance of both Houſes of the 26th of Auguſt, 1645. referred to the care of the Committee at Haberdaſhers-Hall, may be ſpeedily provided; and that the Honourable Houſes will be pleaſed to grant Power to that Committee, to contract and make Payment, as well as to treat for furniſhing of theſe Arms; by reaſon of which defect in the Ordinance, the ſending of theſe Arms hath been hitherto retarded.

4. That to prevent the further Invaſion of the Kingdom of Scotland by the Iriſh Rebels, Ships may be preſently ſent to attend the Coaſts betwixt Scotland and Ireland; and the Commanders of theſe Ships authoriſed with ſuch Inſtructions as are agreeable to the Treaties between the Kingdoms.

5. That the Honourable Houſes will be pleaſed to ſend Commiſſioners to join with the Committee of Eſtates, reſiding with the Scotiſh Army, who may be Witneſſes, as of their other Proceedings, ſo of their earneſt Deſires and real Endeavours with the King, for giving ſpeedy and full Satisfaction to both Kingdoms. And it is alſo our earneſt Requeſt, That theſe Commiſſioners may have Power to treat and agree with the Committee of Eſtates, concerning the ſtating of the Accounts, and ſetling any differences that may ariſe thereupon. And further to treat and agree upon Overtures, eſtimated Mediums, or Expedients for the ſpeedy ſetling thereof (which we are confident may be done in a very few days), and either finally to conclude them, or repreſent them to both Houſes; whereby with all poſſible expedition, upon the ſetling of the Propoſitions and Accounts, ſuch courſe may be taken, as all Armies may be disbanded, the Kingdoms eaſed of their heavy Preſſures and inſupportable Burthens, that ſo all things being ſetled in a Brotherly way, we and our Poſterity may after ſo unhappy and troubleſome a War, enjoy a quiet and bleſſed Peace.

25. June, 1646. By Command of the Commiſſioners
for the Kingdom of Scotland,
John Cheiſly.

His Majeſty's Letter to the Marqueſs of Ormond, not to proceed further in Treaty with the Rebels, June 11. 1646.

Charles R.

RIght Truſty, &c. Having long with much Grief looked upon the ſad Condition our Kingdom of Ireland hath been in theſe divers Years through the wicked and deſperate Rebellion there, and the bloody Effects have enſued thereupon; for the ſetling whereof we would have wholly applied our ſelves, if the Differences betwixt us and our Subjects here had not diverted and withdrawn us: And not having been able by Force (for that reſpect) to reduce them, we were neceſſitated, for the preſent Safety of our Proteſtant Subjects there, to give you Power and Authority to treat with them upon ſuch pious, honourable, and ſafe Grounds, as the good of that our Kingdom did then require. But for many Reaſons, too long for a Letter, we think fit to require you to proceed no further in Treaty with the Rebels, nor to engage us upon any Conditions with them after ſight hereof. And having formerly found ſuch real Proofs of your ready Obedience to our Commands, we doubt not of your Care in this, wherein our Service and the Good of our Proteſtant Subjects in Ireland is ſo much concerned. From Newcaſtle, the 11*th of* June, 1646.

To his Excellency the Earl of Leven; The Petition of all the Officers and Soldiers under your Excellency's Command.

The Scots Army's Petition to their General, for a Declaration of their Integrity.

Sheweth,

THat whereas the whole Officers and Soldiers of this Army under your Excellency's Command, out of their Zeal to the Reformation of Religion, their tender Care to preſerve and confirm the mutual Amity and Confidence of both Kingdoms, and their earneſt deſires to vindicate their Honour from Reproaches and Aſperſions lying upon them, have thought it neceſſary to emit a Declaration of their Conſtancy and Integrity in the purſuance of the ends of the Covenant; and likewiſe to ſupplicate his Majeſty, That he would be pleaſed to comply with the juſt deſires of his Parliaments, and take ſome ſpeedy courſe to put an end to our laſting Miſeries, by ſetling of Truth and Peace.

May it therefore pleaſe your Excellency to repreſent our Deſires in this behalf to the Honourable Committee; and that we humbly conceive, the Uprightneſs of our Intentions herein (having nothing before our eyes, but the Good of Religion, his Majeſty's Happineſs, and the Peace of theſe Kingdoms) will procure a favourable Acceptance of our Endeavours.

A Declaration of the Lord General, the General Officers and Soldiers of the Scotiſh Army at Newcaſtle, June 29. 1646.

THE many Calamities and heavy Preſſures, the ſad Affliction lying upon theſe Kingdoms this time paſt, and the great Effuſion of Chriſtian Blood, occaſioned by the continuance of this unnatural War, having ſo deeply wounded us; and being earneſtly deſirous to give ſome evident Teſtimony of our Piety to God, Loyalty to our Sovereign, and Love to theſe Kingdoms; that the Conſtancy of our Affection to this Cauſe, our Zeal to the Reformation of Religion, and his Majeſty's Perſon and Authority in defence thereof, and our firm Reſolutions to purſue the Ends expreſs'd in our Solemn League and Covenant, may appear to the World; we have thought it neceſſary in this Juncture of time, when all means are eſſayed by the Enemies of Truth and Peace to diſparage our proceedings, by rendring ſuſpected our beſt Actions and Endeavours, to the begetting of Miſunderſtanding, and weakning the Union between the Two Kingdoms, to declare and make known, That as we have entred into a Solemn League and Covenant, with our hands lifted up to the moſt High God, with real Intentions to promote the Ends thereof, ſo we do reſolve, God willing, conſtantly to adhere to the whole Heads and Articles of the ſame, and for no earthly Tentation, for no Fear or Hope, to fall away and violate our Sacred Oath.

We do likewiſe profeſs, That nothing hath been with greater Care and Faithfulneſs endeavoured by us, than to preſerve the happy Union and Brotherly Correſpondence between the Kingdoms, as a principal Mean of Happineſs to both; and ſhall continue in the ſame Care to avoid every thing that may tend to the Infringement thereof, with a ſpecial regard and tenderneſs to the Intereſts of both Kingdoms: For the ſtrengthning of which Union, and removing every thing that might obſtruct the ſame, As hitherto we have had no Compliance, nor kept Correſpondence with known Enemies and Malignants, So will we never hereafter give Countenance or Encouragement to any perſon diſaffected to the Parliaments of either Kingdom.

And that the Integrity of our Intentions, and the Uprightneſs of our Deſires may be the more manifeſt, we do declare, That we abhor all publick and private ways, contrary to the Covenant, and deſtructive to the Happineſs of both Kingdoms: We diſclaim all dealing with thoſe that are Inſtruments of theſe unhappy Troubles and Impediments of Peace; and with all ſuch perſons who will not uſe all Means and Endeavours, and contribute their beſt Counſels and Advice for haſting an End to our laſting Miſeries, and procuring a ſure and well-grounded Peace; and in particular, we do abominate and deteſt that execrable Rebellion of James Grahame, utterly abjuring all manner of Conjunction with him and his Confederates, and with all other known Enemies, or delared Traytors to either Kingdom, notwithſtanding of any Inſinuations to the contrary, expreſs'd in ſome Letters, as is ſaid, by his Majeſty to the Earl of Ormond in Ireland: For we have none but ſingle Intentions, and unfeigned Deſires of Peace, renouncing all Communion with whatſoever Deſigns and Practices contrived in the dark, to the prejudice of Religion, and Tranquility of theſe Kingdoms, the only Principles by which we move.

And as we came into this Kingdom at the earneſt deſires of our Brethren, to aſſiſt them in the time of their great Extremity, in the purſuance of the National Covenant, not for any mercenary Ends, nor to enrich our ſelves, as is falſly and calumniouſly charged upon us by thoſe that wiſh not well unto us nor our Cauſe; ſo ſhall we be moſt willing to depart and return home in Peace, with the ſame Chearfulneſs and Affection that we had when we came in: Nor ſhall the matter of Money, or want of juſt Recompence for the Service performed, and Hardſhip ſuſtained, be to us an Argument of our ſtay: But leaving the Conſideration of theſe things to the Wiſdom and Diſcretion of both Parliaments, we ſhall ſo far deny our ſelves, as not to ſuffer any private Reſpects of our own to retard the Advancement of this Cauſe, or prejudge the publick Work of both Kingdoms.

We cannot conceal, but muſt acknowledge how ſenſible we are, and have always been, of the many Complaints preſented to the Parliament of England againſt this Army, and the heavy Calumnies and Aſperſions lying upon us for having committed Inſolencies, and oppreſſed the People by taking Free Quarter; offering our ſelves moſt willing and ready, that whoſoever amongſt us have by their Miſdemeanors, Miſcarriages, or inordinate way of walking, ſcandalized the Cauſe for which we have taken our Lives in our hand, or endeavoured to beget a Miſunderſtanding, or foment Jealouſies between the Kingdoms, we ſhall ſtrive to diſcover all ſuch, and labour to bring them to publick Trial and condign Puniſhment: Not doubting, but as we are zealous to vindicate our Honour and Reputation from all Reproaches, ſo the Parliament will likewiſe be pleaſed to have ſuch favourable Conſtruction of our Proceedings, as not willingly to harbour any Thoughts which may leſſen their Reſpects to us, and which are not ſuitable to the conſtant Tenor of our Carriage and Profeſſion. And we ſhall likewiſe deſire, That the manifold Neceſſities and preſſing Wants to which we were many times reduced, may not be forgotten; and that the ways and means appointed for our Supply, neither anſwered the Expectation of the Honourable Houſes of Parliament, nor ſatisfied our Neceſſities; ſo that for want of Moneys we could not always diſcharge our Quarters: Yet do we moſt freely declare our willingneſs to allow of whatſoever hath been taken up by us; and for that effect we deſire the Accounts of the Army to be adjuſted with the ſeveral and reſpective Counties, that whatever can be juſtly charged upon us, may be diſcounted off any Sums that ſhall be reſting us in Arrear. And if we knew any thing elſe that could ſerve to remove all Jealouſies and Miſunderſtandings, and beget a more full Confidence of our Uprightneſs, we ſhould with the ſame readineſs apply our ſelves to all the ways that might conduce thereunto.

But becauſe his Majeſty's ſudden and unexpected coming into this Army doth miniſter new occaſion to us to give ſome demonſtration of our Conſtancy; though we hope his Majeſty came with real Intentions to ſatisfy the juſt deſires of his Parliaments, and compoſe all thoſe differences; yet leſt it ſhould bring in queſtion the Clearneſs and Integrity of our ways, whereof our Conſciences do bear us witneſs, and all our Actions ſhall be publick and real Teſtimonies; we do proteſt, that his preſence with us hath not begotten any Alteration in our minds in the leaſt meaſure to eſtrange us from the ways of our Covenant, or alienate our Reſolutions from going on zealouſly, conſtantly, and unanimouſly, to ſet forward the Ends therein expreſs'd, endeavouring (ſo far as lieth in our power) to improve that Providence of his coming to us, to the publick Good and Happineſs of both Kingdoms. And as it is our earneſt deſire that his Majeſty would no more ſuffer himſelf to be involved in the Counſels whereof he has had ſo ſad experience, to the endangering of his Perſon, Poſterity, and Kingdoms; ſo do we exceedingly wiſh, that he would comply with the Counſels of his Parliaments, to the Satisfaction of his good People. And we ſhall be careful that nothing proceed from us, which may give occaſion to his Majeſty to entertain any ſecret Confidence, That this Army will give aſſiſtance for advancing other ends than ſuch as are agreeable to our Covenant, conducing to the Good of Religion, the Happineſs of the King and his Poſterity, and Safety of the Kingdoms.

The Petition of the Earl of Leven, Lord General, the General Officers, Colonels, and Captains, &c. of the Scotiſh Army, preſented to his Majeſty at Newcaſtle.

WE your Majeſty's Loyal Subjects and Faithful Servants, the Lord General, the General Officers, the Colonels and Captains in the Scotiſh Army, now in the Kingdom of England, from the deep ſenſe of the bleeding Condition of theſe Kingdoms, ſo heavy preſt with ſad Afflictions, through the unhappy Differences between your Majeſty and your Subjects, from the true Affection and Zeal to the Reformation of Religion, and your Majeſty's Perſon and Authority in defence thereof; and in the purſuance of that ſacred Oath which we have taken, with our hands lifted up to the moſt High God, Do make our humble Addreſs, and tender this earneſt Petition to your Majeſty in our name, and in the name of all the Inferior Commanders and Soldiers under our Charge, That your Majeſty in your Wiſdom and Goodneſs may be pleaſed to take a ſpeedy courſe for ſetling of Religion and Church-Government in this Kingdom, according to the Word of God, and Example of the beſt Reformed Churches, and bringing the Churches of the Three Kingdoms to the neareſt Conjunction and Uniformity; and for eſtabliſhing the Privileges and Liberties of your Kingdoms, according to the deſires of your good People. We may not conceal our unfeigned Grief, for that your Majeſty hath not yet been pleaſed to authorize and ſign the Covenant, which we are confident would bring Honour to God, Happineſs to your ſelf and Poſterity, and indear your Majeſty (above meaſure) to all your faithful and Loyal Subjects: In the juſt defence whereof, as many of them have already loſt their lives, ſo are we ready to ſacrifice ours.

We muſt alſo pray your Majeſty to compaſſionate the diſtreſſed Condition of your Kingdoms, groaning under the heavy Preſſures of manifold Calamities, occaſioned by the Continuance of this unnatural War; and to comply with the Counſels of your Parliaments; that all Differences being happily compoſed, and the Armies in both Kingdoms disbanded, we may return home in Peace, or be diſpoſed of otherwiſe by your Majeſty, with the Advice of your Parliaments, which may be moſt for your Majeſty's Honour and Service, and the Proſperity of theſe Kingdoms.

Signed by his Excellency the Earl of Leven, the General Officers, and Three Commiſſioners from every Regiment of the Army.

By his Majeſty's Command.

I Am in his Name to return this Anſwer to the Petition preſented to him by the Lord General, the General Officers, the Colonels, and other Officers and Soldiers of the Scotiſh Army, That his Majeſty came into the Scotiſh Army with full intent of ſetling an happy Peace in theſe his Kingdoms, and to ſatisfy the juſt deſires of his good Subjects; and likewiſe to comply with his Parliaments in all things which ſhall be for the Good of Religion, and the Happineſs of his Subjects, which he will always prefer to all Worldly Intereſts: And whenſoever it ſhall pleaſe God ſo to bleſs his Majeſty's Endeavours, as to ſettle an happy Peace in theſe his Dominions, his Majeſty will be very ſolicitous to find out ſome means of honourable Employment for ſo many Gallant Men as are employed in this Army.

July 10.

Several Letters arrived from the General Aſſembly of the Kirk of Scotland to the Parliament, to the City, and to the Aſſembly of Divines, as follow.

A Letter from the General Aſſembly of the Kirk of Scotland to both Houſes of Parliament, 18 June, 1646.

Right Honourable,

THE Report of the great things which the Lord has done for your Honours, has gone forth into many Lands, and it becometh us leaſt of any either to ſmother or extenuate the ſame: We deſire to be enlarged in the Admiration of the Power and Mercy of God the Author, and to diminiſh nothing of that Praiſe that is due unto you as Inſtruments. When the Lord ſet your Honours upon the Bench of Judgment, both the Kirk and Commonwealth of England were afflicted with inteſtine and boſom Evils; the Cure whereof could not but be very difficult, becauſe they were not only many, but for the moſt part univerſal and deeply rooted, ſhelter'd under the ſhadow of Cuſtom and Law, and ſupported with all the Wiſdom and Strength of the Malignant and Prelatical Party; who rather chuſed to involve the Land in an unnatural and bloody War, than to fail of their ambitious and treacherous Deſigns againſt Religion, the Privileges of Parliament, and the Laws and Liberties of the Kingdom. Neither hath that miſerable Crew been wanting unto their own Ends, but for many years together hath deſperately purſued their Reſolutions in Arms; and was likely to have prevailed, if the Lord had not put himſelf in the breach, and furniſhed you with much Patience, Wiſdom, Courage, and Conſtancy, in the midſt of many Difficulties and Diſtreſſes, and at laſt with ſo glorious and triumphing a Succeſs, that the Enemy hath fallen every where before you, and there is none left to appear againſt you. Theſe things, as they be the matter of our Refreſhment, and of your Glory, ſo do they lay a ſtrong Obligation upon your Honours to walk humbly with your God, and to improve the Power he has put into your hands, for the Advancement of the Kingdom of his Son, and bringing forth the Head-Stone of his Houſe. The ſlow progreſs of the Work of God has always been the matter of our Sorrow; which is now increaſed, by the multiplication of the Spirits of Error and Deluſion, that drown many Souls in Perdition, and ſo ſtrengthen themſelves, that they ſhall afterward be laboured againſt with more Pains than Succeſs, if a ſpeedy and effectual Remedy be not provided. And therefore, as the Servants of the Living God, who not only ſend up our Supplications daily for you, but have hazarded our ſelves in your defence, we do earneſtly beſeech your Honours in the Bowels of Jeſus Chriſt, to give unto him the Glory that is due unto his Name, by a timous eſtabliſhing all his Ordinances in the full Integrity and Power thereof, according to the League and Covenant. As long as the Aſſembly of Divines was in debate, and an Enemy in the Fields, we conceive that theſe might be probable grounds of delay, which being now removed out of the way, we do promiſe our ſelves through your Wiſdom, Faithfulneſs, and Zeal, the perfecting of that which was the main ground of our Engagement, and a chief matter of Conſolation unto us in all our ſad and heavy Sufferings from the hand of a moſt cruel Enemy. We know that there is a Generation of men who retard the work of Uniformity, and foment Jealouſies betwixt the Nations, ſtudying if it were poſſible, to break our bonds aſunder: But we truſt that he that ſitteth in the Heavens will laugh, and that the Lord will have them in deriſion; that he ſhall ſpeak to them in his Wrath, and vex them in his ſore Diſpleaſure; and notwithſtanding of all that they can do, ſet his King upon his holy Hill of Zion, and make theſe Nations happy in the ſweet Fruits of Unity in Truth and Peace. The Searcher of hearts knows we deſire to hold faſt the band of our Covenant as ſacred and inviolable, being perſwaded that the breach of ſo ſolemn a Tye could not but haſten down upon our heads a Curſe and Vengeance from the Righteous Judge of the World, and involve theſe Kingdoms in further Calamities than they have yet ſeen. And we abhor to entertain any other Thoughts of you: Nay, we are confident that your Honours will ſeriouſly endeavour the Proſecution of all theſe Ends deſigned in the Covenant, and the bringing theſe Nations unto the neareſt Conjunction both in Judgment and Affection, eſpecially in thoſe things that concern Religion; which without all controverſy is the readieſt and ſureſt way of attaining and ſecuring the Peace and Proſperity of both Kingdoms.

A Letter from the General Aſſembly of the Kirk of Scotland, to the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council of the City of London, 18. June 1646.

Right Honourable,

YOur late and ſeaſonable Teſtimony given to the Truth of the Goſpel, and your Affection to the Peace of the Kingdoms, manifeſted in your humble Remonſtrance and Petition to the Honourable Houſes of Parliament, hath ſo revived the remembrance of your former Faith and Zeal, and proclaimed you the worthy Seed of ſo Noble Anceſtors in that famous City, as we cannot but acknowledge with all Thankfulneſs the Grace of God beſtowed on you, and ſtir you up to take notice, how ſince you were precious in the Lord's ſight, you have been ever Honourable. The Lord hath ever loved you, given men for you, and people for your life: What an honour was it in the days of old, when the Fire of the Lord was in Zion, and his Furnace in your Jeruſalem (even in Queen Mary's days) that there were found in you men that loved not their lives unto the death! What a glory in after times, when Satan had his Throne, and Antichriſt his Seat in the midſt of you, that there were ſtill found not a few that kept their Garments clean! But the greateſt Praiſe of the good Hand of God upon you hath been in this, That amidſt the many Miſts of Error and Hereſy, which have riſen from the bottomleſs Pit, to beſpot the Face and darken the Glory of the Church, while the Bride is a making ready for the Lamb, you have held the Truth, and moſt piouſly endeavoured the ſetling of Chriſt upon his Throne. We need not remember how zealous you have been in the Cauſe of God, nor how you have laid out your ſelves and Eſtates in the maintenance thereof, nor how many acknowledgments of the ſame you have had from the Honourable Houſes, nor how precious a remembrance will be had of you in After-Ages, for your ſelling of all to buy the Pearl of Price: We only at this time do admire, and in the inward of our hearts do bleſs the Lord for your right and deep apprehenſions of the great and important matters of Chriſt in his Royal Crown, and of the Kingdoms in their Union, while the Lord maketh offer to bring our Ship (ſo much afflicted and toſſed with Tempeſt) to the ſafe Harbour of Truth and Peace. Right memorable is your Zeal againſt Sects and Sectaries; your Care of Reformation according to the Word of God, and the Example of the beſt Reformed Churches; your earneſt endeavouring and Noble Adventures for preſerving of the Rights and Privileges of Parliament, and Liberties of the Kingdom, together with his Majeſty's juſt Power and Greatneſs; and your high Profeſſion, that it is not in the power of any Human Authority to diſcharge or abſolve you from adhering unto that our ſo ſolemnly ſworn League and Covenant, or to enforce upon you any Senſe contrary to the Letter of the ſame: Beſides your other good Services done to the Lord and to us, in ſtrengthning the hands of the Reverend Aſſembly of Divines, and of our Commiſſioners, in their aſſerting of the Government of Chriſt (which the more it be tried, will be ever found the more precious Truth) and vindicating of the ſame from the uſurpation of man, and contempt of the wicked. Theſe all, as they are ſo many Teſtimonies of your Piety, Loyalty, and undaunted Reſolution to ſtand for Chriſt; ſo are they, and ſhall ever be, ſo many Obligations upon us your Brethren, to eſteem highly of you in the Lord, and to bear you on our Breaſts before him Night and Day, and to contribute our beſt Endeavours, and to improve all Opportunities for your Encouragement. And now we beſeech you in the Lord, Honourable and Well-beloved, go on in this your Strength, and in the Power of his Might, who hath honoured you to be faithful. Stand faſt in the Liberty wherewith Chriſt hath made you free; and in purſuance of this Truth we are confident you will never ceaſe to ſtudy the Peace and nearer Conjunction of the Kingdoms; knowing that a Threefold Cord is not eaſily broken. Now the Lord Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, and God even our Father, which hath loved and honoured you, and given you everlaſting Conſolation and good Hope through Grace, comfort your Hearts, and ſtabliſh you in every good word and work.

A Letter from the General Aſſembly of the Kirk of Scotland, to the Aſſembly of Divines at Weſtminſter, June 27. 1646.

Much Honoured, and Right Reverend,

AMongſt other Fruits of this our precious Liberty, after ſuch Diſſipation by Sword and Peſtilence to meet again, we account it not the leaſt, to have the opportunity of making a publick Declaration of our earneſt Affection to all our dear Brethren of that Nation, and eſpecially to your ſelves of the Reverend Aſſembly at Weſtminſter. When we were lately in a very low Condition, we may ſay that our own Sufferings and Fears, altho imbitter'd with the Senſe of the Lord's diſpleaſure againſt our Lukewarmneſs and Unfaithfulneſs, did not ſo take up our heart, but that room was left to congratulate with the Lord's People there in all their Succeſſes, and to condole with them in all their Dangers: And if at any time any here hath ſeemed to be more jealous than Godly Jealouſy would allow, we know not how it can be imputed to any thing elſe, but to the vehemency of ardent Affection, and impatient deſire to have our Brethren there and Us joined nearer to Chriſt, and to one another, in all his Ordinances, and eſpecially in Presbyterial Government, ſo well warranted by the Word, and approved by experience of our own and other Reformed Churches; wherein your long and unwearied Endeavours have been bleſſed with a large Increaſe, which yet hath proved a Seed unto a further and more glorious expected Harveſt. There could not be wiſhed by mortal men a fairer Opportunity than is caſt in your Lap, being invited and charged by ſo high an Authority to give ſo free and publick a Teſtimony of thoſe Truths which formerly many of the Lord's precious ones by Tongue and Pen, by Tears and Blood, have more privately aſſerted. The ſmalleſt of Chriſt's Truths (if it be lawful to call any of them ſmall) is of greater moment than all the other Buſineſſes that ever have been debated ſince the beginning of the World to this day: But the higheſt of Honours and heavieſt of Burthens is put upon you, To declare out of the Sacred Records of Divine Truth, what is the Prerogative of the Crown, and Extent of the Scepter of Jeſus Chriſt; what Bounds are to be ſet between him ruling in his Houſe, and Powers eſtabliſhed by God on Earth; how and by whom his Houſe is to be governed, and by what ways a Reſtraint is to be put on thoſe who would pervert his Truth, and ſubvert the Faith of many. No doubt Mountains of Oppoſitions ariſe, and Gulphs of Difficulties open up themſelves in this your way; but you have found it is God that girdeth you with Strength, and maketh your way perfect and plain before you; who hath delivered, and doth deliver, and will yet deliver. We need not put you in mind, that as there lieth at this time a ſtrict Tye on all, ſo in a ſpecial manner both you and we are engaged to interpoſe our ſelves between God and theſe Kingdoms, between the Two Nations, between the King and the People, for the averting of deſerved Wrath, for continuing and increaſing a well-grounded Union, by procuring, ſo far as in us lieth, a right ſetling of Religion and Church-Government; that when we ſhall ſleep with our Fathers, the Poſterity here and abroad may be reaping the Fruits of our Labours.

We are fully aſſured of your conſtant and ſedulous promoting of this bleſſed Work, and of the Lord's aſſiſting and carrying you on therein; and are confident, that your late Experience, and preſent Senſe of the great Danger and fearful Confuſion flowing from the Riſe and Growth of Sects and Sectaries not ſuppreſſed, hath ſtirred up in your hearts moſt fervent deſires and careful endeavours for remedying of the ſame; wherein we exhort you to continue and abound, knowing that your Labours ſhall not be in vain in the Lord; To whoſe Rich Grace we commend you, and the Work in your hands.

The Propoſitions for Peace being fully agreed upon by both Houſes, and the Scots Commiſſioners, a Committee was this day appointed to examine the ſaid Propoſitions, newly Engroſſed, by the Original Copy, and then ſigned by the Clerks of both Houſes, and the Commiſſioners for Scotland, and then to deliver them to the Parliament's Commiſſioners, who were to carry them to the King. All which being accordingly diſpatch'd, the ſaid Commiſſioners the next morning did ſet forwards with the ſaid Propoſitions towards Newcaſtle; Mr. Marſhal the Miniſter being order'd by the Commons to attend them as their Chaplain.

Which Propoſitions being forthwith ordered to be Printed, we ſhall here give them you Verbatim.

Die Sabbathi, 11. July, 1646.

The Propoſitions for Peace from the Two Houſes, offered to his Majeſty at Newcaſtle.

The Propoſitions of the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, for a ſafe and well-grounded Peace: Sent to his Majeſty at Newcaſtle, by the Right Honourable the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, the Earl of Suffolk, Members of the Houſe of Peers; and Sir Walter Erle, Sir John Hipiſly, Knts, Robert Goodwyn, Luke Robinſon, Eſqs; Members of the Houſe of Commons.

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,

WE the Lords and Commons aſſembled in the Parliament of England, in the Name and on the behalf of the Kingdom of England and Ireland; and the Commiſſioners of the Parliament of Scotland, in the Name and on the behalf of the Kingdom of Scotland, Do humbly preſent unto your Majeſty the humble Deſires and Propoſitions for a ſafe and well-grounded Peace, agreed upon by the Parliaments of both Kingdoms reſpectively, unto which we do pray your Majeſty's Aſſent: And that they, and all ſuch Bills as ſhall be tendered to your Majeſty in purſuance of them, or any of them, may be eſtabliſhed and enacted for Statutes and Acts of Parliament, by your Majeſty's Royal Aſſent, in the Parliament of both Kingdoms reſpectively.

1. Whereas both Houſes of the Parliament of England have been neceſſitated to undertake a War in their juſt and lawful Defence; and afterwards both Kingdoms of England and Scotland joined in Solemn League and Covenant, were engaged to proſecute the ſame;

That by Act of Parliament in each Kingdom reſpectively, all Oaths, Declarations, and Proclamations heretofore had, or hereafter to be had againſt both or either of the Houſes of Parliament of England, the Parliaments of the Kingdom of Scotland, and the late Convention of Eſtates in Scotland, or the Committees flowing from the Parliament or Convention in Scotland, or their Ordinances and Proceedings, or againſt any for adhering unto them, or for doing or executing any Office, Place, or Charge, by any Authority derived from them; and all Judgments, Indictments, Outlawries, Attainders, and Inquiſitions in any the ſaid Cauſes; and all Grants thereupon had or made, or to be made or had, be declared null, ſuppreſſed, and forbidden: And that this be publickly intimated in all Pariſh-Churches within his Majeſty's Dominions, and all other places needful.

2. That his Majeſty, according to the laudable Example of his Royal Father of happy Memory, may be pleaſed to Swear and Sign the late Solemn League and Covenant: And that an Act of Parliament be paſſed in both Kingdoms reſpectively, for enjoining the taking thereof by all the Subjects of the Three Kingdoms; and the Ordinances concerning the manner of taking the ſame in both Kingdoms, be confirmed by Acts of Parliament reſpectively, with ſuch Penalties as by mutual Advice of both Kingdoms ſhall be agreed upon.

An. 1646.

3. That a Bill be paſſed for the utter aboliſhing and taking away of all Archbiſhops, Biſhops, their Chancellors and Commiſſaries, Deans and Sub-Deans, Deans and Chapters, Archdeacons, Canons and Prebendaries, and all Chaunters, Chancellors, Treaſurers, Sub-Treaſurers, Succentors and Sacriſts, and all Vicars Choril and Choriſters, old Vicars and new Vicars of any Cathedral or Collegiate Church, and all other Under-Officers, out of the Church of England, and Dominion of Wales, and out of the Church of Ireland; with ſuch Alterations concerning the Eſtates of Prelates, as ſhall agree with the Articles of the late Treaty, of the date at Edinburgh, 29. November, 1643. and joint Declaration of both Kingdoms.

4. That the Ordinances concerning the calling and ſitting of the Aſſembly of Divines, be confirmed by Act of Parliament.

5. That Reformation of Religion according to the Covenant, be ſetled by Act of Parliament, in ſuch manner as both Houſes have agreed, or ſhall agree upon, after Conſultation had with the Aſſembly of Divines.

6. Foraſmuch as both Kingdoms are mutually obliged by the ſame Covenant to endeavour the neareſt Conjunction and Uniformity in matters of Religion, according to the Covenant, as after Conſultation had with the Divines of both Kingdoms aſſembled, is or ſhall be jointly agreed upon by both Houſes of Parliament of England, and by the Church and Kingdom of Scotland, be confirmed by Acts of Parliament of both Kingdoms reſpectively.

7. That for the more effectual diſabling Jeſuits, Prieſts, Papiſts, and Popiſh Recuſants from diſturbing the State, and deluding the Laws; and for the better diſcovering and ſpeedy Conviction of Recuſants, an Oath be eſtabliſhed by Act of Parliament, to be adminiſtred to them, wherein they ſhall abjure and renounce the Pope's Supremacy, the Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation, Purgatory, worſhipping of the conſecrated Hoſt, Crucifixes and Images, and all other Popiſh Superſtitions and Errors: And refuſing the ſaid Oath, being tender'd in ſuch manner as ſhall be appointed by the ſaid Act, to be a ſufficient Conviction of Recuſancy.

8. An Act of Parliament for Education of the Children of Papiſts, by Proteſtants, in the Proteſtant Religion.

9. An Act for the true Levy of the Penalties againſt them; which Penalties to be levied and diſpoſed in ſuch manner as both Houſes ſhall agree on; wherein to be provided, that his Majeſty ſhall have no loſs.

10. That an Act be paſſed in Parliament, whereby the Practices of Papiſts againſt the State may be prevented, and the Laws againſt them duly executed, and a ſtricter courſe taken to prevent the ſaying or hearing of Maſs in the Court, or any other part of this Kingdom.

All things paſs'd the Great Seal by the Commiſſioners, to be declar'd to be of full force.

14. That all Grants, Commiſſions, Preſentations, Writs, Proceſſes, Proceedings, and other things paſſed under the Great Seal of England, in the Cuſtody of the Lords and others Commiſſioners appointed by both Houſes of Parliament for the Cuſtody thereof, and by Act of Parliament with the Royal Aſſent, ſhall be declared and enacted to be of like Force and Effect to all intents and purpoſes, as the ſame or like Grants, Commiſſions, Preſentations, Writs, Proceſſes, Procceedings, and other things under any Great Seal of England in any time heretofore were or have been: And that for time to come, the ſaid Great Seal, now remaining in cuſtody of the ſaid Commiſſioners, continue and be uſed for the Great Seal of England. And that all Grants, Commiſſions and Preſentations, Writs, Proceſſes, Proceedings, and other things whatſoever, paſſed under or by Authority of any other Great Seal ſince the 22*d* day of May, Anno Dom. 1642. or hereafter to be paſſed, be invalid, and of no effect to all intents and purpoſes. Except ſuch Writs, Proceſs and Commiſſions, as being paſſed under any other Great Seal than the ſaid Great Seal in the cuſtody of the Commiſſioners aforeſaid, on or after the ſaid 22*d* of May, and before the 28*th* day of November, Anno Dom. 1643. were afterwards proceeded upon, returned into, or put in uſe in any of the King's Courts at Weſtminſter; and except the Grant to Mr. Juſtice Bacon to be one of the Juſtices of the King's-Bench; and except all Acts and Proceedings by virtue of any ſuch Commiſſions of Gaol-Delivery, Aſſize, and Niſi prius, or Oyer and Terminer, paſſed under any Great Seal than the Seal aforeſaid, in the Cuſtody of the ſaid Commiſſioners, before the firſt of October, 1642.

And that all Grants of Offices, Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, made or paſſed under the Great Seal of Ireland, unto any Perſon or Perſons, Bodies Politick or Corporate, ſince the Ceſſation made in Ireland the 15*th* day of September, 1643. ſhall be null and void. And that all Honours and Titles conferr'd upon any perſon or perſons in the ſaid Kingdom of Ireland, ſince the ſaid Ceſſation, ſhall be null and void.

Whilſt the ſaid Commiſſioners with theſe Propoſitions were on their Journey, Sir Peter Killigrew, whom the Two Houſes had ſent to his Majeſty with a Letter, deſiring that he would give Order to the Marqueſs of Ormond to ſurrender up Dublin, and all other Gariſons in Ireland, to the uſe of the Parliament, returned with his Majeſty's Anſwer as followeth.

Charles R.

HIS Majeſty having conſidered the Letter of the 6*th* Inſtant, ſent to him from the Lords and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, thinks fit to return this Anſwer, That as none can be more deeply affected than his Majeſty with the paſt and preſent Calamities of his Kingdom of Ireland, nor is ſo nearly concerned in the Preſervation of his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects there; ſo he will be moſt ready to apply all future Remedies for their Deliverance: And as to the particulars of delivering forthwith of the City and Caſtle of Dublin, the Town of Drogheda, and all other Gariſons in that Kingdom which are held by his Majeſty's Authority, into the hands of ſuch as the Parliament ſhall appoint; his Majeſty being moſt willing that all thoſe places may be ſo diſpoſed, as they may be beſt ſecured from the Rebels, and ſerve moſt for the Safety of his good Subjects, doth again earneſtly preſs, the Propoſitions ſo long expected, for the Peace of That and his other Kingdoms, may be haſtned to him, expecting that they will contain the readieſt means, not only of preſerving thoſe places which are already in his power, but likewiſe

An. 1646. of reducing the reſt of that Kingdom poſſeſſed by the Rebels, to his Obedience: And as his Majeſty knows not a more ſpeedy and effectual way for attaining thoſe Ends, by removing all differences betwixt his Majeſty and the Two Houſes of Parliament; ſo nothing will be more eaſily endeavoured by his Majeſty, than that a ſolid and laſting Peace be forthwith eſtabliſhed.

Newcaſtle, the 11th of July, 1646.

July 17. Monſieur Beleiure, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the Crown of France, being lately arrived, had this day Audience in both Houſes, being received in great State: The Subſtance of what he delivered, was, ‘That he had in Command from the Queen Regent and the King of France, to interpoſe and endeavour a good Reconciliation and Compoſure of the Differences between his Majeſty of Great Britain, and the Parliament of England; but underſtanding in what forwardneſs they were, and that Propoſitions were already diſpatch'd to his Majeſty, he had no more to do at preſent with the Parliament, but to take his Leave of them, and to deſire their Paſs to go unto the King, and to the States of Scotland.

Which Buſineſs being taken into Conſideration by the Houſe of Commons, July 22. a Letter was agreed upon in Anſwer to the ſaid Ambaſſador, to this effect: ‘That they took in very good part, and received with all Thankfulneſs, the good Affections and Intentions of the French Crown to theſe Kingdoms, and his willingneſs to ſee theſe Troubles over; for ending whereof, they have done their utmoſt, and ſhall ſtill continue ſo to do: But they could not agree, That any Foreign State interpoſe in the preſent remaining Differences; nor that his Majeſty of France in particular, by his preſent Extraordinary Ambaſſador, ſhould ſo do. But for the Paſs deſired, they did agree to it, That the ſaid Ambaſſador paſs freely without any Interruption or Diſturbance, and be uſed with all Reſpect and Civility, according to his Quality.

Whereunto the Lords concurred, and the Paſs was ſigned by the Speakers of both Houſes: And underſtanding that the ſaid Ambaſſador had taken his Journey from London the Night before, towards the King, without the Anſwer or Paſs from the Houſes, the ſame was ſent Poſt after him, by Sir Peter Killigrew.

July 28. His Highneſs the Duke of York came to London from Oxford, being met by the Earl of Northumberland, and ſome other Lords, and divers Gentlemen, who conducted him to St. James's, where the Earl of Northumberland diſcharged all his Oxford Retinue and Servants that came along with him, and appointed others to attend him.

The Lady Dalkeith carries the Princeſs Henrietta into France.

The ſame day the Two Houſes had notice, That the Young Princeſs Henrietta, who was taken at the Surrender of Exeter, was privately convey'd away on the Friday before, by the Counteſs of Dalkeith, from Oatlands, divers of the Gentlewomen that attended her, being left behind, and not knowing of her Removal (ſo diſcreetly it was manag'd) till they received the following Letter without date from the ſaid Counteſs, who retreated with her Fair Charge into France to the Queen.

The Lady Dalkeith's Letter to the Women who attended on the Princeſs Henrietta.

Gentlewomen,

YOU are witneſs with what patience I have expected the pleaſure of the Parliament; I have found it impoſſible to obtain any Juſtice to her Highneſs, or Favour to my ſelf or any of you; I was no longer able to keep her, which was the Cauſe I have been forced to take this upon me: Be pleaſed to repair to his Majeſty all of you, or as many of you as think fit; I then am ſure you will enjoy the Bleſſing of ſerving her Highneſs, which believe me is heartily wiſh'd by me. It will be a great mark of your Faithfulneſs and Kindneſs to your Miſtreſs, to conceal her being gone, as long as you can; and it will make your paſt Service now conſider'd, and that to come more acceptable. And truſt me, your divulging of it will be of no Advantage to you. Thus you may do it; ſeeming to expect her the day following after the Receit of this Letter; and then cauſe to deliver this other to Mr. Marſhall, after you have read it, and tell him, which is Truth, That I have removed her Highneſs to a better Air, whither you may, if you will, follow her. All her Wearing Cloaths, Woollen or Linnen, you may diſtribute amongſt you: The little Plate ſhe hath, Mrs. Caſe will have a care of: Her other things are to be continued with Mr. Marſhall. I am ſo confident you will behave your ſelves kindly and faithfully to your Miſtreſs, that you may yet more oblige me to be what you ſhall always find me; which is to you all,

For her Highneſs the Princeſs Henrietta her Gentlewomen.

A very hearty kind Friend,
A. Dalkeith.

The Commiſſioners of Parliament arrive at Newcaſtle with the Propoſitions.

The Commiſſioners from the Parliament with the Propoſitions, arrived at Newcaſtle on Thurſday, July 23. and had notice that Night, That it was his Majeſty's pleaſure they ſhould attend him the next day in the Afternoon. Accordingly, about Two of the Clock, they, and the Earls of Argyle and Lowden, as Commiſſioners for Scotland, went in their Coaches to the Court: The King came forth into a large Chamber, which was made uſe of for the Chamber of Preſence, and there ſtood at the end of a Table until the Commiſſioners came, and each of them kiſs'd his Majeſty's Hand, as likewiſe did Mr. Marſhall the Miniſter: Then the King will'd them to follow him into another Room; where the Earl of Pembroke acquainted his Majeſty, That they had brought Propoſitions from the Parliament, and were humbly to deſire his Anſwer; and ſo deſired Mr. Goodwin to read the Propoſitions: But firſt the King demanded if they had any Power to Treat? To which they anſwering, No; his Majeſty replied, Then, ſaving the Honour of the Buſineſs, an honeſt Trumpeter might have done as much. Then Mr. Goodwin read the Propoſitions; to which his Majeſty hearkned attentively, and when he had done, ſaid, Gentlemen, I hope you do not expect a very ſpeedy Anſwer, becauſe the buſineſs is of high Concernment: The Earl of Pembroke anſwered, That they were limited not to ſtay above Ten Days after their coming to that Town, and muſt then return: His Majeſty replied, That he would diſpatch them in convenient time; and ſo for the preſent diſmiſs'd them. On the Sunday following, Mr. Marſhal preached in the Forenoon before his Majeſty, taking for his Text that of Iſaiah 32. 17. And the work of Righteouſneſs ſhall be Peace, and the effect of Righteouſneſs, quietneſs and aſſurance for ever.

The Commiſſioners ſeveral times attended his Majeſty during their ſtay there, and preſſed him to agree to the Propoſitions: And amongſt the reſt, the Lord Lowden, Chancellor of Scotland, made this following Speech.

The Lord Chancellor of Scotland his Speech to the King in Newcaſtle, July 1646.

YOur Majeſty was pleaſed on Monday laſt to call the Lords of your Council of Scotland, and Committee, to acquaint them with the Propoſitions, and told them before you would deliver your Anſwer, you would make the ſame known to them: The time aſſigned to the Commiſſioners ſtay is ſo ſhort, and the Conſequence of your Majeſty's Anſwer of ſo great Importance, either for the Preſervation or Ruin of your Crown and Kingdoms, as we could not be anſwerable to God, nor to that Truſt repoſed in us, unleſs we repreſent to your Majeſty how neceſſary it is that your Majeſty aſſent to the Propoſitions, as the Condition of Affairs now ſtand in ſo great extremity; and that the danger and loſs of your Refuſal will be remedileſs, and bring on a ſudden Ruin and Deſtruction.

I ſhall begin firſt with the laſt, which is the Danger, and ſhall next ſpeak a word of the Remedy.

The Differences betwixt your Majeſty and your Parliament (which no man knoweth better than your Majeſty's ſelf) are grown to ſuch a height, that after many bloody Battels, the Parliament having your Majeſty, all the Forts, Gariſons, and Strong-holds in their hands, having your Majeſty's Revenue, Exciſe, Aſſeſments, Sequeſtrations, and the Authority to raiſe all the Men and Money in the Kingdom; and having, after many Victories and great Succeſſes, a ſtrong Army on Foot, are now in ſuch a poſture for Strength and Power, they are in a capacity to do what they will both in Church and State. And ſome are ſo afraid, and others ſo unwilling to ſubmit themſelves to your Majeſty's Government, that they deſire not you, nor any of your Race, longer to reign over them: But the People are ſo wearied of the War, and great burthens they do groan under, are ſo loth to have Monarchical Government deſtroyed, that they dare not attempt to caſt it totally off, till once they ſend Propoſitions of Peace to your Majeſty, leſt the People (without whoſe concurrence they are not able to carry on their deſign) ſhould fall from them: But after ſo great War and Trouble, that they may have a perfect Security from Oppoſition and Arbitrary Power, they have reſolved upon the Propoſitions which are tendred to your Majeſty, as that without which the Kingdom and your People cannot be in Safety, and that there cannot be a firm Peace upon any other Terms.

Your Majeſty's Friends in the Houſes, and the Commiſſioners from Scotland, (after much wreſtling) did conſent to the ſending of thoſe Propoſitions, or to be rated the Hinderers of Peace, or otherwiſe to ſend no Propoſitions at all.

And now Sir, if your Majeſty (as God forbid) ſhall refuſe to aſſent to the Propoſitions, you will loſe all your Friends in the Houſes, loſe the City, and all the Country; and all England will join againſt you as one man: They will proceſs and depoſe you, and ſet up another Government; they will charge us to deliver your Majeſty to them, and to render their Gariſons, and remove our Armies out of England; and upon your Majeſty's Refuſal of the Propoſitions, both Kingdoms will be conſtrained for their mutual Safety, to agree and ſettle Religion and Peace without you; which (to our unſpeakable grief) will ruin your Majeſty and your Poſterity, if your Majeſty refuſe our faithful Advice (who deſire nothing on earth more than the preſervation of your Majeſty's Royal Throne.) And if your Majeſty loſe England by your Wilfulneſs, you will not be permitted to come and reign in Scotland.

Sir, we have laid our hands upon our hearts; we have asked Counſel and Direction from God, and have had our moſt ſerious thoughts upon the Remedy, but can find no other to ſave your Crown and Kingdoms, than your Majeſty's aſſenting to the Propoſitions, and dares not ſay but they are higher in ſome things, (if it were in our Power and Option to remedy) than we approved of: But when we ſee no other means for curing the diſtempers of the Kingdoms, and cloſing the Breach between your Majeſty and your Parliament, our moſt humble and ſafe Advice is, your Majeſty will be graciouſly pleaſed to aſſent to them, as the only way to eſtabliſh your Throne; becauſe your Majeſty ſhall be thereby received again in your Parliament, with the Applauſe and Acclamations of your People; by your Royal Preſence all Friends will be ſtrengthned, and all Enemies (who fear nothing ſo much as the granting the Propoſitions) will be weakned; your Majeſty will have a fit Opportunity hereafter to offer ſuch Propoſitions as you and your Parliament in Wiſdom ſhall think fit for your Crown and Kingdom; the Armies will be diſbanded, and your People finding the ſweet Fruit of a peaceable Government, you will gain their Hearts and Affections, and that will be your Majeſty's Strength and Glory, and will recover all that you have loſt in this Time of Tempeſt and of Trouble.

And if it pleaſe God to incline your Royal Heart to this Advice of your humble and faithful Servants, who next to the Honour and Service of God, eſteem nothing more precious than the Safety of your Perſon and Crown, our Actions ſhall make it appear, That we eſteem no hazard too great for your Majeſty's Safety; and that we are willing to ſacrifice our Lives and Fortunes for eſtabliſhing your Throne and juſt Right.

But his Majeſty did not think this Importunity ſufficient to prevail upon his Conſent; and return'd his Royal Anſwer touching the ſaid Propoſitions, in a Paper delivered to the ſaid Commiſſioners, Auguſt the 1ſt, in theſe words:

His Majeſty's Anſwer to the Propoſitions, Aug. 1. 1646.

Charles Rex,

THE Propoſitions tender'd to his Majeſty by the Commiſſioners from the Lords and Commons aſſembled in the Parliament of England at Weſtminſter, and the Commiſſioners of the Parliament of Scotland, (to which the Houſes of Parliament have taken twice ſo many Months for deliberation, as they have aſſigned Days for his Majeſty's Anſwer) do import ſo great Alterations in Government both in the Church and Kingdom, as it is very difficult to return a particular and poſitive Anſwer, before a full debate, wherein theſe Propoſitions, and the neceſſary Explanation, true Senſe and Reaſons thereof, be rightly weighed and underſtood; and that his Majeſty upon a full view of the whole Propoſitions, may know what is beſt, as well as what is taken away and changed. In all which he finds (upon diſcourſe with the ſaid Commiſſioners) that they are ſo bound up from any capacity either to give Reaſons for the Demands they bring, or to give ear to ſuch Deſires as his Majeſty is to propound, as it is impoſſible for him to give ſuch a preſent Judgment of, and Anſwer to theſe Propoſitions, whereby he can anſwer to God that a ſafe and well-grounded Peace will enſue (which is evident to all the World can never be, unleſs the juſt Power of the Crown, as well as the Freedom and Propriety of the Subject, with the juſt Liberty and Privileges of the Parliament, be likewiſe ſetled:) To which end his Majeſty deſires and propoſeth to come to London, or any of his Houſes thereabouts, upon the Publick Faith and Security of the Two Houſes of Parliament, and the Scotch Commiſſioners, That he ſhall be there with Freedom, Honour, and Safety; where by his Perſonal Preſence he may not only raiſe a mutual Confidence betwixt him and his People, but alſo have theſe Doubts cleared, and theſe Difficulties explained unto him, which he now conceives to be deſtructive to his juſt Regal Power, if he ſhall give a full Conſent to theſe Propoſitions, as they now ſtand.

As likewiſe, that he may make known to them ſuch his reaſonable Demands, as he is moſt aſſured will be very much conducible to that Peace which all good men deſire and pray for, by the ſetling of Religion, the juſt Privileges of Parliament, with the Freedom and Propriety of the Subject: And his Majeſty aſſures them, That as he can never condeſcend unto what is abſolutely deſtructive to that juſt Power which by the Laws of God and the Land he is born unto; ſo he will chearfully grant and give his Aſſent unto all ſuch Bills, at the deſire of his Two Houſes, or reaſonable demands for Scotland, which ſhall be really for the Good and Peace of his People, not having regard to his own particular (much leſs of any body's elſe) in reſpect of the Happineſs of theſe Kingdoms. Wherefore his Majeſty conjures them as Chriſtians, as Subjects, and as Men who deſire to leave a good Name behind them, that they will ſo receive and make uſe of this Anſwer, that all Iſſues of Blood may be ſtopped, and theſe unhappy Diſtractions peaceably ſetled.

POSTSCRIPT.

Upon Aſſurance of a happy Agreement, his Majeſty will immediately ſend for the Prince his Son, abſolutely expecting his perfect Obedience to return into this Kingdom.

The Commiſſioners come back to London.

With this Anſwer, the Commiſſioners having taken leave of his Majeſty, on Sunday, Aug. 2. began their Journey for London, and came thither on Monday, Aug. 10. and on the 12*th* reported their Proceedings, and his Majeſty's Anſwer to the Houſe of Commons, and had the Thanks of that Houſe.

Of the Papers that paſſed between his Majeſty and Henderſon.

About this time Mr. Henderſon, a Scotch Miniſter, came to Newcaſtle, and much importun'd his Majeſty to paſs the Propoſitions: But his Majeſty affirming that he could not in Conſcience conſent to ſeveral things therein, eſpecially to the Change of Church-Government from the Ancient Order of Epiſcopacy, ſeveral Papers paſs'd between his Majeſty and the ſaid Henderſon; which ſhew his Majeſty's great Abilities in thoſe Controverſies, being at a time when he could not have the Aſſiſtance of any of his Chaplains. Which Papers being extant in his Majeſty's Works, we thereunto refer the Reader. The ſaid Mr. Henderſon returning from Newcaſtle to Edinburgh, was there taken ſick, and died about the End of Auguſt, much lamented by thoſe of his Party; being indeed a Perſon of great Learning and Abilities, and more Moderation than many of them.

Henderſon dies Aug. 1646.

CHAP. XI.

Tranſactions with the Scots, touching the Removal of their Forces out of England, and the Diſpoſal of his Majeſty's Perſon, and other intervening Occurrences, to the bringing of his Majeſty to Holmby-Houſe.

THE Commiſſioners for the Kingdom of Scotland preſented this day the following Paper to the Houſe of Peers:

Aug. 12. The Scots Paper to the Parliament touching the Return of their Army, &c.

THE ſame Principles of Brotherly Affection which did induce both Kingdoms to a Conjunction of their Councils and Forces in this Cauſe, move us at this time to apply our ſelves to the moſt real and effectual ways, which tend to a ſpeedy Concluſion and amicable Parting, and to the prevention of Miſunderſtandings between the Kingdoms in any of theſe things, which peradventure our common Enemies look upon with much joy, as occaſions of Differences. For this end we have not taken notice of the many baſe Calumnies and execrable Aſperſions caſt upon the Kingdom of Scotland in printed Pamphlets, and otherwiſe; expecting from the Juſtice and Wiſdom of the Honourable Houſes, that they will of themſelves take ſuch courſe for the vindication of our Nation and Army, as the Eſtates of Scotland have ſhewed themſelves ready to do for them in the like caſe.

Upon the Invitation of both Houſes, the Kingdom of Scotland did chearfully undertake, and hath faithfully managed their Aſſiſtance to this Kingdom, in purſuance of the Ends expreſs'd in the Covenant: And the Forces of the common Enemy being (by the bleſſing of God upon the joint Endeavours of both Kingdoms) now broken and ſubdued; a foundation being alſo laid, and ſome good progreſs made in the Reformation of Religion, which we truſt the Honourable Houſes will, according to the Covenant, ſincerely, really, and conſtantly proſecute till it be perfected: That we may manifeſt to the Conſciences of our Brethren, and to all the World, how far it is, and ever was, from the thoughts and intentions of the Kingdom of Scotland, to make uſe of their Army in this Kingdom to any other Ends beſides theſe expreſs'd in the Covenant; and how much they deſire the preſerving and perpetuating of Peace and Amity between the Kingdoms, and the eaſing of the Burdens and Preſſures of this Nation; we do in their Name declare, that they are willing forthwith to ſurrender the Gariſons poſſeſſed by them in this Kingdom (which they did keep for no other End but the Safety and Security of their Forces) and without delay to recall their Army; reaſonable Satiſfaction being given for their Pains, Hazards, Charges, and Sufferings; whereof a competent Proportion to be preſently paid to the Army before their diſbanding, and Security to be given for the Remainder, at ſuch times hereafter as ſhall be mutually agreed on.

If any Forces ſhall be kept on foot in either Kingdom, we deſire that they be put under the Command of ſuch perſons as are known to be zealous for Reformation and Uniformity in Religion, and moſt tender of the Peace of the Kingdoms, and againſt whom neither of the Kingdoms may have any juſt grounds of Jealouſy. And whereas the Kingdom of Scotland hath been invaded, and is ſtill infeſted by Forces from Ireland, it is expected that the Honourable Houſes, according to the large Treaty, will give ſuch Aſſiſtance and Supply to the Kingdom of Scotland, as may ſpeedily reduce thoſe Rebels to obedience. And to the end there may in all things be a good underſtanding between the Kingdoms, we further propoſe, That whereas Propoſitions for a ſafe and well-grounded Peace have been lately ſent to the King in the Name of both Kingdoms, and for obtaining his Majeſty's Conſent thereunto, the utmoſt Endeavours of the Kingdom of Scotland have not been wanting, as may appear by the many Addreſſes, Petitions, and Solicitations to that end, from the Army, the Lords of his Majeſty's Privy-Council, the Committees of Eſtates, and the General-Aſſembly of the Church; the Succeſs whereof hath not anſwered our Wiſhes and Hopes, his Majeſty (to our unſpeakable grief) not having yet agreed to the Propoſitions: We deſire that the Honourable Houſes may be pleaſed to take ſuch courſe, as by the joint Advice of both Kingdoms, engaged in the ſame Cauſe, labouring under the ſame Dangers, and aiming at the ſame Ends, we may conſult and reſolve what is next to be done, for the Peace and Safety of theſe Kingdoms, both in relation to his Majeſty, and each Kingdom to the other; being confident that the reſult of our joint Conſultations will be ſuch as ſhall provide for the preſent and future Security of the Kingdoms, and ſtrengthen their Union between themſelves.

By Command of the Commiſſioners for the Parliament of Scotland.

John Cheiſley.

The Lords returned the Scots Commiſſioners Thanks, and the next day communicated the ſaid Paper to the Commons at a Conference; and the day following, the Houſe of Commons taking the ſame into Conſideration, ordered, That the Sum of a Hundred thouſand Pounds ſhould be provided for the Advance of the Scots Army into Scotland; and voted, That the Houſe did very well and thankfully approve of their good Affections and Zeal to this Kingdom, and their Offer to deliver up our Gariſons, and depart the Kingdom: As alſo that their Arrears ſhould be Audited, and in convenient time paid, according to the large Treaty; and ordered a Committee to acquaint the Scotch Commiſſioners with theſe Votes.

Aug. 18.

The Scots Commiſſioners in a Letter to the Houſe of Commons, delivered in an Account of the Arrears of their Army: The Subſtance of which, together with the Eſtimate of the Houſe of Commons of Moneys paid unto them, the Exceptions of the Scots to that Eſtimate, the Parliament's Exceptions to their Account, and the Scots Reply for Satisfaction, take as follows.

The Scots Account.

The Scots do demand about Two Millions from the 18*th* of January, 164¾ to the 18*th* of September, 1646. having brought into this Kingdom 1800 Foot, 2000 Horſe, and 1000 Dragoons: And acknowledge to have received near 700000 l. in Moneys, Proviſions, Aſſeſments, Quarters, and otherwiſe.

The Parliament made an Eſtimate of 1400000 l. paid unto them: The Particulars whereof, with the Exceptions of the Scots thereunto, do here follow in order.

1. Paid by the Committee of Goldſmiths-Hall to the Scots Army from October the 6*th* 1643. to the 1*ſt* of November 1645. the Sum of ———————————— } 220629 l.

To this the Scots Reply,

That in this Account are comprized ſeveral Proviſions ſent unto them, which were never delivered; ſome part taken by the Enemy at Sea; ſome part ſpoiled and made uſeleſs; beſides, no Freight or Damage in Carriage is to be paid the Soldier.

2. Money and Lead delivered by the Committee of both Kingdoms at the Siege of York, amounting to ———————— } 9000 l.

Scots.] This is granted.

3. Levied upon the County of York, for the uſe of the Scots, during the Siege of that City, and in the ſpace of Four Months, after the Rate of 20000 l. per Month, the Sum of ———————— } 88000 l.

Scots] Deny that they ever received near that Sum; it being evident by daily Experience, that Money ſo collected, doth never anſwer the Proportion of the Aſſeſments.

4. Paid more to the Scots, as in the Parliament's Eſtimate is expreſſed, ———————————— } 10000 l.

Scots.] This by a Miſtake is twice charged; it being a part of the ſame Money formerly reckon'd as received from the Committee of Goldſmiths-Hall.

An. 1646. 5. Moneys raiſed out of Coals in one year to the value of 53000 l. And afterwards out of Coals 50000 l. And paid by the Exciſe 16385 l. 12 s. 4 d. in all amounting to } 119385 l. 12 s. 4 d.

Scots.] Theſe Moneys amounting to near 120000 l. did in truth ariſe only to 80000 l. becauſe the Coals in the 1*ſt* year did ariſe to 10 s. per Chaldron, at which Rate they are ſtill Eſtimated to the Scots, when the years following they had but 5 s. per Chaldron. So that here is to be a Deduction of near 40000 l.

6. For Moneys, Cloaths, Arms, and Proviſion, during the Siege of Newark, ———— } 99054 l. 12 s. 11 d.

Scots.] With the Moneys here mentioned, they diſcharged their Quarters, therefore not to be charged in this Account; by which there will be deducted 50000 l.

7. Paid to them by the Lord-Mayor of York, ———— 1700 l.

Scots.] This is acknowledged.

8. For Compoſitions with Delinquents ſince they entred the Town of Newcaſtle, and planted there their Gariſon ———— } 20000 l.

Scots.] There was no Compoſition taken, but only what the Officers received to ſave the Houſes of the Inhabitants from Plunder; which cannot be accounted as part of the Pay of the Army, ſince the Town was taken by Storm.

9. For Free Quarter and Billet taken by them, from Jan. 18. 1643. to Sept. 18. 1646. at the Rate of Half-Pay; and then in caſe they were and continued the Number agreed (beſides the 4 Months before charged with the Sum of 88000 l.) the Sum of— } 452000 l.

Scots.] The Total Sum for 28 Months, will not amount to more than 432000 l. Beſides, it is to be conſidered, that only the half of the Soldiers Pay is to be allowed for Quarters, and but a Third part of the Officers, which makes a great Deduction. Moreover it is known, that the firſt 7 or 8 Months after the Entry of the Scotiſh Army into this Kingdom, they received very little Proviſion, the Country being in the Enemies Power, ſo that half of their Proviſion did come Monthly from Scotland, notwithſtanding the Proviſion received from London.

10. For ſeveral great Sums aſſeſſed and levied upon perſons for the 25*th* Part, and Townſhips in this Kingdom ———— } 403000 l.

Scots.] Theſe Aſſeſments were only made in the Winter-time, and then the Quarters were deducted out of them, and but a ſmall proportion will be found above the Quarters and Billetings of the Army: So that this and the precedent Article cannot conſiſt together.

Scots.] Arms and Ammunition are not to be allowed as part of the Army's Pay: The Kingdom of England by the Fourth Article of the Treaty is obliged to repay the Kingdom of Scotland the Train of Artillery, and other Neceſſaries ready to march, which is all they are to find. Again, it is impoſſible that the Arms and Ammunition delivered ſhould come near that Sum.

So that theſe Exceptions being conſidered, the Scots have only as yet received the Sum of ———— } 700000 l.

12. The Honourable Houſe of Commons hath not added what hath been taken from the People of England in Merchandize, Houſholdſtuff, Horſes, Sheep, and other Cattel and Goods, which will exceed any Two of the former Sums.

Scots.] For Plunder, it is moſt certain that many of the Engliſh pretending themſelves to be Scots, have been active in plundering in the Country; greater Care hath been taken for ſuppreſſing Diſorders in the Scots Army in England, than hath been in the Army in Scotland: Some have been put to Death for pilfering to the value but of Two Shillings.

Moreover, as the Houſe of Commons charged the aforementioned Receits, ſo likewiſe they took Exceptions to ſeveral great Sums of Money in the Scots Account, amounting to the Sum of —— —— —— —— 667415 l. 6 s. 8 d.

Which they conceive ought not to be demanded of the Kingdom of England, for theſe Reaſons:

1. For the Sum of 87415 l. 6 s. 8. laid out for the Train of Artillery, the Houſe of Commons do conceive it is to be done at the ſame Rate as if it had been raiſed for the uſe of the Kingdom of Scotland.

2. For the Sum of 30000 l. and 330000 l. it is provided by the Fifth Article in the Treaty, That if the Scots have juſt Cauſe to demand further Satiſfaction from the Parliament of England, that then they have Satisfaction from them, when this Demand appeareth juſt.

3. For the Sums of 40000 l. and 120000 l. for the Lord Calendar's Army, altho they were invited by the Parliament, yet no Eſtabliſhment was ſetled; and moreover it is urged, that their Number did not increaſe the Army of General Leven above the Number of 21000 Men effective.

4. The 60000 l. for Intereſt is excepted againſt by the Parliament, becauſe the Moneys from them, with Free Quarter and Billet, and other Moneys from time to time, ſupplied their Pay in ſeaſon, according to the Treaty.

To theſe Particulars the Scots anſwered;

1. That the Charges of the levying and bringing together the Forces, with the Train of Artillery, was at the ſame Rate as if the Kingdom of Scotland had raiſed the Army for their own Affairs. The Charges were delivered to the Engliſh Commiſſioners, who did acquaint the Houſe of Commons with it. It cannot be expected that the Kingdom of Scotland ſhould entertain an Army for England at lower Rates than if it had been raiſed for their own Affairs: Moreover, it being in the Winter-Seaſon when the Army was levied, it was the more chargeable, ſo that every Soldier had over and above the Publick Allowance 10 s. a Man, which is not at all charged in the Account.

2. The Kingdom of Scotland did accept of 30000 l. to be paid by the Month, and would demand no more for the preſent, in regard of the great Burthens of the Kingdom of England; and ſuperſeded the reſt till the Peace of the Two Kingdoms was ſetled: It being provided by a general Clauſe in the Fifth Article in the Treaty, That the Kingdom of England ſhall make due Recompence to the Kingdom of Scotland, by way of Brotherly Aſſiſtance for what they ſhall have juſt Cauſe to demand. And the Juſtice of their Demand will appear very reaſonable, when compared to the meaneſt Rates of any Army in England, or the Scots Army in Ireland; according to which the Committee of both Houſes did offer to pay this Army, in their Paper delivered to the Convention of the States of Scotland, Aug. 19. Anno 1643.

3. The Earl of Calendar's Army was invited into this Kingdom by both Houſes, who therefore cannot in Juſtice refuſe to pay them. And whereas it is alledged that the Number of the Earl of Calendar's Army did not increaſe the Earl of Leven's above the Number of 21000 Men; it was often deſired that a Muſter of them might have been taken by the Honourable Houſes, when both Armies were in England; which not being done, they cannot but admit the Muſters taken by ſuch as are intruſted by the Kingdom of Scotland for that purpoſe, and that in the ſtricteſt way there uſed. Beſides, the Forces of the Earl of Calender were not called in as Recruits, but as a diſtinct Army, compoſed of their own Regiments, as a General and other Officers, with a Train of Artillery, to block up Newcaſtle, whilſt the Army commanded by the Earl of Leven was lying before York.

4. The Money paid by the Parliament, and the Free Quarters taken by the Scots being reckoned, the Committee reſiding with them are able to make it appear that a greater Sum is due for Intereſt, than hath been demanded.

Scots willing to accept a Sum in Groſs.

However, the Scots offered, That they would be content to accept of a Sum in Groſs for a full Diſcharge of their Arrears; whereupon the Houſe of Commons ordered a Committee to Treat with the Scots Commiſſioners, to know what Sum they demand in Groſs, and how much thereof they deſire upon their Advance, and when the other, and at what time of Payment.

An. 1646.

Which Committee the next day reported to the Houſe, That the Scots Commiſſioners deſired 500000 l. whereof 300000 l. to be paid upon the Advance of their Army, and the other 200000 l. at the end of Twelve Months: But in reſpect of the preſent Neceſſity of this Kingdom, they would be content with the leaſt proportion that might ſupply the Neceſſities, and give Satisfaction to their Army; and therefore would accept of 200000 l. at their Advance out of the Kingdom, and the other 300000 l. at the end of Twelve Months as aforeſaid.

Aug. 21. Commons vote 200000 l. for the Scots.

The Commons took into Conſideration theſe Demands of the Scots; and after a hot and tedious Debate (which laſted almoſt the whole day) they paſs'd a Vote, That the Sum of 200000 l. ſhould be advanc'd for the Scots Army, according to the deſire of the Scots Commiſſioners; viz. 100000 l. to be paid at the Advance of the Scotiſh Forces out of this Kingdom; and the other 100000 l. to be paid by 50000 l. at a time; viz. 50000 l. within Three Months after Payment of the firſt 100000 l. and the other 50000 l. to be paid at Nine Months after the ſecond Payment. And for more certainty, the Houſe declared and ordered, That the firſt 100000 l. ſhould be paid by the 18*th* of September next. And that for the remaining 300000 l. demanded, the Scots ſhall have the Publick Faith of this Kingdom for the Payment thereof, deducting out of the ſame the Accounts of the Country for their Free Quarter; and that the Commiſſioners of Scotland ſhould be deſired to appoint the Place for Payment of the firſt 10000 l.

Then the Houſe took into Conſideration how and by what means theſe Great Sums ſhould be raiſed; and referred it to the Committee of Goldſmiths-Hall to Treat with the ſeveral Companies of the City of London, and others, for the preſent Advance of 100000 l. and to propound Securities for Repayment.

Aug. 27.

Upon further Debate touching Satisfaction for the Scots, after much time ſpent therein by the Houſe of Commons, the Queſtion was put for 200000 l. more than what was formerly ordered them; but the ſame being carried in the Negative, the Queſtion was then put for 100000 l. more, and agreed unto; and the Scots Commiſſioners ordered to be made acquainted therewith.

The Houſe of Commons vote that the Scots ſhall have 400000 l. Sept. 1.

But the ſaid Commiſſioners on the 1*ſt* of September preſenting to the Houſe a Paper, earneſtly preſſing that 400000 l. might be allowed them in Groſs; whereof 200000 l. to be paid them in Newcaſtle before their Retreat into their own Kingdom, and the other 200000 l. more at convenient times: The Houſe ſpent much time in Debate thereof; and at laſt concluded to allow them the ſaid Sum of 400000 l. in Groſs; and therefore voted that the Sum of 100000 l. beſides the 300000 l. formerly voted, ſhall be advanced for the Scotiſh Army: But for the time of Payment, adhered to their former Votes; viz. That the firſt 100000 l. ſhould be paid before the Scots going; another 100000 l. at Two Payments, Three Months, and Nine Months after; then 100000 l. at Nine Months more; and this laſt 100000 l. at Twelve Months after that.

Sept. 2.

The Scots Commiſſioners gave in a Paper of Reaſons, why their Army cou'd not advance into their own Kingdom, or leave their Quarters in England, without 200000 l. were preſently paid them: And the Houſe of Commons having debated the ſame, voted they ſhould have ſo much at preſent, if it could be raiſed; and to that purpoſe ordered that a Common-Council ſhould be called in London on Monday next; and a Committee was appointed to go thither then, and deſire the Citizens to advance the ſaid Sum; which was done accordingly, and the Exciſe, Delinquents Lands, and Biſhops Lands, were propoſed as Security for the Repayment of the ſaid Money; for which end a Committee of the Common-Council was nominated to meet and treat with the ſaid Committee of the Houſe of Commons touching that matter: And on Wedneſday, Sept. 9. the Common-Council delivered their Anſwer in writing in theſe words:

Anſwer of the Common-Council, touching raiſing 200000 l. for the Scots, Sept. 9

THat they having received a Meſſage from the Honourable Houſe of Commons, concerning the ſpeedy Advance of 200000 l. they humbly conceive the beſt way for the advancing thereof, will be, That ſuch as have formerly contributed upon the Propoſitions for Horſe, Moneys and Plate, may advance the like Sum upon this Propoſition, and be ſecured for both Sums with Intereſt at 8 l. per Cent. out of the Receits of the Grand Exciſe in courſe, and the Sale of Biſhops Lands: Which Expedient if the Honourable Houſe ſhall think fit to agree to, then they will uſe their Endeavours for the ſpeedy Advance of the ſaid 200000 l. Which the Houſe of Commons accepted, and returned the Common-Council Thanks.

About the beginning of this Month of September, Commiſſioners were ſent from the Eſtates of Scotland to the King at Newcaſtle, to perſuade his Majeſty to ſign the Propoſitions lately tender'd to him [and herein before recited] and take the Covenant; viz. Duke Hamilton (who having been releaſed of his Impriſonment in St. Michael's-Mount in Cornwal, upon the Parliament's taking of that Place, had repaired to the King at Newcaſtle in July, and ſeemed to be kindly received, (his Brother the Earl of Lanerick having lately been made Secretary of State for the Kingdom of Scotland) and from thence went to Scotland) the Earl of Crawford, the Earl of Caſils, the Lord Lindſey, the Lord Balmerine, Three Barons, and Three Burgeſſes: They preſſed the King with many Arguments, to which the King returned this Anſwer in writing under his own hand.

His Majeſty's Anſwer to the Scots Commiſſioners at Newcaſtle.

My Lords,

I Shall begin, by anſwering what you have now ſaid: For I aſſure you I had not thus long delay'd my Anſwer, but to weigh fully thoſe Reaſons and Arguments which you have laid before me, whereby to uſe the uttermoſt of my Endeavours to give you all poſſible Satisfaction; for you having told me nothing but what I have heard before, the Change of Anſwer could hardly be expected. And now I do earneſtly deſire you to conſider what it is that I deſire, which is, To be heard; which if a King ſhould refuſe to any of his Subjects, he would for that be thought a Tyrant. For this, if I had but ſlight Reaſons, it were the leſs to be regarded; but they are ſuch, upon which ſuch a Peace as we all deſire, doth depend: For albeit it is poſſible, that if I ſhould grant all you deſire, a Peace might be ſlubber'd up, yet it is impoſſible that it ſhould be durable, unleſs there be a right underſtanning betwixt Me and my People; which cannot be without granting what I deſire.

Yet I deſire to be rightly underſtood; for tho many like to Æſop's Fable will call Ears Horns, yet let men ſay what they will, I am far from giving you a Negative, nay, I proteſt againſt it, my only deſire being to be heard; For I am confident that upon Debate I ſhall ſo ſatisfy them in ſome things, as likewiſe I believe they may ſatisfy me in many things, that we ſhall come to a moſt happy Agreement. This I believe is not much needful to ſatisfy your Judgments; for I am not ignorant how really your Commiſſioners at London have endeavoured a Satisfactory Anſwer to my Meſſage, as likewiſe what good Inſtructions have been ſent them out of Scotland; ſo that the Force of Power more than the Force of Reaſon, hath made you ſo inſtant with me as you have been; with which I am ſo far from finding fault, that what you have done, I take well, knowing that it proceeds out of the abundance of your Zeal to my Service: Therefore as you ſee I do not miſtake you, ſo I am careful not to be miſtaken by you; wherefore again I deſire you to take notice, that I do not give a Denial, my deſire being only to be heard; as likewiſe that you will take things as they are, ſince neither you nor I can have them as we would; wherefore let us make the beſt of every thing, and now as you have fully performed your Duty to me, ſo I cannot doubt but you will continue to preſs thoſe at London to hear Reaſon: And certainly you can expect little fair dealing from thoſe who ſhall reject ſo much Reaſon, and of that ſort, which you have, and I hope will offer them. Not to ſtay too long upon ſo unpleaſing a Subject, I aſſure you, that nothing but the Preſervation of That which is dearer to me than my Life, could have hinder'd me from giving you full Satisfaction: For upon my word, all the Dangers and Inconveniences which you have laid before me, do not ſo much trouble me, as that I ſhould not give full Satisfaction to the Deſires of my Native Country, eſpecially being ſo earneſtly preſs'd upon me: And yet here again I muſt tell you (for in this caſe Repetitions are not impertinent) that I do not give you a Denial, nay I proteſt againſt it; and remember, it is your King that deſires to be heard.

My Lords,

'TIS a very great Grief to me, that what I ſpoke to you yeſterday, and offer'd to you in writing, concerning Religion, hath given ſo little Satisfaction: Yet leſt the Reaſons I then told you, ſhould not be ſo fully underſtood, I think it neceſſary at this time to ſet them down to you in this Paper: I then told you, that whatſoever was my particular Opinion, I did no ways intend to perſuade you to do any thing againſt your Covenant; whereſore I deſire you to conſider, whether it be not a great ſtep to your Reformation (which I take to be the chief End of your Covenant) that Presbyterial Government be legally ſetled. It is true, that I deſire that my own Conſcience, and thoſe that are of the ſame Opinion with me, might be preſerved, which I confeſs doth not as yet totally take away Epiſcopal Government; but then conſider withal, that this will take away all the Superſtitious Sects and Hereſies of the Papiſts and Independents; to which you are no leſs obliged by your Covenant, than the taking away of Epiſcopacy: And this that I demand is moſt likely to be but Temporary; for if it be ſo clear as you believe, that Epiſcopacy is unlawful, I doubt not but God will ſo enlighten mine Eyes, that I ſhall ſoon perceive it; and then I promiſe you to concur with you fully in matters of Religion: But I am ſure you cannot imagine that there is any hope of converting or ſilencing the Independent Party, which undoubtedly will get a Toleration in Religion from the Parliament of England, unleſs you join with me, and in that way I have ſet down for the Re-eſtabliſhing my Crown, or at leaſt that you do not preſs me to do this (which is yet againſt my Conſcience) until I may do it without ſinning: Which as I am confident none of you will perſuade me to do, ſo I hope you have ſo much Charity, not to put things to ſuch a deſperate Iſſue, as to hazard the loſs of us all, becauſe for the preſent you cannot have full Satisfaction from me in point of Religion: Not conſidering, that beſides the reſt of the Miſchiefs which may happen, it will infallibly ſet up the innumerable Sects of the Independents; nothing being more againſt your Covenant, than permitting of thoſe Schiſms to increaſe. As for the Meſſage which I think fit at this time to ſend, I have choſen rather to mention the Point of Religion in a general than particular way, leſt (not knowing all theſe Reaſons which I have ſet down to you, which are moſt unfit for a Meſſage) it may give leſs Satisfaction than I deſire: Nevertheleſs I do conjure you, by that Love and Loyalty you have always profeſſed unto me, That you make uſe of what I offered yeſterday in writing, with theſe Reaſons which I have now ſet down to you, and thoſe further Hopes I have now given you, for the beſt advantages of my Service; with this particular Explanation, That whereas I mentioned that the Church-Government ſhould be left to my Conſcience, and thoſe of my Opinion, I ſhall be content to reſtrict it to ſome few Dioceſſes, as Oxford, Wincheſter, Briſtol, Bath and Wells, and Exeter; leaving all the reſt of England fully to the Presbyterian Government, with the ſtricteſt Clauſes you ſhall think upon, againſt Papiſts and Independents.

POSTSCRIPT.

I require you to give a particular and full Account hereof to the General Aſſembly in Scotland, ſhewing them that I ſhall punctually make good my laſt Letter to them, and that this is a very great ſtep to the Reformation deſired, not only by the preſent putting down all Sects and Independents, but likewiſe preſently eſtabliſhing Presbyterian Government; hoping that they, as Miniſters of God's Word, will not preſs upon me untimouſly the matter of Church-Government and Diſcipline, until I may have leiſure to be ſo perſuaded, that I may comply with what they deſire, without Breach of Conſcience, which I am confident they as Church-men cannot preſs me to do.

Some time after this, Duke Hamilton being gone back into Scotland, and having Intentions to go beyond Sea, his Majeſty wrote him the following Letter to diſſuade him: Which becauſe it alſo diſcovers ſomething of his Majeſty's Reſolutions in that Juncture, I ſhall here add the ſame.

Hamilton,

The King's Letter to Duke Hamilton, Sept. 26.

Hamilton,

I Have ſo much to write, and ſo little time for it, that this Letter will be ſuitable to the Times, without Method, or Reaſon, and yet you will find luſty Truths in it, which puts me again out of Faſhion, but the fitter for him to whom I write. Now to my buſineſs; but leſt I ſhould now forget it, I muſt firſt tell you, That thoſe at London think to get me into their hands, by telling our Countrymen, that they do not intend to make me a Priſoner: O no, by no means! but only to give me an Honourable Guard, forſooth, to attend me continually, for the Security of my Perſon: Wherefore I muſt tell you (and it is ſo far from a Secret, that I deſire every one ſhould know it, only for the way, I leave it to you to manage it for my beſt advantage) that I will not be left in England when this Army retires, and theſe Gariſons are render'd (without a viſible violent Force upon my Perſon) unleſs clearly, and according to the old way of underſtanding, I may remain a Freeman, and that no Attendant be forced upon me, upon any pretence whatſoever. So much for that.

A Diſcourſe yeſternight with Robert Murray, was the Cauſe of this Letter, having no ſuch Intention before, becauſe I eſteemed you a man no more of this part of the World, believing your Reſoultions to be like the Laws of the Medes and Perſians. But however he ſhewed me ſuch Reaſons, that I found it fit to do what I am doing (for I confeſs one man's Error is no juſt Excuſe for another's Omiſſion) which is to ſtay your Foreign Journey by perſuaſion. As for the Arguments, I refer you to Robin; only I will undertake to tell you ſome poſitive Truths; the chief whereof is, That it is not fit for you to do; then, It is leſs ſhame to recant, than to perſiſt in an Error; my laſt is, By going, you take away from me the means of ſhewing my ſelf,

Your moſt Aſſured, Real, Faithful, Conſtant Friend,

Newcaſtle, Sept. 26. 1646. Charles R.

Sept. 14.

The Earl of Eſſex departed this Life at Eſſex-Houſe in the Strand; of which the Two Houſes having notice the next day, they both adjourn'd immediately to the next day, and ordered that each Houſe ſhould accompany the Earl's Corps to the Grave, and aſſiſt at the Celebration of his Funeral Rites, towards which they order'd 5000 l. to be paid to his Executors for defraying the Charges thereof; which was celebrated with extraordinary State on the 22*d* of October. Mr. Vines preach'd the Funeral Sermon.

Sept. 18.

The Houſe of Commons took into Conſideration how his Majeſty's Perſon ſhould be diſpoſed of; and Voted,

1. That whatſoever Conſultation and Debate the Scots Commiſſioners ſhould have concerning his Majeſty's Perſon, the ſame ſhould not any ways impede the March of the Scots Armies out of this Kingdom, nor violate or trench upon the Treaties between both Nations.

2. That his Majeſty ſhall be diſpoſed of as both Houſes of the Parliament of England ſhall think fit.

And afterwards ordered, That theſe Votes ſhould be communicated to the Scots Commiſſioners; who pretending to a Joint Right of diſpoſing of his Majeſty's Perſon, a Committee of both Houſes was appointed to Treat with them about it, who had ſundry Conferences thereupon: At which the Earl of Lowden, Chancellor of Scotland, made the following Speeches.

The Lord Chancellor of Scotland's firſt Speech, at a Conference in the Painted Chamber with a Committee of both Houſes, Octob. 1. 1646.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

THE end of this Conference is to adviſe what is fit to be done for the Peace and Security of the Kingdom, in relation to the King, and how to diſpoſe of his Majeſty's Perſon; which is a matter very tickliſh, and of moſt high concernment; and they who would build very high, muſt dig very low for a firm Foundation: And therefore I ſhall make bold to deſire, That whatever we reſolve upon concerning the King's Majeſty, it may be done by joint Advice and Conſent of both Kingdoms; and that the Unity between the Kingdoms may be inviolably preſerved, as that wherein (next to God's Protection) the chief Strength of both lies, which would be laid as a ground of our future debates. And becauſe the purpoſe we are to ſpeak of is very grave and ſerious, I ſhall ſpeak of it with that Sincerity, as I wiſh my words were written with the Beams of the Sun, and regiſtred to Poſterity, that that all the World might ſee the Candor and Integrity of our Proceedings towards the King and our Brethren of England. And (as I had occaſion once to expreſs in this place) ſo do I now ſay, That no man hath Conſcience nor Honour, who will not remember our ſolemn League and Covenant, as the ſtrongeſt Bond under Heaven between God and Man, between Man and Man, and between Nation and Nation; in which our Unity is founded upon Verity, in a threefold relation, to God, to the King, and amongſt our ſelves. The firſt is the greateſt, and aſcends as high as Heaven; for Religion, which hath its Name à Religando, unites us to God himſelf; and ſo long as he is in league with us, we need not fear who be againſt us. Let us therefore hold faſt our Unity in Religion, and beware of Toleration of all Religion, which is the ready way to have none; for there is nothing more Divine in God than Unity, and nothing more Diabolical in the Devil than Diviſion; who therefore is known to the Vulgar by his Cloven Foot to be the Spirit of Diviſion.

The next ground and relation of our Unity, is with the King, to whom we are bound (in the ſtricteſt bonds of Loyal Subjection) by our Allegiance and Covenant, as to one Head and Monarch; and therefore the faithful Endeavours of both Kingdoms ſhould (without wearying) be conſtantly contributed, that we may be united to him by a happy and juſt Peace: For if one of the Kingdoms ſhall caſt off the King, and the other have a King; if the one ſhall make Peace with the King, and the other not make Peace, but be ſtill at variance with him, it is to be feared that no human Wit nor Policy will be able to keep the Two Kingdoms long without a Rupture: And if it pleaſe God ſo to incline the King's heart, and direct the Wiſdom of the Parliaments, as that the King and we could make a happy Agreement, no Power nor Policy can be able to divide us; for, Qui conveniunt uni tertio, conveniunt inter ſe.

The third ground and relation of our Unity, is the Conjunction of the Two Kingdoms, which hath been acknowledged to be ſo neceſſary and uſeful to both, that they have often declared, they would ſtand and fall, and (like Hippocrates Twins) live and dye together. And therefore, as we regard our Solemn Covenant with God Almighty, and tender the ſtanding and Safety of the Kingdoms, let us (with one heart and mind) join our Counſels and Actions, that whatſoever we reſolve upon for our common Peace and Security in relation to the King, and of each Kingdom to other, that it be done in Zeal to Religion, in Loyalty to the King, and with Unanimity amongſt our ſelves. And as the Pythagoreans did note the number of Two with the mark of Infamy, as being the firſt Number that durſt part from Unity; ſo, which ſoever of the Kingdoms ſhall firſt violate the Unity which is bound up in our Covenant, may apply it to themſelves: But if we ſhall adhere to that Unity which is builded upon the firm Foundation of Verity, in our relations to Religion, the King, and amongſt our ſelves, it will be a Threefold Cord, which is not eaſily broken; and our Unity, I hope, ſhall be turned into an Identity, both Kingdoms may be perfectly one.

Numerus Binarius infamis eſt, quia primus auſus eſt diſcedere ab unitate.

Having thus in the firſt place laid a ground for Unity of Counſels and Reſolutions; I ſhall in the next place humbly deſire and proteſt, That whatever may be our Propoſitions or Debates concerning the King, it be not miſconſtrued, as if one of the Kingdoms were impoſing Conditions upon the other, or that we are abſolutely wedded to any one deſire more than to another; but that (all ſeveral ways being amicably debated and rightly ponder'd), that which may ſerve moſt for the Safety, Security, and Happineſs of the King and both Kingdoms, may be gravely reſolved upon. And now I come to the Queſtion it ſelf, concerning the diſpoſing of his Majeſty's Perſon; firſt, Negatively, and then Poſitively. Negatively, the Queſtion is not of the Power and Authority of the Houſes of Parliament in diſpoſing of any Perſon, or judging of any Caſe which is of ſingle concernment to England: Nor is the Queſtion how the King's Perſon may be diſpoſed of de facto, by any one of the Kingdoms; neither is the Queſtion properly de jure & poſſe, but de eſſe, & bene eſſe: And as it is neither good Logick nor good Divinity to argue à poſſe ad eſſe; ſo ſure I am, in this caſe it is far worſe Policy for either Kingdom to diſpute what they may do in the height of their Power, when both are conſulting what is fitteſt to be done for the Peace and Security of both. And the relation of both Kingdoms to his Majeſty, and of each Kingdom to other being rightly conſidered, as he is King to both, as both are Subjects to him, as both are engaged in the ſame Cauſe, and have been in the ſame War, and are labouring under the ſame Danger, are ſeeking the ſame Remedies, and ſhould have the ſame Security; we do hold that the diſpoſing of the King's Perſon doth not properly belong to any one of the Kingdoms, but jointly to both. And after Scotland hath ſuffered the Heat of the Day, and Winters Cold, have forſaken their own Peace for love of their Brethren, have ſet their own Houſe on fire to quench theirs; after ſo much Expence of their Blood in all the Three Kingdoms, after we have gone along with you in all the Hardſhip of this War; and (without vanity be it ſpoken) have been ſo uſeful in this Cauſe; and that the King hath caſt himſelf into the hands of the Scotiſh Army, and that by the bleſſing of God upon the joint Endeavours of both Kingdoms we are come to the harbour of a Peace; we cannot expect that the Honourable Houſes will think it agreeable with Conſcience or Honour, or with the Juſtice of the Houſes, that the Perſon of the King ſhould be diſpoſed of by them as they ſhall think fit, or by any one of the Kingdoms alone; but that whatever ſhall be reſolved in this, may be done by joint Advice of both, as may ſerve moſt for the Peace, Security, and Happineſs of both Kingdoms.

The Lord Chancellor of Scotland's ſecond Speech, at a Conference in the Painted Chamber with a Committee of both Houſes, Octob. 6. 1646.

AT our laſt meeting in this Conference, your Lordſhips did aſſert the Vote of the Houſes, That the Perſon of the King ſhould be diſpoſed on as the Two Houſes ſhall think fit; and we did hold, That the King, who is the Head and Monarch of both Kingdoms, ought not to be diſpoſed of by any one of the Kingdoms, but by joint Advice of both, as might ſerve moſt for the Peace, Happineſs, and Security of his Majeſty and both Kingdoms; which we fortified with ſeveral Arguments from the Intereſts and Relations which both Kingdoms have equally to the King, and from the Covenant and Treaty between the Kingdoms, as the beſt way to preſerve our Unity. But ſince your Lordſhips do adhere to the Vote of the Houſes, as that which you cannot part from, we do humbly deſire, that your Lordſhips may be pleaſed (in time convenient, at the cloſe of this Conference) to report the difference of our Judgment to the Honourable Houſes, who upon better Reaſons both may, and (we hope) will take their Vote into further Conſideration: And ſo with reſervation of our Judgment, that the diſpoſing of his Majeſty's Perſon doth belong to both, and not to any one of the Kingdoms, eſpecially in ſuch a Juncture of Affairs, as both Kingdoms ſtand engaged in this Cauſe; I ſhall deſcend particularly how the King's Perſon ſhould be diſpoſed of, to the beſt advantage of both Kingdoms, and for attaining ſuch a happy Peace as all good men ſhould deſire. But leſt we ſhould walk in the dark upon obſcurity of ambiguous words, I ſhall deſire that the word of diſpoſing of the King's Perſon may be rightly underſtood, and the true ſenſe of it may be clearly known: For, Dolus verſatur in univerſalibus. For, To diſpoſe of the King's Perſon as both Houſes, or both Kingdoms ſhall think fit, may in ſome ſenſe be to depoſe, or worſe: But becauſe the word [Diſpoſe] may admit a more benign Interpretation, as when men commit their Eſtates and Children, or that which is deareſt to them, to be diſpoſed of, (which is but to be adviſed) by thoſe who have neareſt relation to them, and in whom they repoſe moſt Truſt; I ſhall ſpeak of the diſpoſing of his Majeſty's Royal Perſon in that ſenſe, which (I hope) is alſo the ſenſe of the Houſes. Nor do I know any other way how his Majeſty's Perſon can be diſpoſed of, but that he be put either under Reſtraint, or be at Freedom with Honour and Safety. As for the way of Reſtraint, I look upon it as it looks upon us, as a Remedy more dangerous than the Diſeaſe, and as a Mean to draw the War of Foreign Kings upon us (eſpecially the Prince being in other Kingdoms) rather than to quiet our Troubles at home. And therefore ſuppoſing that none of the Kingdoms will take any way concerning his Majeſty's Perſon, but ſuch as may conſiſt with Duty and Honour, and which may leſſen, and not increaſe our Troubles, I ſhall lay aſide the way of Reſtraint, and ſpeak of the way which may be with Freedom, Honour, and Safety; which can be no other, but that his Majeſty ſhall go into Scotland, or come to his Parliament here, or ſome of his Houſes near abouts.

An. 1646.

His going into Scotland is full of Dangers and Inconveniences to both Kingdoms: The Amalekites are not yet driven out of that Land. The bloody barbarous Iriſh, banded with a wicked Crew of Malignants, poſſeſs the Mountains and High-Lands, which are the Strong-holds, and never conquered parts of that Kingdom. They have not laid down Arms, but keep in a Body together; and they are ſo near Ireland, as the Forces of the Rebels there may in two or three hours ſpace come over and join with them; and (Scotland) not being able to keep and entertain Armies long, the King being there, may raiſe ſuch Forces in Scotland, as may make way quickly into England. And therefore his Majeſty's going into Scotland (before our Peace be ſetled) being of moſt dangerous conſequence to both Kingdoms, I ſhall humbly offer to your Lordſhips Conſideration his Majeſty's coming to London, or ſome of his Houſes hereabouts, as the moſt probable way to procure a ſpeedy and happy Agreement, which is alſo his Majeſty's own deſire in his Anſwer to the Propoſitions. And altho no Perſuaſion of ours could prevail to procure a more ſatisfactory Anſwer for the time, than what is returned to the Houſes of Parliament, yet (I aſſure your Lordſhips) that the Committee of Eſtates of the Parliament of Scotland, and the Noblemen who were at Newcaſtle, did faithfully contribute their beſt Endeavours, that his Majeſty might have given his Aſſent to the Propoſitions: And as we did then deliver our Minds with that Plainneſs and Freedom which was fit for Faithful and Loyal Subjects, with no leſs regard to this Kingdom than our own Nation; ſo are we now (with the ſame Candor and Tenderneſs of Affection) willing and ready to concur with the Honourable Houſes in every thing which may promote the great work of Reformation, and ſettle Religion according to the Covenant, with a well-grounded Peace. And for theſe Ends, we deſire that his Majeſty's Anſwer may be improved to the beſt advantage of the Publick.

For albeit the King hath not given a preſent Aſſent to the Propoſitions, yet he hath not in his Anſwer refuſed them; but doth promiſe, That he will chearfully grant and give his Aſſent unto all ſuch Bills (at the deſire of the Two Houſes) and reaſonable Demands for Scotland, which ſhall be really for the Good and Peace of his People: To which end he deſireth and propoſeth, That he may come to London (or any of his Houſes hereabouts) upon ſecurity that he ſhall be there with Honour, Freedom, and Safety, as the beſt Expedient to procure a happy Agreement between his Majeſty and his Parliament; which we deſire may be weighed in the balance of righteous Judgment, as a buſineſs of the greateſt conſequence which can fall within human Conſideration, and wherein the Glory of God is moſt concerned of any buſineſs under Heaven. For upon a bleſſed Agreement between the King and his Parliament, Religion and Righteouſneſs, Truth and Peace, which are the compend and height of all Happineſs, will be eſtabliſhed, to the eternal Fame and Glory of Great Britain, and the great Comfort of all the Proteſtant Churches: And upon our diſagreement, all the Calamities of a bloody and unnatural War will be continued, and nothing heard nor ſeen in Church nor State, but Confuſion. God hath brought both Kingdoms thorough the Surges and Waves of a boiſterous Tempeſt, into the Harbour of a Peace, and hath ſcattered moſt part of our Enemies; and now our work is how to come aſhore, and eſtabliſh a right Peace. I hope it is as far from our deſires and intentions, as it is againſt our Covenant and Profeſſions, to change fundamental Government. We have need to take heed, that we run not from one Extreme into another: Dum ſtulti vitant vitia, in contraria currunt: Therefore our ſtudy would be how to cure the Wound which our Sins and the evil Counſels of others have made between the King and his Parliament, to make up the Breach, and not make it wider.

It hath been univerſally acknowledged, That the King's removal from his Parliament is the immediate and chief Cauſe of all the War, Miſchief, and Calamities of the Kingdoms: Then his Majeſty's Preſence in joining with his Parliament muſt be the beſt, if not the only Remedy to remove our Troubles; for it is a Maxim no leſs true than common, That Contraries have contrary Conſequences.

Contrariorum contraria ſunt conſequentia.

The King deſires to come to his Parliament, not only to have his Doubts cleared, and have theſe Difficulties explained which hinder his Conſent to the Propoſitions as they now ſtand: But likewiſe that his coming may raiſe a mutual Confidence between him and his Parliament: If the laſt were done, the firſt would ſoon be performed, and all thoſe Mountains of Difficulties would eaſily be removed, and become Valleys.

Your Commiſſioners had no power to give any Reaſons, no not ſo much as to tell what is the meaning of any of your Demands, nor hearken to any Deſire of the King's: And certainly ſome things might be juſtly moved by his Majeſty, which are neceſſary for the Crown, and a well-grounded Peace; as, That he may have his Revenues; That he may return with Honour and Safety to his Crown and Government. And if the King were with his Parliament, where he might both give and receive Satisfaction, he might with reaſon be convinced to aſſent to what he now conceives to be unreaſonable.

The making of a Peace is ſo great and glorious a Work, and ſo acceptable to all good men, and to the whole People, that it would (after ſo great trouble) be like Rain to the new-mown Graſs, or like a Reſurrection from the dead, and is a work worthy of a King's Preſence; and the King may without arrogancy deſire that Glory to himſelf, the more to reingratiate him to his People; and not devolve that Honour wholly to any other, wherein he himſelf ought to be the prime Actor. And therefore the King's Preſence with his Parliament is the moſt probable way to attain to a ſpeedy and bleſſed Peace, which certainly will be the more durable, if it be with the good liking of both ſides.

I know there is one common Objection (and I know not another) wherewith many are poſſeſt and prejudiced againſt the King's coming to his Parliament, That his Preſence may breed Diviſion, and that he may thereafter withdraw, and continue our Troubles. Unity and Concord (I confeſs) is that by which Kingdoms and Commonwealths do flouriſh, and there is nothing more dangerous than Diviſion, Concordia enim res parvæ creſcunt, diſcordia vero maxima dilabuntur. But is there any greater or more dangerous Diviſion, than to have the Head divided from the Body? To have the King divided from his Parliament, the Repreſentative Body of the Kingdom, whereof he is the Head? Hath not this Diviſion divided Brother againſt Brother, the Father againſt the Son, and the Son againſt the Father, and Country againſt Country? This Diviſion is the Cauſe of all our other Diviſions: Take this away, and all our other Diviſions are at an end. Ablatum cauſa tollitur effectus. The King doth (with all earneſtneſs) deſire to be joined with you, and ſtands more in need of Reconciliation, and I hope will (according to his profeſſion) endeavour it, rather than Diviſion; and (I truſt) the Wiſdom of the Honourable Houſes is ſuch, as they will do ſo too, and rather be reconciled to the King, than divide amongſt our ſelves. And that Argument, Not to admit of the King's coming to his Parliament, becauſe his Preſence may breed Diviſion, is an Argument to debar him perpetually from his Parliament. And now the Caſe is altered from what it was, when it was thought unfit that the King ſhould come to his Parliament, becauſe then he had Forces in the Fields, Gariſons and Strong-holds to return to: Now he hath none of theſe againſt you; and his deſire of coming to his Parliament cannot be but with reſolution to agree and ſtay with you; for if he were once with you, where can he go from you? And if they were eſteemed Enemies to the Parliament and the Peace of the Kingdoms, who adviſed the King to withdraw from his Parliament, what eſtimation will the World have of them, who will not ſuffer him to return to his Parliament, when he offers to caſt himſelf in your Arms? Nor can there be a more real Teſtimony of our Reſpect and Affection to England, than that we deſire he may be with you, and be adviſed by you; neither can you have any greater Honour, than that (after you have diſſipated your Enemies) his Majeſty is willing to return to you. And if ſo kind an Offer ſhall be refuſed, and the King driven to deſpair, it is to be feared theſe Kingdoms will be involved in greater difficulties than ever; and we ſhall be driven out of the harbour and entrance of a Peace, into the Tempeſt of new and bloody Wars.

For altho Scotland be moſt willing and deſirous that the King ſhould return to his Parliament with Honour, Safety, and Freedom, and that he may remain where his Perſonal Preſence may ſerve moſt for the Security and Happineſs pineſs of his People; yet if any ſuch courſe ſhall be taken, or any demand made for rendring of his Perſon, which cannot ſtand with his Honour and Safety, or which cannot conſiſt with our Duty, Allegiance and Covenant, nor with the Honour of that Army to whom (in time of his extreme danger) he had his Recourſe for Safety; it cannot be expected that we can be capable of ſo baſe an Act. And if (to ſhun this, and avoid occaſion of quarrelling between the Kingdoms) he ſhall go to Scotland, and reſent his Expulſion out of England, and crave the Aſſiſtance of that Kingdom for Recovery of his Right to this Crown; he may in a ſhort time raiſe ſuch Forces in Scotland and Ireland, as with the Aſſiſtance of Foreign Princes, theſe Kingdoms may be made a Field of Blood, and the youngeſt amongſt us not live to ſee the end of theſe unnatural Wars. But if the preſent opportunity be wiſely managed, and that we maintain the juſt Privileges of Parliament, and Liberty of the Subject in both Kingdoms, with that Wiſdom and Diſcretion, as that may be given to God which is God's, and to Cæſar what is Cæſar's; if we fear God and the King, and do not meddle with them who are given to change; that ſame Divine Providence and Wiſdom which hath brought us through many Difficulties, will alſo teach us how to eſtabliſh theſe Kingdoms in Peace, and the King's Throne in Righteouſneſs: That the great Bleſſing of a conſtant and Friendly Conjunction of the Two Kingdoms (now united by Allegiance and Loyal Subjection to one Sovereign and Head) may be firmly obſerved and continued to all Poſterity.

The Lord Chancellor of Scotland's laſt Speech, at a Conference in the Painted Chamber with a Committee of both Houſes, Octob. 10. 1646.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

THis day I hope will bring our Conference to ſome Reſults to be reported to the Houſes; and therefore I ſhall frame my Diſcourſe and Arguments with that Succinctneſs as may bring us ſooneſt to a Cloſe.

At our firſt meeting, the Subject of our Debate was, Whether the Right and Power of diſpoſing the Perſon of the King is ſolely in the Two Houſes as they ſhall think fit, or in the Two Kingdoms; and at our laſt meeting we had ſome arguing about the ſame Queſtion; but your Lordſhips did ſtill aſſert the Vote of the Houſes; and we ſay (in reſpect of the intereſt and relations which both Kingdoms have equally to the King, eſpecially in the preſent Juncture of Affairs, when both Kingdoms are entred in the ſame League and Covenant, have jeoparded their Lives in the ſame War, are labouring under the ſame Danger, are ſeeking the ſame Remedies, and ſtand in need of the ſame Peace and Security; and both Kingdoms are bound by our Covenant to preſerve Unity, and are obliged by Treaty that none of us ſhall make any Peace, Ceſſation, or Agreement whatſoever, without mutual Advice and Conſent of both), That the Perſon of the King cannot be diſpoſed of without the joint Advice and Conſent of both Kingdoms. But as we do acknowledge that England hath Parity of Intereſt with Scotland, ſo do we ſtill offer that they ſhall have Parity of Power in diſpoſing of the King: And we do affirm, That the Perſon of the King, who is King of Scotland as well as of England, and is Head and Monarch of both Kingdoms, cannot be diſpoſed of by any one of the Kingdoms alone; but whatever is to be done concerning the diſpoſing of his Majeſty's Perſon, ought to be done by joint Advice and common Conſent of both, as may ſerve moſt for the Peace, Security, and Happineſs of the King and Kingdoms; which we did prove by ſeveral Arguments: To which there was nothing anſwered in effect, but, That the King being within England, his Perſon was to be diſpoſed of as the Two Houſes ſhall think fit; and that the King being with the Scotiſh Army, and they being paid by the Parliament of England, he is in effect in the Power of the Houſes, and ought to be at their diſpoſing, in the ſame way as if he had come to the Army of Sir Thomas Fairfax, or any other of the Parliament's Armies. To which we ſhall not need to make any Reply, other than we have made already, That the King's preſent Reſidence in England, nor no Locality, can take away the Reality of our Relations formerly mentioned by us, far leſs can it take away the Engagements and Stipulations between the Kingdoms; and though the Scotiſh Army be paid by the Parliament of England, yet they are the Army of Scotland, raiſed for purſuance of the Ends of the Covenant, and are to be ordered and directed by the Parliaments or Committees of both Kingdoms: And therefore they cannot with Conſcience, Duty, nor Honour, deliver the Perſon of the King without his own Conſent, to be diſpoſed of as the Two Houſes ſhall think fit. But we have declared, and do ſtill declare, That we are content that the Perſon of the King be diſpoſed of (the word Diſpoſed being taken in a right ſenſe) as may ſerve moſt for the Peace, Safety, Security, Honour and Happineſs of the King and both Kingdoms: And did offer to your Lordſhips Conſideration his Majeſty's coming to, or near London, as the moſt probable means to procure a ſpeedy and well-grounded Peace. And ſeeing your Lordſhips have done us the Honour to meet with us in this free and Brotherly Conference, we do expect that you will Concur and Aſſent to this Propoſition, or propound a better Expedient for the good of both Kingdoms.

But if the Honourable Houſes will not admit of this Propoſition, our next deſire is (that it may appear, no lawful and poſſible means are left uneſſay'd, which may procure a happy Agreement betwixt the King and his Parliaments; and for our further Exoneration), That Commiſſioners may yet once more be ſent from both Kingdoms to his Majeſty, to ſhew the meaning of our Propoſitions, and to aſſert them, and to hear the King's Doubts, and Difficulties, and Deſires; who may further intimate, That (if his Majeſty ſhall not give a Satisfactory Anſwer to the Propoſitions) then both Kingdoms will, without making any ſuch further Application to him, take ſuch courſe, as they ſhall judge fitteſt for the Peace and Security of the Kingdoms.

And as at the opening of this Conference I did begin with an humble, lawful, and laudable deſire for Unity, in relation to Religion, the King, and amongſt our ſelves; ſo ſhall I cloſe in the ſame Dialect: For the firſt, of Religion; if we do remember our Vows to God to perform them, and ſhall endeavour really, conſtantly, and ſincerely, the Reformation of Religion, and Uniformity according to our Covenant, we may certainly expect that God will crown this great Work, wherein he hath honoured us to be Actors, with his Bleſſing: But if in place of Uniformity, which we are obliged to endeavour, there ſhall be a Toleration of all Sects and ſorts of Religion, and if we neglect to build the Houſe of God, and become inſolent upon our Succeſſes; although we could mount up with Eagles Wings, and build our Neſts as high as the Stars, and had an Army who for Valour and Strength could march to Conſtantinople, God ſhall lay our Glory low in the duſt, and ſuffer the work to fall in our hands, like the Confuſion of Babel. And whatever hath been moved by us concerning the King, we deſire it may be rightly conſtructed, as proceeding from ſuch as have not wavered from their firſt Principles: For when the King was in the height of his Power, we did not, and (I hope) never ſhall flatter him; and when the Enemy was in the height of their Pride and Strength, Scotland did fear no Colours: And now when the King is at his loweſt Ebb, and hath caſt himſelf into our Army for Safety, we hope your Lordſhips will pardon us, from our ſenſe of Honour and Duty, to be very tender of the Perſon and Poſterity of the King, to whom we have ſo many near Relations, and not like the worſe of us; that we cannot ſo far forget our Allegiance and Duty, as not to have an Antipathy againſt the Change of Monarchical Government, in which we have lived through the Deſcent of ſo many Kings, and under which both Kingdoms have been governed ſo many Ages, and flouriſhed in all happineſs. And now my laſt word ſhall be for conſtant Unity between the Kingdoms; which as it hath been the chief means to promote the great Work wherein both Kingdoms are ſo deeply engaged, ſo there is nothing can make us ſo formidable to our Enemies, nor ſo much aiding one to another, as the cheriſhing and continuing thereof; and I dare ſay that no man would divide the one from the other, but ſuch as deſire to fiſh in troubled waters, and are real Enemies to both. God hath bleſs'd the joint Endeavours of both Nations, both are in one Ship, and are come through a very great Storm; and now when we are come into the Harbour, it would be great ſhame to both to ſplit upon the Rocks of Diviſion (& devorato bove deficere in cauda); and your Lordſhips may be confident, that Scotland, who have eſteemed no hazard too great for ſetling of Religion and Love to their Brethren, will ſtick ſo faſt and firmly to you, (ſo long as you hold the Principles of your Covenant) as no fear nor favour will ever be able to divide them from you; and we do expect that reciprocal Amity which may perpetuate our Unity.

Scots Papers.

The Scots alſo gave in long Papers; wherein they ſhewed, That the King being Sovereign of both Kingdoms, was not to be diſpoſed by the Parliament of one Kingdom. That this was deſtructive to the Relation and Intereſt the Scotiſh Nation had in him, and contrary to the nature of Sovereignty, and to the Covenant and Treaties of both Kingdoms, by which it was agreed, That his Majeſty's juſt Power and Greatneſs ſhould not be diminiſhed; which by ſuch a Demand of his Perſon was very ſignally done. It was alſo argued, That all things in order to Peace (to which the Diſpoſal of the King's Perſon did relate in a ſpecial manner) ſhould be done by the joint Councils of both Kingdoms.

Theſe Papers the Scots Commiſſioners (contrary to their own Deſire, and promiſe of Secreſy, as the Parliaments Committee alledged) did cauſe to be printed; which incenſed the Two Houſes ſo that they ſeized the Papers at the Preſs, and committed the Printers; but ſoon after they were for all that publiſh'd, but ſaid to be printed at Edinburgh. To theſe Papers the Commons ordered an Anſwer to be drawn; which being brought in, read and approved, paſs'd that Houſe; and the Queſtion being put, Whether the ſame ſhould be ſent up to the Lords for their Concurrence, it was carried in the Negative, and ſent to the Scots Commiſſioners, who returned the ſame, refuſing to accept thereof, becauſe it came not from both Houſes. Which Anſwer being publiſh'd by Order of the Commons, and for that it recites at large all the Scots Arguments on this Affair, 'tis hoped the Reader will excuſe its Tedioùſneſs, if for his fuller Satisfaction it be here inſerted: Only firſt premiſing a Speech ſpoken in the Commons Houſe on that Subject.

A Speech made in the Houſe of Commons the 26th day of October, 1646. (upon the Reading of the Scotiſh Papers, in Reply to the Votes of both Houſes of Parliament, of the 24th of September, concerning the Diſpoſal of the King's Perſon.) Spoken by Thomas Chaloner, Eſq; a Member of the ſaid Houſe.

Mr. Speaker,

YOU have juſt now heard Two Papers read before you from the Commiſſioners of Scotland; the firſt concerning the Diſpoſal of the King's Perſon, the other touching the Diſtractions of the North, by reaſon (as they ſay) of the Non-payment of their Army. I ſhall ſpeak nothing to the latter, becauſe it hath been ſo ſufficiently anſwered by divers knowing Members of this Houſe. To the firſt I ſhall wholly apply my ſelf, becauſe little or nothing hath been ſaid to that point.

The Queſtion then before you is, About the Diſpoſal of the King's Perſon: You ſay, That he is to be diſpoſed of as both Houſes of Parliament ſhall think fitting; but your Brethren of Scotland ſay he is to be diſpoſed of as both Kingdoms ſhall think fitting: And they fortify their Affirmation with theſe Reaſons:

They ſay, That he is not only King of England, but alſo King of Scotland; and as you have an Intereſt in him, he being King of England, ſo have they no leſs Intereſt in him, he being King of Scotland. And as they have not the ſole Intereſt in him, he being King of Scotland, becauſe they acknowledge withal that he is King of England; ſo have not you the ſole Intereſt in him, he being King of England, becauſe they deſire you to remember that he is alſo King of Scotland: So as neither Nation having a Sole, but a joint Intereſt in his Perſon, they ought jointly to diſpoſe of it for the Weal and Benefit of both Kingdoms.

This I take to be the whole Scope of their Argument, which they have repreſented unto you under ſo many diſguiſes, and as it were by multiplying-glaſſes, inſomuch as the bare relating of it, takes up Three large Sheets of Paper.

But while they debate this great Queſtion with you, touching the diſpoſal of the King's Perſon, and while they poſitively affirm, That he is to be diſpoſed of by the joint Conſent of both Nations; give me leave to remember ber you, That in the mean time they diſpoſe wholly of him themſelves, and ſo have done for theſe ſix months, and may for ſix months longer, for any thing I can gather out of theſe Papers.

Their Argument runs thus:

Whereſoever the Kingdom of Scotland hath an Intereſt in their King, there they may diſpoſe of him.
But the Kingdom of Scotland hath an Intereſt in their King, he being in England.
Therefore in England they may diſpoſe of him.

Sir, This may ſeem at the firſt to ſome to be a fair and ſpecious Argument, but let it be well conſidered, it will prove erroneous and fallacious: For in the Major Propoſition they underſtand one thing by the word King, and in the Minor Propoſition they underſtand another thing by the word King, and ſo here is a concluſion inferred, which the Premiſſes will not warrant.

For the clearing whereof, I pray Sir, remember that this word King is of a various ſignification, ſometimes it is taken in abſtracto, that is, for the Royal Power, Function, and Office of a King; ſometimes it is taken in concreto, that is, for the Man or Perſon whom we call King.

If their Major Propoſition be taken in the firſt ſenſe, we ſhall never deny it them, nay we ſhall acknowledge that the King of Scotland being taken in abſtracto, we have nothing to do with him at all, he is ſolely and totally theirs: God forbid that a King of Scotland going out of his Kingdom, ſhould either make Scotland ceaſe to be a Kingdom, or give any participation of Intereſt to that Country where he doth reſide. Let his perſon reſide in the furtheſt parts of the earth, yet the Royal Office and Capacity of the King reſideth ſtill in Scotland; they have his Sword to do Juſtice by, they have his Scepter to ſhew mercy by, they have his Seal to confirm what they pleaſe by, and they have his Laws to govern by; and in this ſenſe it is only meant that the King is never under years, never dies, cannot be deceived, can neither do wrong, nor take wrong of any body; and in this ſenſe we fight for King and Parliament, though the Perſon of the King be in oppoſition to both; and in this ſenſe the Returns and Teſts of the King's Writs are, Coram me-ipſo apud Weſtmonaſterium, and teſte me-ipſo apud Weſtmonaſterium, let the Perſon of the King at the ſame be in France, or the remoteſt Country in the World; but a King of Scotland taken in this ſenſe is never out of Scotland: And therefore whereas they ſay in the Minor Propoſition, That the Kingdom of Scotland hath an intereſt in their King, he being in England, this muſt needs be meant of a King in Concreto, that is, only of the Perſon of their King, and not of his Royal Capacity; and in this ſenſe we muſt deny that they have any thing at all to do with him: For though the Royal Office of the King of Scotland is ſolely to be diſpoſed of by the State of Scotland, yet it is not ſo with his Perſon; for Perſona ſequitur locum, and his perſon muſt be diſpoſed of by the Supreme Power of that Country whereſoever he ſhall happen to abide. Suppoſe a King of Scotland ſhould be in Spain, will they ſay they have as great an intereſt to diſpoſe of his perſon there as in Scotland; I think they will not ſay ſo; and yet they did affirm laſt day at the Conference, That they had as good right to diſpoſe of his perſon at Weſtminſter, as they had at Edinburgh: But under their favour, England is as diſtinct a Kingdom from Scotland, as Spain; it is as diſtinct in Laws, diſtinct in Privileges, diſtinct in Intereſt; it is neither ſubordinate nor dependent of Scotland, and they can no more diſpoſe of a King of Scotland's perſon, he being in England, than if he were in Spain.

I ſhall take this as granted for good Law, That let the perſon of any Nation under the Sun, which is in Amity with England, happen to come into England, that perſon is forthwith a Subject of England.

For he being protected by the Laws of England, he becomes thereby ſubject to thoſe Laws, it being moſt certain, that Protectio trahit ſubjectionem, & ſubjectio protectionem, they being relatives, the one cannot ſtand without the other;

An. 1646. other; and as no man can be ſaid to be a Father, that hath no Son, nor no man a Husband, that hath no Wife, ſo no man can be ſaid to be protected, that is not withal thereby ſubjected. And ſince without ſuch protection every man may kill him, and deſtroy him, it ſeems to ſtand with no proportion of Juſtice, that a man ſhould be protected in Life, Limb, or Eſtate, by any Law, that will not ſubject himſelf to that Law.

It cannot be denied but that there is a Twofold Subjection, Legal, and Local; the Legal Subjection is due from every Subject to his Natural Prince; the Local, from any Foreigner to that Prince or State where his perſon doth reſide. And this, though it be only pro tempore, and the other during life, yet it doth for the time totally obſtruct the operation of the other ſubjection; ſo that no King can command any Subject of his, living out of his Kingdom, but ſuch Subject of his is to be diſpoſed of by the ſole Authority of that Supreme Power where he makes his Reſidence. And ſince the queſtion is only about the perſon of a King of Scotland, for I conceive they will not take upon them any Authority to diſpoſe of the Perſon of a King of England, I do affirm, That if a King of Scotland ſhould have come into England before the Union of both theſe Kingdoms, he had been inſtantly a Subject of England, and his perſon to be diſpoſed of by the ſole Authority of the Laws of England.

For either we muſt take him as a King, or a Subject, ſince betwixt them two there is no Medium: As a King we cannot take him, unleſs we ſhould commit Treaſon againſt our Natural Prince, and ſubject our ſelves to any but to him; it being moſt certain, that there is the ſame Relation betwixt the King and his Subjects, as betwixt the Husband and his Wife; and as no man can be ſaid to be a Husband, but to his own Wife; ſo no man can be ſaid to be a King but to his own Subjects; and therefore we cannot admit of any Regality in the perſon of a King of Scotland coming into England, unleſs at the ſame time to the ſame perſon we ſhould confeſs ſubjection. For that it is moſt true, that as none can be ſaid to be Rex ſine Regno, ſo no man can be ſaid to be Rex but in Regno. Therefore if a King of Scotland coming as aforeſaid into England, if againſt the Laws of England he do offend, by thoſe Laws of England he muſt be tried, and by none other; for ubi quis delinquit, ibi punietur; and it is moſt ſure, that we have diſpoſed of the perſons of Kings of Scotland coming into England, both living and dead. And if we may diſpoſe of the perſon of a King of Scotland without the conſent of the Kingdom of Scotland, much more may we diſpoſe of the perſon of a King of England, he being now in England, without their Privity or Advice. But if they have any power to diſpoſe of him, it is becauſe they are either our Maſters or our Fellows: If they be our Maſters, let them ſhew the time when they conquered us, or the price for which we were ſold unto them. If they be our Fellows, why come they not to our Parliaments, why contribute they not to our Neceſſities? But as it is apparent that they being two diſtinct Kingdoms, governed by two diſtinct Laws, ſo they ought not to intermeddle one with anothers intereſt, but to content themſelves with what doth naturally appertain to each of them ſeverally.

There is no doubt to be made, but that every Husband hath as great an intereſt in the perſon of his Wife, as any Subject hath in the perſon of his Sovereign; and yet a man may loſe that intereſt by ſome act of his Wife's, as if ſhe commit Felony, Murder, or Treaſon, the Law diſpoſeth of her Perſon, and her Husband cannot claim any Right, ſo much as to her dead Body: So fareth it with a King, who by going out of his Kingdom, or by being taken Priſoner by his Enemies, his Subjects loſe the intereſt they had in him, and he is at the diſpoſal of his Enemies Jure belli. John King of England was cited to appear at Paris, to anſwer for the death of Arthur Plantagenet, Duke of Britain, whom he had murthered; the State of England would not let him go, as holding it a great Indignity and Incongruity, that a King of England ſhould anſwer for any thing at Paris, right or wrong: The French anſwered, that they cited him not as King of England, but as Duke of Normandy; as King of England, they acknowledged to have nothing to do with him, he was in that reſpect without them, and beyond them; but as Duke of Normandy, which he held in Fee of the Crown of France, he owed Fealty and Allegiance for the ſame to the Crown of France and therefore ought to anſwer. The Engliſh replied, that if the Duke of Normandy did go, the King of England muſt go; and if the Duke of Normandy were beheaded, they knew well enough what would become of the King of England. Upon large debate hereof by all the Lawyers in France, it was reſolved, That if John had been in Normandy at the time of his Summons, he ought to have appeared; but he being Extra Jurisdictionem Regni Franciæ at the time of his Summons, and Infra Juriſdictionem Regni Angliæ, though legally he were a Subject of France; yet locally he being in England, his Summons was void; and he forfeited nothing by his Non-appearance.

I will only urge one Argument more, deduced from a known Maxim of the Law, not of England, but of Scotland alſo, which the Commiſſioners of Scotland the other day at the Conference did cite themſelves, in my opinion much againſt themſelves; and that is this, Quando Duo Jura, inter Duo Regna (ſaith a great Lawyer) concurrunt in una perſona, æquum eſt ac ſi eſſent in diverſis; which is no more than this, When Two Kingdoms held by Two diſtinct Titles, do concur in one and the ſame perſon, it is all one as if they were in two diſtinct perſons. I ſuppoſe here is our very caſe; here are two Kingdoms, England and Scotland, held by two diſtinct Titles, which do both concur in one Perſon, in the perſon of King Charles; it is all one, ſaith this Rule and Maxim of the Law, as if they were under two ſeveral perſons; why then put the caſe that there were one King of England and another of Scotland, would the State of Scotland have any thing to do to diſpoſe of the perſon of a King of England, he being in England? I think you will ſay they could not.

Sir, I am ſorry that our Brethren have moved this queſtion at this time; for all queſtions make debates, and debates differences; and this were a time for Brothers to reconcile differences, rather than to make them; we have now lived Forty four Years, both under two Princes, and in all this time this queſtion was never ſtirred in till now; had it been ſtirred in, no queſtion but it had been rejected. The people of England would have held it very ſtrange that they could not have diſpoſed of the perſon of their own King; or that a King of England could not have gone from Whitehall to Richmond or Hampton-Court, without the will and appointment of the Council of Scotland: They would have thought they had made an evil bargain by ſuch a Union. For before the Union, they might have diſpoſed of the perſon of their Prince; but after, not. And ſince they conceived that by the addition of Scotland there was an addition of Charge, they would have been very ſorry withal to have had an addition of Servility.

Since the beginning of the World there was never before ſuch a Contention about the perſon of a King. The Greeks and Trojans did contend for a long time in fight about the dead Body of Patroclus, which of them ſhould have it: But here is not a Contention about the dead Body of a private man, but about the living Body of a King: Neither do we contend as they did, who ſhould have his perſon, but here you do contend (as far as I conceive) who ſhould not have it. Your Brethren of Scotland ſay poſitively, they will not have the King's perſon upon any Conditions whatſoever. It is now above Six Months paſt that you voted in this Houſe the demanding of the King's Perſon, but the Lords refuſed to join with you; ever ſince until this preſent you your ſelf did acquieſce as if you had repented of your former Vote: Now he muſt be put upon you, and with ſuch Terms as his preſent Guardians pleaſe to allow of.

Truly it ſeems ſtrange to me, that an Army of Scots, in pay of the Kingdom of England, which by the Treaty ought to be governed by the joint conſent of the Committees of both Kingdoms upon the place, ſhould in England take a King of England, without the privity of the Engliſh Committee, and convey him to Newcaſtle, a Town likewiſe of England, and ſhould there keep him for Six whole Months, without the Conſent of both Houſes of Parliament. And when they find it not convenient for them to keep him any longer, then they will capitulate with you, upon what Conditions you muſt receive his perſon.

I never thought to have found a King of England, his perſon being in England, under any other protection but that of the Laws of England; but now I find him under the protection of a Scotiſh Army, whither they ſay he is fled for ſhelter, and that they cannot render him up in Honour.

Sir, if that Army of theirs be come into this Kingdom as Brethren, Friends, and Confederates, (as we hope they are) then is every perſon of that Army, during the time of his ſtay here, locally a Subject of England; and ſuch Children as are born to them here are not Aliens but Deniſons, and not only local but legal Subjects of this Kingdom. And therefore they having gotten the King into their hands, they ought no more to capitulate upon what Terms he ſhould be delivered into yours, than if the Army of Sir Thomas Fairfax were in poſſeſſion thereof; who if they ſhould deny the ſurrendring of the King unto you, but upon Condition, no queſtion but it were capital.

They ſay, That by virtue of the Covenant they are obliged to defend his Perſon and Authority. What his Authority is in Scotland, themſelves beſt know; but you only are to judge of it in England, ſince being not ſubordinate to any Power on Earth, there is no Power under Heaven can judge you. The Covenant ties you to maintain in the firſt place the Rights of Parliament, and the Liberties of the Kingdom; and in the ſecond place, the King's Perſon and Authority; and that only in defence of the former, and not otherwiſe. And whereas they expect the King ſhould be received by you with Honour, Safety, and Freedom, I beſeech you, Sir, conſider whether (as the Caſe now ſtands) his Reception with Honour can ſtand with the Honour of the Kingdom, whether his Safety be not incompatible with the Safety of the Commonwealth, and whether his Freedom be not inconſiſtent with the Freedom of the People.

I pray (Sir) take heed leſt that bringing him in with Honour, you do not diſhonour your ſelf, and queſtion the very Juſtice of all your Actions; be wary that in receiving him with Safety, you do not thereby endanger and hazard the Commonwealth; be adviſed, leſt in bringing him home with Freedom, you do not thereby lead the People of England in Thraldom.

I pray (Sir) firſt ſettle the Honour, Safety, and Freedom of the Commonwealth, and then the Honour, Safety, and Freedom of the King, ſo far as the latter may ſtand with the former, and not otherwiſe.

Wherefore I ſhall conclude with my humble deſire, That you would adhere to your former Vote; that is, That the King be diſpoſed of as both Houſes of Parliament ſhall think fitting; and that you enter into no Treaty either with the King or your Brethren of Scotland, leſt otherwiſe thereby you retard the going home of their Army out of England.

The Anſwer of the Commons aſſembled in Parliament, to the Scots Commiſſioners Papers of the 20th, and their Letter of the 24th of October laſt.

THAT there might be a firm and laſting Brotherly Union between the Two Kingdoms, is the earneſt deſire of our hearts; and that our Proceedings may be according to our Covenant, and the Treaties between us: And that our Endeavours have been accordingly, our own Conſciences, our Brethren of Scotland, and all that know our ways, can bear us witneſs.

That we may ſtill walk in the ſame Path, prevent all Miſapprehenſions, and bring a right underſtanding amongſt us; the Commons aſſembled in the Parliament of England, do return this enſuing Anſwer to your Lordſhips Two Papers of the Twentieth, and to your Letter of the Twenty fourth of October laſt: Wherein our end being to give Satisfaction to the Arguments in your Papers, we ſhall therefore anſwer the ſeveral Particulars in the method we find them: Only to make our whole Intentions the more eaſily known (the Method you have taken in your Papers not allowing us a clear Connection of the Matters therein contained, and enforcing us to repeat the ſame thing oftner than we deſire) we ſhall firſt premiſe and lay down theſe following Conſiderations:

I. Firſt, That your Papers being grounded upon the Reſolutions of both Houſes, and on the Conference thereupon had, we ſhall ſet down the true ſtate of Fact concerning them; which was thus: Upon the 24th of September, 1646. the Houſes paſſed theſe Reſolutions, (viz.) 1. That the Perſon of the King ſhall be diſpoſed of as both the Houſes of the Parliament of England ſhall think fit. 2. That the Houſes do declare, That whatſoever Conference, Conſultation, or Debate, ſhall be with the Commiſſioners of Scotland concerning the Diſpoſal of the Perſon of the King, it ſhall not be underſtood to be any Capitulation in relation to the retarding of the march of the Scots Armies and Forces out of the Kingdom, or of any Treaty between the Kingdoms concerning the ſame.

Upon the ſame 24th day of September, A Committee is appointed to meet with a proportionable Number of the Lords in the Painted Chamber, to Confer, Conſult, and Debate with the Commiſſioners of Scotland, concerning the Diſpoſal of the Perſon of the King, if it ſhall be deſired by the Scots Commiſſioners; and this to be communicated to the Scots Commiſſioners by the Members of both Houſes, of the Committee of both Kingdoms. Theſe Reſolutions, ordered to be communicated to the Commiſſioners of Scotland, were accordingly delivered to them by the Members of both Houſes, that are of the Committee of both Kingdoms, the 25th of the ſame Month.

Upon the 29th day of September your Lordſhips by your Paper deſired a Conference in theſe words; We have peruſed the Votes of both Houſes, communicated to us by your Lordſhips; and as we did formerly deſire in our Paper of the 11th of Auguſt laſt, ſo we ſhall be ready on Thurſday next to Confer, Debate, and Conſult with ſuch as the Honourable Houſes have thought fit to appoint: And if their Committee cannot with conveniency meet at that time, we deſire it may be ſo ſoon as poſſibly they can.

By Command of the Commiſſioners for the Parliament of Scotland,

Jo. Cheiſly.

An. 1646.

Which was thus granted; (viz.) 1. Octob. Ordered, That the Committee formerly appointed to meet with the Commiſſioners of Scotland, Do meet this Afternoon at Three of the Clock with the ſaid Commiſſioners, to Confer, Debate and Conſult with them, concerning the Diſpoſal of the Perſon of the King, according to the former Votes and Declarations of both Houſes.

Upon the firſt day of October, before the Conference did begin, all theſe Papers were read, and your Lordſhips were told by our Committees, If you were pleaſed to ſay any thing Herein, they were ready to confer with you according to theſe Reſolutions, ſo as this Conference was by your conſent to be with theſe Two Limitations; (viz.)

1. That it ſhould be about the Diſpoſing of the King's Perſon as both Houſes of the Parliament of England ſhall think fit.

2. That it ſhall not be underſtood to be any Capitulation in relation to the retarding of the March of the Scots Armies and Forces out of the Kingdom, or of any Treaty between the Kingdoms concerning the ſame.

And all things in your Speeches and Papers, concerning Change of Fundamental or Monarchical Government, or Uniformity in Church Government, Toleration of all Sects and ſorts of Religions; concerning the King's voluntary diſpoſing of himſelf, (it being granted by you, That his Perſon is to be diſpoſed by your joint Conſent) or concerning the manner of Diſpoſing of him; and all other things of like nature, ſaving only about the Right of this Kingdom to diſpoſe of the Perſon of the King in England, without the joint Advice and Conſent of the Kingdom of Scotland, being foreign to the matter of theſe Reſolutions, were improper at this Conference; for our Committee having their Limits, could not expect to hear any ſuch, or were to intermeddle to give an Anſwer to them.

II. That the matter of the Conference being ſtated by the Houſes, and your Lordſhips often put in mind, in Anſwer to your Claim for the Kingdom of Scotland's Right of joint Intereſt in diſpoſing the Perſon of the King, That the ſole matter thereof was concerning the Two Houſes of Parliament of England having the Right to diſpoſe the Perſon of the King in the Kingdom of England, without the joint Advice and Conſent of the Kingdom of Scotland: Your Lordſhips did make your Objections; to which our Committees Anſwered; your Lordſhips Replied; and our Committees Anſwered thoſe Replies: Yet in your Paper you ſtate the Queſtion, as if to be debated on your Reſolutions; and place our Committee to make Objections; and your Lordſhips make the Anſwer of our Committees to your firſt Objections, and their Anſwer to your Replies, as one entire Objection: Your Lordſhips well know, an Anſwer to a Reply may be full as to the Reply, yet not applicable to every part of the firſt Objection.

III. That your Lordſhips engaged our Committees at the Conference to make no Report of any thing had paſſed at the ſame, till you had delivered your own Anſwer in writing: And before any Report made by our Committee, or any Paper put into the Houſes by you, ſome of your Lordſhips did give directions for the printing Three thouſand Copies of the Lord Chancellor's Speeches at that Conference, which by the Printers Confeſſions had been publiſhed on Thurſday the 15*th* of October laſt, had they not been ſent for by an Order of the Houſe of Commons, Wedneſday the 14*th* of the ſame Month; after which time, and not before, they received Order from you not to publiſh them till further directions; which Speeches are ſince publiſhed, and ſaid to be printed at Edinburgh.

That you printed thoſe Papers which you afterward gave in to the Houſes as your Anſwer to thoſe Votes (which were the Subject of the Conference) ſooner than it was poſſible for the Houſes to give an Anſwer to Papers of that length; as if the Prepoſſeſſing of the People were more conſidered by you than the Satisfaction of the Houſes: And if your Lordſhips had thought fit to have ſtaid for our Anſwer, we conceive you would not have publiſhed thoſe Papers, which is an Action contrary to the Practice of all Publick Miniſters, who ought not to publiſh to the people the Tranſactions between them and that State to which they are employed: Which we are enforced to repreſent to your Lordſhips, and to publiſh this Anſwer, it having been ſo often done by your directions in this Kingdom; and in this preſent buſineſs done after ſuch a manner, neither we, nor any employed by us, having ever done any ſuch thing in the Kingdom of Scotland.

IV. That the Intereſt of Scotland in the King, and the Exerciſe thereof in the Kingdom of England being of ſeveral and diſtinct natures, are not to be confounded as one and the ſame thing; for if you grant that you have no Right of Exerciſe of Intereſt in diſpoſing the Perſon of the King (he being in England) we ſhall not diſpute your having Intereſt in him.

V. That the queſtion then was, Who ſhall diſpoſe of the Perſon of the King in England, and not after what manner his Perſon ſhall be diſpoſed: And it is to be conſidered in what Condition the King now is, That he hath deſerted his Parliament and People, entred into, and continued in a bloody and dangerous War againſt them; hath not granted thoſe Propoſitions that by both Kingdoms were ſent unto him, as the means of a ſafe and well-grounded Peace; and therefore is not for the preſent in a condition to exerciſe the Duties of his Place, or be left to go or reſide where and when he pleaſeth: And your Lordſhips did at the Conference declare, That it was prejudicial to both Kingdoms for the King to go into Scotland.

VI. That your Lordſhips cannot in reaſon inſiſt, becauſe in our diſpoſing the Perſon of the King, we may hereby prejudice the Kingdom of Scotland (the which was never yet done by us) on ſuch a poſſibility to claim a joint Right in diſpoſing the Perſon of the King in this Kingdom, which from the firſt coming hither of King James, now Forty four Years, was never before claimed; when as the Two Kingdoms had not then that Security from each other againſt all imaginary Prejudices, which might happen through the Abuſes of their particular Rights, as now they have, being engaged by Covenant in their ſeveral Vocations, mutually to preſerve the Rights and Privileges of the Parliaments, the Liberties of the Kingdoms, and the King's Perſon and Authority, in the preſervation and defence of the true Religion, and Liberties of the Kingdoms, as by the Third Article of the Covenant doth clearly appear.

What would your Lordſhips think, if we ſhould claim joint Right of Intereſt in your Towns, your Forces, or Money in Scotland, upon that Suppoſition, That poſſibly you may uſe them to the prejudice of this Kingdom? Let not the Reſults of your Arguments for Union, or for the King, be, That the Kingdom of Scotland may exerciſe their Intereſt in the Kingdom of England: Nor let your Expreſſions obliquely infer, That the Parliament of England will not do what becometh them to the King; ſince all the World doth know, that this Kingdom hath in all times ſhewed as great Affections to their Kings, as any other Nation.

VII. [illegible] inſiſt upon the Covenant and Treaty in this Caſe, and [illegible] your Anſwers to thoſe you call Objections, [illegible] ſome of the Expreſſions in your Papers, concerning the Covenant and Treaty.

[illegible] And unleſs we lay aſide the Covenant, Treaties, Declarations of both Kingdoms, and Three Years Conjunction in this War, neither the one Kingdom nor the other muſt now look back what they might have done before ſuch a ſtrict Union; but look forwards what is therefore incumbent to both jointly, for the common good of both, and for the ends of the Covenant, which both are obliged jointly to proſecute and promote.

And as Reaſons may be drawn from the nature of all Aſſociations, ſo eſpecially from the nature of ours in the Solemn League and Covenant; the Title, Narration, Articles and Concluſion of it, do all along link together the Intereſt of the Kingdoms in this common Cauſe, ſo much concerning the Glory of God, their own Safety, Union, and Peace, and the Honour and Happineſs of the King and his Poſterity: Which Ends of the Covenant, both Parliaments as well as other Subjects of both Kingdoms, have obliged themſelves jointly and mutually to promote.

Page 6. So that the ends of the Covenant, upon which the Diſpoſal of the King muſt needs have a ſtrong influence, are not to be proſecuted by the Two Kingdoms, as by Two diſtinct Bodies acting ſingly, but they were united by Solemn Covenant made to Almighty God, and by League each to other, as one entire Body, to proſecute this Cauſe.

Page 9. of your Papers. Wherefore we cannot chuſe but obteſt, by the Conjunction and Parity of Intereſts, by the Treaty between the Kingdoms, by the Solemn League and Covenant, that there may be a Conjunction of the Councils and Reſolutions of both Kingdoms, in diſpoſing of that Royal Perſon who is King of both.

Page 13. That the proſecution of this War ſhould be with the joint Advice and Conſent of both Kingdoms; and according to theſe grounds a Covenant was agreed upon for the Reformation of Religion, and preſervation of the Liberties of the Kingdoms, and of the King's Perſon and Authority.

Page 7. From the Treaty the ſame thing doth further appear; it being thereby manifeſt, That our Army was to be levied for the common good of both Kingdoms, in purſuance of the ends expreſſed in the Covenant.

Again, Page 7. So that if the diſpoſal of the King's Perſon, mentioned in the Vote of both Houſes, be intended for the Good, Peace, and Security of both Kingdoms, then it ſhould not be done without the mutual Advice and Conſent of both.

Thus far out of your Papers.

Having thus laid down, That you claim that nothing contained in the matter of the Covenant, or to be done in purſuance of the ends thereof, or that hath a ſtrong influence thereupon, can be done by the Kingdom of England, in England, without the Joint Advice and Conſent of the Kingdom of Scotland; we ſhall in the next place lay down the moſt material things contained in the Covenant, which are, The Reformation of Religion in England and Ireland; The Extirpation of Popery, Prelacy, Superſtition, Hereſy, Schiſm, and Profaneneſs; The Preſervation of the Rights and Privileges of the Parliaments, and Liberties of the Kingdoms; and to preſerve and defend the King's Majeſty's Perſon and Authority, in the preſervation and defence of the true Religion, and Liberties of the Kingdoms.

And your Lordships may well remember, That [illegible] of the Power of the Kingdom of England to [illegible] we [illegible] in [illegible] And therefore by reason of some Papers and Speeches of Yours, concerning the Propositions for Reformation of Religion, and the Militia of the Kingdoms of England and Ireland, and concerning some of your Nation in the Offices and Places within this Kingdom; both Houses of Parliament for the vindicating of the Right of the Kingdom of England from the Construction then laid now put upon the Covenant and Treaty, did upon the 29th of June, 1646. declare as followeth:

Die Lunæ 29. Junii. 1646.

WHereas the Lords and Commons assembled in the Parliament of England, in the Name and on the behalf of the Kingdom of England and Ireland, and the Commissioners of the Parliament of Scotland, in the Name and on the Behalf of the Kingdom of Scotland, have thought fit to send to the King, The humble Desires and Propositions for a safe and well-grounded Peace, agreed upon by the Parliaments of both Kingdoms respectively; the Lords and Commons of the Parliament of England do declare, That it is not their Intention that any Construction should be made thereupon, as if either Kingdom had any Intereſt in the matter of each others Propoſitions, or in the Legiſlative Power of each other concerning any of the ſaid Propoſitions; but that it remaineth diſtinct in each Kingdom reſpectively: And that notwithſtanding any joint proceedings upon the ſaid Propoſitions, either Kingdom hath power of themſelves to continue, repeal, or alter any Law that ſhall be made upon the ſaid Propoſitions, for the good and Government of either Kingdom reſpectively. And it is hereby declared, That both Houſes are fully reſolved to maintain and preſerve inviolably the Solemn League and Covenant, and the Treaties between the Kingdoms of England and Scotland.

This Declaration being ſent to your Lordſhips, and we receiving no Anſwer, conceived you reſted ſatisfied therewith. And we deſire you further to remember, That whereas in the Year 1641. divers things concerning the Kingdom of Scotland were debated in England, your Lordſhips did then (for the ſaving the Rights of Scotland, that we might not claim any Joint Right in things concerning that Kingdom) declare, That neither by your Treaty with the English, nor by ſeeking your Peace to be eſtabliſhed in Parliament, nor any other Action of yours, you do acknowledge any dependency upon them, or make them Judges to you or your Laws, or any thing that may import the ſmalleſt Prejudice to your Liberties; but that you come in a free and brotherly way, by your Informations, to remove all doubts that might ariſe concerning the Proceedings of your Parliament, and to join your Endeavours in what might conduce for the Peace and good of both Kingdoms; no otherwiſe than if by occaſion of the King's Reſidence in Scotland, Commiſſioners in the like Exigence ſhould be ſent thither from England.

And as we did reſt ſatisfied with thoſe deſires of yours, and this preſent Parliament never did, nor yet do claim any Exerciſe of the Powers within the Kingdom of Scotland, which you deſire within this Kingdom, we cannot but in Juſtice expect the like Equity from that Kingdom.

VIII. That by your Arguments for a Right of joint diſpoſing of the Perſon of the King in England, (which muſt relate as well to the Perſons that are to be about him, as to the Place where he is to reſide), you ſeem to claim to have an equal number, or ſuch a number as you ſhall think fit, of the Scots Nation, to be of the King's Council, and of his Bed-chamber, and other Officers about his Perſon and his Succeſſors in the Kingdom of England, as a Right of the Kingdom of Scotland.

An. 1646.

IX. And concerning your deſires for the ſpeedy payment of 200000 l. mentioned in your Papers of the 24*th* of October, the Parliament of England never engaged to pay you 200000 l. at one time, but only that the firſt 100000 l. thereof be paid unto you upon the marching of your Army and Forces out of this Kingdom, at ſuch time and place as ſhall be hereafter expreſſed.

That the ſecond 100000 l. ſhall be paid by 50000 l. and 50000 l. the firſt 50000 l. at the end of Three Months after the payment of the 100000 l. and the ſecond 50000 l. at the end of Nine Months after the ſaid firſt payment; yet to manifeſt our willingneſs and readineſs to comply with our Brethren of Scotland, we have for above Six Weeks laſt paſt ſpent a great part of our time to borrow 200000 l. which if we cannot ſpeedily obtain, we aſſure our ſelves our Brethren of Scotland will reſt ſatisfied with ſo much of the 200000 l. as we are able to pay for the preſent. But we moſt earneſtly deſire, That whilſt ſome parts of your Papers preſs us for the Money, the Body of thoſe Papers, and your Speeches at Conferences, may not obſtruct the Loan. The people lend their Money on belief, That there will be no Breach amongſt us; That the Northern Counties, ſo conſiderable a part of this Kingdom, may not be deſtroyed; That the Kingdom will be eaſed of the Burthen of your Army; That we might be the better enabled to ſend Relief to Ireland: Now if the People collect out of your Speeches and Papers, That you who are the Commiſſioners for the Kingdom of Scotland, have doubt of a Breach amongſt us, and of a ſecond War, you do your ſelves give occaſion of obſtructing the means of obtaining Money, for which you ſo much preſs.

And thus having premiſed theſe neceſſary Conſiderations, we come to the Particulars in your large Paper.

We do affirm, That the Kingdom of Scotland hath no Right of Joint Exerciſe of Intereſt in diſpoſing of the Perſon of the King in the Kingdom of England. For England clearly being a free Kingdom, no other Kingdom hath Right of Exerciſe of Intereſt in it, but by Contract: And by how much any Kingdom hath otherwiſe Right of Exerciſe of Intereſt in it, by ſo much it is not free. Your Lordſhips will grant, the diſpoſing of the Perſon of the King is an Exerciſe of Intereſt; and you did grant at the Conference (though it be now left out in your Papers), That the Kingdom of Scotland hath no Right of Exerciſe of Intereſt in England, but by the Covenant and Treaties; which Covenant and Treaties give no Joint Power to the Kingdom of Scotland, concerning the diſpoſing of the Perſon of the King within the Kingdom of England; but doth oblige both Nations to preſerve, and not confound the Rights and Liberties of each, as by the Third Article of the Covenant will plainly appear; and the laſt Treaty is for your coming into England to aſſiſt us, that we might enjoy our particular Rights and Liberties.

The Words of the Third Article of the Covenant are, We ſhall with the ſame ſincerity, reality, and conſtancy, in our ſeveral Vocations, endeavour with our Eſtates and Lives mutually to preſerve the Rights and Privileges of the Parliaments, and the Liberties of the Kingdoms; and to preſerve and defend the King's Majeſty's Perſon and Authority, in the preſervation and defence of the true Religion, and Liberties of the Kingdoms: That the World may bear witneſs with our Conſciences of our Loyalty, and that we have no thoughts or intentions to diminiſh his Majeſty's juſt Power and Greatneſs.

From whence it is moſt evident, That the Rights and Privileges of the Parliaments, and Liberties of the Kingdoms, are in the firſt place to be preſerved; and this every one is to do in his ſeveral Vocation, and not to intermeddle within each others Precincts, but when and ſo far forth as they are Duly called thereunto, nor with each others proper Rights and Intereſts, which we are bound to preſerve, and ſo preſerve Diſtinct, elſe we break our Covenant; and we are to preſerve the King in his Perſon and Authority Relatively, (viz.) In the preſervation and defence of the true Religion and Liberties of the Kingdoms: And we do not deſire to take away your Right of Intereſt in the Perſon of the King; but we ſay, You have no Right of Intereſt, the King being in England: And we are ſo far from Claiming any Right for the Kingdom of England in this caſe, which in the like we would not give to our Brethren of Scotland, as we do freely and willingly declare, That if the King were Body in Scotland, we ſhould not claim any Joint Intereſt in diſpoſing of his perſon There.

And if your Argument for Inſeparability were to the queſtion, you might with much more reaſon have offered, That the King ſhould be ſix Months with us without your Conſent, your Army having diſpoſed of him ſix Months without our Conſent, and after that time then to have Intereſt by Joint Conſent. Your Lordſhips will not think but that both Houſes of the Parliament of England may as well be truſted with the diſpoſing of the Perſon of the King in England, as the Scots Army.

Your Diſcourſe, That the Perſon of the King is not to be reſtrained from his voluntary coming to either Kingdom, when the neceſſary Affairs of the Kingdoms do require it; is not to the queſtion, and not applicable to the Condition in which the King now is, as is fully declared in the Firſt Conſideration.

Your Inſtance, That Two being aſſociated of Lands, Stock, or the like (for thoſe of Parent, Maſter and Servant, have no relation to the preſent Debate) one may not diſpoſe of them without the Conſent of both; and thence infer, Much leſs may we, being aſſociated, diſpoſe of the Perſon of the King without your joint Conſent; theſe are not to the Caſe in queſtion, but do trouble the right underſtanding of it; for we are aſſociated in ſome common Ends for the good of both; but not aſſociated in that which is our ſeveral, diſtinct, and particular Rights, which is the only matter before us: And the diſpoſing of the Perſon of the King in the Kingdom of England, according to the Caſe in queſtion, is the particular Right of the Two Houſes of Parliament. The Kingdom of Scotland hath no more Right of joint Exerciſe of Intereſt of diſpoſing the Perſon of the King in the Kingdom of England, than they have Right of joint Exerciſe of Intereſt in our Inheritance, Lands, Stocks, or the like, which your ſelves bring as Examples to this Caſe.

From our Declaration of the 5th of Auguſt, 1645. ſent to the Lords States-General of the United Provinces, as recited by you, (viz.) They were joined by ſolemn Covenant made to Almighty God, and by League each to other, as one entire Body to proſecute this Cauſe, you cannot infer your Joint Right of diſpoſing the Perſon of the King in England; for that Declaration was in anſwer to an Embaſſy from the Lords States-General, deſiring to be admitted as Mediators for a Peace; which by the Eighth Article of the Treaty we were not to make, without the joint Conſent of the Kingdom of Scotland. And the words are not, That we are made one entire Body in all our Rights and Liberties; but, to prevent any ſuch Conſtruction as you put upon them, the words are, As one entire Body to proſecute this Cauſe: So as the being one entire Body, is As to proſecute the common Cauſe; which they may well do in their ſeveral Vocations and Callings, without confounding the ſeveral Intereſts of the Kingdoms, and not to be one entire Body in our particular Rights and Liberties, which is the only thing in queſtion. And as to that you call a notable Inſtance in that Declaration, viz. That by the Covenant both Houſes of Parliament, and many Thouſands of other his Majeſty's Subjects of England and Ireland, ſtand bound as well as we to hinder the ſetting up of the Church-Government by Biſhops in the Kingdom of Scotland: And that we as well as they ſtand bound to endeavour the Extirpation thereof in England and Ireland: We deſire it may be obſerved, That that Expreſſion in the Declaration is according to the Tenor of the Covenant, which obligeth us to act in our ſeveral Vocations, without confounding the particular Intereſts of the Kingdoms; and no words in that Declaration infer any other ſenſe; and your Inferences from the Covenant are directly againſt the Covenant, as doth before appear.

The Eighth Article of the Treaty is, That no Ceſſation, nor any Pacification or Agreement for Peace whatſoever, ſhall be made by either Kingdom, without the mutual Advice and Conſent of both Kingdoms, or their Committees in that behalf appointed;

[illegible] the Two Houses of the Parliament of England, or the Parliament or Convention of Estates in Scotland [illegible] in this Article; That therefore we cannot [illegible] joint Desires, we cannot therefore dispose of the Person of the King in the Kingdom of England, without our Consent, is thus clearly answered in the not making any [illegible] disposing the Person of the King [illegible] together; and it cannot from hence be inferred, [illegible] the place where the King shall reside [illegible] England, ought not to be at the Appointment of the Parliament of England.

We [illegible] will witness with us, That since our Covenant and Treaty we have not received any Dignities or Offices from the King, nor suffered any Foreigners to interpose in this Cause, or any Meſſengers to paſs between the King and Queen, or ſent any Committees to the King, without your Conſent, or done any thing with him that may admit colour of our making Peace without your joint Conſent: But if diſpoſing the Perſon of the King in England without joint Conſent, be a making of Peace, and a Breach of the Treaty, then it unanſwerably follows, That your Army hath made Peace with the King, and broken the Treaty, for they have diſpoſed of him without our Conſent, and ſince our Votes to the contrary.

If your Lordſhips had been pleaſed to have ſet down in your Paper the Ninth Article, you would never have drawn any Argument from thence for your joint Right in diſpoſing the Perſon of the King in England. The words are, That the Publick Faith of the Kingdom of Scotland ſhall be given to their Brethren of England, That neither their Entrance into, nor their Continuance in the Kingdom of England, ſhall be made uſe of to any other Ends than are therein expreſſed in the Covenant, and in the Articles of this Treaty. And that all matters of difference that ſhall happen to ariſe between the Subjects of the Two Nations, ſhall be reſolved and determined by the mutual Advice and Conſent of both Kingdoms, or by ſuch Committees as for this purpoſe ſhall be by them appointed, with the ſame Power as in the precedent Article.

Now from the very words of the Eighth and Ninth Articles, the differences to be reſolved and determined, are between the Subjects of the Two Nations; And in caſe the Two Houſes of the Parliament of England, or the Parliament, or Convention of Eſtates in Scotland do not ſit, are to be reſolved and determined by their Committees, who (as your Lordſhips conſtrue the Article) would have Power finally to reſolve and determine the Rights of both Kingdoms in the greateſt Caſes, and even without Inſtructions; the Caſes being ſo various, as the Parliament could not poſſibly foreſee all that might happen, to give Inſtructions in them: And therefore the Article, to avoid any ſuch Conſtruction, doth purpoſely provide, That the Reſolving and Determining of the Differences in this Article, are only to be the Differences between Subject and Subject. We ſhall not think that our Brethren united with us in Covenant and Treaty, coming into the Kingdom to our Aſſiſtance, will inſiſt to claim Right of Joint Intereſt to diſpoſe of the Perſon of the King, he being in this Kingdom, and alledge the Ninth Article of the Treaty for it, which from the beginning to the ending provides againſt it: Your Lordſhips may with as much reaſon argue, That when you have poſſeſſion of our Towns, or other Rights, if you do differ with us about them, you may, becauſe you differ, claim joint Intereſt in them, for that all differences are to be reſolved by the joint Advice and Conſent of both, and alledge the Ninth Article of the Treaty for it. And now we hope your Lordſhips will reſt ſatisfied, That we claim nothing againſt the Covenant, Treaty, or our Declaration of the [illegible] of August 1645. ſent to the Lords States General of the United Provinces, but in purſuance of them.

And as to your Lordſhips Argument, That you may expect a Conjunction of Councils in diſpoſing the Perſon of the King, becauſe the Houſes did think fit, that in the managing of this War there ſhould be a Conjunction of the Councils of both Kingdoms, in reference to the Engliſh, as well as unto

We have already answered what you here repeat, for the King's voluntary Residence in either Kingdom; and have already told you (with the Reasons why) that it is not to the Question, whether is the King in a condition for the Exercise of the Duty of his Place; but if he were, your Lordships may rest assured, the Two Kingdoms will never differ about his residing in the Kingdom of Scotland, for his doing the Duties of his Place there.

Your Lordships proceed, That it could not be expected from the Army under the Command of Sir Thomas Fairfax, (if they were in Scotland for your Assistance in like Case, as your Army is for ours) to deliver up the Person of the King, neither can it be expected from your Army.

This Argument might have been urged to us, if we had ever made any Allegation to that effect: But we shall say even (your Lordships own words) the Army under Sir Thomas Fairfax, in the like case, on the like Resolution of the Parliament of Scotland, ought to deliver the Person of the King in Scotland, to be disposed by the Parliament of Scotland. And now your Lordships receiving Satisfaction in this your main Argument, we shall not doubt but you will acknowledge our Right, as we do yours, and proceed accordingly.

In your next Argument you return (with an heavy Tax upon us) to the Law and common Practice of all Nations, not to deliver the meanest Subject fled to them, though for the greatest Crimes; and amplify it by our resisting the Act of Remanding, in the Fourth of King James: And if the meanest be not to be delivered, how will the World abroad condemn your Army for so Base and Dishonourable an Act, to deliver up the King, having cast himself into your hands, to be disposed at our Arbitrement. For (as in) your words of another Nation must be taken, we claiming the Right of disposing of him in England.

This rightly understood, will give Satisfaction to all the World in the Justness of our Desires; and we shall put the Substance of the Argument in such words, as in rightly placing the Strength of it, none may be deluded.

It is thus: Every Kingdom challengeth the disposal of the Persons within their own Kingdom, though they be the Subjects of another Kingdom: And on this ground it is clear, That the Kingdom of Scotland hath not the disposal of the meanest of their own Subjects, in whom they have the sole Right, when they are in the Kingdom of England; much less the disposal of the Person of the King, who is in England, in whom you allow the Kingdom of England to have a joint Right.

[See Page [illegible]]

Your Army in England (we follow your Argument in the Law of Nations) cannot be conſidered in any other condition than our own Armys: And may any Nation ſay, if the King were in our Army, that it were the leaſt baſeneſs or diſhonour (but their duty) for them to deliver up the Perſon of the King to be diſpoſed by both Houſes of Parliament. The King is not in the Kingdom of Scotland, and your Army is in this Kingdom of England; Is it not by your own Argument diſhonourable (we ſay no more) for us not to diſpoſe of the King in England? And we are confident your Lordſhips will reſt ſatisfied, that there was no need of that expreſſion, that the two Houſes of Parliament ſhould claim or require that, which was Baſe or Diſhonourable for you to do. To what you ſay that the King caſt himſelf upon your Army, and uſe the like phraſes in ſo many places of your Papers; we ſhall only ſay, we had rather enjoy our own Rights, than debate upon what Grounds the King came to your Army, or if he had none, why he ſhould think himſelf more ſure in that Army, than in that of Sir Thomas Fairfax, or in that Engliſh Army that joyned with yours in the ſervice before Newark: Or why Monſieur Montreul a French Agent, to whoſe Lodging the King firſt came, was ſo many weeks at Southwell, the head Quarter of your Army before Newark, notwithſtanding exceptions were taken by the Engliſh Committee, againſt his the ſaid Agent's being there.

And now we come to thoſe you call Objections, which being of your Lordſhips penning, and alſo the Anſwers to them, may be the more eaſily ſuited to your deſires. But the matter in debate being, that the Kingdom of Scotland hath no right of Joynt exerciſe of Intereſt in diſpoſing the Perſon of the King in the Kingdom of England. We ſhall place this our Aſſertion before your ſeveral Arguments or Objections againſt it, and then give Anſwers to them.

ASSERTION.

We do affirm that the Kingdom of Scotland hath no right of Joynt exerciſe of Intereſt in diſpoſing the Perſon of the King, in the Kingdom of England.

1. Objection or Argument of the Scots Commiſſioners.

THAT it is ſufficiently known, That the Scottiſh Army came not into this Kingdom in the Nature of Auxiliaries, for when it was deſired by the Parliament of England, that the Kingdom of Scotland, ſhould ſend an Auxiliary Army into this Kingdom, to be ſubject to the Directions and Reſolutions of both Houſes, it was abſolutely refuſed, as may appear by the ſeveral Papers about that purpoſe yet extant; The Kingdom of Scotland did foreſee, and conſider how prejudicial it was to forſake their own Peace, and what infinite troubles, loſſes, and unavoidable danger, their engagement with the Parliament of England, againſt ſo powerful and prevailing an Enemy would bring upon the Kingdom of Scotland, and as they regarded not the large Offers, nor the Threats of the other ſide for all their Proſperity, ſo there was no offer of Pay, or other worldly Advantage whatſoever from the Houſes of Parliament, which could have induced them to undertake ſo hazardous and deſperate a War. It was the good of Religion, King, and Kingdoms they ſet before their eyes; in order to which end they accounted nothing too dear unto them, and having reſolved to engage in this Cauſe, for aſſiſtance of their Brethren therein, they did not ſtand upon Conditions, but without reſpect to the ſeaſon of the year, the great ſtrength of the Enemy, and other diſcouragements, they did in a ſhort time levy an Army at their own charge, and becauſe of the many Burthens then lying upon this Kingdom, were content for the preſent, to accept of a ſumm towards the monthly entertainment of that Army, amounting to little more than half Pay, and to ſuperſede all demands for further recompence, till the Wars ſhould be at an end. And ſeeing the Kingdom of Scotland was to quit their own Peace, and equally with England, to undergo the hazard of the War, it was found reaſonable, that the Proſecution thereof and the making of the Conditions of Peace after the War, ſhould be with joint adviſe and conſent of both Kingdoms, and according to theſe grounds, a Covenant was agreed upon for the Reformation of Religion, and for Preſervation of the Liberties of the Kingdoms, and of the Kings Perſon and Authority, together with a Treaty, wherein

An. 1646. wherein it is declared that the Scottiſh Army ſhall be commanded by a General appointed by the Eſtates of Scotland, and ſhall be ſubject to ſuch Reſolutions and Directions as are and ſhall be mutually agreed upon, and concluded between the Kingdoms, or their Committees in that behalf appointed for purſuance of the ends of the Covenant, of which one is to defend and preſerve his Majeſties Perſon.

Anſwer to the firſt Objection of the Scots Commiſſioners.

VVERE the things in this Objection ſo as they are ſet down, yet it would not follow that therefore the Scottiſh Army ought not to deliver up the King to be diſpoſed by both Houſes, without the joynt advice and conſent of the Kingdom of Scotland. And here we might leave all that is contained in this Objection; but for that many things in it, when rightly recited (now at leaſt exceedingly miſtaken) are proofs for our Aſſertion; and becauſe from the matter of fact, miſ-recited, there are many reflections upon us of ingratitude. We ſhall make a true ſtate of this buſineſs from the truth of the matter of fact.

By the fourth Article of the Treaty, the charge of Levying, Arming, and bringing your Forces together, furniſhed with a Train of Artillery, was to be Computed according to the Rates, as if the Kingdom of Scotland were to raiſe them for themſelves, and for the preſent to be done by the Kingdom of Scotland upon account to be repayed, or ſatisfied, when the Peace of the two Kingdoms is ſetled, yet who ſhall read the words in your Paper (viz.) that you did in a ſhort time levy an Army at your own Charge, would little have expected, that that which you call your own charge, was to be repayed.

The fifth Article that this Army be payed as if the Kingdom of Scotland were to employ the ſame on their own occaſions, and towards the defraying thereof, it not amounting to a full months pay (theſe are the words) not as now in your Paper, LITTLE MORE THAN HALF A MONTHS PAY, Be monthly paid thirty thouſand Pounds Sterling by the Parliament of England, and if the State of Scotland ſhall have juſt cauſe to demand further ſatisfaction, when the Peace of both Kingdoms is ſetled (for what?) for the pains, hazard, and charges they have undergone in the ſame, they ſhall by way of Brotherly aſſiſtance have due recompence made unto them by the Parliament of England.

And when we finally agreed upon a ſum in groſs, the reſidue of the whole months Pay proportioned according to your own Rates, was given in, and claimed by your eſtimate, and together with all other demands for raiſing and maintaining your Forces, and for your pains, hazard, and charges ſatisfied by us, in the groſs ſum of four hundred thouſand Pounds agreed to be paid unto you in lieu of all demands whatſoever. Can we now in reaſon conceive, that ſuch an Army in the Kingdom of England ſo to be raiſed, and paid wholly by the Kingdom of England, ſhould claim any right to detain the Perſon of the King in their hands, from his being diſpoſed in England by the two Houſes of Parliament, if we had foreſeen as much as your Lordſhips ſay you did, there would have been no ſuch debate as now is.

It is moſt true, that by our Declaration of the 8. day of November 1642. and 27 of June 1643. when we invited your coming in, and when on the 19 day of July 1643. Our Committees went to Treat with you, to come to our aſſiſtance (whoſe arrival at Edinburgh was the 7. of Auguſt,) Our Enemies were powerful and prevailing. It is alſo as true that all might have been loſt, had not the good providence of Almighty God, mercifully and ſeaſonably interpoſed in our greateſt ſtraights, and mightily changed the State of our affairs between the time of our invitation of you, and your coming in; between which time ninety three Colours of Horſe of the Earl of Newcaſtle his Army, were utterly defeated in Lincoln-ſhire, his old Army broken before Hull, the King's Army (where himſelf was in Perſon) waſted at the Siege of Glouceſter, That Siege raiſed, the City relieved, and that Army broken at the Battel of Newbury, with ſome other happy ſucceſſes at Alton, Arundal, and other places; all which was to the great weakning of the Enemy and ſtrengthning of our Party.

And whereas you will ſeem to intimate that for the good of Religion, King, and Kingdom, you did voluntarily forſake your own Peace, though you had conſidered how prejudicial it would be, and what infinite loſs, trouble and danger, your ingagement with the Parliament of England would bring to the Parliament of Scotland; yet we deſire you again ſeriouſly to conſider whether Scotland could have continued in Peace, if the King had here prevailed againſt us; had not you more hazarded your Peace by ſitting ſtill, and letting a powerful and prevailing Enemy invade Scotland? Hath not laſt Year's Experience ſhewed you, what a Party he might have found there? Had it not been a greater Charge to defend your ſelves upon your own account, than by aſſiſting this Kingdom to prevent your own ruin at our Charge? We cannot believe you can think you were out of Danger, though it was then your lot to be the furtheſt from it of the two Kingdoms.

We did never imagine, that the Treaty (no way diſ-advantageous to you) ſhould be lookt upon as it ſeems it is, by theſe Words, We ſtood not upon Conditions; as if we ought to give you much better Conditions: Certainly if we, without any other relation, look only into the nature of the Conditions, Auxiliaries might be had (and are daily had in other parts and of your Nation) on the ſame or lower conditions. We ſhould moſt gladly have omitted theſe things, but that they are miſ-recited in your Paper, and ſo often preſt upon us: And we hope we ſhall both take notice of mutual Obligements to make our Brotherly Union more firm.

We ſhall before the World at all times manifeſt, that we ſhall go along with them that ſet the higheſt value on your Aſſiſtance, but we deſire your Lordſhips would not, by inſiſting upon your own Deſerts upon miſtaken grounds, lay Reflections of Ingratitude upon us, of which you know we are not Guilty. We have before ſo fully anſwered your Arguments from the Covenant and Treaty, and ſhewed that they directly make good our Reſolutions, as we ſhall ſay nothing in this place to them; but obſerve, that in this Argument you mention the Defence of the King twice from the Covenant, yet in both places leave out the Words, in the Preſervation and Defence of the true Religion and Liberties of the Kingdoms.

ASSERTION.

We do affirm that the Kingdom of Scotland hath no right of joint exerciſe of Intereſt in diſpoſing the Perſon of the King, in the Kingdom of England.

2. Objection or Argument of the Scots Commiſſioners.

THat although his Majeſty riding one days journey, might wholly ſubvert the grounds of this Objection; Yet we ſhall not inſiſt upon this Anſwer, becauſe we conceive it toucheth not the true ſtate of the Queſtion. It hath been already cleared what is not, and what is the ſtate of the Queſtion, which being remembred, we do aſſert, That the King coming voluntarily to the Scots Army, they cannot in duty deliver him againſt his will to the Houſes of Parliament, without Conſent of the Kingdom of Scotland; for the being in England takes not away the relation between the King and his Subjects of the Kingdom of Scotland, nor ought it to impede the performance of the mutual Duties founded upon that Relation, for Allegiance hath no limitation of place, being grounded upon the Law of Nature as well as the Law Municipal, and ſo is rather univerſal than local; the difference of Place takes not away the Relation and mutual Duties between Parents and Children, and it is not the Place, but the Relation which gives Intereſt to the diſpoſing the Perſon of the King. As his being in England takes not away the Relation between him and his Subjects of Scotland, ſo it doth not infringe the mutual Obligations and ſolemn Engagements between the Kingdoms for joint Counſel in proſecution of the War, and ſetling of Peace: The King's coming to the Scottiſh Army being an emergency of our joint War, and the right diſpoſal of his Perſon, the only means (for the preſent) of our joint Security and Peace; neither can the King's being in England prejudge any Right or Priviledge of either Kingdom. It is the fundamental Right and Priviledge of the Parliamant of Scotland, and the Liberty of that Kingdom, (as we acknowledge it to be the Right and Priviledge of the Kingdom of England) that the Perſon of their King ought not to be diſpoſed of, but with their Advice and Conſent. The place of the King's Reſidence (as was anſwered to us, when in the large Treaty it was deſired his Majeſty might ſometime reſide in Scotland) is at his own Election in either of the Kingdoms, as exigence of Affairs ſhall require, and

An. 1646. he ſhall think fit; or elſe muſt be determined by the mutual Advice and Conſent of both Kingdoms.

From all which grounds it is apparent, that the Kingdom where he reſides for the time, may do no Act which may hinder his Majeſty to perform the Office and Duty of a King to the Kingdom from which he is abſent in Perſon, nor impede him to repair to that Kingdom, when the Affairs thereof ſhall neceſſarily require it; otherwiſe if the Kingdom where his Majeſty reſides hath the ſole Intereſt and Right to diſpoſe of his Perſon, the Eſtate of the Parliament of Scotland might upon former Occaſions, and may now, in caſe the King and Prince ſhall repair to Scotland, lawfully detain them there, and make it the place of the ordinary Reſidence of them, and their Poſterity, without the Conſent of the Kingdom of England, which we acknowledge could not be done, without a manifeſt Prejudice and Injury to this Kingdom. Wherefore we cannot but conclude, that whereſoever the King be, in Scotland or England, he being the King of both, ought to be diſpoſed of for the good, and with the conſent of both Kingdoms: And if it be conſidered, That the Scottiſh Army was invited and called into this Kingdom by both Houſes in a Treaty, for proſecuting the ends of a ſolemn League and Covenant, whereof one is to preſerve and defend his Majeſty's Perſon, there can remain no doubt concerning the Exerciſe of that Right and Intereſt in this Kingdom: And therefore it ſeems very ſtrange, that when upon invitation they are come into England, as for other ends, ſo to defend his Majeſty's Perſon, their being in England ſhould be made uſe of as an Argument why they ſhould deliver up the Perſon of their King, to be diſpoſed of as both Houſes ſhall think fit; whereas it is alledged that the Treaty extends no farther than to the ordering and regulating of the Scottiſh Forces in relation to the War; although this be really anſwered from the nature of the thing, the King's coming to the Scots Army being an emergency of the War, and ſo the delivering of his Perſon comes under the Regulation and Direction of both Kingdoms, or their Committees, as an act of the Scottiſh Army, yet that all doubt may be removed, we farther add, That it is clear from the third Article of the Treaty, that the Scottiſh Army is to receive the Directions of both Kingdoms, or of their Committees, in all things which may concern the purſuance of the ends of the Covenant and Treaty, whether in Relation to Peace or War. In the Eighth Article of the Treaty, no Ceſſation, Pacification or Agreement for Peace whatſoever is to be made by either Kingdom, or the Army of either Kingdom, without the advice and conſent of both Kingdoms.

And in the ninth Article, all differences ariſing between the Subjects of the two Nations are to be reſolved and determined by the mutual advice and conſent of both Kingdoms.

Anſwer to the ſecond Objection or Argument.

HErein is repeated what you have ſaid before, ſome things are new, as that it begins with, (viz.) although his Majeſty riding one day's Journey might wholy ſubvert the grounds of this Objection, yet, &c. But we ſhall never ſuppoſe the King being in England, our Brethren of Scotland will take him out of this Kingdom, neither will ſuppoſe what differences between the two Kingdoms one day's Journey might make? It's one thing if the King had come duly unto you into Scotland, and clear another his coming to your Army in the Kingdom of England. You here repeat the King's voluntary coming to your Army, and we ſay we deſire not to debate on what Grounds he came; We never ſaid his being in England took away your relation to him, but that you have no right of diſpoſing of his Perſon in this Kingdom; and by a former Argument of your own from the Common Law and Practice of all Nations, his being in England gives us a Right, if we had it not otherwiſe. And we deſire your Lordſhips to conſider, that by your Argument of the relation between the King and his Subjects, when you alſo aſſert the right of mutual performance and exerciſe of them, as well without as within each Kingdom reſpectively, in England as Scotland, or in Scotland as England, you confound the particular rights of the two Kingdoms, which would be a great violation of the Covenant: And if you may argue for your joint conſent becauſe the King's coming to you was an Emergency of War, you may by the ſame Reaſon claim a joint Intereſt in the diſpoſing the Northern Counties, and ſay they fell into your hands as an Emergency of War.

If in your Allegation of the fundamental Right of the Kingdom of Scotland and the Liberty of that Kingdom, you mean in Scotland, we did never diſpute againſt it; but if you mean in England, then if we had taken the King before our Conjunction by the Covenant and Treaty, our diſpoſing of him without your Conſent had been againſt the fundamental rights of the Parliament of Scotland, which we are confident you will not ſay.

And your Lordſhips having agreed at the Conference, that the Kingdom of Scotland hath no right of exerciſe of Intereſt in the Kingdom of England but by the Covenant and Treaty, and the two Houſes of Parliament did not enter into that Conjunction with our Brethren of Scotland, to put the particular Rights of the Kingdom of England into a worſe, but into a better condition by that Conjunction, and the Covenant and Treaty do provide accordingly; and that we have not parted with this Right by the Covenant and Treaty, we have formerly ſhewed.

You cannot apply the large Treaty, concerning the King's voluntary reſidency, to this queſtion, whilſt the King is not in a condition of exerciſing the duties of his Place, or diſpoſing of his Perſon into any of his Kingdoms at his own Election, as in times of ſetled Peace; and if the King had been in Scotland in ſuch a caſe as ours is, we ſhould not have ſaid more to your detaining of him, than we deſire you ſhould now ſay to us. And whereas your Lordſhips ſay, It ſeems ſtrange that you being come in upon invitation, as for other ends, ſo to defend his Majeſty's Perſon, your now being in England, ſhould be made uſe of for delivery of the King to be diſpoſed by us, we underſtand not why the diſpoſing of the Perſon of the King in England by both Houſes of Parliament, and the defence of his Perſon according to the Covenant, may not well conſiſt together. We demand to diſpoſe of the King, becauſe the King is in England, and you of all other, who come to defend our Rights, ſhould not violate them; and it would be much more ſtrange, if any ſhould think that when we invited you, that by your aſſiſtance we might preſerve our Intereſts, that we ſhould invite you to diſpoſe of our Intereſts.

You Argue from the third Article, the words whereof are, That the Army be commanded by a General appointed by the States of Scotland, and ſubject to ſuch Reſolutions and Directions, as are and ſhall be agreed and concluded on mutually between the two Kingdoms, or by Committees appointed by them in that behalf, for purſuance of the ends above mentioned; which are the ends expreſſed in the Covenant; we ſhall ſpeak more of them in our Anſwer to your next Objection.

You apply, (but improperly) this third Article for your joint Right of diſpoſing with us the Perſon of the King in the Kingdom of England, and why? becauſe to defend and preſerve his Perſon is one of the ends in the Covenant; you may as well ſay you have right of joint diſpoſing all our Laws and Liberties; for to defend and preſerve them, is one (and a main one) of the ends in the Covenant.

Your Arguments from the ninth Article are before anſwered, and here you again alledge the Covenant; and here again, as in the former Objection or Argument, when you mention that you are to preſerve the Perſon of the King, you leave out the ſubſequent Words, In Preſervation and Defence of the true Religion, and Liberties of the Kingdom.

ASSERTION.

We do affirm, That the Kingdom of Scotland hath no right of joint exerciſe of Intereſt in diſpoſing the Perſon of the King in the Kingdom of England.

3. Objection or Argument of the Scots Commiſſioners.

NO ſooner did the King come to the Scottiſh Army, but the very ſame day, the Committee of Eſtates of Scotland reſiding with that Army, did acquaint the Commiſſioners of both Houſes therewith, and not ſatisfying themſelves with this, the day following they writ a Letter to the Committee of Scotland reſiding at Edenborough, and another to the Committee of both Kingdoms here, (which was communicated to both Houſes) deſiring the Advice of this Kingdom, as in a matter of com-

An. 1646. mon Intereſt, and declaring they would obey the joynt Reſolutions of both Kingdoms, yet no anſwer or advice was returned unto them, either from the Houſes or their Commiſſioners, but immediately after the ſurrender of Newark, they received information that five thouſand Horſe and Dragoons from Sir Thomas Fairfax's Army, were upon their march towards them Northward (which the Honourable Houſe of Peers was pleaſed to give order to ſtop) there being no Enemy in thoſe parts to be oppoſed, upon conſideration whereof, the Quarters wherein they had ſtayed during the Siege of Newark, being extreamly exhauſted, and the ſervice for which they came thither being performed, for preventing of miſtakes or new troubles between the Kingdoms, they removed into Yorkſhire: And the King as he came unto them of his own accord, did voluntarily march along with them, upon ſeveral occaſions afterwards they and we did earneſtly deſire the Honourable Houſes to ſend a Committee to joyn and cooperate with the Committee of Eſtates there upon the place, in all things according to the Treaty, but no anſwer was returned, and from time to time, the Houſes acquainted with the proceedings in that Army, which were according to the Covenant, and the known Reſolutions of both Kingdoms, to debar all ſuch of either or both Kingdoms as had been in Arms againſt the Parliament from coming into their Quarters, or to the Court, or to the King's Perſon, according to the deſire of the Houſe of Peers; And whereas it is affirmed, that by the Treaty, the Scottiſh Army ought to do nothing without a joynt reſolution of both Kingdoms, or their Committees, there is no ſuch Clauſe in the Treaty, but they are to be ſubject to ſuch reſolutions as are and ſhall be agreed upon, and concluded mutually between the Kingdoms, or their Committees, as by Ordinance of Parliament the Army under the Command of the Earl of Eſſex, or of Sir Thomas Fairfax was to receive and obſerve the directions of the Committee of both Kingdoms ſitting at Weſtminſter; but in caſe no new directions were ſent unto them, they were left to former Orders, if any were, or otherwiſe to their own judgment and diſcretion. There was never any ſuch reſolution agreed upon between the Kingdoms or their Committees, as that the Scottiſh Army ſhould not receive the King, if he came unto them: But 'tis an agreement between the Kingdoms (in the Covenant) that they ſhould preſerve and defend his Majeſties Perſon; And (in the Declarations of both Kingdoms) to reſcue him from the common Enemy: So that the Scottiſh Army having often deſired to know the direction and advice of the Houſes of Parliament concerning the King, and no new directions being ſignified unto them, according to the Treaty they were to obſerve the directions and reſolutions formerly agreed upon between the Kingdoms. And as the Scots Army do and will ever acknowledge, that they claim no power to diſpoſe of the King's Perſon, but are ſubject to, and ſhall be ready to follow whatſoever both Kingdoms ſhall agree upon as beſt for the ing and Kingdoms; ſo their keeping and preſerving his Majeſties Perſon (as they would do to any Perſon of his eminency and Relation, in an Army or Garriſon Town) without the leaſt thought of hindring his voluntary return to his Parliament, cannot be reputed or called a diſpoſing of his Perſon.

The third Anſwer.

THE truth is thus; on Tueſday the fifth of May laſt, our Committees before Newark had notice the King was come to Southwell, the head Quarter of your Army there, before they heard any thing from your Committees of it, who ſent two of their Number to give our Commitees notice of the King's coming to Southwell; which two did promiſe to deliver to the reſt of their Number the deſires of our Committees, That the King might not remove from Southwell. And afterwards our Committees hearing the ſame day the King came to your Army, that your Army was preparing to march, told your Committees of it, and of their former deſire, That the King might remain at Southwell: your Committees denied there was any intention in your Army to march. And to the deſire of the King's not removing from Southwell, they ſaid, he was gone to Kelham before they heard from our Committees. Whereupon our Committees earneſtly preſſed them the King might return back to Southwell, and not to be at Kelham, where the body of your Army lay, to cajole, or diſturb your Souldiers; but could not obtain the conſent of your Committee thereunto. The next day our Committees hearing that your Army had diſpoſed of their Proviſions, and ſent in for many Carriages, did again complain to your Committees, who again alſo abſolutely denyed it, and ſaid nothing ſhould be done without our Committees having notice: Nevertheleſs, the next day being Thurſday, your Army marched away, and took the King with them; and when your Army were on their march, and not before, ſome of your Committees acquainted ours with it. Now it is moſt evident, that by the Treaty our Committees being equally to command and direct your Army as your own, and your Army obliged by the Treaty equally to obey them as a joynt Committee, if you have any right becauſe the King came to your Army, the King came to our Committees as to yours, and they had in that reſpect equal power to diſpoſe of him. But what was done is before expreſſed.

You ſay you did write to the Houſes, and your Paper intimates one reaſon of your going was, becauſe you heard not from the Houſes: You wrote on Wedneſday, and march'd away the next morning: Could you expect a return from the two Houſes in that time, the diſtance being 100 miles? You alledge your march was after the ſurrender of Newark, when as it was only after the Commiſſioners for the Treaty had agreed, but before the Agreement was ſigned by the Committees and Governour of Newark, and the Town was not ſurrendred till the next day, which was done on ſome emergency a day ſooner than was agreed on by that Treaty.

And ſhall we think that your Army ſhould march away on the rumor of 5000 Horſe and Dragoons of Sir Thomas Fairfax his Army marching Northward? But however, there was no ſuch thing, nor did any ſuch Order of the Houſe of Peers, as your Lordſhips mention, ever come to the Army of Sir Thomas Fairfax; neither did the General, Lieutenant-General, nor any other Officer that ever they heard of, know of any ſuch Order, till your Lordſhips mentioned it in your Paper of the 20th of October laſt. And if they had marched, they are under the Command of the Parliament, and have ſhewed themſelves faithful and ſerviceable, and God hath exceedingly bleſſed their ſervice to the good of both Kingdoms.

This being the true ſtate of that buſineſs, our Committee of both Houſes being upon the place at the Siege of Newark, and not ſo much as adviſed with by your Committees, what was fit to be done with the Perſon of the King (the diſpoſing of whoſe Perſon with your joynt conſent you now make a matter of ſo high concernment) but your Army contrary to engagement not to remove without the knowledge of our Committee, removing and taking the King with them, without any notice given to our Committee before their march, though nothing but a River parted the two Armies, with which our Committees did then reſide. Your Lordſhips will now think our Committees had reaſon to deſire to return; and there was little encouragement for any other Committee to go down to your Army, eſpecially conſidering that you took Carlile from the Engliſh Forces there, againſt the conſent of the Committee then upon the place. And that when your Army was at Brambam-Moor, a little before the King took Leiceſter, (the King then being very ſtrong, and our affairs in a hazardous condition) they were earneſtly preſſed by our Committee, then a joynt Committee with them, according to the Treaty to march Southwards; but contrary to their deſires, and againſt their conſent, your Army marched away Northward.

It's true, that you ſent out Orders to debar all ſuch of both or either Kingdoms as had been in Arms againſt the Parliament, from coming into your Quarters, or to the Court, or to the Perſon of the King: And 'tis as true, that they did come notwithſtanding that Order, and yet no Man puniſh'd for breach of thoſe Orders, that ever we heard of.

Your Lordſhips ſay, there is no ſuch clauſe in the Treaty, as that the Scotch Army ſhould do nothing without a joynt Reſolution of both Kingdoms, or their Committees; and thence infer, you having no joynt Reſolution to the contrary, you might march away. But it is moſt evident from your Argument (for your example, the Army under the Earl of Eſſex or Sir Thomas Fairfax is not at all applicable to your inference) that 'tis wholly in your power whether the Kingdom of England ſhall ever joyn in directing of your Army or not. You had no Committee for fifteen weeks before Newark, and all that time our Committee could not order your Army for want of yours to joyn with them; when yours did come, they having a negative voice, did not agree to our Committees deſires for the King's ſtay at Southwell, or acquaint them with your Armies going away, but denied it to them.

An. 1646. them. So as that main thing in the Treaty, to join in ordering your Army, is both by your Practice and Aſſertion in your Paper rendred uſeleſs.

And in this Argument alſo is the Covenant recited for the defence of the Perſon of the King, and the words, In the preſervation of Religion, and the Liberties of the Kingdoms (a main clauſe, without which the other part ought never to be mentioned) are left out. Certainly, my Lords, we ſhould never have argued thus from the Covenant and Treaty. And here you ſay again as formerly, Your Army claims no right to diſpoſe of the King: But we ſay that de facto they do diſpoſe of him, and muſt by your Argument ever do ſo, unleſs we agree to the joint conſent of the Kingdom of Scotland for diſpoſing of the King in England; and that from ſuch grounds as, if admitted, would intereſt the Kingdom of Scotland in the Government of the Kingdoms of England and Ireland, elſe you will not conſent; and unleſs you conſent, you ſay your Army ought not to part with him: So as he is to be diſpoſed by you in England without our Conſent, but not by us in this Kingdom without your Conſent; which ſure cannot be found in the Covenant.

In the next place is that which you call a fourth Objection: We ſhall place our Aſſertion, and recite what you call your Anſwer in your own Words.

ASSERTION.

We do affirm, That the Kingdom of Scotland hath no right of joint exerciſe of intereſt in diſpoſing the Perſon of the King in the Kingdom of England.

The fourth Objection or Argument of the Scots Commiſſioners.

THere is a wide and manifeſt difference betwixt the relation the Scottiſh Army hath to any Subject of England, and the relation they have to their King; which are ſufficiently diſtinguiſhed in the third and fourth Articles of the Covenant: For by the one they are mutually obliged to preſerve and defend his Majeſty's Perſon; and by the other they are obliged to indeavour that all Incendiaries and Dividers between the King and his People, or betwixt the Kingdoms, be brought to Tryal and condign Puniſhment before the ſupream Judicatures of the Kingdoms reſpectively: And the Kingdom of Scotland hath equal Right and Intereſt with the Kingdom of England in the diſpoſal of the Perſon of the King, which they cannot pretend unto concerning the Perſon of any Subject of England.

The fourth Anſwer.

THis contradicts what you have formerly ſaid, That one coming to another Nation ought not to be remanded, though for the greateſt crime.

And let your Lordſhips conſider, that your Army in England is not the Kingdom of Scotland. And here alſo you recite the Covenant, as to the defence of his Majeſty's Perſon, but omit the ſubſequent words, in the preſervation of the true Religion, and Liberties of the Kingdoms. And as all Perſons in both Kingdoms who have taken the Covenant, have bound themſelves before Almighty God, to defend the King's Perſon in the defence of the true Religion, and Liberties of the Kingdoms; ſo are they to do it only in their ſeveral Vocations, without intrenching upon each others Rights and Privileges: For which reaſon alſo Incendiaries were reſerved to the tryal of the ſupream Judicatories of the Kingdoms Reſpectively, that their ſeveral juriſdictions might not be prejudged or confounded.

That which you call your fifth Anſwer, we ſhall alſo ſet down.

ASSER-

ASSERTION.

We do affirm, That the Kingdom of Scotland hath no right of joint exerciſe of intereſt, in diſpoſing of the Perſon of the King in the Kingdom of England.

The fifth Objection or Argument of the Scots Commiſſioners.

I*T hath been ſufficiently anſwered before, that the* Scottiſh Army neither hath, nor will take upon them to diſpoſe of the King. He came unto them without Capitulation or Treaty, his Reſidence with them is voluntary and free, and they do nothing which may hinder him to come to his Houſes of Parliament; but if the Kingdom of Scotland ſhould conſent to the deſire of the Houſes, that they may have the ſole diſpoſal of the Perſon of the King, it being that which comes in the place of the Peace and Security of both Kingdoms, they would really quit the right and intereſt they have, by the Eighth Article of the Treaty concerning the making of a Peace. For which ſoever of the Kingdoms is acknowledged to have the ſole diſpoſal of the King, may, without the other, make Peace with him, when, how, and in what terms they pleaſe.

The fifth Anſwer.

IT's moſt true, it hath often been ſet down in your Papers, That your Army neither doth nor will take upon them to diſpoſe of the King: Yet we know that de facto they do diſpoſe of him. You ſay, He came without Capitulation or Treaty: We again deſire you will not put us upon that debate. You alledge that his reſidence is voluntary and free, yet you ſent us word that you had ſet a ſtrong guard upon him; and you cannot ſay, that the Covenant, Treaty, or fundamental Right of the Scottiſh Nation are, that he ſhould be in voluntary freedom with Us, but in reſtraint with You.

You argue, That the ſole diſpoſal of the King comes in place of Peace; which is not ſo, unleſs you will grant that you have now made Peace: for you have the ſole diſpoſal. But all this is before more at large.

ASSERTION.

We do affirm, That the Kingdom of Scotland hath no right of joint exerciſe of intereſt in diſpoſing the Perſon of the King in the Kingdom of England.

The ſixth Objection or Argument of the Scots Commiſſioners.

W*E will not diſpute what Power the Houſes of Parliament formerly had to diſpoſe of the Perſon of their King; but whatſoever Power or right they have, the like is due to the Parliament of* Scotland; and ſo the Perſon of the King being common to both, and indiviſible, cannot be diſpoſed of but by conſent of both Kingdoms. It were another queſtion indeed, if it were as in former times, if we had different Kings, if there were not an Union of the Kingdoms under one Head and Monarch, if there were neither Covenant nor Treaty between the Kingdoms: But ſince all theſe are, and that the Peace and Security of both Kingdoms is ſo much concerned in the diſpoſal of the King, not any one of them without the other can juſtly pretend to the ſole Judgment and Right to determine what is beſt and moſt expedient for the Safety and Security of both; nor can it in reaſon be made an Argument that the one Kingdom diſtruſts the other, becauſe the one will not renounce and reſign all Right and Intereſt they have in the Perſon of the King, and matter of their own Security and Peace to the Judgment and Determination of the other: Otherwiſe, according to this Argument, where there is any truſt, there ſhould be no contract between Perſon and Perſon, nor Treaty between Nations: Or if there be any Treaty or Agreement, the performance or not performance of it is to be left to arbitrement. But we cannot ſee that this doth argue any Diffidence or Diſtruſt, more than when private Perſons lending Money to the Publick, deſire Security, and will not depend upon pleaſure: And therefore though it is not to be queſtioned but the Houſes of Parliament would diſpoſe of the Perſon of the King, ſo as might conſiſt with their duty in performing the Covenant and Treaty; yet this can be no Argument why the Scottiſh Army ſhould neglect their duty, or the Kingdom of Scotland quit the intereſt and right they have in the Perſon of the King.

The ſixth Anſwer.

WE have never alledged that the Parliament of Scotland hath not the like exerciſe of intereſt in Scotland as we deſire to have in England, and yet this is often objected againſt us. But we do aver the right of exerciſe of intereſt is diſtinct to each Nation: And from your own Argument, if we do not deny this right to Scotland, why ſhould you deny it to England? The Union of the Kingdoms under one Head doth no more confound the exerciſe of particular rights, than if under ſeveral Heads. We never deſired you to renounce any right of the Kingdom of Scotland; let us have the ſame meaſure.

By your Argument it muſt follow, That by England's having the King of Scotland, the Kingdom of Scotland ſhould be King of England: For although the Perſon of the King be not diviſible, yet his relations are diviſible both in their nature and their exerciſe: the King of England and the King of Scotland are one Man, but they are not one thing. And though thoſe relations are not diviſible from his Perſon, yet is the exerciſe of them diviſible from his Perſon, as his Perſon is diviſible from either or both of the Kingdoms, and as the Kingdoms are diviſible from each other in place and in power, in right and in intereſt, within their ſeveral Precincts: And the exact preſervation of this diſtinction is the beſt means to prevent a worſe diviſion.

And if, as you ſay, your deſiring not to part with your right doth not argue any diffidence in us, now that it is ſhewed you of no right, why will you be diffident of us, to hinder the exerciſe of our particular rights?

That which you call your laſt Objection was an Anſwer to your Reply.

ASSERTION.

We do affirm, That the Kingdom of Scotland hath no right of joynt exerciſe of intereſt in diſpoſing the Perſon of the King in the Kingdom of England.

The ſeventh Objection or Argument of the Scots Commiſſioners.

IF this Argument were turned over, the ſtrength or weakneſs of it may the more eaſily appear. Suppoſe the King were here at Weſtminſter, it may be upon the ſame grounds urged, That the Kingdom of Scotland would have no conſent in his diſpoſal; and ſo much the more, that the Houſes claim the ſole intereſt and judgment to diſpoſe upon the King's Perſon, which we deſire may be done joyntly, as may be beſt for the ſecurity and ſafety of both Kingdoms. And we ſee no reaſon why it may not now be determined when he is in the Scottiſh Army, (who were intruſted by both, and ſubject to the reſolution of both Kingdoms) as well as hereafter, ſince he came thither of his own accord, and his reſidence there is voluntary; and if his Majeſty ſhall think fit to repair hither to his Houſes of Parliament, they ſhall do no Act which may either hinder or diſſwade him; but cannot conſtrain him, or deliver him to the Houſes, to be diſpoſed of as they ſhall think fit.

The ſeventh Anſwer.

YOU object, your Army cannot part with the King without the conſent of the Kingdom of Scotland; The Kingdom of Scotland cannot conſent, unleſs they may joyn in the diſpoſal of his Perſon; they will not joyn till it be agreed that he be diſpoſed for the good of both Kingdoms: And can any thing then be more plain, than that the King is then to remain where he is (as we have ſaid before) until you will be ſatisfied. And being where he is, we know, and ſo do you, that he is diſpoſed of againſt our Conſent. And if this Argument were turn'd over, it would remain good: For we do ſay, the Kingdom of Scotland had not right of joynt intereſt in diſpoſing of the Perſon of the King if he were at Weſtminſter; neither ſhould we claim any, if he were duly at Edenburrough. And if this be a good Argument, it will follow, That you ſhould have ſome of your Nation to reſide continually with us, to adviſe and conſent to what Places the King ſhall go upon every occaſion of his remove, and upon every accident that may happen; conſidering the temper and condition of theſe times may call for ſudden and different reſolutions, and ſuch as they are only capable to judge of, and to apply remedies unto who are upon the place.

We doubt not your Lordſhips are ſatisfied that the coming of the King to your Army was with a deſign on his part againſt the good of both Kingdoms; which, with his denying the Propoſitions being among you, are not Arguments that he ought to be left to his own will and pleaſure.

Upon the whole tract in your Papers we ſhall from brotherly affection let you know, (to prevent the like for the future) That your Papers ſeem to be prepared, printed, and publiſhed to captivate the hearers and readers, to trouble their fancies, and hinder the right underſtanding of the Queſtion; that they may be led by an implicite belief; and ſeem to hold forth, That you will ſo manage your affair, as that if any difference ſhould happen (which God forbid, and we ſhall always endeavour to prevent, though it ariſe elſewhere) it may be laid on the Houſes of Parliament: Your Papers throughout intervolving things of ſeveral natures, miſ-reciting ſo many matters of fact, holding forth examples and ſimilies, which if urged by us, were unreaſonable; as if they were applicable to the preſent debate, which yet they are not, that many readers and hearers, though they know not how to apply them to the Queſtion between us, yet may think they are to it, becauſe the Scotch Commiſſioners would not elſe have inſerted them.

Having thus cleared the right of the Parliament of England, in diſpoſing the Perſon of the King in the Kingdom of England, We come now to the Propoſitions. But before we fall into the particulars of them, we ſhall give a ſhort Anſwer to your Letter of the 24. of October laſt. You expreſs therein, That the Scots Army having had no pay for ſix months, have been forced to take free quarter: which we wonder to ſee, when your Army taketh 19700 l. monthly in mony, beſides much free quarter. And we ſent your Lordſhips an account of this, which we received out of the North; beſides which they have had for one year ending the laſt of October laſt, ſeventy two thouſand nine hundred ſeventy two pounds two ſhillings and elevenpence for the Cuſtom and other Impoſitions upon Coals only.

Your Letter ſeems very compaſſionately to conſider the miſery of the Northern parts; but the ways you propoſe of remedy extend the benefit of your compaſſion eſpecially to the Scots Army; the which Armies removing into freſh Quarters in England, were to make them feel as much miſery as thoſe it would leave. We ſhall provide what mony we can to enable the Scots Army to march into Scotland: but you know we are not engaged to you for two hundred thouſand pounds in preſent, as your Letter implies. But this is before more at large.

But whilſt you would not have the King to go into Scotland (for you ſay that is prejudicial to both Kingdoms) neither would you have him go into Ireland, or beyond Sea, (becauſe you ſay that would not be a way to preſent Peace, but certainly prognoſticate new trouble:) and whilſt you will not let the Parliament diſpoſe of his Perſon in England according to their right; and the Parliament cannot admit of a Joynt Right in you of diſpoſing his Perſon here (for that were to admit a Joynt Right in you in all the Liberties of this Kingdom,) how ſhall any be ſatisfied that this Queſtion concerning the diſpoſing of the Perſon of the King, ſhall not retard the marching of the Scots Army out of this Kingdom? Will they not inquire what will the Scots do with the Perſon of the King, when their Army marcheth out of the Kingdom? To which we hope it will be anſwered, Our Brethren of Scotland are ſatisfied the Parliament of England will, according to their right, diſpoſe of the Perſon of the King in the Kingdom of England: And your Lordſhips may reſt aſſured the Perſon of the King will be diſpoſed by the Parliament of England, as may beſt conduce to the good, union, and happineſs of the two Kingdoms.

The Propoſition you make for the King to come to us with Honour, Freedom and Safety; or that Commiſſioners may once again be ſent in the name of both Kingdoms, with Power to hear his Deſires, and to endeavour the Satisfaction of Doubts and Scruples, is the ſame in ſubſtance made by himſelf, in his Anſwer to the Propoſitions ſent him by both Kingdoms; but that you alſo propoſe that ſome may be ſent to the King, and he deſires to come hither; and your Lordſhips will not think they are more reaſonable when made by you for the King, than when made by the King for himſelf.

And whereas your Lordſhips find a difference in the times when both Kingdoms ſent to the King, in Anſwer to his Letters of the 26. and 29. of December laſt, deſiring to come hither, for that he had then both Garriſons and field Forces unreduced, we deſire your Lordſhips to remember, That although thoſe Paſſages of his having Garriſons and Forces be in the Letter, yet the main matter inſiſted upon was in theſe words, We conceive, that until Satisfaction and Security be firſt given to both your Kingdoms, your Majeſty's coming hither cannot be convenient, nor by us aſſented unto. And which doth farther appear in another Letter ſent from the Parliament and your Lordſhips in March laſt, in Anſwer to a Letter of the King's of the 23. of the ſame March, wherein the ſame Words of Satisfaction and Security are again expreſly repeated; And there hath not been any act done by the King ſince that time, that hath in the leaſt given Satisfaction or Security to This Kingdom: But however, your Lordſhips well know, that the King, at the ſending of the ſaid laſt Letter, had no Forces in the Field, nor Garriſons unblockt up; and he hath as many Forces now, when you make theſe deſires for him, as he had when to your unſpeakable Grief, (as you ſay in your Papers) he, in his denial to grant the Propoſitions ſent him from both Kingdoms, made then the ſame Deſires for himſelf.

Your Lordſhips recite our Anſwer to his Majeſty's Meſſage of the 11. of September, 1642. to which we ſhall need ſay no more; there is a large difference between what is to be done to prevent a War, which the Common Enemy did begin by keeping the King from us, and what is to be done after ſuch a War to ſecure a Peace.

To ſecure which, and to preſerve brotherly Union between the two Kingdoms, which we moſt earneſtly and from our hearts deſire, we ſhould uſe all means conducing thereunto, and endeavour to prevent all ways of Separation, and if we be in any, to haſten out of them, the true end of our Covenant and this War being, that neither of us may be under any Oppreſſions. Let us both act for the common good of both, and each enjoy our particular Rights, ſuch Union is ſtrong and will be laſting; but where one gaineth upon the particular Rights of the other, and then argueth that he muſt keep it, and the other bear it; To avoid Diſ-union, ſuch Arguments are not to be often uſed, and ſuch attempts are to be forborn, leſt they make a breach in Brotherly Union, which God forbid.

But we are confident the Right of the Kingdom of England will be acknowledged, and we poſſeſſed of it, and we ſhall make it appear how little cauſe there is for thoſe groundleſs inſinuations in your Speeches and Papers, as if the Parliament of England were averſe from their Ancient and Fundamental Government, by King, Lords and Commons, which we had thought the Declaration of the Houſe of Commons, of the 17. of April, 1646. ſufficiently cleared to the whole World; or that they were not as really forward as any, for the procuring of a ſafe and well grounded Peace, which is the greateſt and chiefeſt of our Deſires; And it will be manifeſt to the Judgments and Conſciences of all, That as we really endeavoured the good of the King and both Kingdoms, ſo ſhall we conſtantly and faithfully perſevere in thoſe endeavours, not doubting, but upon our ſincere performing our Covenant and Treaties, the bleſſing of God will ſo accompany us, as there will be a moſt ſweet and brotherly Agreement between the Nations, and ſuch a Concluſion as will be pleaſing to God, and wherein both Kingdoms ſhall find greateſt Comfort and Happineſs.

Joh. Brown Cler. Parliamentorum.

Nov. 13. 1646.

Monk takes the Covenant, and is imployed by the Parliament to Ireland.

A Meſſage came from the Lords to the Houſe of Commons, That Col. George Monk, who was a Priſoner to the Parliament, had taken the Solemn League and Covenant, and was ready to take the Negative Oath likewiſe; and that their Lordſhips conceiving him a fit Man to be imployed for the ſervice of Ireland, in reſpect of his Valour and Abilities in Martial Affairs, do deſire that he may have a Commiſſion from the Committee of both Kingdoms for that ſervice; which the Houſe of Commons agreed unto, and a Commiſſion was granted to him accordingly.

Nov. 12.

The Parliaments General Sir Thomas Fairfax came to London, being met ſome miles off the City by its Militia, and on Saturday Nov. 14. both Houſes went to viſit and congratulate him, at his Houſe in Queen-ſtreet, where firſt the Earl of Mancheſter, Speaker pro Tempore of the Houſe of Peers, Complemented him in the name of that Houſe; And they being gone, came the Houſe of Commons, and Lenthal their Speaker ſpake as follows.

The Speaker's Speech to Congratulate Sir Thomas Fairfax. Nov. 14.

Sir,

I Have a very hard Task to perform, to preſent the Reſpects of the Houſe of Commons according to your Excellencies Merit, and their deſires. To effect this accordingly, I ſhould have informed my ſelf from Hiſtories, that have preſerved the Memories of the famous Worthies of former Ages, and ſhould have taken the Dimenſions of the largeſt Coronets and Trophies wherewith they are made Glorious; and even thoſe would rather ſtreighten than enlarge the Temples of your Excellency: Or elſe I ſhould have Conſulted ſome of the moſt Learned and Eloquent Orators, who have ſet forth the Glorious Geſts performed in former times, whereby I might have inſiſted on ſome Parallel for your Wiſdom, Piety, Juſtice and Valour, but I conceived the Virtues and Succeſs which God had beſtowed upon you, were very hardly to be match'd, and rather needed more Induſtry and Memory to Enumerate, than Oratory to Poliſh.

Heretofore when I read the Hiſtories of the Acts of Famous Princes and Warriors in this or other Nations, it was not without ſome jealouſie, that in them there was ſome mixture and gloſſes of Oratory and Art, the more to ſet off and give Luſtre to their Acts, as Arguments of Emulation, for others to follow the footſteps of their Virtues; but the Actions of your Excellency will add Luſtre and Belief to them, being all verified in you. And (indeed) here, conſidering the ſwift Marches, and the Expedition of thoſe grand and difficult Attempts, which were proſecuted and effected by your Excellency, I may ſay, The Almighty came riding on the wings of the wind, for theſe were nothing elſe but the Magnalia Dei, acted in and by you his Inſtrument.

It was the Cuſtom of the Ancient Romans, after a glorious and ſucceſsful Prince, to derive his Name to Poſterity in memory of his Virtues; as after that great Prince Julius Cæſar, his Succeſſors retained the Name of Cæſars, as Auguſtus Cæſar, Tyberius Cæſar, &c. Thus hereafter all Famous and Victorious ſucceeding Generals in this Kingdom (if the time ſhall prove ſo unfortunate) will deſire the addition of the Name of Fairfax.

And ſurely the Honour of the late Lord General was not, whilſt he lived, any way Eclipſed by the ſucceſſion of your Excellency in his Command, but rather augmented, whilſt each retained the brightneſs of his own Honour, having both Rays enough to enlighten a Kingdom then overſet with Clouds and thick darkneſs.

I ſhall need to ſay no more but this, That the World will admire your Excellencies worth, Poſterity will Honour your Name, and that the whole Houſe of Commons, in the name of the Commons of England, doth return you thanks for your faithful and memorable Service: The beginning, continuance, and effect whereof I muſt ſolely attribute to the Almighty, the Lord of Hoſts and Victories.

To this the General made a very modeſt return, expreſſing how much he eſteemed himſelf Honoured by the great Reſpects of the Houſes towards him, and that he accounted it his greateſt happineſs under God to be in the leaſt kind Inſtrumental for theirs and the Kingdom's Good.

Nov. 27. The Monies on the before mentioned Propoſals and Security of the Biſhops Lands came in ſo faſt, that the whole ſum of two hundred thouſand Pounds was this day made up, and was ready at Goldſmiths-Hall; and the Scots Commiſſioners being made acquainted therewith, it was on the fifth of December, ordered and agreed, that the ſaid Mony ſhould be ſent down to York, and there told, and 100000 l. thereof paid at North-Allerton within five days after it is told; That when that Mony comes to Topcliff, the Scots ſhould give Hoſtages that they ſhould quit all their Quarters, Poſſeſſions and Garriſons on the South-ſide Tyne, Newcaſtle, and Tinmouth, with all the Arms, &c. within ten days, and upon performance the Hoſtages to be re-delivered. And that then the Kingdom of Scotland ſhall have Hoſtages given them for aſſurance that the other hundred thouſand Pounds ſhall be paid on the North-ſide Newcaſtle, within a mile of the Works, within eight days after the quitting Newcaſtle, Tinmouth, &c. and all their Forces drawn on the North-ſide of Tyne; That upon the payment of the ſaid other hundred thouſand Pounds on the North-ſide of Newcaſtle, the Engliſh Hoſtages to be releaſed; And upon the coming of the Mony out of Newcaſtle, the Scots are to give Hoſtages, that their Army ſhall march out of the Kingdom, and quit Berwick and Carliſle, and ſlight the Garriſons in Scotland within ten days, and then their Hoſtages to be delivered back.

For the other 200000 l. the Scots Commiſſioners inſiſted that it might be paid out of Delinquents Eſtates, or ſome other particular Security; but the Houſe would only give them the Publick Faith for it.

Dec. 11. Maj. General Skippon was recommended by Fairfax, as a fit Perſon to be made Governour of Newcaſtle, when it ſhould be quitted by the Scots, and to Command the Convoy that was to go down into the North, and to receive Poſſeſſion of thoſe places; And the two Houſes ordered the ſame accordingly. And on the ſixteenth of December the Monies in thirty ſix Carts marched out of London, and Skippon met it at Northampton; to which place alſo General Fairfax went down, the better to ſettle his Army in new Quarters.

Dec. 21. The Commons Voted, That the Scots, after the payment of the firſt two hundred thouſand Pounds to them, ſhall take no free Quarter, nor levey any Monies upon the Country; And both Houſes agreed

An. 1646. agreed that a Committee of Lords and Commons ſhould be ſent into Scotland upon the departure of the Scots Commiſſioners from hence, which Committee ſhould be enabled to ſatisfie the Kingdom of Scotland in all points, and prevent miſunderſtandings between the two Kingdoms; and for this Committee, the Lords named the Earl of Stamford, and the Commons Mr. Aſburſt and Mr. Tho. Goodwin.

Hitherto nothing was agreed upon touching the diſpoſal of the King's Perſon, but it was concluded that the ſame ſhould not be any hindrance to the marching away of the Scots Army upon the payment of their Money.

The Parliament in Scotland had for ſome time been Sitting, and being on the 16*th* of December turned into a grand Committee to conſider touching the diſpoſal of his Majeſty's Perſon, it was reſolved, That preſent Inſtructions ſhould be ſent to their Commiſſioners, to preſs his Majeſty's coming to London with Honour, Safety, and Freedom, and that they ſhould declare their Reſolutions to maintain Monarchical Government in his Majeſty's Perſon and Poſterity, and his juſt Title to the Crown of England.

Which Reſolutions gave the King's Friends there great hopes; but the next day all was daſh'd again, for then the following Warning was preſented to the Parliament from the Commiſſion of the Kirk.

A Solemn and Seaſonable Warning, to all Eſtates and Degrees of Perſons throughout the Land; By the Commiſſioners of the General Aſſembly, Edinburg, 17. Decemb. 1646.

THE Conſcience of our duty, and of the great truſt repoſed in us, ſuffereth us not to be ſilent, nor to connive at the preſent dangers which may juſtly be apprehended and expected from the Enemies of this Cauſe and Covenant; Who although they cannot in this conjuncture of time appear in the ſame manner as formerly they have done; yet having retained the ſame principles (while they ſeem to lay aſide their former practices) do in a more covert and dangerous way ſtill drive at their own ends; And as Sathan is neither ſleeping nor idle, though he appear not always as a roaring Lion; So theſe who are inſpired and acted by him, have their wheels ſtill moving, though ſometimes they make no great noiſe. Wherefore that we may truly and faithfully contribute what is incumbent to us, for preventing or removing any occaſions of new troubles or differences between the King and his People, in both, or either of thoſe united Kingdoms, or between the Kingdoms themſelves; And leaſt the Church of Chriſt, and the true Reformed Religion be again toſſed with another, and perhaps a greater Tempeſt in the depth, after we ſeemed to be near the Harbour; We have found it, not only competent to our Place and Calling, but neceſſary for us (according to former laudable Preſidents both old and late) To emit this new Seaſonable Warning to the People of God in this Land, and to all Eſtates and Degrees of men therein; Whom we exhort, That firſt, and above all things, they apply their thoughts to make peace with God, to take notice of the remaining and renewed tokens of divine diſpleaſure againſt the Land, To tremble at the remembrance of former, and appearances of future judgments, To lament after the Lord, To lye low before the Throne of Grace, To cry mightily to Heaven for diſpelling that cloud of ſin which ſeparateth between our God and us, and for turning away that cloud of wrath which hangeth over our heads. There is cauſe to be humbled and to repent, as for all our inquities, So for the too little aſſiſtance which hath been given to ſuch as have born the heavieſt burthen, and ſuffered moſt in this cauſe; And for the too much compliance with, and indulgence to many who have been active in the late execrable Rebellion.

We know that none can reach the perfection of their duty, neither will the Lord reckon with his People according to his Juſtice, but ſpare them who walk in the integrity of their Spirits, as a man ſpareth his own Son, ſo that they may rejoyce in his mercy, notwithſtanding of their ſhort-comings, wherein they do not allow themſelves; But wilful neglects are juſt grounds of a great controverſie on the Lord's part, and of deep humiliation on ours: And we conceive that the failings of many are ſuch, becauſe the word of the Lord is a burthen unto them; And though they walk in the ways of their own heart, yet they ſay they ſhall have Peace; We would have none that are thus guilty to account light of it, and ſay, Is it not a little one? Every duty whereto we are obliged in the Covenant, is of great conſequence, and breaches even in ſmaller things prove inlets unto more grievous revoltings.

When we conſider how many who were once open oppoſers or ſecret underminers, being received to the Covenant, yet remain diſaffected to the ends of the ſame; We cannot but think that we walk in the midſt of ſnares, and that myſteries of iniquity work amongſt us, which may produce moſt ſad and lamentable effects, unto the prejudice of our Religion and Liberties. Therefore, Becauſe God hath no greater quarrel againſt a Nation than that of a broken Covenant; Let all who fear an Oath, remember the vows of God which are upon them, Watch and Pray, and take good heed that they be not cheated nor charmed into a violation of all, or any of the Articles of that Sacred and Solemn League and Covenant; And let thoſe eſpecially be obſerved and avoided, who do, or ſhall endeavour a diviſion and breach between the Kingdoms, or the making of any factions or parties contrary to the Covenant, under pretence of preſerving the King and his Authority, whilſt they do not conſtantly and ſincerely proſecute and preſs our frequent deſires of his ſubſcribing the League and Covenant, and giving ſatisfaction in all things to the juſt deſires of both Kingdoms; which underhand dealing can prove nothing elſe, but an abuſing of His Majeſty for mens own deſigns: We wiſh that none ſuffer themſelves to be deceived by any falſe gloſſes of the Covenant, under which ſome may poſſibly urge the keeping of it, ſo as to draw us into a certain breach thereof, and preſs the defence of the King's Authority and of Religion, to engage us in thoſe ways that would tend to the ruin of both: We are not now to preſs the want of full ſatisfaction in the much deſired work of Uniformity, as the ground of a breach between the Nations; Though we ſtill conceive, this Nation will never be wanting to proſecute that work to the uttermoſt of their power in all lawful ways, according to the League and Covenant.

Theſe Kingdoms, after many fervent Supplications and faithful endeavours of all the Lovers of Truth and Peace, have been happily united into a League and Covenant, which to this day hath been kept inviolably, notwithſtanding of all the oppoſition of open Enemies, and plotting of ſecret Underminers; And we are confident, that none but ſuch as have hearts full of Atheiſm and Treachery, will attempt the violation thereof, in whole, or in part; And that if any ſhall do the ſame, they ſhall expoſe themſelves to the Curſe of Almighty God, who will be avenged upon all that Swear falſly by his Name. We know that men of perverſe minds, wanting the fear of God, and meaſuring all things by their own ends, may conceive of it as alterable, or at leaſt, that all the Clauſes or Heads thereof are not ſo to be ſtuck upon, but that ſome one or more may be diſpenſed with upon civil advantages: But we have not ſo learned Chriſt or his Word; Both Nations have Covenanted with God, and each of them with another, in things moſt lawful and neceſſary for the preſervation and good of both, without any limitation of time: And therefore we and our Poſterity are obliged before God unto the Obſervation thereof, as long as the Sun and Moon ſhall endure. The Senſe of theſe things ought to be ſo deeply engraven upon the hearts of all that are in truſt, That as they ſhould from their Souls abhor every thought of a breach with England; So ſhould they carefully and wiſely ſtudy to avoid every thing that may prove a ſnare and tentation unto the ſame. Amongſt other things, if his Majeſty ſhall have thoughts of coming to this Kingdom at this time, he not having as yet ſubſcribed the League and Covenant, nor ſatisfied the lawful deſires of his Loyal Subjects in both Nations, We have juſt cauſe ſo fear that the conſequences of it may be very dangerous, An. 1646. rous, both to his Majeſty and theſe Kingdoms; Which therefore we deſire may be timely prevented.

For ſo long as his Majeſty doth not approve in his heart, and ſeal with his hand the League and Covenant, we cannot but apprehend, that according to his former Principles, he will walk in oppoſition to the ſame, and ſtudy to draw us unto the violation thereof, and the diſſolution of the Union ſo happily begun between Us and our Brethren, To weaken the Confidence and Truſt, and to entertain Jealouſies, and make diviſions amongſt our ſelves; Neither is it poſſible, but that our receiving him in this preſent poſture of Affairs, will confirm the ſuſpicions of the Engliſh Nation, of our under-hand dealing with him before his coming to our Army; And make them, not without cauſe, to think that we purpoſe to diſpoſe of him without their conſent, and to their prejudice; which is contrary to the Profeſſion of thoſe that were in truſt at his Majeſty's firſt coming to the Scots Quarters, and overthroweth all the Arguments that have been uſed by the Commiſſioners of our Parliament in their Papers concerning The diſpoſing of his Majeſty's Perſon by the joynt advice and common conſent of both Kingdoms given in to both Houſes of Parliament in England; Nor do we ſee how we can vindicate ſuch a practice from a direct breach of our engagements to them by Covenant and Treaty; which were not only to expoſe us into the hazard of a Bloody War, but to involve us in the guilt of Perjury. And what greater diſſervice could be done to his Majeſty and his Poſterity, than to give way to a courſe that might prove prejudicial to their intereſt in the Crown and Kingdom of England.

Our carriage now for many years paſt, in the midſt of many tentations, hath put us beyond all ſuſpicion in the point of our Loyalty; nor have we the leaſt thoughts of deſerting the King's Majeſty in a juſt and good cauſe, being bound by our Covenant in our ſeveral Vocations to endeavour with our Eſtates and Lives, to preſerve and defend his Perſon and Authority, in the defence and preſervation of the true Religion and Liberties of the Kingdoms: And ſo far as his Majeſty ſhall be for theſe, we really are, and we truſt the reſt of his Kingdoms will be for him: Yet we cannot deny, but openly avouch it, That if his Majeſty (which the Lord forbid) ſhall not ſatisfie the juſt deſires of his People; Both Nations ſtand mutually obliged by that inviolable Covenant to purſue the ends therein expreſſed (which cannot be divided) againſt all lets and impediments whatſoever. It is therefore our moſt earneſt and longing deſire, That as thoſe who are in truſt with the Publick Affairs of this Kingdom have heretofore with all earneſtneſs and care in all their addreſſes dealt with his Majeſty, with much ſtrength of Reaſon and vehemency of Affection, ſo they would ſtill deal with him, to grant his Royal conſent to the deſires of both Kingdoms, for ſetling Religion according to the Covenant, and for ſecuring a perfect and durable Peace (which we look upon as the only hopeful means of preſerving himſelf, his Crown, and Poſterity) That his Majeſty may return to his Houſes of Parliament in England as a reconciled Prince to ſatisfied Subjects; And that acclamations of joy may be heard in all his Majeſty's Dominions, and no ſound of War heard therein any more, except againſt the bloody Iriſh Rebels, under whoſe barbarous and cruel perſecution, our diſtreſſed Brethren, both in this Kingdom and in Ireland, are ſtill groaning and crying out to us and to our Brethren in England, Be at peace among your ſelves, and come to help us.

After the Reading of this Admonition, the Parliament falling again into debate touching his Majeſty, Reſolved that his Majeſty ſhould be deſired to grant the whole Propoſitions; and in Caſe of refuſal, the Certifications given to his Majeſty ſhould be put in Execution, viz. To ſecure the Kingdom without him; And did declare, That the Kingdom of Scotland cannot lawfully engage themſelves for his Majeſty: He not taking the Covenant, ſatisfying as to Religion, &c. Nor would admit him to come into Scotland, unleſs he gave a Satisfactory Anſwer to the whole Propoſitions lately preſented to him in the Name of both Kingdoms.

Of all which the Earl of Lanerick immediately gave his Majeſty Advertiſement, who diſpatch'd away the following Meſſage to the two Houſes at London, and to the Parliament at Edinburgh.

His Majeſty's laſt moſt Gracious Meſſage of Dec. 20. 1646. to the Lords and Commons of the Parliament of England aſſembled at Weſtminſter, and to the Commiſſioners of the Parliament of Scotland at London, for a Perſonal Treaty.

Charles R.

HIS Majeſty's thoughts being always ſincerely bent to the Peace of his Kingdoms, was and will be ever deſirous to take all ways which might the moſt clearly make appear the candour of his intentions to his People. And to this end could find no better way than to propoſe a Perſonal free debate with his two Houſes of Parliament upon all the preſent differences. Yet finding very much againſt his expectations, that this offer was laid aſide, his Majeſty bent all his thoughts to make his intentions fully known by a particular Anſwer to the Propoſitions delivered to him in the name of both Kingdoms, 24. July laſt. But the more he endeavoured it, he more plainly ſaw that any Anſwer he could make would be ſubject to miſ-informations and miſ-conſtructions, which upon his own Paraphraſes and Explanations he is moſt confident will give ſo good ſatisfaction, as would doubtleſs cauſe a happy and laſting Peace. Leſt therefore that good intentions may produce ill effects, His Majeſty again propoſeth, and deſires again to come to London, or any of his Houſes thereabouts, upon the Publick Faith and Security of his two Houſes of Parliament, and the Scotch Commiſſioners, that he ſhall be there with Honour, Fredom and Safety: Where, by his Perſonal Preſence, he may not only raiſe a mutual confidence betwixt him and his People, but alſo have thoſe doubts cleared, and thoſe difficulties explained to him, without which he cannot (but with the aforeſaid miſchievous inconveniences) give a particular Anſwer to the Propoſitions: And with which he doubts not but ſo to manifeſt his real intentions for the ſetling of Religion, the juſt Priviledges of Parliament, with the Freedom and Property of the Subject, that it ſhall not be in the power of wicked and malicious men to hinder the eſtabliſhing of that firm Peace which all honeſt men deſire. Aſſuring them that as he will make no other Demands but ſuch as he believes confidently to be juſt, and much conducing to the Tranquility of the People: So he will be moſt willing to condeſcend to them in whatſoever ſhall be really for their good and happineſs. Not doubting likewiſe but you will alſo have a due regard to maintain the juſt Power of the Crown, according to your many Proteſtations and Profeſſions. For certainly except King and People have reciprocal care each of other, neither can be happy.

To conclude, 'tis your King who deſires to be heard, (the which if refuſed to a Subject by a King, he would be thought a Tyrant for it) and for that end which all men profeſs to deſire. Wherefore his Majeſty conjures you, as you deſire to ſhew your ſelves really what you profeſs, even as you are good Chriſtians and Subjects, that you will accept this his Offer, which he is confident God will ſo bleſs, that it will be the readieſt means by which theſe Kingdoms may again become a comfort to their Friends, and a terror to their Enemies.

Newcaſtle, 20. Decemb. 1646.

To the Speaker of the Houſe of Peers pro tempore, to be communicated to the Lords and Commons of the Parliament of England aſſembled at Weſtminſter, and to the Commiſſioners of the Parliament of Scotland at London.

Dec. 22. The Lords Voted, That the King being now in England may come to New-Market, there to remain with ſuch Attendants about him, as both Houſes of Parliament ſhall appoint; but the Commons agreed not with the Lords therein. And therefore Voted, that Holmby Houſe in Northamptonſhire would be a place moſt fit for his Majeſty, if he pleaſe to come thereunto, and abide with ſuch Attendants as both Houſes ſhall appoint.

The Scots Commiſſioners ſend word to the Houſes to acquaint them they were ſpeedily to go for Scotland, deſiring to know what further Service the Houſes had to Command them to the Parliament of that Kingdom. Upon which both Houſes Ordered their thanks to be returned to the ſaid Commiſſioners.

Dec. 25. The two Houſes ſat this day, tho' Chriſtmas day, and the Commons further debated the King's coming to Holmby, agreeing with the Lords, that his coming thither ſhould be with reſpect to the Safety and Preſervation of his Majeſty's Perſon, and in Preſervation and Defence of the true Religion. And the Queſtion being put, whether the words [according to the Covenant] ſhould be added, it paſs'd with the Affirmative.

Jan. 5. The Houſe of Commons Reſolve to appoint Commiſſioners of both Houſes, to go down to receive the King from the Scots, and to bring him to Holmby. And the Commiſſioners named, were for the Lords, the Earl of Pembroke, Earl of Denbigh, and Lord Montague; of the Commons, Sir William Armyne, Sir John Holland, Sir Walter Earl, Sir John Cook, Mr. John Crew, and Major General Brown, but Sir William Armyne deſired to be excuſed on account of his Health, and Sir James Harrington was appointed in his ſtead. And they all ſet forth out of London, Jan. the 13.

In the mean time his Majeſty perceiving the ill Circumſtances in which he was left, made theſe Queries to the Scots Commiſſioners then attending him.

His Majeſty's Query to the Scots Commiſſioners upon Thurſday the 14. of January, 1646.

IT is a received Opinion by many, That Ingagements, Acts, or Promiſes of a reſtrained Perſon, are neither valid nor obligatory; How true or falſe this is, I will not now diſpute; but I am ſure, if I be not free, I am not fit to Anſwer your or any Propoſitions: Wherefore you ſhould firſt reſolve me in what ſtate I ſtand (as in relation to Freedom) before I can give you any other Anſwer, (the Reaſon of this my Queſtion, the Governor can beſt reſolve you) But if you object the loſs of time, and urgency of it, certainly in one reſpect it preſſes none ſo much as my ſelf, which makes me alſo think it neceſſary, that I be not to ſeek what to do when this Garriſon ſhall be ſurrendred up, to demand of you, in caſe I go into Scotland, if I ſhall be there with Honour, Freedom, and Safety, or how? Being ready to give you a farther and more particular Anſwer, how ſoon you ſhall have reſolved theſe two Queries.

The Scots Commiſſioners Anſwer to his Majeſty's Queries, Thurſday the 14. of Jan. 1646.

I. TO the Firſt, in what ſtate you ſtand, as in relation to Freedom, the Parliaments of both Your Kingdoms have given ſuch Orders and Directions as they have thought fitteſt for the good and ſafety of your Majeſty and the Kingdoms, to the General and Governor.

II. To Your Majeſty's ſecond Query, of your going into Scotland, We ſhall humbly deſire, That we may not now be put to give any Anſwer; but if your Maje- jeſty ſhall either deny or delay your aſſent to the Propoſitions, We are in that caſe to repreſent to your Majeſty the Reſolutions of the Parliament of England.

His Majeſty's Anſwer to the Scots Commiſſioners.

I Know very well, that the General and Governor have received Orders concerning me; but the Queſtion is, into what ſtate thoſe Orders put me in (as relating to Freedom) to which you have either power to Anſwer, or not; if you have, then Anſwer me; otherwiſe, ſend to thoſe who can: And ſo for my ſecond Query.

The full conſent of the Parliament of Scotland for delivering up the King, was ſignified in the following Letter.

A Letter from the Parliament of Scotland to the Parliament of England.

Right Honourable,

O*UR Commiſſioners at* London and New-Caſtle, having received from the Honourable Houſes the Vote of the firſt of January, and communicated the ſame to us; We have conſidered of it as a buſineſs of very great concernment to both Nations, And therefore have reſolved upon the incloſed Declaration and Deſires; Whereby it will appear how willing we are to comply with the Reſolutions of both Houſes; And how deſirous to remove all jealouſies, for ſtrengthning the Peace and Union, and maintaining a good underſtanding between the Kingdoms, ſo firmly tyed by Solemn League and Covenant; and how confident, that they will ſatisfie our reaſonable deſires, and make the integrity of their proceedings and reſolutions in all this buſineſs concerning his Majeſty, appear either by Declaration, or otherwiſe as in their Wiſdom they ſhall think fit; whereby no occaſion of calumny may be left to the wicked Enemies of either Nation. And as God hath bleſſed the joynt endeavours of both, during our Armies abode in that Kingdom; ſo it will be a great encouragement for us to hope for the continuance of the ſame bleſſing in time coming, that our reſolution be known to be one at our removing, in relation to all the ends contained in our mutual League and Covenant; and if any difficulty occurr there (for gaining of time) we deſire, that the Honourable Houſes may be pleaſed to ſend particular Inſtructions to their Commiſſioners at New-Caſtle, with whom we ſhall authorize ours to concur for the juſt ſatisfaction of both Kingdoms; and we reſt,

The Declaration of the Kingdom of Scotland.

WHereas it pleaſed God to joyn the Kingdoms of Scotland, England and Ireland in Solemn League and Covenant, for Reformation and Defence of Religion, The Honour and Happineſs of the King, and their own Peace and Safety: And in purſuance thereof the Scotiſh Army being in the Kingdom of England, the King's Majeſty came to their Quarters before Newark, and profeſſed he came there with a full and abſolute intention to give all juſt ſatisfaction to the joynt Deſires of both Kingdoms, and with no thought either to continue this unnatural War any longer, or to make Di-viſion betwixt the Kingdoms; but to comply with his Parliaments and thoſe entruſted by them, in every thing for ſetling of Truth and Peace; and that he would apply himſelf totally to the Counſels and Advices of his Parliaments: Which he did not only profeſs Verbally to the Committee of Eſtates with the Scotiſh Army; but alſo in his ſeveral Letters and Declarations under his Hand, to the Committee of Eſtates of Scotland, and unto the two Houſes of the Parliament of England reſpectively. In Confidence whereof, and of the reality of his Intentions, and Reſolutions, which he declared did proceed from no other Ground, than the Deep Senſe of the Bleeding condition of his Kingdoms; The Committees of the Kingdom of Scotland and General Officers of the Scotiſh Army, declared to himſelf, and to the Kingdom of England, their receiving of his Royal Perſon to be on theſe terms, (which is truth, notwithſtanding what may be ſuggeſted or alledged to the contrary, by any within or without the Kingdoms;) and repreſented to him, that the only way of his own Happineſs, and Peace of his Kingdoms, under God, was, to make good his Profeſſions ſo ſolemnly renewed to both Kingdoms. Thereafter, not only were Propoſitions of Peace (which after ſerious and mature Deliberation were agreed upon) tendered to him in the name of both Kingdoms for his Royal Aſſent thereunto; but alſo the chief Judicatories of this Kingdom, both Civil and Eccleſiaſtick, made their humble and earneſt Addreſſes to his Majeſty by Supplications, Letters, and Commiſſioners for that end; and did freely repreſent all the Prejudices and Inconveniences of the Delay or Refuſal of his Aſſent, and in Particular, that this Kingdom would be neceſſitated to joyn with the Kingdom of England conform to the League and Covenant, in providing for the preſent and future Security of both Kingdoms, and ſetling the Government of both, as might beſt conduce to the Good of both. And the Parliament of Scotland being now to retire their Army out of England, have again, for their further exoneration, ſent Commiſſioners to repreſent their renewed Deſires to his Majeſty, with the Danger may enſue by his Delay or Refuſal to grant the ſame; and that till then, there was danger to the Cauſe, to his Majeſty, to this Kingdom, and to the Union betwixt the Kingdoms, by his coming to Scotland; and that therefore there would be a joynt courſe taken by both Kingdoms concerning the Diſpoſal of his Perſon. And conſidering that his Majeſty by his Anſwer to the Propoſitions of Peace in Auguſt laſt, and alſo by his late Meſſage ſent to the two Houſes, and, by his Warrant, communicated to the Eſtates of this Kingdom, hath expreſſed his deſires to be neer to his two Houſes of Parliament: And ſeeing alſo the Parliament of England have communicated to the Scotiſh Commiſſioners at Newcaſtle, and by them to this Kingdom their Reſolution, That Holmby-Houſe in the County of Northampton is the Place which the Houſes think fit for the King to come unto, there to remain with ſuch Attendants about him as both Houſes of Parliament ſhall appoint, with reſpect had to the Safety and Preſervation of his Royal Perſon, in the Preſervation and Defence of the true Religion and Liberties of the Kingdoms according to the Covenant. Therefore, and in regard of his Majeſty's not giving a ſatisfactory Anſwer to the Propoſitions as yet, and out of their earneſt Deſire to keep a Right Underſtanding betwixt the Kingdoms, to prevent new Troubles within the ſame, to ſatisfie the Deſire of his Majeſty, of the two Houſes of the Parliament of England, and of this Kingdom, for his Reſidence in ſome of his Houſes near the Parliament of England: The Eſtates of the Parliament of the Kingdom of Scotland, do declare their Concurrence, for the King's Majeſty's going to Holmby-Houſe, or ſome other of his Houſes in or about London, as ſhall be thought fit, there to remain until he give ſatisfaction to both Kingdoms in the Propoſitions of Peace; And that in the interim there be no harm, prejudice, injury, nor violence done to his Royal Perſon: That there be no change of Government other than hath been theſe three years paſt: And that His Poſterity in no ways be prejudiced in their lawful Succeſſion to the Crown and Government of theſe Kingdoms.

Scots Concurrence about the diſpoſal of the King.

And as this is the clear intention and full reſolution of the Kingdom of Scotland, according to their intereſt and duty in relation to the King's Majeſty; So they are confident (from the ſame grounds and manifold Declarations of the Parliament of England) that the ſame is the reſolution of their Brethren: And at ſuch a time they expect a renewed Declaration thereof, and that they will give brotherly and juſt ſatisfaction to the deſires herewith ſent. Like as the Kingdom of Scotland do hereby aſſure their Brethren of England, that it ſhall be their conſtant endeavour to keep, continue, and ſtrengthen the Union and Peace betwixt the Kingdoms according to the Covenant and Treaties. Extracted from the Records of Parliament, ſubſcribed by the Earl of Crawfurd, and Lindſay High Treaſurer of Scotland, and Preſident to the Parliament, Witneſſing thereunto the Subſcription and Sign Manual of me Sir Alexander Gibſon of Dury Knight, Clark of our Soveraign's Rolls, Regiſter, and Counſel.

Deſires of the Kingdom of Scotland.

1. THAT a Committee of both Kingdoms be appointed to attend his Majeſty, and preſs him further for granting the Propoſitions of Peace; And in caſe of his refuſal, to adviſe and determine what is further neceſſary for continuing and ſtrengthening the Union between the Kingdoms, according to the Covenant and Treaties; And that no Peace nor Agreement be made by either Kingdom with the King, without the other, according to the late Treaty betwixt the Kingdoms.

2. Next it is deſired, that ſuch of the Scotiſh Nation, as have place or charge about the King (excepting ſuch as ſtand excepted in the Propoſitions of Peace) may attend and exerciſe the ſame; and that none ſhall be debarred from having acceſs to attend his Majeſty, who have Warrant from the Parliaments of either Kingdom reſpectively, or from the Committee of either Parliament thereunto authorized.

3. It is deſired, that the one Kingdom aſſiſt the other, in caſe they be troubled from within, or from without for this agreement.

4. That the Kingdom of England would ſpeedily condeſcend, and agree upon ſome competency of entertainment for the Forces which we are neceſſitated to keep up, to ſuppreſs the Iriſh Rebels, whom by the large Treaty they are bound to ſuppreſs.

A Copy of the Parliament of England's Letter to the Parliament of Scotland.

A Letter from your Lordſhips dated at Edinburgh the 16. inſtant, and the Papers therewith ſent, having been communicated to both Houſes of the Parliament of England, we are commanded to return this Anſwer. They do anſwer their Brethren of Scotland, that nothing needs to be ſaid unto them, for removing any jealouſies out of their hearts, or for ſtrengthning that confidence which they have in the affections of that Nation: And they do preſume that the Proceedings of the Houſes of the Parliament of England, from the very beginning of theſe troubles, are a ſufficient Declaration of their integrity, and of their conſtant affection to their Brethen of Scotland. And as to the deſires of the Kingdom of Scotland they do return theſe Anſwers.

To the firſt, That when the King ſhall be at Holmby, and the Scotiſh Forces gone out of this Kingdom, both Houſes of Parliament (ſaving according to their former Declarations the peculiar Rights of the Kingdom of England) will then appoint a Committee of theirs, to joyn with a Committee of the Kingdom of Scotland, to imploy their beſt endeavours to procure his Majeſty's aſſent to the Propoſitions agreed on by both Kingdoms, and preſented to his Majeſty at Newcaſtle, and to the diſpoſing of the Biſhops Lands, according to the Ordinances already paſſed both Houſes in that behalf. And in caſe the King ſhall not give his aſſent thereunto, however the the Houſes are ſtill reſolved, firmly to continue and maintain the happy Union between the two Kingdoms, according to the Treaties and Covenant; And that according to the late Treaty between the Kingdoms, no Ceſſation, nor any Pacification, or agreement for Peace whatſoever, ſhall be made by either Kingdom, or the Armies of either Kingdom, without the mutual advice and conſent of both Kingdoms.

To the ſecond deſire, both Houſes do declare, that it is not their intention, by their appointing of Perſons to wait upon the King in his journy to Holmby, to make a ſettlement of any Perſons in any particular places, nor to be any prejudice to any of the King's Servants that are of either Nation, who have adhered to the Parliaments: And that none ſhall be debarred from having acceſs to his Majeſty, who have Warrant from the Parliament of Scotland, or from the Committee of that Parliament thereunto authorized, except ſuch as are diſabled by the Propoſitions agreed on by both Kingdoms.

To the third deſire, the coming of the King according to the Votes of both Houſes of the Parliament of England, being agreeable to the Covenant and Treaties; They do declare, that upon any troubles that ſhall ariſe to the Kingdom of Scotland for the ſame, they will aſſiſt them according to the ſaid Covenant and Treaties.

To the fourth and laſt deſire, both Houſes return Anſwer, That their Garriſons being delivered up, and the Scottiſh Army and Forces being marched out of this Kingdom, they will take this their deſire into ſpeedy conſideration. This being all we have in command from the Houſes, we reſt,

Your affectionate Friends and Servants:

E. Mancheſter, Speaker of the Houſe of Peers pro tempore.
William Lenthal, Speaker of the Houſe of Commons.

For the Right Honourable the Lords, the Commons of Shires, and Burrows Aſſembled in the Parliament of Scotland.

The Commiſſioners that were to receive his Majeſty came to Newcaſtle, Jan. 23. To whom his Majeſty gave the Honour of Kiſſing his Hand, and the Earl of Pembroke told his Majeſty they were Commanded by both Houſes of Parliament to attend him to Holmby; at which his Majeſty did not ſeem at all ſurprized, but inquired how the Ways were, &c.

On the 28*th* of Jan. the Scotch Lords being all with his Majeſty; He told them he had often deſired to go into Scotland, that he came into their Army for Protection, and had it, but now perceived they were not willing he ſhould go to Edinburgh. And they being to deliver up the Garriſons, he deſired to know how they would diſpoſe of him, and for that end deſired them to withdraw, and conſider to whom they would deliver him; which they did, and coming in again, They told his Majeſty that they had conſidered of his Speech, and that ſince his Majeſty had refuſed to take the Covenant and Sign the Propoſitions, they were to deliver him to the Commiſſioners of both Houſes of the Parliament of England, who were come to attend him to Holmby.

On Saturday Jan. the 30*th* the Scots march'd out of Newcaſtle, and Skippon took Poſſeſſion of it, and the Parliaments Commiſſioners received the King into their Charge, and ſoon after ſet forwards with him to Durham, and ſo on to Holmby, being met by the way by Sir Tho. Fairfax, who kiſſed his Majeſty's Hand, and having conducted his Majeſty through Nottingham, took his leave very reſpectfully, and ſo his Majeſty was brought to Holmby, where he arrived on Tueſday Feb. 16. 164$^{6}_{7}$.

CHAP. XII.

The State of Affairs in Ireland during the year 1646.

THO' the two Houſes had nominated the Lord Liſle to be Lord Lieutenant General of Ireland, in the latter end of the year 1645. and afterwards ordered that he ſhould carry with him forty thouſand Pounds for the Service of that Kingdom, yet he met with ſuch delays in raiſing the ſame, and other diſappointments in things requiſite to his Journy, that it was near the end of this year 1646. before he could arrive in Ireland, for he Landed at Cork on the 20*th* of Feb. 1645. And his Commiſſion expired the 15*th* of April following.

In the mean time one of the firſt moſt remarkable Occurrences in Ireland, was that grand defeat received by the Scots under Major General Monroe, from Owen Roe Oneil and the Iriſh at Benburgh, and the Black Water near Charlemont, in the County of Ardmagh; touching which the ſaid Monroe expreſſed himſelf in a Letter to the Scots Commiſſioners at London, as followeth.

Monro's Letter of his Defeat at Benburgh, June 5. 1646.

Right Honourable,

IT being my duty to repreſent unto your Honours the condition of Affairs here touching our Army, and thoſe of the Britiſh Army, who were engaged with us in the ſervice, being extraordinarily ſcare of Proviſions, and hearing from all parts that the Iriſh had no conſiderable Army on foot, for Preſervation of our Quarters, it was reſolved by joynt advice to make to the Fields with a Months Proviſion, for to purchaſe Victuals or Cattle from the Enemy; So that we entred our march the ſecond of June, being effective under Arms 3400 Foot, and eleven Troops of Horſe, with ſix Fielding Pieces, and Colonel Monro was to joyn with us at Glaſhloch with three Troops of Horſe, and 240 Muſquetiers, Auchinbreck being left at home for defence of the Quarters; the Marquis Regiment being landed from Scotland two days before, could not be gotten in readineſs to joyn with us. It was alſo condeſcended on by the Engliſh Commiſſioners and me, that the Laggan Forces ſhould march unto Connaght immediately, to keep the Enemy buſied there, who were ordained to keep correſpondency with us on all occaſions; having parted with our Commiſſioners the ſecond night of our march near Drummore. The fourth in the Morning, I commanded forth a Party of Horſe, being 72 commanded Horſe-men led by the Lieutenant of my Troop Daniel Monro, who had direction to croſs the black-water at Benburgh to ſcoure the Fields, and to certifie Colonel Monro of my Rendezvous place at Glaſhloch June the 5. where by the way at Armagh the Party unexpectedly foregathered with the Enemies fore Troop, and took a Priſoner of theirs, who gave intelligence that the Enemies Army were marching that morning from Glaſhloch to Quarter at Benburgh and Charlemont, which intercepted my Party from going to Colonel Monro; the Priſoner being ſent to meet me, after examination certified us the Enemies Army were effective above 5000 Foot, and twelve Troops of Horſe, provided with a fortnights Victuals. Being thus informed, I preſently broke up our night leaguer, and marched ſix miles farther to Hamiltons band four miles from Armagh, and ſent for our Party to retire upon the Army, being impoſſible for them to get through to Colonel Monro. Friday the fifth by four of the clock in the morning I marched to Armagh in view of the Enemy, thinking the nearer our Army was to theirs, to hinder them from ſending any ſtrength to fall upon Colonel Monro, his way lying di-

An. 1646. rectly towards the Enemies Quarters. And having viewed the Enemies Army in a poſture to defend the paſſage at Benburgh, which being hard for us to force by reaſon of the ſtraitneſs of the paſs, the Enemy being Maſter of the Bridge and of the Ford, very Advantagious for him; preſently I conveened the Officers of the Army, to conſult what was beſt for us to undertake, where by joynt advice it was reſolved to march with the Army in the Enemies view to Kinnard, to croſs the Water there, and ſo to draw the Enemy from his Advantage, and from Colonel Monro, his Party being but weak, which being effectuated we were betwixt the Enemy and his Victuals, having gained the paſs at Kinnard without diſpute, and had the Enemy betwixt us and our Party, and our Baggage ſecured in our Rear; all our Army both Foot and Horſe did earneſtly covet fighting, which was impoſſible for me to gainſtand, without being reproached of Cowardiſe; And therefore having provided our ſelves for Battel, and that orderly, with reſolution we advanced towards the Enemy about ſix a Clock at night, and beat in their commanded men and fore Troops to their Army, where they ſtood ready in Battel to receive us. Lieutenant Colonel Cuningham with 500 Commanded men cleared the paſſage for our Horſemen to advance, who were commanded then in abſence of Colonel Moure, by the Lord Viſcount of Ardes; The Army followed up after the Fielding Pieces, and drew up in Battel forth againſt the Enemy, who had poſſeſſed themſelves with the Advantagious ground, where their Foot were covered with Scrogs and Buſhes; the ſervice begun hot on both ſides, continued from ſix a Clock at Night till after Sun ſet. The Enemy could not get charged on our left or right Wing, having the Blackwater on the right hand, and a marriſh bog on the left Wing, and we being drawn up in the plain, having our pieces before us and our Horſemen behind our reſerve, and it being impoſſible for the Enemy to charge us but in our Van, our Horſemen could receive them marching up, and charging through the intervals, betwixt the Brigades of Foot. About Sun ſet I perceived the Enemy making ready for a general aſſault, firſt with his Foot, and his Horſe coming up behind his Foot to ſecond them, I had given order to a Squadron of our Horſe to break through them before they ſhould advance to our Foot, that Squadron of Horſe conſiſting for the moſt part of Iriſh Riders, although under the Engliſh Command, did not charge, but retreated diſorderly through our Foot, making the Enemies Horſe for to follow them, at leaſt one Squadron, notwithſtanding thereof our Foot ſtood to it, and received the Enemies Battalions body to body with puſh of Pike, till at laſt our ſecond Squadron of Horſe charged the Enemies Horſe, and fell pell mell amongſt our Foot, who being carried in diſorder, had no way of retreat but to wade the Black-water where it was ſcarce fordable, and by that means and the darkneſs of the Night many of our Foot eſcaped, with the loſs of ſome few Officers, ſix Field Pieces, and ſome Colours, ſo that by all appearance the Iriſh under the Leſnegarvey Horſemen had a purpoſe to betray the Army by their running away, leaving the Foot to be cut down, who were alſo deſerted by the reſt of the Horſe after retiring from their laſt charge; the Enemy falling on our Baggage, the Baggage Horſes being all gone, the Enemy loved the ſpoil better than to proſecute the Victory. So that we loſt of the Foot at the neareſt conjecture five or ſix hundred, and twenty Officers were taken Priſoners, the Lord of Ardes being one; we loſt alſo many Arms, by reaſon the Souldiers had above 50 Miles to retire. And notwithſtanding of all our loſſes, the Enemy as yet (praiſed be God) hath not attempted to proſecute his Victory within our Quarters, and Col. Monro with his Party miraculouſly retreated home from the Enemy, who viewed them, without the loſs of a Man. And now we are making up our Forces again, having not loſt of our Horſemen above thirty, and one Cornet who was killed; we are both ſcarce of Arms and Victuals, and for ought I can underſtand, the Lord of Hoſts had a controverſie with us to rub ſhame on our Faces, as on other Armies, till once we ſhall be humbled; for a greater confidence did I never ſee in any Army than was amongſt us, and we behooved to taſte of bitterneſs as well as others of both Nations; but praiſed be God being now humbled before God, we increaſe in courage and reſolution; ſo according to your intereſt in us and in the poor inhabitants in this Province, uſe ſome ſpeedy means to ſupply us. Thus recommending your Lord-

Lordſhips and all your weighty affairs to the protection of the Almighty, I humbly take my leave.

Carick-fergus the 11th of June. ROBERT MONRO.

About the ſame time a Party of our Country men in Connaght incountred with a commanded Party of Preſton's Army, where the Enemy loſt five hundred men, beſides twenty Officers that were taken Priſoners, whereof General Major Taaff was the ſpecial, with whom and ſuch others as I have Priſoners of theirs, we intend to relieve the Lord Ardes and other of our Friends.

But other Relations make Monro's loſs much greater, viz. near 5000 kill'd and taken, and as many Arms loſt; the Lord Montgomery, alias Viſcount of Ardes taken, his Lieutenant of Horſe mortally wounded, many Officers kill'd, &c. And it was generally concluded, that if the Iriſh Rebels had had the Courage or Policy to have proſecuted this great Victory, they might have deſtroyed all the Scotch Quarters, and bid fair for the Town they then poſſeſſed; but inſtead thereof, Owen Roe marched with the Priſoners and Colours in Triumph to Kilkenny, and thereby gave the Brittiſh Forces a breathing time to Recruit.

And now the Peace between his Majeſty's Lieutenant the Marqueſs of Ormond, and the Commiſſioners of the Confederate Roman Catholicks, was after a tedious Treaty Concluded, upon the following Articles, and Proclaimed thus.

By the Lord Lieutenant and Council.

ORMOND.

Proclamation of Peace with the Iriſh, July 30.

Whereas Articles of Peace are made, concluded, accorded and agreed upon, by and between Us, James Lord Marqueſs of Ormond, Lord Lieutenant General, and General Governor of his Majeſty's Kingdom of Ireland, his Majeſty's Commiſſioner to Treat and Conclude a Peace with his Majeſty's Roman Catholick Subjects of the ſaid Kingdom, by Virtue of his Majeſty's Commiſſion under the great Seal of England, bearing date at Buckingham on the 24. day of June, in the Twentieth year of his Reign, for, and on the behalf of His moſt Excellent Majeſty of the one part, and Donogh Lord Viſcount Muskery and others, appointed and Authorized by his Majeſty's ſaid Roman Catholick Subjects, by virtue of an Authority of the ſaid Roman Catholick Subjects, bearing Date the ſixth day of March 1645. and in the 21. year of his Majeſty's Reign, of the other part, a true Copy of which Articles of Peace is hereunto annexed, We the Lord Lieutenant and Council do by this Proclamation in his Majeſty's Name publiſh the ſame, And do, in his Majeſty's Name, ſtrictly charge and command all his Majeſty's Subjects, and all others Inhabiting or Reſiding within his Mjeſty's ſaid Kingdom of Ireland, to take notice thereof, and to render due Obedience to the ſame in all the parts thereof.

And as his Majeſty hath been induced to this Peace out of a deep ſenſe of the miſeries and calamities brought upon this his Kingdom and People, and out of a hope conceived by his Majeſty that it may prevent the further effuſion of his Subjects blood, redeem them out of all the miſeries and calamities under which they now ſuffer, reſtore them to all quietneſs and happineſs under his Majeſty's moſt gracious Government, deliver the Kingdom in general from thoſe ſlaughters, depredations, rapines and ſpoils which always accompany a War, encourage the Subjects and others with comfort to betake themſelves to Trade, Traffick, Commerce, Manufacture, and all other things which uninterrupted may increaſe the wealth and ſtrength of the Kingdom, beget in all his Majeſty's Subjects of this Kingdom, a perfect Unity amongſt themſelves, after the too long continued Diviſion amongſt them: So his Majeſty aſſures himſelf that all his Subjects of this his Kingdom (duly conſidering the great and ineſtimable benefits which they may find in this Peace) will with all duty render due obedience thereunto. And we, in his Ma-

So as by the ſame Act it be further Provided and Enacted, that if any Roman Catholick happen to be promoted, preſented or advanced to any Eccleſiaſtical promotion, dignity or Benefice according to the form now uſed in the Proteſtant Church of Ireland, That the freedom and exemption aforeſaid ſhall not extend to any ſuch Roman Catholick; Or if any being Proteſtant, be advanced, promoted or preſented to any Eccleſiaſtical Benefice, Dignity or Promotion, ſhall afterwards happen to become a Roman Catholick, that the freedom and exemption aforeſaid ſhall not ſo far extend to any ſuch Roman Catholick, but that upon tender of the ſaid Oath, and refuſal thereof, he be for that cauſe left ſubject to privation of the ſaid Benefice, Dignity or Promotion, according to the ſaid Statute; And it is further concluded, accorded and agreed, by and between the ſaid Parties, that for all matters concerning the firſt Propoſition of the ſaid Catholicks, viz. That all Acts made againſt the Profeſſors of the Roman Catholick Faith, whereby any reſtraint, penalty, mulct, or incapacity, may be laid upon any Roman Catholick within the Kingdom of Ireland, may be Repealed, and the ſaid Catholicks to be allowed the freedom of the Roman Catholick Religion. That his Majeſty's ſaid Roman Catholick Subjects be referred to his Majeſty's gracious Favour and further Conceſſions; And that no clauſe in theſe Articles ſhall or may hinder his Majeſty's ſaid Roman Catholick Subjects, or any of them from the benefit of his Majeſty's further Graces and Conceſſions; And that no uſe ſhall be made of the Papers paſt on this Treaty, or any of them, concerning the ſaid firſt Propoſition, which may in any ſort hinder the ſaid Roman Catholick Subjects, or any of them, from his Majeſty's further Conceſſions. And that his Majeſty's ſaid Commiſſioner and other chief Governour or Governours of this Kingdom for the time being, ſhall cauſe whatſoever ſhall be further directed by his Majeſty to be paſſed in Parliament, for and on the behalf of his ſaid Roman Catholick Subjects, to be accordingly drawn into Bills, and tranſmitted according to the uſual manner, to be afterwards paſſed as Acts in the ſaid Parliament.

2. Item, It is further concluded, accorded and agreed upon, by and between the ſaid Parties, and his Majeſty is graciouſly pleaſed to call a new Parliament to be held in this Kingdom, on or before the laſt day of November next enſuing, and that all matters agreed on by theſe Articles to be paſſed in Parliament, ſhall be tranſmitted into England, according to the uſual form, to be paſſed in the ſaid Parliament, and that the ſaid Acts ſo to be agreed upon, and ſo to be paſſed, ſhall receive no alteration or diminution here or in England; Provided, that nothing ſhall be concluded by both or either of the ſaid Houſes of Parliament, which may bring prejudice to any of his Majeſty's Proteſtant Party, or their Adherents, or to any of his Majeſty's Roman Catholick Subjects Party, or their Adherents, other than ſuch things as upon this Treaty ſhall be concluded to be done, or ſuch things as may be proper for the Committee of Priviledges of either or both Houſes, to take cognizance of, as in ſuch caſes heretofore hath been accuſtomed, and ſuch other things as ſhall be propounded to either or both Houſes by the Lord Lieutenant, or other chief Governour, or Governour for the time being, during the ſaid Parliament, for the advancement of his Majeſties Service, and the Peace of the Kingdom, which Clauſe is to admit no Conſtruction, which may trench upon theſe Articles or any of them.

17, Item. It is further concluded, accorded and agreed, by and between the ſaid Parties, And his Majeſty is further graciſlouy pleaſed, that an Act of Parliament paſs in this Kingdom againſt Monopolies, ſuch as was enacted in England 21. Jacobi Regis, with a further Clauſe of Repealing of all Grants of Monopolies in this Kingdom, and that Commiſſioners be agreed upon by the ſaid Lord Lieutenant, and the ſaid Lord Viſcount Mountgarret, Donogh Lord Viſcount Muskery, Sir Daniel O Bryen Knight, Sir Lucas Dillon Knight, Nicholas Plunket, Richard Bellings, Philip Mac Hugh Rely, Terlogh O Neale, Thomas Fleming, Patrick Darcy, Gerrald Fennel, and Geffry Browne Eſquires, or any five or more of them, to ſet down the Rates for the Cuſtom, or Impoſition to be laid on Aqua-vitæ, Wine, Oyle, Yarn, and Tobacco.

The Remonſtrance of the Proteſtant Clergie to the Marqueſs of Ormond, upon Concluſion of the Peace with the Iriſh, 1646.

May it pleaſe your Excellency,

WE Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and the reſt of the Clergie of the Kingdom of Ireland, Subſcribing, are wonderful ſenſible how your Excellency (out of Zeal to Gods glory, and the Proteſtant Religion, and out of Loyalty to his Majeſty) hath in this great Diſtemper, with much Hazard, ſingular Wiſdom, and vigilant Care, preſerved not only in this City, but alſo in all the out-Garriſons, the free and full Exerciſe of the true Reformed Religion, according to the Liturgie and Canons ſo many years received in the Church, which (with bleeding Hearts we may ſay) is more than we know to be in any other part of the three Kingdoms. As alſo that we do moſt Heartily acknowledge, that by your very great pains and labour you have at laſt concluded a moſt neceſſary Peace, which we humbly conceive to be the only means to continue theſe great bleſſings of Religion and Loyalty amongſt us, and to be the only hopeful way to reduce this whole Kingdom to his Majeſty's Obedience.

And withal we do moſt ingeniouſly profeſs, That out of your Piety and Nobleneſs you have vindicated our Callings and Places from Contempt, and protected us from perſonal Injuries, and provided a Subſiſtence for us, without which many of us had undoubtedly ſtarved.

Out of the deep ſenſe of all which, and many more favours than we are able to expreſs, we were the moſt unthankful of all men, if we ſhould not praiſe God for your Excellency, and return to you our moſt humble and hearty thanks; faithfully promiſing to continue our fervent Prayers to God, and our very beſt endeavours for ſtrengthning your hands in managing the great Truſt his Majeſty repoſeth in you, and in maintaining Religion and the Peace now eſtabliſht amongſt us.

Having made this juſt and neceſſary Remonſtrance of our Gratitude and Reſolutions, we do moſt humbly beſeech your Lordſhip to continue (as we are very confident you will) your Care to preſerve the Religion, Book of Service, publick worſhip, in the decency and comelineſs thereof, and the true Apoſtolical Government of the Church now exerciſed amongſt us, againſt all oppoſitions whatſoever. And graciouſly to perſiſt in your Care to provide ſome competent maintenance for us, till we may conveniently return to our Benefices; And if any of our number ſhall be diſaffected to the Religion, Book of Service, publick Worſhip, and Government of the Church, his Majeſty's Service, or diſturbers of the preſent Peace, we do not ſupplicate for ſuch, but leave them to your Lordſhip, to be proceeded with as you ſhall find convenient.

After the Peace thus concluded, the Lord Lieutenant Ormond took a Journey himſelf to Kilkenny, to expedite the Levies that were promiſed for his Majeſty's Service, where he was received with all ſeeming demonſtrations of Reverence and Eſteem for his Perſon and Character.

The Lord Digby accompanied him thither, and remaining there for ſome time, did by a Letter from thence to the Lord Inchiquin, endeavour to bring him over to the King's Intereſt. Which Letter and the Anſwer follow.

The Lord Digby's Letter to the Lord Inchiquin. Sept. 2. 1646.

My Lord,

I have ſeveral times, while I was in England, endeavoured (tho' unſucceſsfully) to convey unto your Lordſhip this Truth, That amongſt all the Calamities of my Country, and Misfortunes to the King my Maſter, there hath not happened any thing of a more near and perſonal Affliction to me, than the ſeparation from his Service and Intereſt of a Perſon for whom I had ſo high a value, and particular a Friendſhip, as for your Lordſhip, and upon whoſe Affection and Abilities I had founded ſo great a part of my ſolideſt hopes for his Majeſty's Reſtoration.

And really (my Lord) how oppoſite courſes ſoever we have ſince run, and appear ſtill engaged in; I muſt profeſs that I have ever cheriſht all the Arguments I could poſſibly raiſe to perſwade my ſelf, that either ſome ſtrange miſtakes, or ſome deſperate malice of others, have occaſion'd this ſeparation; and that only the impoſſibility of our meeting to clear them, hath continued it.

Wherefore, my Lord, we being now both upon a Scene, where it will depend meerly upon our own wills to give our ſelves that ſatisfaction, concerning one anothers Opinions and Actions, (which a much leſs kindneſs than ours was might Challenge) I ſend this not only to invite, but even to conjure your Lordſhip to pay that Duty to former Friendſhip, as to agree of the place, and manner where (upon the mutual ſecurity of our own Honours) I may wait upon you, and enjoy the happineſs of an hour or two's conference with you; from which I hope there may be much Advantage produced to the publick, and am moſt aſſured, at leaſt of much ſatiſfaction to our ſelves; ſince certainly either I ſhall have ſo much reaſon to work upon you, or yours ſo much power on me, as tho' not to alter my opinion in relation to the publick, yet ſo far to enlighten me in what concerns my own particular, as not to let my publick engagements in the contrary way, be any longer any impediment to my reſuming in a private one, the Affection wherewith I was formerly,

My Lord,

Kilkenny Sept.
2. 1646.

Your Lordſhips moſt Affectionate Humble Servant, George Digby.

The Lord Inchiquin's Anſwer, Sept. 9th.

My Lord,

THe place you are now in, whom I know to be a Perſon in whom his Majeſty repoſed ſo much Truſt, and the Peace now concluded by his Majeſty's Authority, to the utter ruin (as I conceive) of all that profeſs the Proteſtant Religion in this Kingdom and ſubmit thereunto; have evidenced to the whole World thoſe juſt Grounds that cauſed my ſeparation from that your Lordſhip is pleaſed to call his Service and Intereſt, tho I aſſure my ſelf it tends to the ruin of both.

I find your Lordſhips opinion in relation to the publick ſo ſettled, that I am not ſo vain as to entertain an hope of altering your Lordſhip by my Reaſons: And I am very ſure (tho' I muſt acknowledge your Reaſon and Abilities to be great) my Reſolutions are built upon ſuch a Foundation as can never be moved. And therefore cannot imagine what Advantage can be derived to the publick by our perſonal meeting, the Honour whereof, I may not (for any particular reſpect) allow my ſelf. And for the private Friendſhip, with the mention whereof you are pleaſed to Honour me) the publick Impediments being revoved, I ſhall be ambitious to have it renewed, and ſhall alſo account it an Honour to be eſteemed by you,

My Lord,

Cork the 9th. of
Sept. 1646.

Your Lordſhips moſt Humble Servant,
Inchiquin.

The Iriſh Laiety ſeemed much to Rejoyce at firſt for the late concluded Peace, but the Pope's Nuncio, with many of the Titular Biſhops, conven'd a Congregation of the Clergy at Waterford (a Town moſt at their Devotion) where the Titular Biſhop of Ferns was Preſident.

Which Congregation began to enveigh againſt the Peace, alledging that it had not ſufficiently provided for the Advancement of Religion, and therefore would not ſuffer it to be Proclaimed in Waterford; and ſent their Emiſſaries and Orders to moſt conſiderable Towns to incenſe the People againſt it; inſomuch that when the King at Arms was Proclaiming the ſaid Peace at Limerick, accompanied with the Mayor, Aldermen, and chief Citizens, all in their Habits and Formalities, one Moliſe a Fryar raiſed a Tumult, which being Headed by one Dominick Flanning, a Perſon notorious for many Acts of Blood and Inhumanity in the beginning of the Rebellion, (and afterwards in the Year 1651 hang'd by Ireton) violently aſſaulted them, tore the Herald's Coat off his Back, wounded the Mayor and ſeveral of the Magiſtrates of the City, ſome of them almoſt to death; And preſently the Mayor was diſplaced, and the ſaid Flanning made Mayor in his Room, to whom the Pope's Nuncio writ Letters, returning him thanks for what he had done, and encouraged him to proceed, giving him his Apoſtolical Benediction, &c.

Alſo the Lord Lieutenant, being in his Progreſs to ſettle the Country, coming near the City of Caſhel, was advertis'd by the Mayor thereof, that Owen O Neal's Army was marching that way, and had ſent terrible Menaces to that City, if it ſhould preſume to Receive him the ſaid Lord Lieutenant; and ſoon after his Lordſhip found that the ſaid Owen O Neal endeavoured to get between him and Dublin, to ſurprize and deſtroy him, whereupon his Excellency with all Expedition retreated to Dublin, and uſed all Induſtry to put that City in a poſture of Defence. In the mean time, the before-mentioned Congregation, thunder'd out the following Declaration and Fulmination.

A Declaration by the Eccleſiaſtical Congregation of both Clergies of Ireland, aſſembled together in the Name of the Holy Ghoſt at Waterford. Before the moſt Reverend Lord, the Arch-Biſhop Firmans, the Apoſtolical Legate reſiding in Ireland.

Aug. 12. 1646.

Concerning the Queſtion between us debated, and diſputed on many days together, whether they who accepted a Peace, contained in thirty Articles, tranſmitted to us by the ſupream Council, were to be declared perjured, and conſequently whether they ſhould be excommunicated as perjured Perſons: The Opinions and the Reaſons of every one being firſt heard, and the Writings of ſome Doctors of Divinity read.

It is ordered by one general conſent, and voted by all (no Man gainſaying it,) That all and ſingular Confederate Catholicks, who ſhall adhere to the ſaid Peace, or conſent with the Favourers of it, or after any other manner, ſhall entertain and embrace it, are abſolutely to be accounted Perjured; eſpecially, for this Reaſon, Becauſe in thoſe Articles there is no mention made of the Catholick Religion, and the ſecurity thereof, nor regard had of the conſervation of the priviledges of the Country, as it was promiſed by the Oath, but that all things are rather referred to the Judgment of our moſt renowned King (from whom in this preſent Eſtate, we can have nothing ſetled,) and in the mean time, the Armies, Weapons, and Fortifications, and the ſaid ſupream Council of the Confederate Catholicks it ſelf, are ſubjected to the Authority and Command of the Council of the State, and the Proteſtant Officers of his Majeſty, from whom that he might be ſecure, we have taken that Oath: From which, and many other cauſes moved only by our own Conſciences, and having God before our Eyes, that it may be known to all and ſingular, as well Iriſh as Strangers, that we have not, nor will give our conſent to ſuch Peace, except ſafe conditions, as well for our Religion, as for the King, and for the Country, according to our Oath be offered unto us; and that our Flocks, and all our Catholick People, with our Confederate Friends, who in theſe general meetings, have ſometimes asked our advice in this Spiritual Buſineſs, belonging only to a Spiritual Judge, may know certainly what hath been determined by us; to the end, that the godly and faithful Catholicks, obeying their Shepherds and Paſtors, may concur in the ſame ſentence.

We have commanded this Decree to be Written, and publiſhed in all places in the Engliſh and the Iriſh Tongue, which we have confirmed with our Hands and Seals. But the other Queſtion concerning Excommunication, we have referred until the next Seſſions.

Barnabas Barnwal, Commiſſarius Generalis Capucinorum.

A Proclamation from the Biſhop of Oſſory, excommunicating the Clergy of Kilkenny, for adhering to the Peace concluded between the Council and the Marqueſs of Ormond.

Whereas we have in publick and private Meeting, at ſeveral times declared to the ſupream Council, and others whom it might concern, that it was and is unlawful, and againſt Conſcience; yea, implying Perjury (as it hath been deſigned by a ſpecial Act of the Convocation now at Waterford) to do or concur to any Act tending to the approbation or countenancing of the publication of this unconſcionable and miſchievous Peace, ſo dangerous (as it is now Articled) to both Common-Wealths, Spiritual and Temporal, but more particularly to the Spiritual.

And whereas, notwithſtanding our Declaration of the whole Clergy of the Kingdom to the contrary, the ſupream Council and Commiſſioners have actually proceeded to the Proclamation of it, yea, and forced on the City by terrour and threats, rather than by any free conſent, or deſire of the People.

We having duly conſidered, and taken to heart, as it becometh, how envious this Fact both is, and appears in Catholicks, even againſt God himſelf, And what publick contempt of the holy Church it appeareth, beſides the evils it is like to draw on this poor Kingdom.

After mature deliberation, and conſent of our Clergy (in deteſtation of this heinous and ſcandalous diſobedience of the ſupream Council) and others who adhere unto them, in a matter of Conſcience towards the holy Church, and in hatred to ſo wilful and abominable an Act, do by theſe preſents (according to the preſcription of ſacred Canons) pronounce and command (from henceforth) a general Ceſſation of divine Offices throughout all the City and Suburbs of Kilkenny, in all Churches, Monaſteries, and Houſes in them whatſoever.

Given at Our Palace of Nova Curia,
the 18th day of Auguſt, 1646.

The Iriſh were ſo overaw'd with theſe Bugbears of their Clergy, that they committed and delegated the intire and abſolute Power of Governing and Commanding, as well in Secular as Eccleſiaſtical Matters to the Pope's Nuncio, who committed to Priſon the Iriſh Commiſſioners that had tranſacted the Treaty; and ſo ſoon after drew General Preſton and his Army to join with him, cauſing the following Oath to be taken of all his Adherents.

An. 1646.

An Oath adminiſtred againſt the Peace.

I A. B. Swear and Proteſt, That I will adhere to the preſent Union of the Confederate Roman Catholicks, that reject the Peace lately Agreed and Proclaimed at Dublin, and do nothing by Word, Deed, Writing, or otherwiſe, to the prejudice of that Union, and will to the uttermoſt of my Power advance and further the good and preſervation of it, and of his Majeſty's Rights, and the Priviledges of Free-born Subjects, to the Natives of this Kingdom.

And then the Nuncio (as Generaliſſimo) led both Armies towards Dublin, conſiſting of near 1600 men; whereupon the Marqueſs of Ormond being extreamly ſtraitned, and in want of Ammunition, ſent to the Parliaments Ships then Riding in the Bay of Dublin, deſiring them to furniſh him with ſome, and to tranſport certain Commiſſioners from him to England to Treat with the Parliament, touching the Surrender of Dublin into their Hands. Accordingly Sir Gerard Lowther the Lord Chief Baron, Sir Paul Davies, and Sir Francis Willoughby came over, and arrived at London Octob. the 12*th.* And having been heard by a Committee, and the matter reported to the Houſe, It was Ordered to ſend over Sir Thomas Wharton, Sir Robert King, Sir John Clotworthy, Sir Robert Meredith Knights, and Richard Salwey Eſq; to Dublin, to Treat with his Excellency further about the ſame, carrying with them ſome Mony and Forces for the Relief of that Place, if they could agree for its Surrender. They arrived there on the 12*th* of November, And the whole Negotiation they had with the Marqueſs, be pleaſed to take as followeth.

The Papers of the whole Treaty between the Marqueſs of Ormond, and the Parliament's Commiſſioners. Nov. 1646.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhip,

W*E are ſent hither Commiſſioners from the Parliament of* England, to communicate to your Lordſhip matters of high importance, concerning the preſervation of the Proteſtants in the Kingdom of Ireland; to which end we deſire from your Lordſhip a ſafe Conduct, for the coming and returning of our ſelves, and ſuch as ſhall attend us, not exceeding the number of 30 Perſons, and for ſuch things as appertain unto us. We remain,

WE find in the Inſtructions delivered in by you unto us, That you are to declare unto us, and the reſt that ſigned the Inſtructions to Sir Gerard Lowther, &c. That the Parl. will take into their Care and Protection the Proteſtants of Ireland. We deſire to know, whether by theſe words, viz. [That the Parl. will take into their Care and Protection the Proteſtants of Ireland] All the Proteſtants of Ireland are to enjoy their Laws, Liberties, Eſtates, and Imployments, without moleſtation or diſturbance from the Parliament of England?

ORMOND.

WE find by the Inſtructions delivered in by you unto us, theſe words, viz. If the Lord of Ormond do within four days deliver up the Sword, render all the Garriſons and other Commands to the pleaſure of the Parliament, then, &c. We deſire to know when the ſaid four days ſhall be underſtood to begin, and to what Perſon or Perſons, and to whoſe uſe the ſaid Sword, Garriſons, and other Commands, are deſired to be delivered up, or rendred?

ORMOND.

Novem. 15. 1646.

TO your Lordſhips firſt Paper of the 15. of November, we return this Anſwer; That we are required by the Paper of Inſtructions delivered to your Lordſhip, to declare to your Lordſhip, the E. of Roſcomon, and the reſt that ſigned the Inſtructions to Sir Gerard Lowther, &c. That the Parliament will take into their Care and Protection the Proteſtants of Ireland: But deſire to be excuſed from giving a particular explanation of thoſe words in that Paper, being not directed ſo to do, yet conceive there ought to be no doubt of a fair interpretation thereof.

Rob. Meredith. Tho. Wharton. Rob. King.

Novem. 15. 1646.

ALthough we queſtion not a fair interpretation, yet in matters ſo highly importing the ſafety and ſubſiſtence of the Proteſtans of this Kingdom, we may not leave them to the uncertainty of future interpretation: And therefore we cannot reſt ſatisfied without clearer aſſurance in their behalf, than we find either in the Inſtructions delivered unto us by you this day, (whereof we deſire an Explanation) or the Anſwer given by you to our firſt Paper.

ORMOND.

15. Novem. 1646.

TO your Lordſhips ſecond Paper of the 15. of November, we return this Anſwer: That the four days appointed for the Treaty with your Lordſhip (within which time we are to bring our Debates to a concluſion) we underſtand did begin this 15. of Novemb. 1646. at 9 in the Morning, And we who are appointed Commiſſioners by Authority from the Parliament of England, are to receive from your Lordſhip (if the Treaty ſucceed) the Sword, and Garriſons under your Command, for the uſe of the Parliament of England, in order to the preſervation of the Proteſtants in the Kingdom of Ireland.

15. Novem. 1646.

WE deſire to know, whether your Lorſhip reſts ſatisfied in all the particulars of the Paper of Inſtructions delivered to you by us this day, ſaving that which concerns the Proteſtants, as is expreſſed in your Lordſhips third Paper?

Rob. Meredith. Tho. Wharton. Rob. King.
John Clotworthy. Rich. Salwey.

November 15. 1646.

WE hold it not fit to declare our ſenſe concerning the particulars of the Paper of Inſtructions, delivered by you to us, which concern our ſelf, until aſſurance be firſt given for the ſafety and ſubſiſtence of the Proteſtants of this Kingdom, which we deſire may be haſtened, for the bringing of this Treaty to a ſpeedy and good concluſion.

ORMOND.

November 15. 1646.

FOraſmuch as your Lordſhip in your third Paper of the fifteenth of this inſtant doth expreſs; That you cannot reſt ſatisfied without clearer aſſurance on the behalf of the Proteſtants of Ireland, than you find either in the Inſtructions

An. 1646.

Inſtructions delivered to you by us this day, or in our anſwers to your Lordſhip touching the explanation thereof, as was in your firſt Paper deſired. And whereas your Lordſhip in your fourth, in anſwer to our third hath ſignified, that you hold it not fit to declare your ſenſe concerning the particulars of the Paper of Inſtructions which concern your ſelf, until aſſurance be firſt given for the ſafety and ſubſiſtance of the Proteſtants of the Kingdom of Ireland; to the end nothing may be wanting on our parts, to bring this Treaty to a ſpeedy and happy Concluſion, we hold it fit to declare, That by an additional Inſtruction (which we might not ſooner impart) we are enabled to give to ſuch Proteſtants (not having been in the Iriſh Rebellion) as we condition withal, aſſurance of ſecurity to their Perſons, and to their Eſtates and Goods, that they have in Ireland, and that they may live quietly and ſecurely under the Protection of the Parliament, and their Forces, either within England, Ireland, or Wales, and that they ſhall enjoy thoſe their Eſtates and Goods, without any moleſtation or queſtion from the Parliament, as any others do, who have not offended the Parliament, they ſubmitting to all Ordinances of Parliament; and if any of them have any Lands or Eſtates in England, they are to compound for the ſame at the rate of two Years profit, as they were before the beginning of theſe Troubles, They ſubmitting to all Ordinances of Parliament.

November 15. 1646.

BEfore we make anſwer to your fourth Paper of the fifteenth of November, we hold it needful to have an authentick Copy of the additional Inſtruction therein mentioned, being for the ſecurity of the Proteſtant-Subjects of this Kingdom, And we deſire authentick Copies of ſuch other additional Inſtructions as you have, in regard your commiſſion is limited by, and hath relation to your Inſtructions.

ORMOND.

November 16. 1646.

TO your Lordſhips fifth Paper of the fifteenth of November, we return this anſwer, That to the end nothing may be wanting on our parts, conducing to the ſecurity of the Proteſtants of Ireland, according to the Inſtructions given us by Authoriy of Parliament; and that we may accordingly put a ſpeedy Concluſion to this Treaty, we do for your Lordſhips more ample ſatisfaction, (though we hold not our ſelves obliged thereunto) herewith freely deliver your Lordſhip an Authentick Copy of the additional Inſtructions: But we muſt deſire to be excuſed from giving any further anſwer to the ſaid Paper, until we receive your Lordſhips poſitive Anſwer upon the Papers already given in, hoping it will be believed, That as we have not hitherto, ſo we ſhall not for the future offer any thing, unto which we are not warranted by our Inſtructions.

Rob. Meredith. Tho. Wharton. Rob. King.
Jo. Clotworthy. Ri. Salwey.

The Additional Inſtruction concerning the Proteſtants of Ireland.

YOU, or any three of you, may give to ſuch Proteſtants, (not having been in the Iriſh Rebellion) as you condition withal, aſſurance of ſecurity to their Perſons, and to their Eſtates and Goods, that they have in Ireland; and that they may live quietly, and ſecurely under the protection of the Parliament, and their Forces, either within England, Ireland, or Wales: *And you may likewiſe aſſure them, that they ſhall enjoy thoſe their Eſtates and Goods without any moleſtation, or queſtion from the Parliament, as any others do, who have not offended the Parliment: They ſubmitting to all Ordinances of Parliament. them have any Lands or Eſtates in England, they are to compound for the ſame, at the rate of two Years profit, as they were before the beginning of theſe Troubles, They ſubmitting to all Ordinances of Parliament.

WHereas we have been informed, that the Armies of the Rebels lye near this City, and may probably make ſome ſpeedy attempt upon the ſame: We hold it our Duty for the preſervation thereof, and of the Proteſtants therein, to declare, that if your Lordſhip apprehend ſuch danger to be, and that any Supplies of Men and Ammunition which we have brought with us, may prevent the ſame: We are ready to give all ſuch aſſiſtance, as may be thought expedient, during the time the preſent Treaty continues with your Lordſhip, and are willing to give ſuch Caution as may be expected from us, That no other uſe ſhall be made of the ſame, than is herein expreſſed, and ſhall expect the like from your Lordſhip. November 16. 1646.

UPON conſideration had of your fourth Paper of the fifteenth of this Month, and the firſt Paper of the ſixteenth of this Month, and the Copy of the Additional Inſtruction ſent unto us therewith, before we can deliver any poſitive anſwer to your Papers, we hold it neceſſary to be ſatisfied in the following particulars.

Firſt, Whereas you expreſs in that Paper of the fifteenth, as followeth, viz. We are enabled to give to ſuch Proteſtants not having been in the Iriſh Rebellion, as we condition withal, aſſurance of ſecurity to their Perſons, and their Eſtates and Goods, that they have in Ireland: We deſire you to declare whether thoſe Words, viz. [ſuch Proteſtants not having been in the Iriſh Rebellion] you intend to exempt thoſe Proteſtants, or any of them, who have had a hand in making the Ceſſation, or the late Peace, or who have done any thing by occaſion, or in purſuance thereof.

Secondly, Whether by theſe words, viz. we are enabled to give ſuch Proteſtants as we condition withal, aſſurance; you intend that every particular Proteſtant ſhall come, and make his conditions with you; or whether all the Proteſtants of this Kingdom, are not to be included within the preſent Treaty, and to partake of the agreement which ſhall be made.

Thirdly, Whether by thoſe words, Submitting to Ordinances of Parliament, it be intended that they ſhall ſubmit to all, and every the Ordinances already made, and which hereafter ſhall be made by the Parliament of England.

Fourthly, We find nothing in the Commiſſion, nor in any of the Inſtructions delivered by you to us, for the continuance of the Judges and Miniſters of the Civil Liſt, and Officers of the Martial Liſt in their reſpective imployments, nor any anſwer given by you unto us in any of your Papers unto that particular, and herein we deſire to be ſatisfied, as a matter wherein their being and livelihood doth depend.

ORMOND.

An. 1646.

November 16. 1646.

TO the firſt and ſecond particular of your Lordſhips firſt Paper of the 16. November, we anſwer, that we ſhall not exempt any Proteſtants of Ireland, though they have of late conſented or ſubmitted either to the Ceſſation of Arms, or the Peace concluded with the Iriſh Rebels, ſo as they ſubmit to the Parliament within twenty days after our ſending to them.

To the third particular, your Lordſhip hath an authentick Copy of the Inſtruction, wherein thoſe words [ſubmitting to all Ordinance of Parliament] are expreſſed, of which we have no explanation.

To the fourth particular, concerning the continuation or diſplacing of the Judges and Miniſters of the Civil Liſt in their imployments, we are not inſtructed therein; but for the Officers of the Martial Liſt, we have power by our Inſtructions, and do intend accordingly to imploy ſuch of them as ſhall be found fit for the ſervice.

Having thus endeavoured to give your Lordſhip all poſſible ſatisfaction, we do again deſire your Lordſhips poſitive anſwer to our Papers formerly given in, it being too manifeſt, how great miſchief may befal the Proteſtants of this Kingdom, and the ſervice with which we are entruſted, ſhould not our Debates be brought to a ſpeedy concluſion.

Rob. Meredith. Tho. Wharton. Rob. King.
J. Clotworthy. Ri. Salwey.

November 16. 1646.

WE are not ſatisfied with your anſwer to our firſt Paper, of the 16. of Novemb. to which we take theſe following exceptions for the preſent.

Firſt, We deſired by our ſaid Paper to know of you, whether you intended to exempt the Proteſtants, or any of them, who have had a hand in making the Ceſſation, or late Peace, &c. to which you make this anſwer.

That you will not exempt any Proteſtants of Ireland, though they have of late conſented, or ſubmitted, either to the Ceſſation or the Peace concluded with the Iriſh Rebels, ſo as they ſubmit to the Parliament within twenty days after your ſending unto them; within which words, no Proviſion is made either for thoſe who had a hand in the making thereof, or did upon the firſt making thereof ſubmit thereunto. And beſides, no Proviſion is made for any, but ſuch as you ſhall ſend unto, ſo that it will reſt in your power, to whom you will ſend, and when; wherein there is no certainty.

Secondly, We deſired by our ſaid Paper, to know of you, whether you intended that every particular Proteſtant ſhall come, and make his Conditions with you; or whether all the Proteſtants of this Kingdom are not to be included within the preſent Treaty, and to partake of the agreement to be made, to which no clear anſwer is given.

And whereas you deſire our poſitive anſwer to your Papers formerly given, it being, as you ſay, too manifeſt how great miſchief may befal the Proteſtants of this Kingdom, and the ſervice with which you are intruſted, if your debates ſhould not be brought to a ſpeedy concluſion. We deſire you for the ſame Reaſons, to ſet down fully and clearly how far the Propoſitions which we ſent to the Parliament by our Commiſſioners, are aſſented unto; and upon view and conſideration thereof, we ſhall ſpeedily give our poſitive anſwer.

ORMOND.

November 17. 1646.

IN anſwer to your Lordſhips ſecond Paper of the 16. of November, and for clearing (ſo far as poſſibly lies in us) the Exceptions therein taken to our anſwer unto your Lordſhips firſt Paper of the ſame date. We herewith deliver all the Inſtructions which we have received, that do (as we conceive) conceive) in any kind whatſoever, relate thereunto; and if yet there ſhall remain with your Lordſhip any doubt concerning thoſe particulars, we ſhall repreſent the ſame (if the Treaty do ſucceed) to thoſe that imployed us with the beſt advantage for the Proteſtants of this Kingdom. Further ſatisfaction than this, we ſuppoſe cannot be expected from us.

As to the other part of your Lordſhips Paper, wherein you would have us ſet down fully and clearly, how far the Propoſitions which you ſent to the Parliament by your Commiſſioners, are aſſented unto, we cannot anſwer your Lordſhips deſire therein, neither thoſe Propoſitions, nor Copies of them being delivered unto us.

We therefore earneſtly deſire your Lordſhip to accept of the Conditions offered in our former Papers, and to give us a ſpeedy Reſolution therein.

You, or any three of you, have Power hereby to give Protection to ſuch as will come under Contribution, and to give them the beſt ſafeguard you can, by the countenance of the Forces ſerving under the Parliament.

You, or any three of you, may give to ſuch Proteſtants (not having been in the Iriſh Rebellion) as you condition withal, aſſurance of ſecurity to their Perſons, and to their Eſtates and Goods, that they have in Ireland, and that they may live quietly and ſecurely under the protection of the Parliament, and their Forces, either within England, Ireland, or Wales; and you may likewiſe aſſure them, that they ſhall enjoy thoſe their Eſtates and Goods, without any moleſtation, or queſtion from the Parliament, as any others do, who have not offended the Parliament, they ſubmitting to all Ordinances of Parliament; and if any of them have any Lands or Eſtates in England, they are to compound for the ſame at the rate of two years profit, as they were before the beginning of theſe troubles, they ſubmitting to all Ordinances of Parliament.

We think fit to declare unto you, that our Commiſſioners delivered our Propoſitions and Inſtructions to the Committee of both Houſes, and that they took Copies thereof, and that our Commiſſioners do by their Letters of the 16. of October 1646. certifie us by the Command of the ſaid Committee, that with the ſuccours, there would alſo arrive here certain Commiſſioners to be ſent from the Parliament to treat with us, upon the particulars contained in the Propoſitions and Inſtructions ſent to the Parliament from us, Copies of which Propoſitions and Inſtructions we are ready to ſend unto you, if that you ſhall deſire the ſame. And we again deſire you to declare fully and clearly how far you have power, and will aſſent to our ſaid Propoſitions, or whether we ſhall give our poſitive anſwer to the Papers already delivered by you, taking it for granted that you have or other inſtructions, than what you have delivered us.

ORMOND.

November 17. 1646.

To your Lordſhips ſecond Paper of the 17. of November, (wherein you again deſire us to declare fully and clearly, how far we have power, and will aſſent to the Propoſitions ſent to the Parliament by your Commiſſioners) we can return no other anſwer than we have already done in our two firſt Papers of the 16. and 17. of November, in the latter of which we declare, we have not thoſe Propoſitions nor Copies of them, nor we think it expedient upon this occaſion to receive the ſame from your Lordſhip, yet we deſire the want of thoſe Propoſitions may not be conceived the only reaſon of our forbearance of giving further anſwer to your Lordſhips Paper; but hold it our duty to inſiſt upon your Lordſhips poſitive anſwer to the Papers already given in.

Rob. Meredith. Tho. Wharton. Rob. King.
John Clotworthy. Rich. Salwey.

November 17. 1646.

If you ſhall poſitively declare, that you have no Power or Inſtructions to enlarge your ſelves beyond what is expreſſed in your former Papers, we will then give a poſitive anſwer to thoſe Papers.

ORMOND.

November 17. 1646.

We cannot more largely or poſitively expreſs the power and extent of our Inſtructions, than we have already done, but do again in purſuance of our inſtructions, deſire your Lordſhips anſwer to the Papers given in.

Rob. Meredith. Tho. Wharton. Rob. King.
Jo. Clotworthy. Ri. Salwey.

November

November 17. 1646.

WE did not by our third Paper of the 17. of November, deſire to know whether you could more largely or poſitively expreſs the power and intent of your Inſtructions, than you had formerly done: But we expreſſed, that if you would poſitively declare you had no power or inſtructions to enlarge your ſelves beyond what is expreſſed in your former Papers, we would then give a poſitive anſwer to thoſe Papers, which by your anſwer thereunto you have neither affirmed nor denied; And therefore we forbear to give a poſitive anſwer to your ſaid Papers, till we be ſatisfied in that particular.

ORMOND.

November 18. 1646.

HAving taken into conſideration your Lordſhips laſt Paper of the 17. of Novemb. we return you this anſwer, that we hold it not fit poſitively to declare, whether we have any power or inſtruction to enlarge our ſelves beyond what is expreſſed in our former Papers, nor do we conceive it ought to be expected from us, for that (to omit other reaſons) we have frequently declared, that we are (according to our Inſtructions) to receive your Lordſhips poſitive anſwer upon the Papers already given in, which we now again deſire from your Lordſhip.

Rob. Meredith. Tho. Wharton. Rob. King.
Jo. Clotworthy. Rich. Salwey.

November 18. 1646.

IN the Copy of ſome of the Inſtructions delivered by you unto us, it is thus expreſſed, That if the Lord of Ormond do within 4 days deliver up the Sword, render up all the Garriſons, and other Commands to the pleaſure of the Parliament, then you, or any three of you, are to give theſe enſuing Conditions, &c.

And in your ſecond Paper of the 15. of November, 1646. you expreſs your ſelves amongſt other things, as followeth, viz. We, who are appointed Commiſſioners by Authority from the Parliament of England; are to receive from your Lordſhip (if the treaty ſucceed) the Sword, and Garriſons under your Command, for the uſe of the Parliament of England; To which, and your other Papers, before we can make anſwer, we deſire to know whether you have his Majeſty's Direction and Command unto us, for our ſo doing.

ORMOND.

November 18. 1646.

TO your Lordſhips firſt Paper of the 18. of this month, we anſwer, that we have not his Majeſty's direction and command unto your Lordſhip, for delivering up the Sword, rendring up all the Garriſons and Commands to the pleaſure of the Parliament.

Rob. Meredith. Tho. Wharton. Rob. King.
John Clotworthy. Rich. Salwey.

Novemb 18. 1646.

THE Papers delivered by you unto us, whereunto you deſire our poſitive anſwer, gave occaſion unto us to take into conſideration, as well the Propoſitions and Inſtructions ſigned by us alone, and ſent by our Commiſſioners to be preſented to the Parliament of England, as alſo the Propoſitions and Inſtructions ſigned by us, and the Council of this Kingdom, and other Propoſitions and Inſtructions ſigned by the ſaid Council a-part, and ſent by our ſaid Commiſſioners to be in like ſort preſented: all which Propoſitions and Inſtructions they delivered to the Committee of both Houſes, appointed to conſider thereof, who took Copies of the ſaid Propoſitions and Inſtructions, Copies of which Propoſitions ſigned by us alone, we think fit to inſert herein, viz.

and

Propoſitions of the Lord Liuetenant of Ireland, to be preſented, &c.

THat the ſaid Lord Liuetenant will proſecute the War againſt the Iriſh Rebels, as vigorouſly as he ſhall be thereunto enabled by the Parliament of England, and that he will faithfully ſerve the Crown of England therein.

2. That whilſt he hath the Government of this Kingdom, and the Command of the Armies therein, none of the Supplies of Men, Mony, Arms, Munition, Victuals, or any other Proviſions of what kind or nature ſoever, which ſhall by the PARLIAMENT of ENGLAND be ſent over, or joyned with the Forces already under his Command, nor any other Forces that ſhall be under his Command, ſhall in any wiſe be imployed either within this Kingdom, or out of it, but by the expreſs Direction of the ſaid Parliament of England.

3. That he will not upon any Command, or by virtue of any Power or Authority whatſoever, enter into any Treaty with the ſaid Iriſh Rebels, or conclude any Peace or Ceſſation with them without the conſent and expreſs Command of the King and Parliament of England.

4. He will ingage himſelf to the true preformance of all theſe things by Oath, or by any other means that can be propoſed to a Man of Honour and Conſcience.

Septemb. 26.

ORMOND.

Now foraſmuch, as we do not find by our Papers, that any one of the ſaid Propoſitions, which have been tranſmitted from hence, is aſſented unto by the Parliament of England, though we have preſſed you by ſeveral Papers, to know how far they were aſſented unto; And for that it appeareth unto us by thoſe Papers, that no Copies of the ſaid Propoſitions or Inſtructions were delivered unto you, and that when we upon that ſignification did offer unto you Copies of both, you did not think it expedient upon this occaſion to receive the ſame from us, And for that by the Papers and Copies of Inſtructions delivered by you unto us, We find no ſecurity offered to any of the Proteſtants, but to ſuch as you ſhall condition withal, and who ſhall ſubmit to all Ordinances of Parliament, whereas we expected that all ſhould be included and provided for, in and by the preſent Treaty, and what thoſe Conditions or Ordinances of Parliament are, you do not aſcertain by any of your Papers: And for that it doth not appear unto us by any the Inſtructions, whereof you have delivered Copies unto us, that you have power to ſecure any other of his Majeſties Subjects, who have conſtantly adhered to the Government here ſince the 22. of October, 1641, in their Perſons and Eſtates. And for that the Officers of his Majeſties Army here, and the Judges and Miniſters of the Civil Liſt, have no aſſurance given them for their continuance in their reſpective Imployments, your expreſſion as unto them being as followeth, viz. Concerning the continuation and diſplacing of the Judges and Miniſters of the Civil Liſt in their Imployments, we are not inſtructed therein; but for the Officers of the Martial Liſt, we have power by our Inſtructions, and do intend accordingly to employ ſuch of them, as ſhall be found fit for the Service, which giveth no aſſurance unto any one of the Martial Liſt, and leaveth the Civil Liſt without any ſecurity, and taketh no notice of the Poor diſtreſſed Clergy of the Kingdom. In all which particulars (being contained in our Propoſitions and Inſtructions) we did hope that the Parliament of England would have given us ſatisfaction, which being not yet done, for any thing made known by you to us, and for that you have by your Paper of the 18. of Nov. 1646. declared unto us, that you have not his Majeſties Direction and Command unto us, for delivering up the Sword, rendring up all the Garriſons and Commands to the pleaſure of the Parliament; which you by your ſecond Paper of the 15. of Nov. 1646. deſire to be rendred unto you, to the uſe of the Parliament; without any relation in your ſaid Paper to the King, we hold it not conſiſtent with our Duty to his Majeſty, to part with ſo great a Truſt committed to our Charge, in manner as by your Papers is deſired, without his Majeſty's expreſs and poſitive Directions, and therefore may not aſſent thereunto.

ORMOND.

November 18. 1646.

WHereas we did, together with our firſt Paper of the 16th of November, deliver in to your Lordſhip an Authentick Copy of the additional Inſtruction concerning the Proteſtants of Ireland, unto which your Lordſhip hath taken ſeveral exceptions; we think good for your ſatisfaction therein, now to declare, that we intend that all Proteſtants whatſoever of the Kingdom of Ireland (not having been in the Iriſh Rebellion) ſhall be included in this Treaty, and receive the full benefit expreſt in the ſaid Inſtruction: And that the conditions implyed in that Inſtruction to be impoſed on them, ſhall be underſtood, as followeth, viz. Whereas it is ſaid, they ſhall enjoy thoſe their Eſtates and Goods without any moleſtation or queſtion from the Parliament, as any others do, who have not offended the Parliament, they ſubmitting to all Ordinances of Parliament. By all Ordinances of Parliament, we only intend ſuch Ordinances (whether already made, or to be made) as all others do ſubmit unto, who never offended the Parliament; And whereas liberty is given to compound for ſuch Eſtates, as any of them ſhall have in England, they ſubmitting to all Ordinances of Parliament. By all Ordinances of Parliament we intend, only ſuch as all Perſons now compounding in England do ſubmit unto, provided that all thoſe that are thus admitted to their compoſition do effectually proſecute the ſame within ſix Months after the publication of theſe Articles.

And whereas in the fourth Article of the firſt Paper delivered in to your Lordſhip, offer is made of 5000 l. in Mony, and 2000 l. per annum, to be paid your Lordſhip in manner as is expreſſed in the ſaid Article, we now hold it fit to declare, that if it ſhall be more to your Lordſhips ſatisfaction and content, we have power given us, and ſhall accordingly grant, what you deſired in the ſixth Article of your Lordſhips additional Inſtructions ſent to the Parliament, according as is in the Paper herewith delivered in, expreſſed.

And we laſtly hold it fit to make known unto your Lordſhip, that power is alſo given to us, to agree for allowances to be paid to other Perſons, by conſtant Penſion during the War of Ireland, not exceeding the ſum of 2000 l. per annum, which Penſions are to continue, till they can receive the like benefit by their own Eſtates.

We do now particularly declare to your Lordſhip (and ſooner according to our Inſtructions we could not) that we have no power to enlarge our ſelves, beyond what we have expreſſed. And do therefore now again, intreat your Lordſhips poſitive anſwer upon the whole, which we muſt the rather deſire may be expedited, for that we are (according to our Inſtructions) to bring our debates to a concluſion within four Days at the furtheſt, after the beginning of the Treaty, which will end to morrow at nine of the Clock in the Morning, and we have no Authority to prolong the ſame.

Rob. Meredith. Tho. Wharton. Rob. King.
Jo. Clotworthy. Ri. Salwey.

A Copy of the Paper mentioned in the former.

SIxthly, In regard that my whole fortune is now in the poſſeſſion, or within the power of the Rebels, ſo as I can make no manner of uſe of it; As alſo for that I have not only at my own Charge, in ſome ſort, maintained the Honour and Dignity of my Place, ſince the 21. of Jan. 1643, which was the Day whereon I was ſworn his Majeſty's Lieutenant, but likewiſe contributed in a conſiderable Portion to the maintenance of the Army and Garriſons now under my Command. And laſtly, for that by means thereof, I am utterly unable to diſcharge the Debts I have contracted for my own ſupport, whilſt whilſt I imployed my own to feed the Army, or to pay the wages due to the Servants, which I was neceſſitated to entertain, in reſpect of the place I held; For theſe Reaſons, I deſire it may be humbly offered to the Nobleneſs and Honour of the Parliament, That to free me from the clamour of Creditors, to pay my Servants their Wages, and to tranſport and maintain my Self and my Family, in ſome ſort befitting the condition of a Gentleman; The Parliament will be pleaſed to disburſe the ſum of 13000*l.* 877*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* be paid to ſuch as I ſhall appoint upon Bills of Exchange accepted by ſufficient Men in France, or Holland, to wit, the one half upon ſight, and at ſix Months the other half thereof, which is leſs than the juſt ſum I have disburſed for the maintenance of the Garriſons of Dublin, Dundalke, Newry, Narrow-Water, Green-Caſtle, and Carlingford, not accompting my own expence, nor the many other ſmaller disburſments ſpent meerly for the good of the ſaid Garriſons; And that I may be ſecured againſt any Moleſtation, by Reaſon of the Engagements I have at any time entred into, for the publick Service, ſince the beginning of this Rebellion.

November 19. 1646.

UPON conſideration had of your third Paper of the 18. of Nov. as alſo of your former Papers, and the Copies of ſuch Inſtructions, as you delivered unto us, we find no ſatisfaction given by you in theſe following particulars.

Firſt, We do not find that you have power to ſecure any of his Majeſty's Roman Catholick Subjects in their Perſons and Eſtates, who have conſtantly adhered to the Government here, ſince the 22. of October, 1641, of whom we conceive care ought to be had in the preſent Treaty.

Secondly, You have declared unto us, that you have no Inſtruction concerning the continuation or diſplacing of the Judges, and Miniſters of the Civil Liſt in their imployment, and your Inſtruction as unto the Martial Liſt (whereof you gave us a Copy) is as followeth, viz. You or any three of you are to imploy ſuch of the Officers now under the Lord of Ormond, as you ſhall think fit, and where you diſplace any, you are to place other Officers, if they be neceſſary, or otherwiſe to ſee their Commands ſufficiently diſcharged, until the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland taketh further Order; which may give more occaſion of fear unto the Officers of being diſplaced, than hope of continuance in their reſpective Imployments, and there is not as much as mention made of the Poor diſtreſſed Clergy of the Kingdom, in any the Papers or Inſtructions delivered to you by us.

Thirdly, The Proteſtants of the Kingdom, who are to be included in the preſent Treaty, are, as you declare in the laſt Paper delivered by you to us, to ſubmit themſelves to all Ordinances of Parl. whether already made, or to be made; Amongſt which (as we are informed) are ſome which require the Covenant to be generally taken, and others which lay Mulcts upon thoſe who ſhall uſe the Book of Common-Prayer, which Form of Service, and no other, is by a Law of force in this Kingdom, commanded upon a Penalty to be uſed; And in our inſtructions ſent by our Commiſſioners, we deſire that neither the one nor the other might be preſſed until ſettlement by Parliament.

And for us to agree upon this Treaty to all future Ordinances, which ſhall be made by the Parliament, before it be known what thoſe Ordinances are, we conceive may be of dangerous conſequence to the whole Kingdom, and not agreeable with the rules of prudence in us.

Fourthly, Whereas by a ſpecial Inſtruction ſigned by us apart, we did direct our ſaid Commiſſioners as followeth, viz. If you find the Parl. ready and willing forthwith effectually to take into their Care and Protection his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects within the Quarters under my Command, and thoſe that have adhered to them from the 22. of October, 1641. according to the purport of the Inſtructions ſigned by me and the Council, and that my continuance in the Government, ſhall be the only let thereunto, you are then in ſuch caſe to let them know, that I will Surrender my place of Lieutenant, and deliver all the Holds in my Power, to ſuch as the Parliament ſhall appoint, upon theſe Conditions.

Firſt, That they procure his Majeſty's directions for the doing thereof, &c. which was the firſt and fundamental Condition of all that was propounded by us upon this Overture, which was to be Precedent, and without which, nothing as unto the delivery up of the Government was to be expected from us.

Upon conſideration of all which, and of the Oath taken by us, upon our firſt entrance into this great truſt repoſed in us, the tenor whereof doth enſue in theſe words, viz.

You ſhall ſwear, that you ſhall faithfully and truly to your power ſerve our Soveraign Lord the King's Majeſty, in the room and authority of Lord Lieutenant, and chief Governour of this his Realm of Ireland, You ſhall maintain and defend the Laws of God and the Chriſtian Faith, You ſhall to your power, not only keep his Majeſty's Peace amongſt his People, but alſo maintain his Officers and Miniſters in the execution and adminiſtration of Juſtice, You ſhall defend his Majeſty's Caſtles, Garriſons, Dominions, People, and Subjects of this Realm, and repreſs his Rebels and Enemies, You ſhall not conſent to the damage, and diſherizon of his Majeſty his Heirs nor Succeſſors, neither ſhall you ſuffer the right of the Crown to be deſtroyed by any way, but ſhall let it to your power; and if you cannot let the ſame, You ſhall certifie his Majeſty clearly and expreſly thereof, You ſhall give your true and faithful advice for the King's Majeſty's profit, and his highneſs Council? You ſhall conceal and keep all other things for the preſervation of his Majeſty's Realm of Ireland, the Peace amongſt his People, and execution of his Juſtice, according to his Majeſty's Laws, Uſages and Cuſtoms of this his Highneſs's Realm, You ſhall perform, and do to your power: So God you help, and by the Contents of this Book.

And for that our Commiſſioners have by their Letters certified us, that they were commanded by the Committee of both Houſes to forbear the delivering unto the Scottiſh Commiſſioners the duplicate of the Letters, which we and the Council had written to his Majeſty, and delivered to our Commiſſioners advertiſing his Majeſty thereby of our addreſs to the Parliament, with direction to deliver them to the Scottiſh Commiſſioners, to be ſent to the King, until the pleaſure of the two Houſes ſhould be made known; which reſtraint, doth as yet for any thing made known unto us, lye ſtill upon them.

And for that if we ſhould deliver up the Sword in manner as is deſired, the preſent Parl. of this Kingdom (which is the hope of the remaining Proteſtants here) would be at an end; for all which reaſons, we may not part with the truſt committed to our charge, in manner as by your Papers is deſired, without his Majeſty's expreſs and poſitive direction, and therefore may not aſſent thereunto.

ORMOND.

Novemb. 19. 1646.

IF your Lordſhip continue unſatisfied concerning the Papers already delivered in, or any of them, as is implyed by the Exceptions taken thereunto, and expreſſed in your laſt Paper of the 18. of November, we are ready to offer ſuch conſiderations to your Lordſhip by way of Anſwer thereunto, as we hope, may give your Lordſhip ſatisfaction therein; and this we deſire may be done by conference, if your Lordſhip ſhall think fit, for that the ſhortneſs of time will not give opportunity to commit it to writing.

Rob. Meredith. Tho. Wharton. Rob. King.
Jo. Clotworthy. Ri. Salwey.

Novem. 19. 1646.

ALthough the Conference deſired by you in your Paper of this days date was within half an hour of the expiration of the time limited for this Treaty: And although you have poſitively declared in your third Paper of the 18. of November 1646. That you have no power to enlarge your ſelves, or the time beyond what you have expreſſed, yet to manifeſt to the world, how deſirous we are to receive ſatisfaction in thoſe neceſſary exceptions by us taken to your Papers given in upon this Treaty, which may bring the ſame to a happy concluſion, we are ready to entertain the Conference deſired by your ſaid firſt Paper of this days date.

ORMOND.

Novem. 19. 1646.

WHereas we received a large Paper from your Lordſhip of the 18. of November, wherein you declared you could not aſſent to deliver up the Sword, render all the Garriſons, and other Commands to the pleaſure of the Parliament, as was deſired by us in Papers formerly given in to your Lordſhip, together with your particular Exceptions to the ſame.

And whereas, we did immediately thereupon offer unto your Lordſhip ſuch further Conditions to the former, as we were inſtructed unto for your more ample ſatisfaction in complying with the deſires of the Parliament, in order to the preſervation of the Proteſtants of the Kingdom of Ireland.

And whereas your Lordſhip ſignified to us, that it then being late, and the Paper given in by us of great importance, you would return anſwer thereunto the next Morning.

And whereas, we did this morning deliver to your Lordſhip a Paper, declaring, That if your Lordſhip continued unſatisfied concerning the Papers by us given in or any of them, as was expreſſed by the Exceptions taken thereunto, we were ready to offer ſuch conſiderations to your Lordſhip as we hoped might give ſatisfaction, which we deſired might be done by conference, for that the ſhortneſs of time would not permit it in writing.

And having received another Paper from your Lordſhip of the 19. of November, containing your refuſal to deliver up the Sword, &c. upon the Conditions offered in our firſt and later Papers, your Lordſhip did ſignifie by your ſecond Paper of the 19. That you were ready to hear what we could further offer by way of Conference, as was deſired; which was by us performed accordingly.

We do therefore now deſire to know, if your Lordſhip do ſtill inſiſt upon your refuſal, on the grounds expreſſed in your Papers. And if ſo, we make known to your Lordſhip, that we ſhall for our own exoneration, commit to writing the ſum of what we delivered in Conference, and give your Lordſhip a Copy thereof; to the end, the uprightneſs of our proceeding in the tranſaction of this Treaty with your Lordſhip may in all things appear, although that happy ſucceſs, which we deſired, be not attained thereby.

Rob. Meredith. Tho. Wharton. Rob. King.
Jo. Clotworthy. Ri. Salwey.

Novem. 19. 1646.

FOraſmuch as, what was delivered upon the Conference, cannot be made uſe of by us, as binding unto you, unleſs it be reduced to writing, and ſigned by you, which when you ſhall have reduced the ſame to writing, and given us a Copy thereof, ſigned by you; We ſhall then declare unto you, whether or no, we will reſt ſatisfied therewith, or ſhall upon the whole matter inſiſt upon our refuſal.

ORMOND.

Dublin 20. Novemb. 1647.

Whereas upon Thurſday Morning the 14. of November, in our Conference with your Lordſhip, we did endeavour to offer ſuch conſiderations, as might give ſatisfaction to your Exceptions taken to our Papers given in; And whereas, we did at the ſame time alſo deſire to know, whether or no your Lordſhip had received ſatisfaction to all, or any of your ſaid Exceptions, or whether you would ſtill inſiſt upon your refuſal, whereupon your Lordſhip by your third Paper of the 19. of November, returned anſwer, That what was delivered upon the Conference cannot be made uſe of by your Lordſhip, as binding unto us; unleſs it be reduced to writing, and ſigned by us, and that when we ſhall have reduced the ſame to writing, and given you a Copy thereof ſigned by us, your Lordſhip will then declare unto us, whether or no you will reſt ſatisfied therewith, or ſhall upon the whole matter inſiſt upon your refuſal. We have therefore accordingly expreſt in writing the ſum of what was delivered in Conference, which we offer to your Lordſhip as followeth.

Your Lordſhips firſt Exception is.

Except. 1. That none of the Propoſitions (of the firſt way of Overture) which were tranſmitted by your Lordſhip to the Parliament are aſſented unto.

To which we anſwer.

Anſw. 1. That an Ordinance of Parliament of the 15. of October, 1646. Containing the Declaration of both Houſes to proceed upon the ſecond way of Overture made by your Lordſhip, was by us delivered to your Lordſhip.

2. That declaration was made by the Parliament, before ſuch time as Sir Francis Willoughby returned from London, from whom your Lordſhip might be informed thereof.

3. Your Lordſhip preſuming (before your Commiſſioners came from London) that the Parliament might not accept of thoſe Propoſitions, did by Additional Inſtructions, declare, you would not inſiſt thereupon, and accordingly gave them liberty to recede from the ſame, and to propound a ſecond way of Overture, which the Parliament did proceed upon, and appointed a way of Treating with you; of which, your Commiſſioners did advertiſe your Lordſhip, by Direction of the Committee of Parliament, appointed to conſider of the ſaid Propoſitions. And,

4. If your Lordſhip obſerve, how far that ſecond way of Overture is accepted and granted by the Parliament in the Propoſition by us given in; you may happily find, not only full and poſitive ſatisfaction to the moſt of what your Lordſhip asked, but in ſome particulars alſo, more ample offers made, than was by your Lordſhip deſired therein; which when the world ſhall conſider, together with the grounds and principles held forth by your Lordſhip (inviting the Diſpatch of Supplies to this Place) we are confident, the Parliament will be abundantly juſtified therein: yet over and above all this, we continue to declare, that in every particular we will go to the utmoſt limits of our Inſtructions, and where any thing ſeems doubtful to your Lordſhip, or too ſhort; we ſhall (if the Treaty ſucceed) repreſent it to thoſe that imploy us, in the beſt manner we can for your Lordſhips full ſatisfaction. And this we deſire may be applyed to every Exception taken by your Lordſhip.

Excep. 2. That we have no power to ſecure any of his Majeſty's Roman Catholick Subjects in their Perſons and Eſtates, who have conſtantly adhered to the Government here ſince the 22. of October, 1641. Of whom you conceive care ought to be had in the preſent Treaty.

Anſw. 1. Thoſe that by Authority of Parliament gave power to us to treat, did not, for ought we can perceive, take cognizance of any of the Roman Catholicks of Ireland, that did adhere to the Government of this Kingdom againſt the Iriſh Rebels.

2. If any ſuch be, it's probable the number is not conſiderable; and if they have done nothing againſt the Parliament, they need not any ſpecial ſecurity, but may expect as much as others, that have in like manner demeaned themſelves, although they be of the Proteſtant Religion.

3. Power is given (as by an Inſtruction delivered in the 16. of November is expreſt) to protect ſuch as will come under contribution, and to give them ſafeguard by the countenance of the Forces ſerving under the Parliament; According to which, they are to be protected in their Perſons and Eſtates, as well from the violence of the Souldiers under the Parliament, as of the Enemy; And this to be extended unto all, without diſtinction of Offence, or Religion.

4. If any thing more can be reaſonably offered, in the behalf of ſuch Papiſts as have adhered to the preſent Government, and not been in the Iriſh

An. 1646. Rebellion; it ſhall be alſo recommended back by us to thoſe that imployed us, in the beſt manner we can for your Lordſhips ſatisfaction.

Except. 3. That no aſſurance is given, that the Judges and Miniſters of the Civil and Martial Liſt ſhall be continued in their places and employments, &c.

Anſw. 1. Nothing is given us in charge, nor hath any thing been expreſſed by us concerning the removal of the Judges, and Miniſters of the Civil Liſt, nor any of them.

2. In caſes of like nature, it hath not been known, that Perſons ſo qualified, have been continued and eſtabiſhed by Treaty, nor was it (to our knowledge) ever heretofore inſiſted on by any whomſoever.

3. If it muſt be preſumed that they have offended the Parliament, yet aſſurance is given (and otherwiſe they can need none) for ſecurity to their Perſons, with injoyment of their Goods and Eſtates in the Kingdom of Ireland, as if they had not offended, and have liberty to compound for their Eſtates, as any of them have in England, and ſuch Compoſition not to exceed two Years value.

Concerning the Officers of the Martial Liſt.

We Anſwer.

Anſw. 1. We have expreſſed, That we will continue and imploy all ſuch Officers, whomſoever as ſhall be found fit for the Service: And as we have not hitherto taken up a Reſolution (if the Treaty ſhould ſucceed) to diſplace any, ſo we do Declare, That it muſt be an extraordinary Cauſe that ſhould induce us to it, and we underſtand the words of our Inſtruction (viz. You are to imploy ſuch of the Officers, &c.) doth ſo direct us, and therefore cannot give, as your Lordſhip expreſſeth, more occaſion of fear unto the Officers of being diſplaced, than hope of continuance in their reſpective Imployments.

2. As we believe, no preſident can be ſhown; ſo it is obvious, the inconvenience would be very great, to Article for, and eſtabliſh by Treaty, any Officers of the Military Liſt, though our Reſolution be to continue the ſame.

3. The ſame aſſurance and benefit, as is declared in our third Anſwer to your Lordſhip's Objections concerning the Civil Liſt, is alſo to be extended in like manner to the Officers of the Martial Liſt, according to our Inſtructions.

In which alſo, the Clergy of this Kingdom, mentioned by your Lordſhip, may reſpectively receive advantage, concerning whom we are not inſtructed: Yet,

We deſire it may be remembred; that power is given us to agree for Penſions, to ſuch as we ſhall think fit, to the value of two thouſand Pounds per annum, which we are ready to aſcertain unto ſuch of the Civil and Martial Liſt, as alſo of the diſtreſſed Clergy, as ſhall be thought meet to extend it to, in ſuch way as may give beſt ſatisfaction, according to our Inſtruction.

Excep. 4. That great inconveniency may happen to all the Proteſtants of Ireland, who are to be included in this Treaty, if they ſhould thereby conclude themſelves to ſubmit to all the Ordinances of Parliament.

Anſw. 1. We have declared, &c. That their ſubmitting to all Ordinances of Parliament, is to be underſtood no otherwiſe than as all others do, who have always adhered to, and never offended the Parliament.

2. We know of no Ordinance of Parliament, that requires the Covenant to be taken in the Kingdom of Ireland.

3. We are no ways inſtructed to ſuppreſs the Book of Common-Prayer, or impoſe the Directory, though your Lordſhips repreſented in your own Inſtructions, that the Directory might be uſed here.

4. It may alſo be conſidered, That your Lordſhip made Overture of ſubmitting to the Direction of both Houſes of Parliament, (and that excluſively to any one whatſoever) as to the ordering and diſpoſing of the Army, &c. If they ſhould accept of your Overture, which could not be underſtood otherwiſe wiſe to be done, but by Ordinances of Parliament, as to them from time to time ſhould ſeem meet.

22 Caroli.

Excep. 5. Laſtly, That the King's Direction for the Delivery up of the Government is not obtained, and that your Commiſſioners were commanded to forbear the delivering unto the Scotch Commiſſioner, the duplicate of the Letters which your Lordſhip and the Council had written to his Majeſty concerning the ſame.

Anſw. 1. We are very confident, what the Committee of both Houſes did therein, was by Direction of the Parliament.

2. Your Commiſſioners did declare, that if ſupplies were not inſtantly diſpatched, you would take it for granted none would be ſent, and therefore muſt be neceſſitated to think of ſome other courſe for your Preſervation, as by the Laws of God and Nature became you, and therefore it could not be imagined (the neceſſity being ſo great, under which your Lordſhip then was, according to the repreſentation thereof made to the Parliament) that you would refuſe ſuch Supplies from the Parliament, in manner as they directed, till your Letter ſhould be from thence ſent to Newcaſtle, and an anſwer thereof returned to your Lordſhip, which would not undoubtedly have taken up much more time, than the extremity of your Condition here, according to the foreſaid repreſentation, could poſſibly admit of; And information was given that an Addreſs to the King was alſo made by your Lordſhip another way, and we have not yet underſtood by your Lordſhip that he hath inhibited you to proceed and conclude with us.

But more eſpecially we deſire it may be conſidered by your Lordſhip that in your Letter to the King, (mentioned in your exceptions) your Lordſhips expreſſions are full, to proceed with the Parliament upon the Overture made to them in the Propoſitions, not only without deſiring Anſwer, but without expecting Conſent or Direction from his Majeſty before ſuch time as you would conclude the ſame, and your Lordſhip doth only give an account of your Reſolutions, his Majeſty unconſulted with, as already fixt with expectation only of a benign conſtruction from his Majeſty thereupon; And that not only from the conſideration of neceſſity, but (as we conceive) of your Lordſhips Duty alſo, as the caſe then ſtood, (no leſs than a Kingdom lying at the Stake) to make your application in ſuch manner to the Parliament.

3. May it not alſo be conſidered, what Reaſon the Parliament had to conceive your Lordſhip intended, not ſo to inſiſt on the King's Direction as without it you would not conclude, when they obſerved that by thoſe Propoſitions from your Lordſhip, a Copy whereof you have delivered us, you offered (if they ſhould accept thereof) to put your preſent Army and Forces, called by your Lordſhip his Majeſty's Army, (Notwithſtanding any intereſt you apprehended the King had therein) under the ſole Direction of both Houſes of Parliament. And yet in thoſe Propoſitions, we find no mention made of Conſent or Direction to be firſt had from the King, which was believed your Lordſhip then, as at this time alſo, might the better do, for that by Act of Parliament, the mannaging of the War of Ireland is eſtabliſhed in both Houſes of Parliament alone.

4. It may be conſidered, that however many caſes of this nature in the late troubles in England have happened, where Perſons under great Obligations to the King, have frequently ſurrendred to the Parliament, Garriſons and Forces, which they received by Command from his Majeſty, as in particular that of Oxford, where remained not only the Duke of York and his Majeſty's Council, but alſo the Sword, the great and leſſer Seals with other Enſigns of the Regal Power, (and all theſe) without firſt having any explicite Direction from the King to deliver up the ſame.

5. When we alſo conſider how paſſionately it was repreſented to the Parliament by your Lordſhip, of how great importance the City and Caſtle of Dublin (together with the Garriſons under your Command) were in Order to the recovery of the Kingdom of Ireland, the preſervation of the Proteſtant Religion, together with all the Proteſtants therein, as alſo how undoubtedly all muſt miſcarry, if Supplies did not timely come; We cannot but wonder, that in caſe of ſo high concernment, and ſo great neceſſity

(the ſpilling of the blood of ſo many thouſand Proteſtants being unavoidable) according to the grounds and repreſentations offered by your Lordſhip to the Parliament; the danger whereof remains the ſame, for ought hath occurred to us, granted alſo by the loſs of many Garriſons ſince, and will be perfected by your rejecting the Supplies (with ſo much Expedition and Charge ſent hither by the Parliament) that yet the King's Conſent ſhould be ſo inſiſted on, as that neither the Preſervation of the ſaid Proteſtant Religion, nor the Blood of thouſands of Proteſtants, nor any of the fore-mentioned Conſiderations ſhould purchaſe a Diſpenſation therein.

6. And whereas your Lordſhips Oath is objected, It appears to us to be penn'd with ſpecial Caution and Relation to ſuch a time of neceſſity as this; and is rather (as we conceive) fulfilled by conſent to, than refuſal of the conditions offered to your Lordſhip, unto which alſo we believe that reſpect was had, when thoſe Reſolutions were taken up expreſſed in the fore-mentioned Letter to the King.

We hold it our Duty to deal thus clearly and freely with your Lordſhip, that (if it were poſſible) we might give ſatisfaction thereby; However our Conſciences do acquit us, that we have done our utmoſt therein, and do conceive that thoſe that imployed us, will be abundantly acquitted in the ſight of God and Man, as having done what could be expected from them, and unto whom (for any neglect in this affair) the guilt of Blood we are confident ſhall not be imputed in that day wherein inquiſition ſhall be made for the ſame.

November, 1646.

We have conſidered the Paper wherein you expreſſed the ſum of what was delivered by you in the Conference with us; to which we make return.

Our firſt Exception was, Not that none of the Propoſitions of the firſt way of Overture, which were tranſmitted by us to the Parliament, are aſſented unto, as in that Paper is expreſſed, but that none of the Propoſitions which were tranſmitted, whether you look to the firſt way of Overture, (as you are pleaſed to term it) or the ſecond way of Overture, are aſſented unto. And to the end that this may be the better underſtood, we hold it neceſſary to declare, that ſome of the Propoſitions which were tranſmitted by us from hence, were ſigned by us a-part, wherein we did undertake the Proſecution of the War, as vigorouſly againſt the Rebels, as we ſhould be thereunto enabled by the Parliament; which Propoſitions are expreſſed at large in our ſecond Paper of November 18. 1646. and theſe ſeem only to have relation to Our ſelf.

There were other Propoſitions ſigned by Us and the Council, wherein not only Our ſelf, but all others of this Kingdom, as well of the Souldiery, as others of his Majeſties Proteſtant Subjects of this Kingdom, and their adherents are reſpectively concerned, the ſaid Propoſitions importing no leſs than the preſervation of them in their Perſons, Eſtates, and Imployments.

And there were Inſtructions ſigned by us, and delivered to our Commiſſioners, authorizing them, that if they did find the Parl. willing and ready to take into their care and protection his Majeſty's Subjects, within the quarters now under our Command, and thoſe that have adhered to them ſince the 22. of October 1641. according to the purport of the Inſtructions ſigned by us and the Council, and that our continuance in the Government ſhould be the only let thereunto, that then our ſaid Commiſſioners ſhould let them know, that we would Surrender our place of Lieutenant, and deliver up all the Holds in our Power, to ſuch as the Parl. ſhould appoint, upon certain Conditions, whereof the firſt and principal is, that they ſhould procure his Majeſty's directions for our ſo doing, which offer made by us, is in the Ordinance of Parl. delivered by you to us, and by you in your Paper of the 19. of November 1646. called our ſecond way of Overture, whereupon you ſay the Parliament did proceed, which you ſay, Sir Francis Willoughby upon his return from London might have informed us: That

Sir F. Willoughby might have told us we knew not; we are ſure he did never tell us of the Reſolution ſaid by you to be taken by the Parl. for proceeding in that you call the ſecond way of Overture, nor did he bring with him (for ought known to us) any Copy of the Order of the 15. of October, declaring that Reſolution, nor was it mentioned by our Commiſſioners in any of their Letters, though we received ſeveral, as well by the ſaid Sir Fran. Willoughby, as by others, of dates ſubſequent to the ſaid Order.

But on the contrary, Sir Gerrard Lowther, and Sir Paul Davies, did by their Letter of the 6. of November, after Sir Fr. Willoughby's departure from London, certifie us, that Sir Robert King, and the reſt, were ſent hither to Treat with us (as they heard,) for Surrendring Dublin, and other places under Command, to which they were not called, but were altogether ſtrangers to their tranſactions there concerning that Treaty, and that they did not know any thing of their Commiſſion, Authority, or Inſtructions, or how far they extended.

But though the Parl. did lay hold of this called our ſecond way of Overture, yet the Propoſitions which were ſigned by us and the Council, wherein all his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects of this Kingdom, as well of the Souldiery as others, and ſuch as have adhered unto them, were a like concerned with us, were not to be paſſed over, for whether we did continue in the Government, according to the firſt way of Overture, or part with it (termed by you the ſecond way of Overture,) it was our main care and deſire, that they ſhould be ſecured in their Perſons, Eſtates, and Employments, which is not yet done to our ſatisfaction.

And in that which concerneth our ſelf, the principal thing, which is his Majeſty's direction and allowance for the rendring up of the Government, which was to precede and warrant all that we did propound to be done by us herein, is yet wanting, which we deſire you to repreſent to thoſe who imployed you in the beſt manner you may.

Exception 2.

OUR ſecond exception is, that you have no power to ſecure any of his Majeſty's Roman Catholick Subjects in their Perſons and Eſtates, who have conſtantly adhered to the Government here, ſince the 22. of October 1641. of whom we conceive care ought to be had in this preſent Treaty. To this you give theſe Anſwers.

Firſt, That thoſe who by authority of Parl. gave power to you to Treat, did not take cognizance of any of the Roman Catholicks in Ireland, that did adhere to the Government of this Kingdom, againſt the Iriſh Rebels; which anſwer doth not ſatisfie us, but doth enforce the Exception, for their not taking cognizance of them, is the ground and cauſe of the Exception.

Your ſecond anſwer is, That (if any ſuch be) it is probable the number is not conſiderable; And if they have done nothing againſt the Parl. they need not any ſpecial ſecurity, but may expect as much as others, that have in like manner demeaned themſelves, although they be of the Proteſtant Religion; which Anſwer doth not ſatisfie, but give us more cauſe to inſiſt upon the Exception, becauſe you ſay, it is probable that the number of them is not conſiderable, whereas we who have been upon the place know it to be otherwiſe both in number and quality of Perſons.

And ſince his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, who have ſerved againſt the Rebels here, and done nothing againſt the Parl. are offered to be ſecured in their Perſons, and Eſtates, they may by the ſame rule of Juſtice expect the like aſſurance, and the greater regard ought to be of them, for that their Religion being made the pretence of the Rebellion, they do notwithſtanding adhere to his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects againſt the Rebels, who are of that Religion.

Your third Anſwer, viz. Power is given (as by an inſtruction delivered in the 16. of November is expreſt) to protect ſuch as will come under contribution, and to give them ſafeguard by the countenance of the Forces ſerving under the Parl. according to which they are to be protected in their Perſons and Eſtates, as well from the violence of the Soldiers under the Parliament, as of the Enemy, and this to be extended unto all, without diſtinction of Offence or Religion; which Anſwer doth not ſatisfie us, for the ſaid inſtruction looketh rather to the Rebels who are to be brought under contribution, than to thoſe who have continued good Subjects, and therein there is no aſſurance given unto them for their Eſtates, as is in the ſame inſtruction to his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects for their Eſtates.

Your fourth Anſwer is, If any thing can be reaſonably offered in the behalf of ſuch Papiſts, as have adhered to the preſent Government, and not been in the Iriſh Rebellion, it ſhall be alſo recommended back by you to thoſe who imployed you, in the beſt manner you can to our ſatisfaction; The latter part of which Anſwer, being the beſt part thereof, we deſire may be purſued; for the firſt part thereof doth enfore the Exception, it being made a doubt whether any thing can be reaſonably offered for ſuch Papiſts as have adhered to the preſent Government, and not been in the Iriſh Rebellion, whereas nothing in reaſon can be offered againſt ſuch, but that they ſhould be ſecured in their Perſons and Eſtates.

Our third Exception is, That no aſſurance is given, that the Judges and Miniſters of the Civil and Martial Liſt, ſhall be continued in their places and imployments, which is anſwered by you, as followeth.

Firſt, Nothing is given us in charge, nor hath any thing been expreſſed by us concerning the removal of the Judges and Miniſters of the Civil Liſt, nor of any of them, which Anſwer doth not ſatisfie us: for we deſire by our Propoſition, to have an aſſurance for the continuing them in their reſpective imployments, which is not yet aſſented unto.

Your ſecond Anſwer is, That in caſes of like nature, it hath not been known, that Perſons ſo qualified have been continued and eſtabliſhed by Treaty, nor was it to your knowledge, ever heretofore inſiſted upon by any whomſoever; which Anſwer doth not ſatisfie us, for though you might ſhew that the contrary hath been done in like caſes (as we believe you cannot) yet, even for that cauſe, we have the more reaſon to inſiſt upon it.

Your third Anſwer is, If it muſt be preſumed, that they have offended the Parliament, yet aſſurance is given (and otherwiſe they can need none) for ſecurity to their Perſons, with enjoyment of their Goods and Eſtates in the Kingdom of Ireland, as if they had not offended, and have liberty to compound for the Eſtates any of them have in England, and ſuch Compoſition not to exceed two years value: We are not ſatisfied with this your Anſwer, for there is nothing here to aſſure them the continuauce in their imployments, and our Propoſition made in their behalf for their continuance in their imployments, cannot preſume a guilt; and it is no reaſon to ſay, that if they be not guilty, they need not deſire this aſſurance, for the Judges do well underſtand, that abundans cautela non nocet, and if it muſt be preſumed that they have offended the Parliament, there is the more reaſon to inſiſt on the Propoſition for the continuing of them in their reſpective imployments, they having been diſpoiled of all their Eſtates.

To your expreſſion whereby you would ſatisfie us concerning the continuing in imployment the Officers now under our Command, viz. That as you have not yet taken up a Reſolution (if the Treaty ſhould ſucceed) to diſplace any: ſo you declare, it muſt be an extraordinary cauſe that muſt induce you to it, we eaſily believe, that as it is too early for you to declare a Reſolution to turn them out of their imployments, (though ſuch a Reſolution were taken up by you) till you were poſſeſt of the power to do it; ſo you may judge ſuch a declaration, not to be the readieſt way, to attain to that power by Treaty from us, which we are confident is the only way whereby you will at this time attempt it, but when by that means you ſhould be inveſted in that Power, the queſtion is, whether you would not then underſtand, that the Concurrence of ſome of the Martial Liſt with us in the concluſion of the Ceſſations and Peace here, the actual Service of ſome others in his Majeſty's Armies in England, and the Obedience given by all to ſome Commands, that may have been diſpleaſing to the two Houſes of Parliament in England, to be extraordinary and ſufficient cauſes for their removal, wherein, if you ſhall declare negatively, we ſhall reſt ſatisfied as to that particular, nor could our demand of having them ſecured in their reſpective imployments, be underſtood to reach to a forgiveneſs of ſuch Crimes in future as may merit diſplacing; for which we confeſs, we can no more alledge a preſident, than we believe you can, that ever the Sword was demanded to be delivered by the Chief Governour of this Kingdom, to Commiſſioners miſſioners of the Parliament of England, without the Command of the King.

Exception 4.

OUR fourth Exception being as followeth, viz. That great inconvenience may happen to all the Proteſtants of Ireland, who are to be included in this Treaty, if they ſhould thereby conclude themſelves to ſubmit to all Ordinances of Parliament, is anſwered by you as followeth.

Anſwer 1.

YOur firſt Anſwer is, we have declared, that their ſubmitting to all Ordinances of Parliament is to be underſtood, no otherwiſe than as all others do, who have always adhered to, and never offended the Parliament; with which anſwer we are not ſatisfied, it being no more, than that we are to ſubmit to all the Ordinances of Parliament; to which thoſe who are of the Parliament party ſubmit, as the Covenant, the Directory, the aboliſhing of the Book of Common-Prayer, &c.

Anſwer 2.

YOur ſecond anſwer is, we know of no Ordinance of Parliament that requireth the Covenant to be taken in the Kingdom of Ireland; with which anſwer we are not ſatisfied, for we know that it hath been preſt in all parts of the Kingdom, where the Parliament hath prevailed, as in the Provinces of Munſter, Ulſter, and Connaught, there being ſome Miniſters not long ſince employed into Ulſter, who went from Town to Town, and from City to City, preſſing the Covenant, whereupon many Proteſtants did acquit their Commands and Habitations in thoſe parts, rather than they would ſubject themſelves to it; and if the ſame was done without an Ordinance of Parliament, we have the more reaſon to inſiſt, that his Majeſty's Subjects may be ſecured againſt ſo violent and unwarranted preſſures upon their Conſciences.

And if you know no Ordinances of Parliament which requireth the Covenant to be taken in the Kingdom of Ireland, you may the better undertake that it ſhall not be preſſed; and if you be not inſtructed to ſuppreſs the Book of Common-Prayer, or impoſe the Directory, you may the better condeſcend to what is deſired concerning both, ſo far as is expreſſed in our inſtructions.

Anſwer 4.

YOur fourth Anſwer is, It may alſo be conſidered, that your Lordſhip made Overture of ſubmitting to the Direction of both Houſes of Parliament (and that excluſively to any other whatſoever) as to the ordering and diſpoſing of the Army, &c. if they ſhould accept of your Overture, which could not be underſtood otherwiſe to be done, but by Ordinances of Parliament, as to them from time to time ſhould ſeem meet.

We are not ſatisfied with this your Anſwer, the ſtrength of your reaſon being thus;

That we did ſubmit to the direction of both Houſes of Parliament for the ordering of the Army, &c. therefore no inconvenience can happen to the Proteſtants in Ireland, who are to be included in this Treaty, if they ſhould thereby conclude themſelves to ſubmit to all Ordinances of the Parliament of England, which ſure is no good Conſequence, from one particular to conclude a general; And if you would declare that by ſubmitting to all Ordinances of Parliament, were only intended ſuch Ordinances as concern the ordering and diſpoſing of the Army, though that offer of ours was, in caſe that way of accommodation, which is waved by the Parliament, were laid hold of (of any thing wherein we therefore conceive no uſe ſhould be made in this Treaty, ſince that way is laid aſide) yet ſuch a declaration would, as to that point give ſatisfaction.

The fifth Exception is, That the King's Direction for the delivery up of the

the Government is not obtained, and that our Commiſſioners were commanded to forbear the delivering unto the Scottiſh Commiſſioners, the Duplicate of the Letters, which we and the Council had written to his Majeſty concerning the ſame; To which you make theſe Anſwers, viz.

That our Commiſſioners did declare, That if Supplies were not inſtantly diſpatched, that we would take it for granted, that none would be ſent, which was the ground of haſtning the ſaid Supplies, whereas the words of our Inſtructions were, That if within a reaſonable time after Landing of our Commiſſioners, they did not advertiſe us, that thoſe things we deſired were on the way hither, or at leaſt a conſiderable proportion of Mony and Munition, and probable hope of the reſt ſpeedily after, that then we would take it for granted, not that no Supplies would come, but that our Propoſitions were rejected there; which ſtrongly implyed, and ſo was intended, that if we underſtood Supplies were on the way, we might then take it for granted, our Propoſitions were accepted, which alſo we had cauſe to believe, for that our Commiſſioners by command of the Committee, before whom they were heard, ſignified to us, their meſſage was chearfully accepted, whereof the ſending of Supplies was but a part; nor can it be reaſonably objected to us, that we refuſe thoſe Supplies, ſince none of the Conditions wherein we expreſſed our willingneſs to receive them, is offered to us in manner as was deſired, eſpecially that fundamental one, of procuring the King's Command for delivering up the Sword, and Garriſons, which being the way fixed on by the Parliament, we much wonder, was not endeavoured (as well it might have been, and an anſwer had) before you came from London, and if it had been obtained, there had been no need of ſending it to us till your arrival, and if it had been refuſed, the Parliament in their great Wiſdom and Knowledge of the duty of one ſo highly truſted, would have found ſome other expedient to extend their aſſiſtance and Protection to the Proteſtants, other than ſuch as muſt blemiſh our honour and fidelity to all Poſterity, nor is it a ſufficient diſcharge to us, that his Majeſty hath not inhibited us to proceed and conclude with you, his expreſs Command being in this caſe abſolutely neceſſary. And as for the ſuppoſitions and inferences, which you make out of the Letters writ by us to his Majeſty, and both Houſes of Parliament; as that it could not be imagined, the neceſſities being ſo great, under which we then were, that we would refuſe ſuch Supplies from the Parliament in manner as they directed, till our Letter ſhould be from hence ſent to New-caſtle, and anſwer thereof returned to us: And that the Parliament had no reaſon to conceive, that we intended ſo to inſiſt on the King's direction, as without it we would not conclude, &c. As alſo conſidering how paſſionately we repreſented to the Parliament, the importance of the City and Caſtle of Dublin, &c. and how undoubtedly all muſt miſcarry, if Supplies did not ſpeedily come, that yet the King's conſent ſhould be ſo inſiſted upon, as none of the forementioned conſiderations ſhould purchaſe a diſpenſation therein; And to induce us thereunto, you propoſe unto us examples of the delivering up of other Garriſons and Forces in England, as in particular, that of Oxford, &c. without having any explicite direction from the King to deliver up the ſame. We conceive the caſe of Oxford to be different from this; For Sir Thomas Fairfax, to whom the City of Oxford was rendred, (after ſome time of formal Siege, and the ſhedding of blood on both ſides) was not invited thither by thoſe within to defend and relieve it againſt the expected attempts of another Enemy; as thoſe Forces now here with you were (upon certain Conditions) by us, but his coming before Oxford was unſent for, openly and declaredly to take by force of Arms that City: In the caſe of Oxford alſo, we have ſeen his Majeſty's Command directed to the Governour for the rendring thereof, which if you can produce to us for the giving up of theſe Garriſons, with the Enſigns of Royalty belonging to the Crown of this Kingdom, we will in like ſort readily obey the ſame, notwithſtanding ſome other diſparity in the caſes. And if the Inſtructions we gave our Commiſſioners be looked into, Copies whereof were delivered by them to the Committee of both Houſes, all theſe ſuſpitions, inferences, and Arguments will vaniſh, it being a certain and true rule, that no inference nor application is to be made contrary to that which is expreſt, as our inſtructions were in this particular; for our firſt and principal Inſtruction was, That we would ſurrender our Place of Lieutenant, &c. to ſuch as the Parliament ſhould appoint, upon theſe following Conditions.

Firſt, That they procure his Majeſties Direction for the doing thereof, &c. But further to clear it, in our ſeventh and laſt Inſtruction delivered unto our Commiſſioners, whereof the ſaid Committee had likewiſe a Copy, it is further given in charge unto them in this manner, viz. If in the mean time whilſt they take theſe Propoſitions and the reſt into their Conſiderations, and till they have procured his Majeſties Direction as aforeſaid, the Parliament be pleaſed to ſend over ſuch Supplies, as may relieve the Garriſons from ruin, through want, or by the hoſtile attempts of the Rebels, the ſame ſhall be well Husbanded for them, and imployed only to thoſe ends; both which Inſtructions leave no place for inference or implication to be made contrary to expreſs Inſtructions. If the Parliament hath procured his Majeſties Direction, the condition is performed, but if that be not done, the Forces notwithſtanding may be received and imployed in the preſent ſervice, and ſo all thoſe inconveniencies may be prevented, which are feared: But if nothing that we can do can give ſatisfaction, but to deliver up the Sword, render all the Garriſons, and other Commands to the pleaſure of the Parliament, which we are bound by Oath to preſerve and keep for his Majeſty, before we do receive his Direction therein, We doubt not but we ſhall be acquit herein before God and Men, if we inſiſt upon the refuſal of that which we cannot do without the violation of our Oath to God and the King.

To ſum up in brief thoſe particulars wherein we are not ſatisfied by any of your Papers, nor by any thing which was delivered in the Conference.

Firſt, You have ſhewed us no Direction from his Majeſty to deliver the Sword, &c. Which you ſay you have not procured.

Secondly, You have not offered aſſurance to the Papiſts of this Kingdom, who have adhered to his Majeſties Government ſince the 22. of October, 1641. for their Eſtates, which is confeſſed by you.

Thirdly, You have not undertaken, that the Covenant ſhall not be preſſed, nor that the Book of Common-Prayer ſhall not be ſuppreſſed.

Fourthly, You have given no aſſurance either for the continuance of the Judges and Officers of the Civil Liſt, or the Officers of the Martial, in their reſpective Imployments, or the Clergy in their reſpective Rights and Incumbencies.

Fifthly, You have given us no ſatisfaction in that great and main Objection touching the preſent Parliament, which would be diſſolved, if that we ſhould deliver the Sword in manner as is deſired, The Papers do clear none of theſe particulars, and nothing was delivered poſitively in the Conference which doth any ways enlarge the former Papers. We know that in matters of ſo high and great concernment, you will go to the utmoſt Limits of your Inſtructions, and that in theſe things which ſeem doubtful to us, you will (if any expedient can be found for the continuing the Treaty) repreſent them to thoſe who imployed you, in the beſt manner you can, for our Satisfaction; according to the promiſe made by you in your laſt Paper, for which we do return you thanks in the behalf of all his Majeſties Proteſtant Subjects, and thoſe who have faithfully adhered to them. And for that full ſatisfaction cannot be given to us without your further Application to the Parliament, for enlarging your Powers. We being reſolved to leave no means unattempted, that may conduce to the preſervation of his Majeſties Proteſtant Subjects in this Kingdom, and the Rights of the Crown of England, and to the end the Forces brought hither by you, may be employed to to thoſe good ends, whilſt his Majeſties pleaſure by us, and that of the Parliament by you is ſought, do offer theſe following Propoſitions.

Firſt, That the Officers and Souldiers, ſent hither by the Parliament of England be put into one, or more convenient Garriſons, and be commanded by their Reſpective Officers, who are to receive Orders from us and the Governours of the Places where they ſhall be Garriſon'd, and to be ſubject to the Laws Martial now in force in this Kingdom.

Secondly, We deſire, towards the keeping of the Army now under our Command for ſix Weeks, three thouſand Pounds, whereof two Parts in Mony, and a third Part in Victuals.

Thirdly, That there be an Ingagement from you to us on the behalf of the Parliament, that the Officers and Souldiers which are to be Garriſoned, as in the firſt Propoſition is mentioned, ſhall do no Act prejudicial to the

An. 1646. preſent Government here; And that in caſe we ſhall not at or before the expiration of the ſaid ſix Weeks agree, that they ſhall remove from thoſe places out of our Quarters, at ſuch time as we ſhall direct

Fourthly, We ſhall engage our ſelf unto you, that the ſaid Officers and Souldiers, ſhall quietly and peaceably be permitted by us to remove with their Arms, Proviſions, and other things belonging unto them, to Shipboard, or to ſuch other Places out of our Quarters, as you Sir Robert Meredith, Sir Thomas Wharton, Sir Robert King, and Sir John Clotworthy, Knights, and Richard Salwey Eſquire, or any three of you ſhall Direct: And to theſe our Propoſitions we deſire your ſpeedy Anſwer.

ORMOND.

Dublin, November 22. 1646.

HAving received your Lordſhips Papers of the 21. of November, and in them your return to what was firſt delivered in conference, and afterwards for your Lordſhips ſatisfaction put in Writing, and Signed by us.

And whereas in thoſe Papers, your Lordſhip deſires a Copy of the Inſtruction, whereby power is given us to agree for Penſions to the value of two thouſand Pounds per annum. We have thought fit (that nothing may be wanting on our Parts) herewith to deliver you a Copy of the ſaid Inſtruction.

And however upon peruſal of your Lordſhips Paper of the 21. of Nov. we find little cauſe to believe ſatisfaction will be received by your Lordſhip, as hath been endeavoured to be given by us; Yet foraſmuch as your third Paper of the 19. of November did expreſs, that when you ſhould receive in Writing Signed by us, what was delivered in Conference to your Lordſhip, you would then declare unto us, whether or no you would reſt ſatisfied therewith, or upon the whole matter inſiſt upon your refuſal, we deſire your Lordſhip ſpeedily to give us your poſitive Anſwer accordingly.

And withal, we hold it fit to declare, that as we conceive the grounds of ſatisfaction offered by us, do remain unanſwered by your Lordſhip, and particularly touching the King's Conſent and Direction (which you call Main and Fundamental) we having made it appear that your Lordſhips Overture to the Parliament, was, to put all your Forces and Garriſons under their ſole Command (the King unconſulted with at all therein) ſo we no ways think fit (though our Inſtructions ſhould therein Authorize us) to accept of the Propoſitions mentioned in the latter end of your Papers, as an expedient to continue any longer.

If yet your Lordſhip continue to refuſe what we have offered, we can only give account thereof to thoſe that imployed us, and muſt leave it to the World to judge, whether thoſe Exceptions, taken and inſiſted on by your Lordſhip, be conſonant to thoſe Grounds and Principles held forth in your Overture made to the Parliament, by which they were induced to ſend Succours hither, or whether all the particulars (ſo far inſiſted on by your Lordſhip, that it appears not to us, you will recede from any one thereof) be of equal concernment to that hazard, yea, (according to your Lordſhips own Repreſentation) that certainty of loſs, not of a Kingdom only, but of thouſands of Proteſtants, and together with them, the Proteſtant Religion alſo.

All which, by the great Care and Pious Endeavours of the Parliament of England, might have been (through the Bleſſing of God) prevented, if what we have offered (and do yet offer) in their Names, be not by your Lordſhip refuſed.

CHAP. XIII.

Proceedings in Parliament from April 1. to May 1. 1647.

Thurſday, April 1. 1647.

A Letter to the Parliament's Agent in France, about the Ships and Goods taken by Pirates going for Ireland, was then reported to the Houſe, and, being read, was aſſented to for relief. An Order was then likewiſe made, referring it to the Committee of the Navy, to provide Shipping for the Coaſts of Suſſex, and to prevent Robberies by Pirates, thereby to encourage the Merchants.

The Houſe then fell upon the buſineſs of the day, concerning the Affairs of Ireland (as was appointed) and more particularly whether the Civil and Military Government ſhall be in one or two diſtinct Governments; and it was voted, That the Civil Government ſhould be diſtinct from the Military. Alſo voted, That the Civil Government of that Kingdom ſhall be by two Lords Juſtices, as formerly.

That the Military Government of that Kingdom ſhall be by a Commander in Chief, and that the ſaid Chief Commander ſhall be directed by Commiſſioners on the place.

The Houſe alſo fell into a Debate for the nominating the Chief Commander for Military Affairs, and the Queſtion was propoſed to be put for Sir William Waller to Command in Chief, but it came not to the Vote; ſome others were likewiſe nominated, but the further Debate thereof was put off till to morrow ten of the Clock.

The Houſe was then informed, That according to the Letter to his Excellency, Lieutenant General Hammond, Colonel Hammond, Lieutenant Colonel Pride, &c. were come up, and attended at the door; the Houſe, after much debate, ordered they ſhould be called in; and Mr. Speaker acquainted Lieutenant Colonel Pride, That the Houſe was informed that he ſhould read a Petition (of which the Houſes had an ill Senſe) at the Head of Colonel Harley's Regiment, and that there were threatning Speeches given out, that thoſe that did not Subſcribe it ſhould be caſhiered the Army, &c.

For anſwer he ſaid, That there was no Petition, either by himſelf, or by his appointment, read at the Head of the ſaid Colonel Harley's Regiment, and that there was no menacing or threatning words uſed, and denied the whole Charge; and ſo did the reſt of them, and gave good ſatisfaction in anſwer to what was demanded of them; and after ſome debate thereupon, Mr. Speaker, by direction direction of the Houſe, acquainted them what Senſe the Houſes had of the ſaid Petition, and deſired their care for the ſuppreſſing thereof, or any other of the like Nature for the future, and that they would go down to the Army to their ſeveral Commands, and ſo were diſmiſſed.

A Letter was this day preſented to the Houſe from his Excellency Sir Tho. Fairfax, directed to the Speaker, in anſwer to that ſent on Monday about the Petition on foot in the Army. The Letter, for better Satisfaction, is as follows.

For the Honourable William Lenthal Eſquire, Speaker of the Honourable Houſe of Commons.

Sir,

I received your Letter dated the 27th of this inſtant, with an encloſed Order from the Houſe of Commons, for the making ſtop of the further proceed in a Petition, which the Houſe was informed was carrying on in the Army. In obedience to which, I ſent out Orders to the Officers of the Regiments Quartering in theſe Parts of the Kingdom, to meet at my Quarters, that I might enquire into the whole matter, and take ſuch courſe as might effectually conduce unto the accompliſhing your Commands; where having communicated your Letter and Orders to them, they did generally expreſs a very deep Senſe of their unhappineſs in being miſunderſtood in their clear intentions, which were no other, than by way of Petition to repreſent unto me thoſe inconveniences, which would neceſſarily befal moſt of the Army after Diſbanding; deſiring, That as much as I ſhould judge fit and ſeaſonable might be ſubmiſſively made known to the Houſe of Commons, which otherwiſe (your multiplicity of buſineſs intervening) might not be remembred; aſſuring me, that they would wholly acquieſce, in whatſoever I ſhould judge reaſonable to offer, or you to grant on their behalf. I have alſo, according to your Command, ſent up Lieutenant General Hammond, Colonel Hammond, Colonel Lilburn, Lieutenant Colonel Pride, and Lieutenant Colonel Grimes, to attend the Houſes pleaſure. Who I hope will give you (as far as they are acquainted therewith) a full and candid account of the whole proceedings in this Petition. Sir, there is one clauſe of your Letter concerning all the Regiments marching this way, which I do not underſtand, except it be meant by Sir Hardreſſe Waller's Regiment, which I have remanded away at the inſtance of Major General Skippon, upon the gounds in his encloſed Letter; and Colonel Hammond's, and Colonel Herbert's, now upon their march to Cheſter, being diſmiſt from that Service. Sir, I truſt the Army will ever manifeſt their affections to the Publick, by their conſtant perſeverance in their accuſtomed Obedience unto all your Commands, which ſhall be ever really endeavoured by,

Walden, March 30, 1647. Your moſt humble Servant,

Tho. Fairfax.

April 2. 1647.

THE Houſe of Commons, upon April the 2. (according to their former Order) Debated the Ordinance for the Militia of the City of London, and, after much Debate, it was referred to a Committee.

They then proceeded in the buſineſs of Ireland, and the Queſtion was put; whether the Commander of the Forces of Ireland ſhould be ſtiled Field Marſhal, and alſo concerning his allowance, whether it ſhould be 6 l. per Diem? And in both 'twas carryed in the affirmative.

The Houſe then entred further into Debate, who ſhould be the Chief Marſhal of Ireland; and taking into conſideration the Gallantry, Worth, and Honour, of that faithful and renowned Souldier, dier, Major General Skippon, It was put to the Queſtion, and voted, that Major General Philip Skippon ſhould be appointed Chief Marſhal of Ireland, and have the allowance of 6 l. per Diem, none diſſenting.

The Queſtion was then alſo upon futher debate put, whether Colonel Maſſey ſhould be Lieutenant General of the Horſe, under the Chief Marſhal, ſome others likewiſe were nominated, but it was carryed in the Vote, that Colonel Maſſey ſhould be Lieutenant General of the Horſe.

The Lords ſent down a Meſſage to the Commons; That their Lordſhips had appointed a Committee to joyn with a Committee of their Houſe, to go into the City on Tueſday next, for the borrowing the ſum of 200000 l. for the Service of England and Ireland. And the Houſe of Commons hereupon appointed a Committee of their Houſe to joyn with that of their Lordſhips to go into London.

And they Ordered further, that ſeveral Members (that were of the City) ſhould acquaint the Lord Mayor, That he be deſired to call a Common Council againſt Tueſday next; At which time the Committee of both Houſes do come to propound ſome things to them from the Parliament.

Then the Houſe, according to former Order, adjourned till Tueſday next; and not Sitting on Saturday, nothing further came from any Parts worth the mention.

A Letter from Saffron Walden, April 3. 1647.

Sir,

WHilſt our Enemies appeared only as men out of Place and Authority, and we looked upon them as the common Enemies of the Kingdom, we conceived there might be ſomething done to vindicate our Actions upon the Publick Stage; but now the Diſeaſe is grown ſo Epidemical, that all our endeavours are like to prove invalid. And indeed thoſe who are now prejudiced againſt us, are our Superiours; nay further, thoſe whom we looked upon as our beſt Friends: (and the wounds of Friends are grievous;) who would have thought that ſo modeſt and moderate an Addreſs, as the late Petition drawn up to be Subſcribed by the Army, to be preſented to the General, would have raiſed ſo much duſt? Or, have the Souldiers only, who have been inſtruments to recover the loſt Liberties of the Nation, fought themſelves into Slavery? Sure there is right of Petitioning for us, as well as there was a Petition of right for the Parliament. If we had been ſo raſh, as at firſt adventure to have knock'd with a Petition at the Parliament's doors, it might have been cenſured as too Saucy and Malapert: For Souldiers to repreſent their grievances to their General, is a Liberty which the Law of Nature and Nations will not deny; for this was to go no further, but left to his Excellency to retract, or repreſent, as he thought either fit or ſeaſonable.

The firſt Vote of the Houſe of Commons for the ſtopping of the Petition ſeemed ſtrange to us, and we could not but have a very deep Senſe of our unhappineſs, in being miſunderſtood in our clear intentions, which are no other than by way of Petition to repreſent the inconveniences which muſt neceſſarily befal the Army after Disbanding, which the Parliament through multiplicity of buſineſs might not ſo well provide againſt; beſides ſome have already ſuffered for want of a general Act of Indempnity, and many Officers (as I believe is obvious to your Eyes) have been ſtarved for want of ſubſiſtence, whilſt they ſought to obtain their Arrears. But how great a cauſe of amazement and aſtoniſhment was it to us, to ſee a ſecond Declaration of both Houſes of the 30. of March, wherein that Petition is declared to tend to the putting the Army into a Diſtemper and Mutiny, to put Conditions upon the Parliament, and obſtruct the relief of Ireland; land; That they ſhould pronounce their high diſlike thereof, and that they would proceed againſt the promoters as Enemies to the State, and Diſturbers of the Publick Peace; but that which yet heightens the amazement is, that ſuch a Declaration ſhould be grounded upon Letters and Informations of ſo ſlight Credit, which if I might be ſo bold I might term both frivolous and fictitious. One of the Letters directed to Colonel Harley, ſays, that at a Rendezvous of the ſaid Colonel's Regiment, the Petition was read and ſigned by a 1100 Hands, and ſuch as refuſed it were threatned to be caſhiered. The Muſter-Maſter will tell you there was not 1000 Muſtered the laſt Muſter; and yet 1100 ſet their Hands, and the reſt 00000 were caſhiered: But this is not all the Diſcovery. The other Regiments were coming up; and ſays one, except the Parliament take high Reſolutions, they will enſlave the Kingdom. To anſwer this, there was none came from the North, but Sir Hardres Waller's, and that was ſent for at Major General Skippon's requeſt, who complained that the Country there was not able to bear it. And Colonel Herbert's, and Colonel Hammond's Regiments being about Cheſter ready for tranſportation for Ireland, but (their good will not accepted) coming back towards the reſt of the Army. But another Member acquaints the Houſe, that thoſe who would not ſubſcribe the Petition were to be left out of the Muſter-Roll. And another ſays, that he heard Lieutenant General H. and other Officers were to reſide at the Head Quarter to receive Subſcriptions: yet not one of them received a Paper or Subſcription, nor any brought in at that time. But this was not all; there was another Letter from an Officer of Colonel Roſiter's (who would do nothing without his Colonel's conſent) and he takes exceptions at nothing but at the deſiring the Royal aſſent: This Colonel Fines very excellently vindicated the ſame day in the Houſe; declaring that there was nothing deſired more than what the Parliament themſelves demanded in the Propoſitions; (but Colonel Roſiter had thanks, and his Regiment voted their Arrears.)

Sir, Give me leave a little to clear up the intentions of the Army: For that charge of Mutiny; I can aſſure you there was no ſuch thing, the Petition being generally approved of, and whole Regiments unanimouſly ſubſcribing it, except here and there ſome indifferent Commanders ſeemed to oppoſe it: The truth is, it is the Maſter-piece of our Enemies to ſuppreſs it in ſuch high Language, if it were poſſible to bring the Army to a Mutiny, and ſo put an Odium upon them at the laſt, which they could not hitherto faſten: For putting Conditions upon the Parliament; I dare ſpeak the hearts of the Petitioners (the Commanders I'm ſure) it never entred into their thoughts: And I may ſay the like for the obſtructing of Ireland, and add further, That the Parliament will find thoſe men, who were moſt forward in this Petition, more ready to go for Ireland, than any of the Septem decem viri, who only to curry favour and ingratiate, have tendered their Service (in a Declaration which I ſuppoſe you have ſeen) leaving the Conditions, Conduct, Indempnity, and Arrears at pleaſure; which indeed they may, for moſt of them will never come there.

Sir,

I Suppoſe you are not ignorant of the late Command ſent unto the General, to publiſh a Declaration at the Head of his ſeveral Regiments, requiring them to deſiſt from going on in that Petition they were about to preſent unto him; I thought fit by this to acquaint you, That in obedience to the Commands of the Parliament, his Excellency has cauſed the ſame to be publiſhed, and the Souldiers acquieſce therein (ſuch is their obedience and reſpect unto the General) though at the reading it, ſome of the Souldiers gave out, it was an hard Caſe with them, that they that had fought for the Liberty of the Subjects of England, ſhould be denyed the Liberty of the Subject to Petition, though it be to their General in an humble way, and meerly in things relating to them as Souldiers (medling neither with Church Government nor State Affairs) and withal ſubmitting it to the General's Judgment for approbation or correction, as he ſaw cauſe; and though they ſaid they did deſiſt in this Petition, yet ſince it was publiſhed to the World, that that their proceedings tended to ſuch a Nature, as to deſerve to be declared Enemies if they perſiſted therein, they purpoſe to publiſh to the World a Vindication of their Innocency, from thoſe groundleſs Opinions had of them, and hope to have Juſtice done upon the miſ-informers; this they ſay they intend to do in an humble and a ſubmiſſive way, and though their Mouths be ſtopt from a Liberty of Petitioning, yet their Honour is ſo dear unto them, that they ſay they are reſolved of a Vindication, ſo as it ſhall be neither offenſive to the Parliament, nor the General. To regulate Offences and allay Heats in Parliaments, ſometimes is more prevailing, than things tending to Provocation, and it had been wiſdom in the County of Eſſex in the firſt violent Petition, to have forborn to have publiſhed the ſame in Print, wherein they poſſeſs the World, That this Army came to enſlave the Country, and to awe the Parliment. I ſend you here encloſed a Copy of a ſecond Petition of that County, contrived and Printed privately in London, and ſent down hither in Print (no Man knows from whom) to the ſeveral Hundreds and Pariſhes, to be read the next Lord's Day in all Churches, as you will ſee by the direction. The Souldiers will not hinder others Petitioning againſt them, even in their own preſence, and yet they ſay they muſt be denyed to Petition for themſelves, be their Cauſe never ſo juſt. Who can blame the County of Eſſex? or any County in this Kingdom elſe, to deſire a preſent Disbanding, ſince the work is done? It is as much irkſome to us, when there's no need of Souldiers to Quarter upon the Country, as it can be to the Country to Quarter us; yet no Petition that hath been put out in Print lately againſt this Army, for the Disbanding of it, hath ever yet expreſſed ſo much Affection, Love, or Requital unto the Army, for what they have done for them, as to mediate or deſire, That as they would have them Disbanded, ſo that Care may be taken, the poor Souldier that hath been ſo faithful and expeditious in their Service, might be conſidered for their Arrears at the Disbanding. And what (ſays the Souldier) makes the Army lyable to theſe reproaches, unleſs it be for finiſhing their work ſo ſoon? And have they fought to maintain the Petition of Right, and be denyed a right of Petitioning themſelves? Sir, Having given you this brief account,

I Remain.

Walden, April 3. 1647.

April 5. 1647.

THE Houſe Sat not, having formerly ordered, not to Sit Saturdays or Mundays for a time.

Another Petition againſt the Army from Eſſex, was read in ſeveral Churches yeſterday by the Miniſters, to get Hands to it. The Souldiers (eſpecially the Horſe) are much troubled at this, and cry out, why may not we be heard in Petitioning, as to ſee Petitions in our own Quarters Subſcribed in an indirect manner againſt us? The Horſe hereabouts talk of drawing to a Rendezvous, or meeting to compoſe ſomething for Vindication.

Intelligence from Scotland.

Intelligence from Scotland adviſe, That a great noiſe hath been made of the coming over of a conſiderable number of Iriſh, to joyn with the Earl of Antrim's Forces, but in the mean time it hath pleaſed God to proſper Major General Middleton in his undertakings againſt the Gourdons, and hath ſince taken a ſtrong Caſtle of Strathbolgly, which was the chiefeſt Hold the Marqueſs of Huntly had to truſt in. This Caſtle endured a very hot Storm, but at length the Defendants were beaten out of their Poſſeſſion, throwing down their Arms, and calling for Mercy for their Lives; which was granted, except to the Inhumane Rebels above twenty, who were taken in the Caſtle, and deſervedly hang'd. Major General Middleton is ſtill in purſuit of the Marqueſs of Huntly, endeavouring to prevent his joyning with Colkitoth.

The Parliament's Commiſſioners of England do ſtill remain at Edinburgh, where (during the interval of Parliament) there is a ſtanding Committee to order Affairs.

By other Letters from Edinburgh, of the ſame date, came more, thus. The Parliament of Scotland, Sitting at Edinburgh, adjourned on Saturday laſt, and the adjournment is to be until the firſt Thurſday of the next March, 1647. But they have choſen a Grand Committee to Sit in the Interval; and power is given them by Commiſſion and Inſtruction to perfect ſuch buſineſs as ſhall come before them, until the next Sitting of Parliament.

Our Field News is very good, and David Leſhly hath taken in Strobogie Bogg, a Ghight Leſmore, and Ward-Houſe, two of them by Storm, and the other upon Quarter; There were 160 Priſoners taken, in Strabogie 1000 Bowls of Corn; there was not much hurt ſuſtained in ſtorming and taking of the place; beſides the many Noble Priſoners are taken coming in from the Rebels, 36 in all are hang'd, David Leſhly hath begirt other three of the Rebels Garriſons, letting them know that if they will not Surrender he will Storm them, and give none of them Quarter Thoſe Rebels ſcattered in the Mountains are vaniſhed, and few left in the Field elſe where.

On Tueſday laſt, March the 30. The Lord Lauderdale intended to ſet out from Edinburgh, towards London, with ſome others.

Edinburgh, March 30. 1647.

Upon Tueſday April 6. 1647.

THE Commons concurrence deſired by the Lords, for the enlargement of Captain Kittleby, who with his Ship deſerted the Proteſtants in Ireland, and came with it to the Ships which revolted from the Parliament.

The Houſe being informed, That irregular means have been uſed lately in the County of Eſſex, for getting of Hands to a ſecond Petition againſt the Army, which Petition was firſt promoted and contrived in London, and ſent down privately into Eſſex, to get Hands unto it.

The Houſe, to ſhew their diſlike of ſuch way of Petitioning, and the great diſcontent it may occaſion in the Army, in this juncture of time, Ordered, That the Knights of the Shire ſerving for that County, ſhould write to the Inhabitants to deſiſt, and to give them to underſtand, that the Houſes were upon a way to diſpoſe of the Army, as may be beſt advantagious to the whole Kingdom. The Members of the Houſe that ſerve for the Counties of Suffolk and Norfolk, were likewiſe ordered to do the like.

The Houſe then alſo finiſhed Inſtructions for the Committee, who are to Treat with the Common Council of London this afternoon, about the Loan of the 200000 l. for the Service of England and Ireland. And accordingly this Evening a Committee of both Houſes met the Common Council at Guildhall, and acquainted them with the Houſes deſire for the Loan of the 200000 l. The Security propounded, was the remainder of the Biſhops Lands, the Exciſe, Delinquents Eſtates, or the new Ordinance for raiſing 60000 l. per Menſem, for England and Ireland's Forces, and further left it to the City to propound what Security they ſhould think fit, in the Houſes Power to grant.

The Common Council looked on the buſineſs with much reſpect, and there appeared a willingneſs in them for the Loan of the Monies, upon ſome further Conditions to be offered; and upon the Reſult of all, this anſwer only at preſent was given; That the Common Council would chuſe a Committee of their Members to bring in an anſwer, which ſhould from them be given to the Houſes.

Upon April 7. 1647.

According to former Order, the Houſe reaſſumed the Debate of the Ordinance for 60000 l. per Menſem, for the Service of England and Ireland, and after the Amendments were reported, they were aſſented unto, and then a Clauſe was offered to be inſerted in this Ordinance, for freeing and exempting all Colledges of the Univerſities, Alms-Houſes, Free-Schools, Hoſpitals, &c. from payment to this Ordinance, and this was referred to a Committee.

Another Clauſe was offered to be inſerted into the ſaid Ordinance, which was for abating all the Counties of the Kingdom Free-Quarter in payment of their Aſſeſments, and this was agreed unto.

Many others were offered, but nothing done upon them.

The Houſe then Ordered, That this Ordinance ſhould commence from the 25. of March laſt. And they Ordered that it ſhould be ſent to the Lords for their Concurrence.

A Letter was (April 7. 1647.) read in the Houſe of Commons, from the Parliament of Scotland, dated before their adjournment, in the behalf of Viſcount Montgomery, Lord Ards, Colonel of the old Iriſh Eſtabliſhment, who was taken Priſoner laſt year by the Rebels, deſiring that his Arrears may be paid him to procure his Redemption; The Commons voted to referr it to the Committee at Derby-Houſe for Ireland, to conſider if they can find out any way for Exchange, and the Lords Concurrence was deſired herein.

Another Letter was read from General Leventh out of Scotland, expreſſing his great Engagements, and thanks to the Houſe for the great Honour and Favour in beſtowing the Jewel on him. The Houſe Ordered 20 l. (beſides the former Mony) to be paid to the Meſſenger.

A Letter was alſo delivered to the Houſe, from his Excellency the Lord Liſle, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, but by reaſon of their great buſineſs, it was not then read.

The Commons added twelve of their Houſe to the Committee for Ireland, at Derby-Houſe, and they ſent a Meſſage to the Lords, that they would nominate a proportionable number of theirs to joyn with them. They likewiſe Ordered that the Committee for Ireland, ſhould have Power to ſecure the Horſes and Arm of all ſuch as ſhall not be liſted for Ireland, and likewiſe to tranſport thoſe that are deſigned thither, to the end the Countries may not be burthened by them.

The Lords took into Conſideration the buſineſs concerning Country Committees, and it was moved to have a Conference with the Commons about putting them down. The further Debate thereof was referred till another day.

Several Meſſages were ſent from their Lordſhips to the Commons, about the Earl of Bath's and Captain Kittleby's Petitions, &c.

The Houſe Ordered to ſend Anſwers by Meſſengers of their own.

To the Right Honourable, the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes aſſembled in Parliament. The humble Petition of the Inhabitants of the County of Eſſex, Eſſex Petition to Disband the Army. April 6.

Humbly Sheweth,

THAT in all Exigencies having freely and with the firſt engaged themſelves to the utmoſt hazard of their Lives, and exhauſted their Eſtates for the ſupport of the Kingdom in its Native Rights and Liberties, and by God's Bleſſing the ſucceſſes have been anſwerable in ſome degree to their deſires, by which we ſit in Peace, and your ſelves in Security, with a full Poſſeſſion of the hearts of the People; and now fearing leſt by the miſcarrying on the Military Charges, beyond the neceſſity of the Work, and the ability of the People now much weakened, by a Dearth ſharper than the late devouring Sword, you ſhould hazard the loſs of your ſelves and friends, not ſo much from the alienation of their affections, which yet is not to be neglected, as their diſabilities to ſerve you, which may ariſe from the Army now on Foot, after ſix Months Ceſſation of all Hoſtility here, and ſo bleedingly called for to the ſaving of any other Kingdom, as alſo from ſo numerous a Party in this County; ſhortly by their Quarters, like to equal all precedent Charges, and to Surmount the worſt and heavieſt of our former Taxes, eſpecially by the manner of their being impoſed upon us.

Your Petitioners do humbly offer to your prudence the Speedy Disbanding of the Army, as a plenary expedient againſt the worſt, that in general may be feared by you and us. And the removal of it from this County, by which you ſhall continue abſolute Maſters and Diſpoſers of them and theirs, in all your pious and painful undertakings for the future; and that God will aſſiſt you for all your ſafeties, is and ſhall be the daily prayers of your Petitioners, &c.

The Miniſter is deſired to publiſh this Petition April 4. and to have two ſheets of Paper, to take the Names of thoſe that will freely joyn in it, the one to be preſented to the Houſe of Lords, and the other unto the Houſe of Commons.

This Petition was ſent from London to Joſeph Hall, High Conſtable in little Bardſield, and they are to be publiſhed in every Pariſh Church in this County of Eſſex, and in every Pariſh to gather Hands to it, with this further direction written in the Printed Paper, wherein they are deſired (as many as can conveniently) to meet at Shealford Langthrine the 8. of April, to go to London with the ſame.

Upon April 8. 1647.

THE Houſe of Commons proceeded in the buſineſs of Ireland, and voted Colonel Jones to be Governour of the City of Dublin.

The Lords ſent down the Names of the ſix additional Members of their Houſe, to be added to the Iriſh Committee at Derby-Houſe, viz. The Earls of Lincoln, Suffolk, and Middleſex, Lords Dacres, Willoughby, and Maynard.

The Houſe of Commons likewiſe Debated, and approved of the Contract brought in by the Committee for Ireland, upon the Ordinance for Proviſions already ſent, and for which the Committee have contracted to be ſent into that Kingdom. Likewiſe the Contract with Mr. Davies for Corn to be ſent thither, was debated and approved on.

Ordered likewiſe, that Colonel Sidney be conſidered of, for his faithfulneſs and good Service to the State in convenient time, and the Lords Concurrence was deſired in theſe Votes.

Then

Then the Houſe of Commons (according to former Order) entred upon the buſineſs of the Body of Horſe, who are to be continued in this Kingdom; and particularly they fell upon nominating the Regiments and Officers of Horſe, who are to be continued in the ſeveral Counties, or otherwiſe, as occaſion ſhall require; and having formerly voted the York-ſhire Horſe under Colonel General Poynth, Colonel Bethell, and Colonel Copeley to be continued, they now proceeded and voted,

The General Sir Thomas Fairfax, his own Regiment to be continued.

Colonel Needham (formerly Governour of Leiceſter) to Command a Regiment to be drawn out of the Forces of Shropſhire, Staffordſhire, Cheſhire, Warwickſhire, and Leiceſterſhire.

The Houſe then took into Conſideration the continuing of ſome Horſe, for the Defence of North-Wales and South-Wales, and they voted that Major General Mitton ſhall have 100 Horſe and 100 Dragoons for the ſafety of North-Wales, to be under the Command of his Excellency.

That Major General Laughorn ſhall have the ſame number for the ſafety of South Wales, under his Excellency.

A Letter was this day brought from the Parliament's Commiſſioners at Holmby, to the Houſe, giving them to underſtand; That notwithſtanding all the care which they have taken to prevent any from delivering Papers to his Majeſty, which they have been conſtantly vigilant to prevent, Yet one Colonel Boſvill (formerly an Officer in the King's Army) of the Lord Cleaveland's Regiment, diſguiſed himſelf in a Country-man's Habit, and as his Majeſty (with the Commiſſioners) was paſſing over a narrow Bridge, he put a Pacquet of Letters into his Majeſty's Hands. The Commiſſioners apprehended him, he confeſſed they came from France; his Examination is ſent up from the Commiſſioners, deſiring to know what to do herein; but of the effect of the Letters, there is nothing known as yet.

After the reading of the Commiſſioners Letter, and Colonel Boſvill's Examination, They Ordered that the ſaid Colonel Henry Boſvill ſhould be ſent for to the Houſe as a Delinquent, by the Serjeant at Arms attending the Houſe.

They Ordered likewiſe, That a Letter of thanks ſhould be ſent to our Commiſſioners for their care herein, and deſire them to take the like care of preventing private Intelligence to his Majeſty for the future.

On April 9. 1647.

THE Houſe further proceeded as to the buſineſs of Ireland, and Ordered, That the Officers employed for the Service of Ireland, ſhall have greater pay allowed them than thoſe to be continued in this Kingdom. That the Commanders and Governours of all Forts, Towns, and Caſtles, having above 200 men under their Command, ſhall have above a Captain's pay, according to the Eſtabliſhment. And in further purſuance of this buſineſs, it was referred to a Committee to draw up an Eſtabliſhment for the Forces of the two Kingdoms of England and Ireland, and to report it to the Houſe, and with all theſe additions agreed on. That the Officers to be imployed for Ireland, ſhall have a proportion of Land in Ireland, for that part that is reſpited upon the publick Faith.

That the Committee for Ireland, ſhall have power to grant Commiſſions to the Officers to be employed for Ireland.

That the Committee for Ireland, ſhall have power to draw the Forces that undertake for Ireland into Regiments, and take care for the ſafe tranſport of them.

The Houſe then had into Debate the buſineſs of the Church, and Ordered that on Thurſday fortnight, the Houſe do Debate the buſineſs of the Church for fourteen days together, and in the Interim no private buſineſs to intervene. And further Ordered, that ſuch Miniſters as are recommended from the Lords to be put into Livings, be referred to the Aſſembly to be examined concerning their abilities for the Miniſtry.

A Meſſage came down from the Lords, for a Conference for taking away Country Committees, and a Conference about that buſineſs was had accordingly, and ſeveral Reaſons were given by the Lords at this Conference for the taking away Committees, which Reaſons the Commons have appointed to take ſuddenly into Conſideration, and give their Lordſhips an anſwer. The Commons then further conſidered the Ordinance for appointing new Commiſſioners for the Great Seal. Finding ſome ſtop in the Lord's Concurrence in that Ordinance, that no Obſtruction may be to the publick prejudice, They Ordered the preſent Commiſſioners ſhall be continued for twenty days longer.

After this the Houſes adjourned till Tueſday next, and there was nothing of moment on Saturday.

On April 12. 1647.

FROM Holmby by Letters ſomething further came this day of the Pacquet from France, delivered privately into the King's Hands the laſt week by the Gentleman diſguiſed; and the buſineſs is thus certified. His Majeſty the other day going to Bowls, there was one Major Boſvil (who in a plain Country Habit) preſented his Majeſty with a Pacquet of Letters ſo ſecretly, that none of thoſe (that attended him) perceived it. The Major having done his buſineſs, eſcaped three quarters of a Mile, but being perceived by a Miller, who looked lower than the reſt, he cryed, Nobles and Gentlemen, there was a Man gave his Majeſty Letters; which the Major perceiving (others not hearing) offered him Gold to keep ſilent, but the Miller would have none. Some that attended his Majeſty at a greater diſtance than ordinary paſſing by after, the Miller told them, there was one had given his Majeſty Letters; they demanded where he was, he told them he went ſuch a way, they rode after him, over-took him and brought him back. Being examined, he ſaid he came from Paris, and brought the Letters from the Queen's Majeſty and others; They demanded of him what they contained, he told them he knew not; only the Lady Culpepper told him, that they contained a deſire of the Prince, to go along to the War this Summer with the Duke of Orleance, who Commands the Army in Flanders againſt the Spaniard, and that the the Prince conceived it neceſſary in point of Honour, but both his Mother Queen and the Queen Regent was againſt it.

It was deſired of his Majeſty, that he would make known the Contents of thoſe Letters; he anſwered he was not to give an account to any Man living.

Major Boſvil is ſending up to the Parliament.

On April 13. 1647.

THE Houſe of Commons proceeded in the buſineſs of Ireland, and more particularly of an Eſtabliſhment of pay who will go thither, as reported from the Committee at Derby-Houſe; and that they may have the more encouragement, it was Ordered, That thoſe that went ſhould have the ſame pay that they had under the Command of Sir Thomas Fairfax; and for Officers, whereas they had for half their pay publick Faith, they that go for Ireland ſhall have that half pay in Rebels Lands, and they who formerly adventured for Land in Ireland, according to the ſame rate.

It was this day further agreed on by both Houſes, That the Earl of Warwick, Lord Dacres, Sir William Waller, Sir John Clotworthy, and Major General Maſſey, go down to the Army, and make ſome further Propoſitions to the Officers and Souldiers that will go for Ireland, and accordingly this Committee of both Houſes ſet forwards from London to the Army this afternoon.

The Eſtabliſhment agreed on by the Commons this day, for the Forces to be continued in both Kingdoms, take as followeth.

Officers of Horſe in this Kingdom.

A Colonel ſhall have 12 s. per Diem, and for four Horſes 6 s. per Diem.
A Captain 10 s. per Diem, and two Horſes 4 s.
A Lieutenant 5 s. 4 d. per Diem, and two Horſes 4 s.
A Quarter Maſter 4 s. per Diem, and one Horſe 2 s.
A Provoſt Marſhal 3 s. 4 d. and two Men 4 s.
Corporals and Trumpetters each 2 s. 6 d. per Diem.

Foot Officers in this Kingdom.

A Captain 8 s. per Diem.
A Lieutenant 4 s. per Diem.
An Enſign 2 s. 6 d. per Diem.
Serjeants, Drummers, Corporals, each 1 s. per Diem.

They Ordered no Officer ſhall be above a Captain in any Garriſon, but the Governour.

That the Governours of Cheſter, Plymouth, Hull, Pendennis, Leverpool, Glouceſter, Linne, Newcaſtle, and Portſmouth, ſhall have 12 s. per Diem as Governours, and 8 s. per Diem as Captains.

That the Governours of Weymouth, of the Fort and Caſtle of Briſtoll, and Tinmouth, ſhall have 7 s. per Diem as Governours, and 8 s. per Diem as Captains.

They alſo made an Eſtabliſhment for thoſe that had under 50 in their Garriſons, and thoſe that had above 50.

That the Forces in Portland ſhall be reduced to 50.

They Ordered that they approved of Colonel Sheffeild's going into Ireland with his Regiment of Horſe.

That in reſpect of Captain Howard's good Services, he ſhall have a Regiment in Ireland.

That the Foot that goes for Ireland, ſhall have Coats and Knapſacks allowed them above their pay.

That the Forces that go for Ireland, ſhall have Debentures made up in their abſence for their Arrears in the ſervice of this Kingdom.

That what is reſpited upon the publick Faith to the Officers employed for Ireland, the ſame ſhall be paid them out of the Land in Ireland, as if they had adventured.

Letters were read this day from the Lord Liſle, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, which expreſs his Lordſhips readineſs to ſerve the Parliament to the utmoſt in the Service of Ireland, if they think fit to employ him further, if not he is willing to return when they ſhall ſo order it, and in the mean time to do what Service he may for their aſſiſtance againſt the Rebels.

The buſineſs of ſending Propoſitions to the King ſhould have been Debated this day, but this Grand buſineſs of Ireland, and the Eſtabliſhment for the pay of the Forces of both Kingdoms, hindered the ſame.

There came this day a Citizen, and gave himſelf Priſoner to the Serjeant of the Commons Houſe, telling him he had a great and dangerous Plot to Diſcover; thereupon a Committee was appointed to examine him and take his Diſcovery, but he would not at preſent ſay any thing, having (as he ſaid) acquainted Mr. Marſhal and Captain White of Weſtminſter therewith; he gave general Intimation, that the deſign was againſt the Parliament at Weſtminſter.

The Commons ſent a Meſſage to the Lords, deſiring their Concurrence to ſeveral particulars. As to the Votes concerning the Forces to be continued in England.

The Ordinance for the repayment of the Monies, for the firſt reducing Newcaſtle, for 300 l. to be given to the Gentlemen that came from the Parliament of Ireland, and to carry them back.

From Weſtcheſter came by Letters this day thus; There is not any thing came from Dublin, ſince the putting to Sea of Colonel Caſſell's Regiment. There are about 600 of Colonel Hungerford's Regiment come to theſe Parts.

The Mutiny of the Souldiers in North-Wales for Arrears continues; They ſtill hold in Priſon ſeveral Committee men in Richam Church, Colonel Mitton is gone for Shrewsbury, Colonel Alderſon is come to this Town; other chief men in the Country, not in their Hands, have taken refuge in Conway Caſtle, which they threaten to Beſiege, and ſay they will have Money before Disbanding.

By Letters from Cork, dated March 26. 'tis adviſed, That the Lord Liſle, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, remains there, but is in no condition to take the Field, having no addition of Power ſince his firſt arrival; he hath Fortified the Places upon the Black-water, and according to firſt Reſolutions ſettled the Garriſons, and is now ready (had he Horſe and Foot, the Seaſon beginning to be good) to take the Field, and to ſhew himſelf a faithful and true Servant to the Parliament: As for the Rebels they are quiet, and ſtir not in thoſe Parts.

From Scotland, dated April the 6. is thus certified. David Leſbly hath taken in Anthenden Caſtle, which was Surrendered upon Summons, Colonel Lewis Gourdon Governour, and the Men 30 in number Priſoners at Mercy; he hath alſo taken another Houſe near Bruntricke, Commanded by one Mortimor (an Arch-Rebel) who capitulated for his own Life, the reſt to the number of 26 were hanged, An. 1647. hanged, and when he hath taken two or three Places more about Bucquaine, it is believed he will march through the Vale.

Since the mentioning of the former Letter from Cork, came a Letter from Brandon-Bridge, March 20. 1646. and it ſpeaks ſadly, as by the ſequel.

Sir, Since this my laſt Letter, News came here to Mr. Ellwell, That there is a Diſcovery of the unparrallel'd Murthers committed by Kerry-men (viz.) That near about 60 Men, Women, and Children were ſtripped in Kerry, and coming from thence towards our Proteſtant Quarters, were taken and thrown into a deep Rocky Cave, about the Mangerton, and impoſſible to get out, ſome having broke Arms, Leggs, with other Limbs fractured, and moſt grievouſly wounded, lay there and ſtarved, being impoſſible to relieve them.

On April 14. 1647.

THE Houſe of Commons Ordered, That a Letter ſhould be written to Colonel Mitton, that he ſhould take ſpecial care to expedite the ſlighting and demoliſhing of the Caſtles and Gariſons in North-Wales, according to the former Order of the Houſe.

The Houſe of Commons reſumed the Debate according to former Order, concerning the procuring his Majeſty's anſwer to the laſt Propoſitions of both Houſes, preſented to his Majeſty at Newcaſtle, and likewiſe to the Bill for the Sale of Biſhops Lands.

The Houſe had much Debate herein, and Ordered that a Committee ſhould be appointed to draw up Instructions for ſuch Commiſſioners for Sale of Biſhops Lands, as ſhall be named by both Houſes for this purpoſe, and a Committee was choſen accordingly.

A Petition was this day read to the Houſe, in the name of the reduced Officers, late under the Command of Ferdinando Lord Fairfax, moſt of which raiſed their Troops at their own charge, and upon Disbanding had not their two Months pay, or fifth part paid them as others had.

A Letter was likewiſe read from his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax, on behalf of the Petitioners; upon the Debate of the buſineſs, the Houſe Ordered to give them a fifth part of their Arrears, and this Mony to be charged on Goldſmiths-Hall in courſe.

On April 15. 1647.

A Report was made to the Houſe of a Conference had with the Lords, concerning the Lords alterations in the Ordinance for the Univerſity of Oxon, That the Lords concurred with the Houſe of Commons in all things, except the addition of Names to the ſaid Ordinance, giving Reaſons why the ſame ſhould not be added.

The Houſe of Commons Ordered to adhere to the Addition of Names, as they were ſent up to the Houſe of Peers, and for this purpoſe appointed a Committee to draw Reaſons to ſatisfie their Lordſhips, why the ſame ſhould ſtand.

They Ordered that the Committee for this Ordinance ſhall meet and conſider of a fitting Maintenance for the Maſters and Heads of the two Univerſities.

That the Committee to conſider of giving competent Maintenance to the late Biſhops, ſhould meet conſtantly, till they have diſpatched that buſineſs; and this Order was grounded upon a Petition from ſome of them.

That the Committee for Ireland ſitting at Derby-Houſe do meet daily, notwithſtanding the Adjournment of the Houſe.

That the Committee for Ireland ſitting in the Star-Chamber, ſhall ſign all Warrants for Monies for the Service of Dublin.

The buſineſs for ſettling the Militia of London was then taken into Conſideration, and an Ordinance was read giving power to the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of London, to Select thirty one Perſons of the City, to govern the Militia of the City and the Liberties thereof, for one year and no longer, which was read and aſſented unto.

Upon April 16. 1647.

THE Houſe further conſidered of Proſecuting the Affairs of Ireland; and Ordered, that 12000 l. ſhould be advanced upon the Credit of the 200000 l. to be borrowed of the City, for the Tranſporting of the Forces deſigned for Ireland.

That the Lord Mayor ſhould be deſired to call a Common Council concerning the 200000 l. to be borrowed of the City, to the end the Houſe may receive ſatisfaction therein.

On April 17. 1647.

THE Houſes ſate not; But there came a Letter of the Proceedings of the Commiſſioners ſent down to the Army, viz.

That on Thurſday there came to Walden, the General's Head Quarters, The Earl of Warwick, Lord Dacres, Sir William Waller, Lieutenant General Maſſy, and Sir John Clotworthy, Commiſſioners appointed by the Committee at Derby-Houſe, to make Propoſitions to the Army for Ireland; concerning which buſineſs, I ſuppoſe you are deſirous to receive ſatisfaction; and upon ſtrict inquiry (with what alſo I was my ſelf an Eye Witneſs) have ſent you this account. His Excellency invited the Commiſſioners to Dine with him on Thurſday, and had before ſent forth Orders to every Regiment, for the Officers to meet at the Head Quarters that Afternoon; many Officers appeared, and met at the Church in Walden, where after ſome Conſultation about the buſineſs of going into Ireland, there were nominated Lieutenant General Hammond, Colonel Lambert, Colonel Rich, Colonel Lilburn, and Colonel Hewſon to repreſent their Senſe to the Commiſſioners. After Dinner near 200 Officers came down to the General's Quarters, where the General and Commiſſioners were preſent; The Commiſſioners cauſed the ſeveral Votes of both Houſes to be read concerning their Power to tranſact, and make Propoſitions to ſuch as willingly would undertake for Ireland. The Conditions I ſuppoſe you have heard, and therefore I ſhall not particularize them. They alſo read the Votes for the payment of ſuch Forces as ſhall remain in England.

Theſe Votes being read by the Earl of Warwick's Secretary, the ſaid Earl made a Pathetical Speech, uſing many Exhortations to the Officers to accept of thoſe Terms, and undertake for Ireland, ſetting forth both the neceſſity and concernment of that Service, and the great Honour many had got by being Souldiers abroad; His Excellency encouraging the Officers to engage themſelves in the Service, and much preſſed them with the neceſſity thereof.

An. 1647.

After this it was deſired by Colonel Lambert, in the name of the Officers, to know what ſatisfaction the Parliament had given to thoſe four Queries they made at the laſt Convention, concerning Arrears, Indempnity, Maintenance in Ireland, and Conduct: Sir John Clotworthy endeavoured to poſſeſs the Officers, that by the aforeſaid Votes they were all anſwered, except that of Indempnity; and of that he ſaid, no doubt but the Parliament would take care, and had given Inſtructions to the Judges in the mean time, not to receive any Indictments againſt Souldiers for things done in tempore & loco Belli, till the Ordinance could be brought in. But then it was moved concerning Commanders. He anſwered, Major General Skippon, and Major General Maſſy were named by both Houſes for General and Lieutenant General; for other Commanders, the Parliament had not yet nominated any. To this was objected, That ſome of the Officers underſtood of the unwillingneſs of Major General Skippon to take that Employment; Sir John Clotworthy ſaid the Houſe had no ſuch Information, and that there came a Letter from the Major General to the Houſe on Wedneſday, whereby they perceived he had not then received the Votes of both Houſes of his being General, ſo that there could be no ground to think that he would refuſe it, till he had declared himſelf ſo to the Parliament. Colonel Hammond declared, that if they had aſſurance that Major General Skippon would go, he doubted not, but a great part of the Army would engage in that Service, which otherwiſe would not, ſuch is the great endeared Reſpect, and high Eſteem the whole Army in general have of the Worth and Valour of that great Souldier. And this was further ſeconded with a Propoſition, that if they might have the General Officers of whom they had ſo much Experience. To this the Officers cryed out all, all; and others, Fairfax, and Cromwell, and we all go. The Commiſſioners ſeeing they could make no Impreſſion upon the Officers in general, without ſatisfaction in Conduct, (which is ſo much deſired) in the Iſſue declared, that ſuch of the Officers as would go for Ireland, upon the above mentioned Conditions, ſhould come to their Lodgings in the Town, where they would give them further ſatisfaction. Hereupon the Convention was diſmiſſed, and the Town very full before, was ſuddenly emptied; there being only Lieutenant Colonel Peckham, Captain Kempſon, Captain Dorme, and five or ſix other Officers of Colonel Lilburn's Regiment, and ſome few others from other Regiments, that have yet preſented themſelves to go for Ireland upon the above ſpecified Conditions; the reſt of the Officers who were in the Church, drew up and ſubſcribed this Declaration following, to prevent the Miſrepreſentation of their proceedings, wherein they ſaid they formerly ſuffered prejudice, viz.

Saffron Walden,
April 15. 1647.

Officers of the Army named, to repreſent to the Parliament their proceedings.

WHereas the Officers of the Army being met together, by Order from the General, in purſuance of the deſires of the Committee of Lords and Commons for Iriſh Affairs at Derby-houſe, and to adviſe what ſatisfaction to give the Commiſſioners how come hither, upon their Demands to the Propoſitions of both Houſes, concerning the buſineſs of Ireland, It was agreed by all the Officers there convened, whoſe names are Subſcribed, That Lientenant General Hammond, Colonel Hammond, Colonel Lambert, Colonel Lilburne, Colonel Hewſon, and Colonel Rich, ſhould be deſired to repreſent the Senſe of the reſt of the Officers as followeth.

1. To

23 Caroli.

1. To repreſent their deſires, to know what was done in reference to the laſt Propoſitions ſent unto the Parliament by way of Query.

2. To repreſent, That all thoſe who in their own Perſons do not engage for Ireland, would be ready to promote the Service.

3. That if the ſame Conduct they have had, under which God hath ſo exceedingly bleſſed this Army and Kingdom, might be continued alſo as to the Service of Ireland; it would conduce much to their Encouragement and Perſonal Engagement.

Laſtly, That there was nothing afterwards delivered at the meeting with the Commiſſioners by any of the aforeſaid Gentlemen, but what was generally approved of as the Mind and Senſe of all the Officers. This Declaration was ſubſcribed preſently by 100 Officers, and the Horſe Officers all generally ſubſcribed it on Friday.

Sir, This is all the account I can give you of this Tranſaction, I ſhall leave it to your Obſervation to conſider, what it is that will much expedite the Officers in their Engagements for Ireland. His Excellency hath this day granted a Warrant to Captain Howard, to draw Colonel Fleetwood's Regiment to a Rendezvous at ſuch time and place as he ſhall think fit, to make known what he hath to ſay for their Encouragement to go into Ireland. There is ſince alſo ſome of the Officers of the General's Regiment that have ſubſcribed to go, and ſome in Colonel Rainsborough's, one Captain and ſome Lieutenants in Colonel Hammond's, few Horſe Officers, but Captain Howard, Colonel Sheffield, and ſome of Colonel Rich's Regiment, Colonel Butler, Major Fincher, Major Alford, and Major Ducket, whoſe Subſcriptions are ſent up to the Parliament. The General hath at the deſire of the Commiſſioners granted an Order, that the Officers ſhall draw out as many of their men as will engage and March with them to Bridge-North in Shropſhire. I ſhall not trouble you further at preſent.

April 16. 1647.

Your Servant.

On April 19. 1647.

THE Houſes not ſitting, we will briefly collect ſomething only of what came by Letters from other Parts of the Kingdom. And firſt from Holmby: We underſtand the Dutch Ambaſſador came thither laſt Thurſday, and had Audience in Publick that Afternoon, and acquainted his Majeſty with the Death of the old Prince of Orange.

The King continues very pleaſant, ſpends ſome time at Bowls and other Recreations, and ſome time for Study.

The Earls of Lauderdale and Dumfarling, came this day to London from Scotland, with Commiſſion to joyn with the Commiſſioners of the Parliament of England, to preſs the King to take the Covenant, and ſign the Propoſitions.

From Weſtcheſter came Letters this day thus, The Regiment of Colonel Caſſel's is arrived at Dublin, Colonel Hungerford's Regiment 600, to which will be added 200, and will away with the firſt fair Wind; no news of Colonel Birch his Regiment, yet Captain Parſon's Troop, which hath lain ten weeks in the Weſt, to go to Munſter, is come to this Town; they go with others, in all 340, to Dublin, under Colonel Jones, and will paſs when Sir Robert Meredith, Sir Robert King, and Mr. Anſley Commiſſioners go for Dublin. Beſides theſe Forces are gone for Munſter; The Regiments of Colonel Long, and others are ſkipping from Briſtol.

They ſay the Lord of Ormond is to be made a Marſhal of France.

The Lord Digby is now in Dublin, and brought with him a new French Agent over thither

An. 1647.

On April 20. 1647.

A Great Company of the Apprentices of London attended the Houſes, in purſuance of their former Deſires for days of Recreation, and they preſented a ſecond Petition to the Houſe of Commons, deſiring an Anſwer of their former, and that ſome ſpeedy ſatisfaction might be given to the Petitioners.

The Commons had a great Debate about the ſame; and after referred it to a Committee, to draw up an Ordinance for the aboliſhing of all Feſtival and accuſtomed Holy days, and for the appointing the ſecond Tueſday in every Month, a day of Recreation for all Apprentices, Scholars, and Servants in the Kingdom, with ſuch Bounds and Limits ſtill to be obſerved againſt Tumults, Diſorders, unlawful Sports, &c. on that day.

The buſineſs of the Church, appointed to hold for fourteen days, was renewed this day; and the Obſtructions to the Government of the Church in the Presbytery, and the Amendments to be Remedies thereof, were reported to the Houſe, and much Debate had thereon, and at laſt aſſented unto, and the Lords Concurrence to be deſired. An addition to the ſeveral Claſſes of London and the Liberties was likewiſe read and paſſed.

The Anſwer of the City concerning the advance of 200000*l.* was this day reported to the Houſe from the Common Council alſo, and the Cities Propoſitions for their Security for the ſaid ſum, which conſiſted of ſeveral Heads, (viz.) the Remainder of Biſhops Lands, after the 400000*l.* and Expences are paid out, likewiſe the Lands of Delinquents excepted, and alſo ſuch Papiſts as have been in actual War, Goldſmiths-Hall and the Exciſe in courſe, others failing.

The Houſes hereupon Ordered, That the City of London ſhall have the Remainder of Biſhops Lands, Papiſts, and excepted Perſons Eſtates (their Debt before April 1642 being firſt ſatisfied) and the Exciſe in courſe for their Security for this Mony, and an Ordinance to be drawn up to this purpoſe.

The Houſe had further Debate and Ordered, That the 12000*l.* formerly Ordered for the Service of Dublin, to be borrowed upon the Security of the 200000*l.* be made up 20000*l.* and that it be employed for the Service of Ireland.

From the Army, by Letters dated April 19. We underſtand that the proceedings of the Commiſſioners for getting Horſe and Foot to go for Ireland, proves not ſo effectual as was expected, there being very few diſpoſed that way, unleſs with their own Commanders. Lieutenant Colonel Kempſon gave Orders for Colonel Lilburn's Regiment to March this day towards Cheſhire, ſome giving out the Colonel was now diſcharged of it; but the Souldiers imagined the deſign was for Ireland, and Colonel Lilburn's Captain Lieutenant told his Company they ſhould have no pay till they advanced further from the Army, thereupon ſixteen of them (though at firſt afraid to engage in the buſineſs) reſolved to complain, ſeeing they were likely to be led into Ireland againſt their conſent, their Lieutenant Colonel having not propoſed Conditions to them, nor made known the Votes of the Parliament, and their Colonel having Ordered their March another way; coming into the Head Quarter, they were brought to the General, they declared to his Excellency their Complaint; his Excellency told them, as to Pay he would take order with their Captain, but withal uſed ſome Arguments to move them to go for Ireland; they cried that they would be willing to go for Ireland with his Excellency, and their other Commanders; but for thoſe Officers who had undertaken to lead them, they had not well uſed them here, and they might juſtly fear worſe Uſage in Ireland; and they had ſerved the Parliament, ſome three, ſome four Years, and now deſired to return to their Trades; that the whole Company was of that mind. The General went preſently to the Commiſſioners, to acquaint them therewith: Declared his deſire, that as the Service might be promoted, ſo the Soldiers might be fairly dealt with, and the work better advanced, than by engaging Men in indirect ways; to that purpoſe, that the Votes of the Houſe might be read to them, that they might know their Conditions, and that thoſe who ſtayed here might not loſe their Pay. This was thought reaſonable, and the General had before given order for the drawing up of the following Letter, to be ſent with the Votes to the ſeveral Regiments, and read. This day Colonel Lilburn's Regiment is to be drawn to a Rendezvous, and the Letters and Votes to be read to them; this they ſay, That were the old Commanders entertained, the greateſt part of the Army would engage for Ireland, and be ready for Service this Summer.

That the General intends for London.

The General intended for London this day, but his Excellency received a Letter from the Committee at Darby Houſe, deſiring his ſtay to advance the Service of Ireland, which he was before, at the Deſire of the Commiſſioners, reſolved to do, though the weak Conſtitution of his Body calls upon him to uſe the Means for recovery of Health, and preſervation of Life.

The Letter his Excellency cauſed to be ſent to the Officers of every Regiment, is as follows.

The General's Letter to the Officers of every Regiment to promote the Service for Ireland.

SIR,

Whereas at the laſt Meeting of the Officers of the Army at Saffron-Walden, I declared in the preſence of the (Lords and Commons) Commiſſioners of Parliament, to all the Officers then-preſent, as alſo to ſuch Officers as have ſince that time come to the Head Quarters, That they ſhould make known to their ſeveral Regiments the Intention of the Parliament, to ſend a conſiderable Force of ſuch of this Army as are willing to go into Ireland, for the reducing of that Kingdom; deſiring them alſo to make known my Deſire to advance that Service, and to prevent any hindrance thereof: And that if any Officers ſtand not diſpoſed to engage in Perſon in that Employment, yet that they ſhould promote it, in making known my Deſire, and the Votes of both Houſes, for the Encouragement of ſuch as ſhall engage in that Service. I do therefore deſire you to publiſh this Letter, together with the ſaid Votes, by reading the ſame unto your Regiment. In expectation whereof, I remain

On April 21.

A Report was made from the Committee appointed to conſider of the Arrears of the Scots Officers, that the ſum of 17000 l. was due unto the Petitioners for Arrears, but charged not them with any free Quarter, Billet, Horſe or Arms of the States, &c.

An. 1647.

The Houſe hereupon Ordered, That the third part of the ſaid ſum ſhould be abated for free Quarter, Horſe and Arms, &c. which the Committee did not charge them with, and that the Remainder ſhould be paid to the ſaid Officers, in full Diſcharge of all Arrears due unto them.

Inſtructions were this day Reported for the Commiſſioners that are to attend his Majeſty, to get his Majeſty's aſſent to the Propoſitions, and to take the Covenant, which were aſſented unto, and Ordered to be ſent to the Lords for their Concurrence.

Ordered further, That the King's aſſent be deſired to the Ordinance for puting Biſhops Lands into the hands of Truſtees, and likewiſe to the Ordinance for the ſale of Biſhops Lands.

The Houſe then alſo took into conſideration the Extraordinary good Service done by Mr. John Torrant, one of Sir Thomas Fairfax Meſſengers, by which this Kingdom now receiveth great benefit, being a ſecret Service, there being likewiſe a Recommendatory Letter in his behalf read in the Houſe from his Excellency. Hereupon Ordered, that the Arrears of Mr. Torrant be paid off, and that he ſhall have the ſum of a hundred pounds for his Extraordinary Services to this Kingdom.

An Ordinance was this day read in the Houſe for repayment of the Monies long ſince borrowed of one Mr. Stewart for the Service of the State, and upon the Queſtion aſſented to.

The Commons ſent a Meſſage to the Lords with the Votes for the ſecurity of the 200000*l.* and ſome other Papers brought up by Sir Philip Stapleton. To which their Lordſhips anſwered, they would ſend anſwer by Meſſengers of their own. Their Lordſhips ordered to take into conſideration the Votes concerning the ſecurity for the 200000*l.* which was read.

On April 21. 1647.

Letters came from the Parliaments Commiſſioners at Holmby, acquainting the Houſe with the great reſort of People to his Majeſty, to be touched for the Kings Evil.

The Houſe hereupon Ordered, that a Declaration ſhou'd be drawn up, to inform the People of the fond Superſtition of being touched by the King for the Evil. And a Committee was appointed to draw up a Declaration to this purpoſe.

They Ordered that a Letter of thanks ſhould be drawn up, to be ſent to the Commiſſioners at Holmby, to give them thanks for their Care and Faithfulneſs in all their accounts in that Service.

They likewiſe proceeded in the buſineſs of the Church, and paſſed ſeveral Orders. And firſt, That the Aſſembly ſhould be requeſted to return to the Houſe the Articles of the Church of England, and the ſeveral places of Scripture thereunto.

And further, That this day ſevennight the Houſe do conſider of the Confeſſion of Faith preſented by the Aſſembly, the firſt buſineſs, and nothing to intervene.

A Report was this day made to the Houſe, of the tranſaction of the Parliaments Commiſſioners in his Excellency's Army.

Several Letters from his Excellency, and others from the Commiſſioners there to the Committee of Darby-Houſe, were read.

A Report was likewiſe made of the Letters ſet forth by his Excellency, to Encourage all the Officers and Souldiers of his Army, to undertake the ſervice of Ireland, which was read in the Head of ſeveral Regiments of the Army.

The Houſe had ſome Debate on a Paper preſented them under the Title of a Declaration of the Officers of the Army, but generally diſclaimed, as is certified by the Officers.

From the Army we underſtand further, by Letters to this purpoſe. That yeſterday Colonel Lilburn's Regiment were drawn forth to a Rendezvous near Hinkſton; Five Companies drew into the Church, where the General's Letter (we gave you before) and the Votes of both Houſes, (for the Encouragement of ſuch as ſhould undertake for Ireland) were read, upon which about ſixty of the five Companies drew forth for Ireland, the reſt returned to their Quarters. Whilſt this was in agitation, Lieutenant Colonel Kempſon drew the four Companies (which were without) towards Cheſhire, having the laſt three Weeks pay for the Regiment with him. The Souldiers were the rather induced to follow him (though the General's Letter, nor the Votes were communicated to them) becauſe they ſaw their Officers, Colours, and Mony go.

Lieutenant General Maſſy was preſent in the Church.

Colonel Herbert came to the Head Quarter yeſterday Morning, where he declared to divers Officers, that he was come to attend the Commiſſioners, but could give them little Encouragement, for all his Officers and Soldiers had declared themſelves againſt going for Ireland, unleſs they might have their Arrears, but he would do his utmoſt to perſwade them, and afterwards he (having dined with the Commiſſioners) came to take his leave of his Excellency, and to acquaint him, that he and his Regiment were to go for Ireland. The General Encouraged him to the Service, and gave him an Order to draw forth his Regiment to a Rendezvous at Hitchin in Harfordſhire, on Friday the 28.

Laſt Night his Excellency received a Letter from the Commiſſioners here, That they were informed by Lieutenant General Maſſy, that part of Colonel Lilburn's Regiment was Marched for the Service of Ireland, ſome whole Companies, and ſome part, and that it would be Contributary to the ſervice to give them the Countenance and Encouragement of Colours; to which his Excellency (for the furtherance of the Service) condeſcended, and returned anſwer, That he was willing, that ſuch as Marched with their whole Companies, ſhould have their Colours with them. There was one of Colonel Lilburn's Companies wanting, being Marched towards Suffolk.

His Excellency has granted an Order to Captain Obara, to draw Colonel Hammond's Regiment to a Rendezvous, and to draw forth ſuch of the Regiment, as will engage with him for Ireland.

Captain Howard hath drawn forth Colonel Fleetwood's Regiment to a Rendezvous, according to his Excellency's Order; and made known the Parliaments Votes to them, but cannot obtain any conſiderable part of them to go with him; yet the Soldiers expreſs much civility towards his own Perſon, but declare they were not ſatisfied in other reſpects.

Major General Skippon 'tis ſaid is come from the North, and on his way as far as Huntington, but much weakned in body, by reaſon of his Wounds, Age, and other Infirmities; ſo that though his Heart be for the Service (as doubtleſs his Valiant Spirit is) yet his preſent weakneſs pleads rather for an Exemption.

The Commiſſioners in the Army intend to come back towards London to Morrow.

His Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax came to London this Night.

An. 1647.

On April 23. 1647.

THE Houſe this day according to former Order, debated the Articles of Truro, and Ordered, That all ſuch Letters as were ſent by the General to the Speaker, in the behalf of the perſons concerned in the Articles, according to the ſaid Articles, for the favour of the Houſe in their Compoſitions, ſhall compound at two full Years Value, and no more, according to the full Value of their Eſtates in the Year 1640, and that they be enjoyned to pay their twenty fifth Parts alſo. That it be referred to a Committee, to make ſome Alterations in the Propoſitions, according to the Debate this day had; the Houſes having pardoned and admitted ſome to Compoſitions, ſince the laſt preſenting of them which were deeply included therein.

A Meſſage came from the Lords, with ſome Amendments to the Ordinance for ſecuring the City of London 200000 l. to be borrowed of them, their Lordſhips deſiring that Goldſmith's-Hall may be part of the Security of that Sum. The Houſe did much debate about this buſineſs, being of great Concernment to the whole Kingdom, and Ordered the Houſe ſhould adhere to their firſt Votes, and ſo diſſented.

The Petition (preſented and ſubſcribed by many Citizens of London, and referred to Colonel Leigh's Committee, wherein the Word (Supream) was mentioned) was formerly Ordered to be debated this Day, which occaſioned many of the Petitioners to be at the Houſe, where they waited 'till five at Night, but had no Anſwer given them.

The Houſe this day, according to former Order, reſumed the Debate of the Report yeſterday, concerning the Commiſſioners Tranſactions in the Army.

A Liſt is returned of ſuch Officers, Horſe and Foot, as have undertaken for the Service of Ireland.

Briefly thus, There is one Colonel and two Captains of Horſe returned upon the Liſt.

One Major, and four Captains of Dragoons, two of which Captains have only engaged to go on ſuch Terms as they ſhall approve of.

Officers of Foot, Colonel Herbert, and Lieutenant Colonel Kempſon, are two Field Officers.

The Captains that have ſubſcribed, are in number about twenty; the reſt Lieutenants, and inferiour Officers. Or more particularly thus,

There are upon the Liſt returned in all, Officers of Horſe 17, of Dragoons 7, and of Foot 87.

It was hoped theſe particular Officers would have been able, every Man reſpectively, to carry over his ſeveral Troop or Company of Foot; but it is certified, that one Officer who had Eightſcore in his Company, could get but 26 that would go along with him for Ireland, and another Officer not one Man in the whole Company: It is to be wiſhed the reſt be enabled to perform what they have undertaken, or otherwiſe it may prove very inconvenient to the Service of Ireland.

The Houſe had a very large Debate as to this buſineſs of the Army; and whether the Army ſhould be Diſbanded, and what Pay to give them before Diſbanding; or whether it be not more convenient to ſend the Army intirely into Ireland for the reducing of that Kingdom. And it was Ordered to reſume this Debate on Tueſday next, and no other buſineſs to intervene, and by that days Debate you will underſtand the Iſſue.

The Houſes met not on Saturday, having adjourned till Tueſday.

Further, as concerning the Egagement for the Service of Ireland, it was informed by Letters this day from the Head Quarters of the Army.

An. 1647. That Thurſday laſt Colonel Howard drew forth Colonel Fleetwood's Regiment, and propounded the Service of Ireland to them, but could not prevail with any of them.

Some Troopers of the four Regiments in Norfolk, had a meeting about aſſerting their former Petition, and ſome Diſturbance was like to be thereabouts; but Major Huntington and ſome other Officers uſed means to pacifie them, and carry things in an orderly way, and ſo appointed an Officer and Trooper to meet and adviſe about the ſame. And we hope care will be taken that nothing be done diſorderly.

Tueſday April 27. 1647.

THE Houſe of Commons (according to former Order) inſiſted upon the Affairs of Ireland, and the further Report of the Commiſſioners ſent down to the Army. And it was certified the Houſe; That there were Officers of five thouſand Foot who had engaged for Ireland, and ſome Regiments were already upon their March. That the Engagement of Ireland was obſtructed by ſome Officers in the Army, and ſome by name charged therewith. Whereupon, after a long Debate, it was Ordered, That four Officers of the Army ſhould be ſummoned by the Serjeant at Arms to attend the Houſe.

After this the Commons (having received a Meſſage from the Peers) took into Conſideration the Disbanding of the Army, and after a long Debate, it was Reſolved, That the Army Horſe and Foot ſhould be Disbanded with all convenient ſpeed, and they Ordered ſix weeks pay ſhould be given unto them upon their Disbanding.

This day alſo ſome Officers of the Army preſented unto the Houſe, in the name and behalf of themſelves, and the reſt of the Officers, a Vindication of the particulars in their late Petition, which here follows at large, viz.

To the Honourable the Houſe of Commons Aſſembled in Parliament.

The Humble Petition of the Officers of the Army, under the Command of his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax, on the behalf of themſelves, and the Souldiers of the Army.

Humbly Sheweth,

THAT your Petitioners being ſenſible of ſome diſpleaſure in this Honourable Houſe againſt them, through ſome miſinformation, concerning the carriage and managing of a late Petition in the Army, do humbly offer unto your Conſideration

23 Caroli.

ſideration the Paper annexed, for the better clearing of our Intentions; humbly deſiring your favourable Conſtruction and Acceptance of what is therein contained, according to the Integrity with which it is preſented.

And your Petitioners ſhall pray, &c.

The Vindication of the Officers of the Army under Sir Tho. Fairfax.

THE Miſrepreſentation of us and our harmleſs Intentions to this Honourable Houſe, occaſioning hard Thoughts and Expreſſions of your Diſpleaſure againſt us, We cannot but look upon as an Act of moſt ſad Importance; tending, in our Apprehenſions, to alienate your Affections from your ever truſty and obedient Army; than which nothing can more rejoyce your Adverſaries, or miniſter greater hopes of their readvancement; Nothing more diſcouraging to us, who ſhould eſteem it the greateſt point of Honour to ſtand by you, till the Conſummation of your Work, the removal of every Yoke from the People's Necks, and the eſtabliſhment of thoſe good Laws you ſhall judge neceſſary for the Common-wealth.

Out of our Fears therefore of the advantage may be had therefrom, and that the Honourable Houſe may retain the ſame good Opinion of us they formerly had, (whom God hath hitherto bleſt with abundant Bleſſings) we humbly crave the boldneſs to preſent unto you ſome Reaſons, to clear our Proceedings in thoſe Paſſages, which we find moſt obvious to Exceptions in our Petition. Whereby we hope to make it evident to you, that we did no more than what Neceſſity prompted us unto: That the Means was uſed, and the Method we took, was as we conceived moſt orderly and inoffenſive; proceeding not in the leaſt from Diſtemper, and aiming in no meaſure at Mutiny, nor in any wiſe to put Conditions on the Parliament; and that you will from thence diſcover the Corruptions of theſe Mens Hearts, who have been the evil Inſtruments of occaſioning your late Declaration againſt us.

For our Liberty of Petitioning, we hope this Honourable Houſe will never deny it unto us; we know not any thing more eſſential to Freedom, without Grievances are remedileſs, and our Condition moſt miſerable. You have not denied it to your Adverſaries; you juſtified and commended it in your Declaration of the ſecond of November, 1642. in theſe Words:

It is the Liberty and Priviledge of the People to Petition unto us for the Eaſe and Redreſs of their Grievances and Oppreſſions, and we are bound in duty to receive their Petitions. And we hope, by being Soldiers we have not loſt the capacity of Subjects, nor diveſted our ſelves thereby of our Intereſts in the Common-wealth; that in purchaſing the Freedoms of our Brethren, we have not loſt our own. Beſides, we can inſtance in Petitions from Officers in the Earl of Eſſex's and Sir William Waller's Army, (even whilſt they were in Arms) which were well received by this Honourable Houſe, with a return of thanks; and therefore we hope we ſhall not be conſidered as Men without the pale of the Kingdom, excluded from the fundamental Privilege of Subjects, eſpecially ſince we are conſcious to our ſelves of nothing that may deſerve the ſame.

We have not 'till now appeared in Petitioning, though our neceſſities have been frequent and urgent; not that we doubted our Liberty, but becauſe we were unwilling to interrupt you in your other weighty Affairs. And we proceeded at this time with the greateſt Care and Caution we could of giving the leaſt Offence, intending not to preſent our Petition to this Honourable Houſe, but with the Approbation, and by the Mediation of his Excellency, our ever honoured General, knowing how watchful our Enemies were to make the hardeſt Conſtruction of all our Actions, and repreſent us to you and the World under ſuch terms as may render us moſt odious.

You may ſee the Inſidies of them, by the falſe Suggeſtions they have already made to you, of our forcing Subſcriptions; the unreaſonableneſs and neceſſities of our Deſires, whereof almoſt every Soldier is abundantly ſenſible, will plead the vanity of ſuch an Enforcement; eſpecially when it ſhall be known that the Petition took its firſt Riſe from amongſt the Soldiers, and that we engaged but in the ſecond place to regulate the Soldiers Proceedings, and remove as near as we could all occaſion of Diſtaſte.

For our Deſires of Indemnity, for ſuch Actions as being not warrantable by Law in time of Peace, we were enforced unto them by the neceſſity and exigency of the War. We are confident this Honourable Houſe will approve of it, when you ſhall be informed that the Soldiers are frequently indicted at Aſſizes and Seſſions, and otherwiſe grievouſly moleſted for ſuch Actions, and many lately ſuffering for the ſame. Notwithſtanding that Proviſion you lately made againſt it, that divers have had Verdicts paſt againſt them this laſt Aſſizes, for Actions done as Soldiers, (as we are credibly informed;) if this be practis'd during the time of your Seſſion, for what we did through the exigence of your Service, what cruel and violent Proceedings are we like to find, after you are pleaſed to diſſolve.

For the particular Intimation, That the Royal Aſſent may be deſired, we never intended it to leſſen your Authority; but ſince you have by offering the Propoſitions, judged the deſiring the King's Aſſent convenient; Since likewiſe the City of London made the ſame deſire without Offence; and your Orders to the Judges, we know not how effectual they may prove to ſave us from ſuch Proceedings after your Seſſions; All theſe Reaſons conſidered, will we hope manifeſt our Intentions in that Intimation to be only a provident Caution for our future Safety, without the leaſt thought of Diſreſpect to your Authority. For the deſire of our Arrears, Neceſſity (eſpecially of our Soldiers) inforced us thereunto. That we have not been mercenary, or propoſed Gain as our End, the ſpeedy ending of a languiſhing War will teſtifie for us, whereby the People are much eaſed of their Taxes and daily Disburſements, and decayed Trade reſtored to a full and flouriſhing Condition in all Quarters. We left our Eſtates, and many of us our Trades and Callings to others, and forſook the Contentments of a quiet Life, not fearing or regarding the difficulties of War for your ſakes: After all which we hoped that the deſires of our hardly earned Wages (by the Mediation of our General) would have been no unwelcome Requeſt, nor argued us guilty of the leaſt Diſcontent, or intention of Mutiny.

We know not any thing further in our Petition which hath been excepted againſt, but your Apprehenſions that it tendeth to hinder the relief of Ireland, which we do not underſtand wherein, having always manifeſted in all our Actions, our readineſs to further that Work; unleſs you mean by that deſire, that thoſe who have ſerved voluntarily, ſhould not be preſſed to go out of the Kingdom; to which we humbly offer this: That thoſe who have voluntarily ſerved in theſe Wars, and left their Parents, Trades, and Livelihoods, and without any Compulſion engaged of their own accords, ſhould, after all their free and unwearied Labours, be forced and compelled to go out of this Kingdom, whoſe Peace they have ſo much endeavoured with unwearied Pains, hoping thereby to have lived and enjoyed the fruits of their Labours, would to them ſeem very hard; but beſides this, our ſeveral Votes and Engagements, March 21. to endeavour the Service of Ireland what we could will clear us, and our good Affections in promoting that Work; and therefore we hope what hath been ſaid will remove all Scruples, and reſtore us to the good Opinion of this Honourable Houſe: In aſſurance whereof, and in conſideration of the Premiſes, we are further emboldened to make theſe our Requeſts unto this Honourable Houſe.

1. That you will be pleaſed to allow us our liberty of Petitioning in what may concern us now as Soldiers, and afterwards as Members of the Common-wealth.

2. Since upon the falſe Suggeſtions of ſome Men, informing you, That this Army intended to enſlave the Kingdom, the Honourable Houſe was ſo far prevailed withal as to ſummon divers of us to appear at your Bar, and to paſs a Declaration, thereby expreſſing your high diſlike of our Petition, declaring it tended to put Conditions upon the Parliament: The Senſe of ſuch Expreſſions is ſo irkſom to us, who have ventured whatſoever we eſteemed dear to us in this World for Preſervation of your Freedom and Privileges, that we cannot but earneſtly implore your Juſtice in the Vindication of us, as in your Wiſdom you ſhall think fit.

The Common-Council had likewiſe preſented them Letters from the Parliament of Scotland, giving the City Thanks for their conſtant good Affection and Reſpect to the Covenant, and the Union of the Nations, &c. which Letters were very acceptably received by the Common-Council, and Thanks ordered to be returned to the Scotch Commiſſioners who Preſented them.

Some Debates were likewiſe upon Mr. Eaſtwick and Mr. Brett's not taking the Covenant.

Wedneſday, April 28. 1647.

THIS was the Faſt-Day, and Mr. Aſh, and Mr. Strong of Fleetſtreet, Preached before the Houſe of Commons; had Thanks given them, and deſired to Print their Sermons. Doctor Tempeſt, and Mr. Hughs, were deſired to Preach next Faſt-Day.

On April 29. 1647.

AN Order was made by the Commons, for a Writ to be iſſued, for the Election of a Knight of the Shire, to ſerve for the County of Norfolk, in the place of Sir John Hobert deceaſed.

The Aſſembly attended the Houſe this Day, and were called in, and acquainted the Houſe, that according to the Orders of that Houſe, they had attended them with their Advice upon the 39 Articles of the Church of England, and the Texts of Scripture thereunto; and upon the Confeſſion of Faith, with the Texts of Scripture likewiſe to it.

The Houſe hereupon ordered 600 Copies of the Aſſemblies Advice herein, ſhould be Printed for the Services of the Houſes, and the Aſſembly, and no more be Printed; and that none preſume to Reprint the ſame, 'till further Order.

The Aſſembly were again called in, and had the Thanks of the Houſe given them for their Pains therein.

A Report according to former Order, was made to the Houſe, of the Anſwer of Major General Skippon to be Field Marſhal; That by reaſon of his Age and Diſabilities, he deſired to be excuſed of that Employment; but ſeeing he is ordered by both Houſes of Parliament, and called thereunto, he ſhall deny himſelf to ſerve the Publick, and obey the Commands of both Houſes.

The Houſe hereupon Ordered, That the Field Marſhal Skippon ſhould have the Thanks of the Houſe returned him, for his Compliance with the Order of the Houſe, and his denying himſelf to ſerve the Publick; which was accordingly done by Mr. Speaker: And the Houſe further ordered, That 1000 l. be beſtowed on the ſaid Field Marſhal Skippon, for his faithful and good Service to the Kingdom.

An. 1647.

April 30. 1647.

THIS day at the firſt ſitting of the Houſe of Commons, the Petition and Vindication preſented laſt Tueſday by Colonel Hewſon, Colonel Okey, Captain Reynolds, Captain Goffe, Lieutenant Chillington, and other Officers of the Army, were read; at which time Major General Skippon (being in the Houſe) produſed a Letter preſented unto him the day before, by ſome Troopers of ſeveral Regiments in the Army, in the behalf of eight Regiments of Horſe, wherein they expreſſed ſome Reaſons why they could not engage in the Service of Ireland, under the preſent Conduct, and complaining of the many Scandals and falſe Suggeſtions, that were of late raiſed againſt the Army, and their proceedings; whereupon they were declared Enemies to the publick; and that they ſaw deſigns were upon them, and many of the Godly Party in the Kingdom, and that they could not engage for Ireland, until they were ſatisfied in their Expectations, and their juſt Deſires granted. This the Major General thought fit to tender to the Conſideration of the Houſe. Upon reading whereof the Vindication was laid aſide, and the three Troopers (viz.) Edward Sexby, William Allen, and Thomas Sheppard, who came with the Letter, (and had preſented Copies of the ſame to the General and Lieutenant General, both which were brought into the Houſe at the ſame time) were ſent for into the Houſe; where ſeveral queſtions were propounded unto them, concerning the contriving, drawing up, and ſubſcribing of the ſame. They affirmed it was drawn up firſt at a Rendezvous of ſeveral of thoſe Regiments, and afterwards they had ſeveral meetings about it by Agents from each Regiment in ſeveral places. Being demanded whether their Officers were engaged in it? They anſwered that they thought very few of them knew or took notice of it: Then upon intimation, that ſurely this Letter came by Promotion of Cavaliers in the Army, it was demanded of each of theſe Troopers ſeverally by themſelves, whether they were Cavaliers? To which anſwer was returned, that they had engaged in the Parliament's Cauſe ever ſince Edge-Hill Battle, ſome wounded there. At Brainford, at Newbury, at Henley, under Major General Skippon, and were engaged in all the Services ſince his Excellency firſt Marched into the Field; and one of them particularly declared, that when he was upon the ground with five dangerous Wounds upon him, Major General Skippon came by, pitying his ſad Condition, gave him five Shillings to procure him ſome relief; which the Major General in the Houſe did aver to be true. Then they were demanded, what the meaning of that Clauſe was, wherein the Word a Souvraignty was expreſt? They ſeverally being called one by one, anſwered.

That the Letter being a joynt Act of thoſe ſeveral Regiments, they could not give a punctual Anſwer, they being only Agents; but if they might have the Queries in Writing, they ſhould ſend or carry them to the ſeveral Regiments, and return their own Anſwers together with and comprized in the reſt. After all theſe Examinations, they were Ordered to attend the Houſe upon Summons. Afterwards the Houſe (for the better preventing of any Diſorder in the Army) paſſed ſeveral Votes, and Ordered, That Major General Skippon, Lieutenant General Cromwell, and Commiſſary Ireton, and Colonel Fleetwood, be ſent down to the Army to acquaint them, that the Houſe would provide a conſiderable ſum of Mony for them before their Disbanding, and their Accounts to be Audited, and an Ordinance to be brought in on Thurſday next for Indempnity, for acts done in tempore & loco Belli.

An Order was made this day, for the Committee of Parliament ſent into Scotland to return; which was ſent to the Lords, and aſſented unto.

The Houſe of Commons Ordered (by reaſon of the urgent Affairs of this Kingdom and Ireland) to ſit to morrow.

CHAP. XIV.

Proceedings in Parliament from May 1. to June 3. 1647.

Upon Saturday, May 1. 1647.

THE Houſe of Commons had a further Debate, about the Security of the 200000 l. to be borrowed of the City of London, and the queſtion was put; whether the Receipts of Goldſmiths-Hall ſhould be given as part of the Security; and it was reſolved in the Negative.

A Conference was had upon this buſineſs with the Lords, and at laſt both Houſes agreed to the Security.

A Meſſage was likewiſe ſent from the Lords, deſiring that a Common Council may be called on Monday next in London, that the Committee formerly appointed may go to the City about the buſineſs of the 200000 l. and to ſatisfie them concerning the Security agreed on. This was aſſented unto, and Members appointed to deſire the Lord Mayor to call a Common Council accordingly.

An Ordinance for the ſecuring many poor men of the City, that was not able to advance as much more, which they advanced before, was read, and Ordered to be read again the next week.

Colonel Raineſborough Ordered 6000 l. to be advanced by the Committee of the Navy, (upon the Security of the Ordinance for 200000 l.) to be employed for the Service of reducing Jerſey. Ammunition Ordered him for this purpoſe.

The Committee at Derby-Houſe Ordered to grant him a Commiſſion, for Commanding in chief the Forces of Jerſey.

The Houſe was then informed, That the four Officers (ſent for out of the Army) were come up, and attended the Houſe; whereupon, after ſome Debate, the queſtion was put, Whether the ſaid Officers ſhould be called to the Bar; and it was reſolved on in the Negative.

The Petition of many thouſand well-affected Citizens of London, (who have long waited for an Anſwer) was Ordered to be read next Tueſday.

And it was likewiſe Ordered, That the Ordinance for Indempnity, and taking the Accompts of the Souldiers, be read Thurſday next, the firſt buſineſs. After this the Houſe adjourned till Tueſday next.

This day a Proclamation was ſent to be publiſhed in ſeveral places of London, from his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax, in Proſecution of an Order of the Houſe yeſterday, and is in theſe words, (viz.)

Sir Thomas Fairfax Knight, Commander in Chief of the Forces raiſed by the Parliament.

I Do hereby ſtraightly charge and require all Officers (belonging to the Army, under my Command; now within London, and the Lines of Communication, or thereabouts) to repair to their ſeveral Charges in the Army, within twenty four hours after the Publication thereof, upon pain of ſuch ſevere Puniſhment as ſhall be inflicted upon them for their neglect therein. And this be publiſhed by ſound of Trumpet.

Given under my Hand and Seal in Queen-Street, the firſt of May, 1647.

This day the Lord Liſle (late Lord Lieutenant of Ireland) Sir Hardreſſe Waller and others in Company came to London.

May 3. 1647.

Security about the Loan of 200000 l.

THE Houſes ſat not this day, but a Committee of both Houſes (as was Ordered on Saturday) had another meeting with the Common Council of London, about the Loan of 200000 l. and propounded unto them the Security agreed on by the Houſes. Several Speeches were made to ſtir up the City to the ſpeedy Loan of the ſaid ſum; to which they expreſſed much willingneſs, but ſtill ſtood upon it to have Goldſmiths-Hall added to the Security.

The Army ſuſpected to comply with the King.

At this time ſomething was more than whiſpered in the City, and the Rumour ſpread further in the Kingdom, upon occaſion of ſometing ſaid at this meeting in relation to the Army, as that they ſhould ſend to comply with the King.

Intelligence from Scotland of Kolkitoth, &c.

Not much more conſiderable this day, but from Scotland. Lieutenant General Leſley is Marched againſt Kolkitoth, with four Regiments of Foot, ſix Troops of Horſe, and three Troops of Dragoons, and not without great need, for this Aliſter Macdonell Kolkitoth rageth in the Marquiſs of Argyle's Country, he ſpareth neither Sex nor Age, but putteth both Man, Woman, and Child to the Sword; having taken away the Lives of theſe innocents, he taketh all that lies before him for Proviſion for his Army, in procuring of which he is very diligent. The Letters mention, he expects from Ireland Recruits both of Men and Arms, and other Expedients. It is ſaid, that the Enemies in a great Body have taken the Field in Ireland, and it is to be feared they will uſe the like Inhumanity in that Kingdom, and go over their old Tragedies again.

And of the Affairs of Ireland, the Letters ſpeak thus, that the Rebels now begin to beſtir themſelves apace; and that the Rebels in Leminſter have beſieged Caterlagh, a very ſtrong Garriſon under the Marqueſs of Ormond. The Marqueſs of Ormond propounds to raiſe 5000 native Iriſh to go beyond Sea, and offers to give his three Sons for Hoſtages, and his Lands to be engaged, that they ſhall never come againſt any of the King's Dominions.

Captain Meredith's Troop is come hither, to add to the other ſmall force. The Commiſſioners incline ſtill to ſtay until they have more men to poſſeſs what they are to take, wherewith to accommodate them, which otherwiſe may be loſt ſo ſoon as had, either by the violence of the Enemy, or want from Friends; 500*l.* is ſent by the laſt men, part of that little the Commiſſioners have, to be diſpoſed of by the Lord of Ormond, as he ſhall ſee it fit for the relief of the out-Garriſons.

The Houſe approved hereof, and Ordered that an Ordinance ſhould be drawn, to require all Officers and Soldiers that have born Arms againſt the Parliament, to repair to their ſeveral Countries, and if that they appear in any Country in a hoſtile manner, to be puniſhed with Death.

miral, Vice Admiral, Rear Admiral, and two other men of War, and ſome Merchants bound for Conſtantinople; but in the end not only the Merchants ſhips forſook Captain Owen, but the two men of War drew back and left him. He loſt one Man, and had three Wounded. The Sweeds had much loſs, their Vice Admiral, and Rear Admiral had their Colours ſhot down, and a great breach was made in the Vice Admiral, with much other loſs. The Fight continued until Night. May 8. 1647.

Intelligence from the Head-Quarter of proceedings in the Army between the Parliament's Commiſſioners and the Officers of the Army.

Of Diſtempers in the Army.

Time till the 14. of May to confer with the Soldiers.

By Vote of the Parliament the Army declared Enemies if they perſiſt.

THIS day the Houſes ſat not; but from the Army we had by Letters, of the Proceedings of the Commiſſioners ſent from the Houſe, and the reſult of the meeting with the Officers of the Army, which was not until Friday, May 7. the Particulars take thus: Field Marſhal Skippon, Lieutenant General Cromwell, and the reſt of the Members of the Army ſent down thither, communicated unto the Officers the Votes of the Houſe, concerning their Arrears and Indempnity; and that they were enjoyned to employ their Endeavours to quiet all Diſtempers in the Army. Theſe Votes being read unto them, it was ſaid by ſome, that they deſired to know what was meant by Diſtempers in the Army; if it were meant of Grievances, (which the Soldiers complained of) they had then ſomething to offer; but in regard that if the Officers ſhould declare their Senſe, without the conſent of the Soldiers in their reſpective charge, it might perhaps be taken as an unadviſed and forward act in them, to undertake to declare the Senſe of the Army, before they know the general reſolution of the Soldiery; as it was too much forwardneſs in thoſe, who, in the firſt Paper preſented to the Parliament, ſubſcribed their Names, whereby the Parliament was inclined to believe they could engage their whole Regiments, of which there have been ſome failing, &c. And therefore theſe Officers now preſent, being unwilling to declare the Senſe of the reſpective Regiments, Troops, and Companies, without firſt acquainting them therewith, (that the Unanimity of the Souldiery may the more clearly appear, and their entire Reſolution be diſcerned) the Officers have time given them, 'till Friday the 14. of May, to communicate the Votes of the Houſe, and to repreſent to the Field Marſhal, and the reſt of the Officers ſent down, an account of their Proceedings therein. And leſt it may be thought that the Army hath no cauſe of Grievance, obſerve, that they being declared Enemies by Vote of the Houſe, if they perſiſted in their Petition to the General, (being merely for things relating to them as Soldiers) they think it an hard caſe. They likewiſe think, that for any Perſon publickly to declare (ſo as to inſinuate a belief, that a Petition was ſent from the Army to the King, to come to them, and they would ſet the Crown on his Head) it is a great Scandal, and expect Reparation. And likewiſe it is trouble unto them, that it ſhould be ſaid, that the Army is no more a new Model, that 4000 Cavaliers are in it; when as all the World cannot tax the Army (conſiſting of 21000 Men) for having one commiſſionate Officer, that ever was on the King's ſide againſt the Parliament, but one *, and he was by one or both Houſes intruſted in buſineſs of Concernment after his coming in, and made a Colonel by them, and afterwards recommended by Authority derived from them to the Army; as for the common Foot Soldiers that are in the Army, who being taken Priſoners liſted themſelves in the Army, have been engaged on ſeveral deſperate Services, as in ſtorming of Towns, and proved faithful and valiant to their Truſt.

Yet to make the Army more odious to the Kingdom, a Gentleman, a Servant to the Duke of Buckingham, rid poſt into the North, at every Stage ſcattering a Copy of this Paper, ſuppoſed to be ſent from the Army to the King; deſiring the Poſt-Maſter of Royſton,

and

and Huntington, to publiſh it for a Truth, averring the City had received certain knowledge thereof at a Common-Council.

By other Letters from the Army, of the ſame date, we had to this purpoſe, viz.

Further falſe Intelligence, that the Army ſhould be diſarmed.

All things are quiet in the Army, there is no diſturbance in the Country; there was an Alarm given to Colonel Hewſon's Regiment, that Warrants were come down to raiſe the Trained Bands, to diſarm them; whereupon they retired to a Church, with their Arms; but underſtanding it to be a falſe Alarm, went afterwards to their Quarters again.

The Field Marſhal of Ireland, at the meeting at Walden, May 7. inſtant, after he had related to the Officers the Vote of the Houſe, likewiſe made known unto them, his being nominated to command the Forces intended to be ſent into Ireland; and that it was expected by the Parliament, the Army ſhould engage freely in this ſo honourable and needful a Service and Employment, as to reduce that Kingdom, and wiſhed them to communicate it to their Regiments; expreſſing (with much Modeſty) his unfitneſs to the Service, yet his real Intentions and Endeavours to ſerve them was great, though he periſh in the Work. Upon the Report of this to the ſeveral Regiments, a Return will be made to him, what Numbers will engage in this Service, at the next meeting, which is to be on Friday next.

Viſitors of the Univerſity of Oxford.

Concerning the Fight with the Sweeds Ships about not ſtriking Sail.

THE Houſe ſat not this day, but the Committee for Iriſh Affairs, and ſome other Committees ſate. The buſineſs of the Sea Fight, betwixt Captain Owen Rear-Admiral for the Parliament, and the fifteen Sweeds Ships, (mentioned laſt Week) is upon Examination before the Committee of the Admiralty: The Particulars we have ſince more fully underſtood, and they are thus; the Rear Admiral, which was attending ſome Commodities to be brought to build Ships, they being not ready, he went a little abroad, and in his Paſſage diſcovered 15 Sail of Sweeds, moſt Merchants, theſe he required to do Homage, as others, to England; they told him, they had Order from their Miſtreſs, Queen of Sweeden, not to ſtrike to any whatſoever: He thereupon diſcovering ſome Ships coming, bore up to them, found two to be Engliſh Merchants going for the Straits, and carrying between them thirty and forty Pieces of Ordnance; to each of theſe he repreſented the buſineſs, alſo a little Pinnace belonging to the Parliament. The two Merchants tell him they will aſſiſt him, for the Honour of England; whereupon he comes up, and lets fly at them; the Merchants conſider better of it, and ſail onwards on their Voyage, reſerving their Ammunition for to ſpend upon a greater Enemy; the Ship and Pinnace being engaged, diſcharged many Guns, but the Rear-Admiral, having a Shot ſo as ſhe could not ſteer, falls back, having loſt one Man, and two hurt; what hurt the Sweeds had he could not tell. The Night coming, the Sweeds go on in their Voyage. The Rear-Admiral ſends to Captain Battin, who with ſix Sail goes after, over-takes the Sweeds Ships, and having had Diſcourſe with the Commander in chief of the Sweeds Fleet, and finding no Inclination to ſtrike Sail, brought him along into the Downs, after whom came all the reſt.

Colonel Jones his Horſe are all to be ſhipt. Captain Meredith's Troop is marched to Moſton in Flintſhire, to be ready to be ſhipped for the ſame end. A Letter of ancient date from Ireland, ſaith, the Rebels are fortifying all their Paſſes upon the River Marrow, and what other Places the Engliſh may poſſible approach them, reſolving to hold what they poſſeſs as long as they can, and chiefly Kilkenny, the place of their Head Council, and the Garden of Ireland; they fortifie Athlone, and what Places they hold in Lempſter.

Lady Cave to convey Letters to the King at Holmby.

And from Holmby by Letters thus; Here was lately taken the Lady Cave, who lay at a Gentleman's Houſe near this place; ſhe waited an Opportunity to deliver Letters from her Majeſty to the King: She being Examined, confeſſed ſo much, and promiſed if the Commiſſioners would appoint ſome to go with her to the place where ſhe lay, ſhe would ſend it; ſhe was committed to the care of the Mayor of Northampton.

Mr. Byfeild (by appointment of the Aſſembly of Divines, upon an Order of the Houſe of Commons) delivered the Printed Books of the Confeſſion of Faith, with Scripture Notes, to the Members of the Houſe of Parliament. And no more being to be diſperſed, every Member ſubſcribed his Name to a Paper, at the receipt thereof. After the Members have well peruſed and examined them, the Houſes are to conſider whether they ſhall approve them for Publication.

Their Lordſhips ordered that he have acceſs to his Majeſty, and that the Concurrence of the Houſe of Commons be deſired therein.

Security for 200000 l. paſſed the Commons by the Ordinance following.

A Report was made to the Houſe, of the whole Tranſaction with the Common-Council of London the laſt Week, about the Loan of the 200000*l.* and the Ordinance for ſecuring and paying the Advancers thereof, was then read, and paſſed the Commons Houſe, and ſent up to the Lords, and likewiſe paſſed by them, and ordered to be Printed. The Ordinance it ſelf is too large to inſert; but being of that length, the Reader is referred to that Ordinance in Print.

Intelligence from the Iſle of Jerſey.

That the Governor of Jerſey hath cauſed a Liſt to be made of thoſe he ſuſpects to be well affected to the Parliament, and hath proceeded againſt them, by baniſhing, impriſoning them, and thoſe that were ancient and old, he hath cauſed them to pay great Sums of Monies; alſo it is certified, that the ſaid Lieutenant Governor entertains ſix or ſeven Frigots about the ſaid Iſland, together with many other Pirates that have lately retir'd themſelves there, having at this preſent no other Shelter in this Kingdom for their Security; all which Picqueroons do great Miſchiefs and Robberies upon the Merchants of this Kingdom, that trade towards thoſe Parts, and elſewhere. And that one Captain Amy, a moſt barbarous and violent Captain of one of thoſe Frigots, being chaſed at Sea by the Conſtant Warwick, his Frigot founder'd in the Sea, by over-bearing Sail; and if the Parliament do not take a ſpeedy courſe for the reducing that Iſland, it will prove of dangerous Conſequence to this State; for Guernſey will be in great danger to be loſt, and ſo become a ſecond Dunkirk, and a neſt for all Pirates.

May 13. 1647.

THE Houſe then conſidered of that part of their Lordſhips Meſſage, concerning the Lord of Dumfarling to be admitted to attend his Majeſty; and hereupon a Letter from the Scots Commiſſioners at Worceſter-Houſe was read, deſiring that he might attend the King, &c.

The Propoſitions to be ſent to his Majeſty, were this day ſent to the Lords for their Concurrence.

May 14. 1647.

A fortnights Pay to be added to ſix weeks Pay for Disbanding of the Army.

THE Houſe took into Conſideration, an Addition to be made to the ſix weeks Pay, formerly Voted the Army upon Disbanding, and reſolved that a fortnights Pay more ſhould be added to that upon the Disbanding.

Indempnity to Committees in the Country.

And that ſix weeks Pay more ſhould be given to thoſe that will go for Ireland. Likewiſe the Commons after long Debate paſſed the Ordinance for the Indempnity of the Souldiers, and alſo for the Indempnity of the Committees of the ſeveral Counties, for what they have done in purſuance of the Ordinances of Parliament, which Ordinance being ſent up to the Lords, they likewiſe concurred therein.

The King declares he hath long waited for the Propoſitions.

This day came Letters from Holmby, certifying that the King called the Commiſſioners about him, and told them, that he had long waited to have the Propoſitions ſent unto him, and now that he had heard the Scotch Commiſſioners were come to London, he was in hopes to have had them before now; but ſeeing they came not, and himſelf deſirous to deliver his Mind concerning them; he had prepared an Anſwer to them, having the Propoſitions ſtill lying by him, as they were delivered unto him at Newcaſtle, and if he might not be allowed a Secretary to tranſcribe his Anſwer, he would ſcrible it over himſelf as well as he could. And it was further certified, that he ſaid his Anſwer was ſuch, which he had prepared, that he hoped to be juſtified in the ſame.

Enſign Nichols.

It was taken into Conſideration, the Commitment of Enſign Nichols of the Army, and 10 l. was Ordered to thoſe two Officers who brought him to Town; the queſtion being put whether 10 l. more ſhould not be given for the defraying the Enſigns Charges alſo. It was carryed in the Nagative by three Voices.

Marſhal General Skippon's Speech at the Convention of Officers at Walden, May 15. 1647.

Gentlemen and Fellow Souldiers,

May 15.

WE are here once more according to appointment met together; to deſire you to give us a clear and faithful account of your communicating the Votes of the Houſe of Commons to your ſeveral Regiments, and thoſe under your Command; and to deſire you to inform us how you have laboured to ſatisfie them in the care the Honourable Houſe took in thoſe Votes for the Army, and what ſincere Inſtructions and faithful Endeavours you have u-

ſed to make them ſenſible thereof, and what Diſtempers you found in your ſeveral Regiments, Troops, and Companies, that we may know how you have in theſe particulars diſcharged your Duties, as Conſcientious Chriſtians in the ſight of God, and as men faithfully obedient to the Parliament of England.

I am further to deſire you upon a Motion made again and again, upon a Mention of my ſelf in relation of Ireland, to deſire you to let me know how you find your ſeveral Regiments diſpoſed.

The juſtneſs, the honourableneſs, and neceſſity of the Service, cannot be unknown unto you. I deſire you according to the Mind of the other Gentlemen that were ſent down with me, not as Commiſſioners, but as Parliament Men, and Members of the Army, That you would in theſe particulars give us ſatisfaction, that it may appear to us, and to the Parliament, and to all the Kingdom that hear of our proceedings, that you have faithfully diſcharged your Duties, as we deſire to do to the Parliament for the Service of the whole Kingdom; I pray that there may be an Orderly proceeding in what we have to do; I doubt not but in the end of all, we ſhall find that nothing is aimed at in all things, but what tends to the real Service of the Parliament, and the good of the whole Kingdom.

Saturday, May 15. 1647.

FROM Ireland we underſtand, That the ſtrong and conſiderable Caſtle and Town of Caterloughly is delivered upon Quarter, which hath much puffed up the Enemy, who have now an intention to beſiege Trym, the moſt conſiderable Garriſon within our Quarters, next to Dublin and Drobeda; all our Horſe are Commanded to Rendezvous at Skreene, near Terra-Hill, a Campaign Country, upon Tueſday next. It is ſuppoſed they will make up the number of ſeven hundred. Two hundred of our Foot are to be mounted, and go along with them. The Rebels intend with all ſpeed to fall into our Quarters with a running Army, to ſweep away all our Cattle, if not prevented by the power of our Horſe; Captain Stephens, and ſeveral other of our Army are taken Priſoners by Fitz Gerald of Ballyſoman. Mr. Hatfeild being in the ſame Company, ſaved himſelf and his Mony by the ſwiftneſs of his Horſe.

Intelligence from Ireland.

This Evening Intelligence came from Saffron Walden, the Head-Quarters of the Army, of the Reſult of the Debates betwixt the Parliaments Commiſſioners, and the Officers and Souldiers, to this purpoſe, That the Houſe paſſed ſeveral Votes for the ſatisfaction of the Souldiers, for Arrears and Indempnity, and alſo to find out the Diſtempers of the Army, which they deſired might be communicated by the Officers to the ſeveral Regiments; upon which the Souldiers deſired to chuſe Committees of themſelves, out of every Troop and Company, to confer together concerning the ſame. The Committee of Troopers met at St. Edmond-Bury, and the Foot who choſe two out of every Company, ſent them to confer with the Troopers; and every foot Souldier gave four Pence a piece, towards defraying of the charges of that meeting; their ſeveral returns being made to the Officers, the Officers repaired to the Head-Quarters with the ſame, and upon the whole matter gave this account, That they found no Diſtemper in the Army, but Grievances many which the Souldiers complained of; and becauſe ſome Regiments differed from others in making known their reſpective Sufferings, it was referred to a Committee of General Officers to contract into a method, what was propounded in general, as the Senſe of the whole Army; and if any particular thing was deſired by one Regiment, which was waved by another, that that it might not be accepted, or preſented as the Senſe of the whole Army. So in concluſion, the Officers concurred in a draught, which was ſo formed out of the whole, that all the Grievances which the Army complains of are diſtinctly ſet down in the ſame, in the name of the Officers and Souldiers of the Army, and was this day preſented to Field Marſhal General Skippon, deſiring him to preſent the ſame to the Parliament, that a candid Conſtruction might be had of their proceedings. I ſhall forbear at preſent to relate the particulars, only this in general, they meddle with nothing but what pertains to them as Souldiers, and earneſtly deſire Juſtice and Reparation in what they have preſented as their Grievances, particularizing no Man, unleſs Mr. Edwards for his Gangrena, which he is charged to put forth, to make the Army odious to the Kingdoms.

Ireland's good ſucceſs by Lord Inchiqueen.

THIS day by Letters to the Committee for Iriſh Affairs came News very acceptable, of the gallant proceedings of the Lord Inchiqueen againſt the Rebels in Ireland, That he hath taken from the Rebels Dungarvan Caſtle, and the Fort Caperqueen and Drummany; the two laſt were ſurrendered on very eaſie Terms, not above four or five Shot made at Drummany before it was yielded, and Caperqueen was ſurrendered before a Shot was made againſt it, for they were forced to yield for want of Powder; The Souldiers are enraged that they had ſo good Terms as was given them. They marched out from all theſe Garriſons with their Arms, Colours flying, Drums beating, Bullet in Mouth, their Goods and Proviſions. The Rebels made two Sallies out of Dungarvan, a Seaport and a walled Town, in half an hour, and killed two of our Captains and ſome others; after we had poſſeſſion of the Caſtle which ſtands cloſe to the Town, and deprived the Rebels from Water, they ſurrendered it on the ſame Terms. But ſome twenty Engliſh men of the Red-Coats, that had run to the Rebels, that were taken in the ſeveral Garriſons, were hanged.

Caperqueen and other Forts taken.

The Iriſh ſeek for a Ceſſation.

From Dublin by Letters, dated May the 9th, they write, That the Marqueſs of Ormond received Letters from Kilkenny, by the French Agent, for a Ceſſation until Alhallontide, upon condition that no more Engliſh be ſent over in the Interim, elſe that they would Proclaim open Wars. The Agent returned April the 5th with a Negative Anſwer.

The Lord Digby affronted by the Souldiery at Dublin.

The Lord Digby the other day was riding out of Dublin; the new Souldiers at that time guarding the Port, and knowing him, demanded his Paſs, but having none, and ſuppoſing his Intereſt ſufficient, he ruffled with them; the Guard gathering about him, intending him no good, he clapt Spurs to his Horſe and ran at a higher rate towards the Bridge Port, where he was befriended and ſecured. The new Engliſh following him with drawn Swords, crying ſtop the Traitor Digby, but in vain; he was conveyed over the River by the Lord Taaſe and other of his Friends, and intends for France if poſſible. The Lord Preſident of Conagh hath a new deſign on foot, having a little refreſhed himſelf after his laſt Expedition. Colonel Conway was abroad laſt week with a Party of 200 Horſe and 400 Foot, took 600 Cows and as many little Horſes, he returned finding no oppoſition. There Preached lately in Chriſt's Church the Biſhop of Down, where he delivered, That any Power ought to be obeyed tho' uſurped. This Doctrine much diſpleaſed the Biſhop of Oſſory who accuſed him; he ſaid he would juſtifie what he had ſaid; and Preaching after, he ſaid, the War in England was a wicked Rebellion, and never intended other obedience than as to Thieves and Rebels.

King's Letter in Anſwer to the Propoſitions ſent to him.

THIS day was read in both Houſes his Majeſty's Letter, (mentioned the laſt weeks Intelligence) it is large and well penned; in it his Majeſty gives Anſwer to the Propoſitions formerly ſent to him at Newcaſtle; to ſome he conſents in whole, to others in part; to others he ſaith he cannot conſent, and gives Reaſons. For the Presbyterial Government he is willing to have it ſettled for three years, and conſenteth to ratifie the Aſſembly of Miniſters ſitting at Weſtminſter, propounding a certain number of his own Miniſters to be added to the Aſſembly, to conſider what Government to ſettle after the three years, whether the Presbytery or ſome other, and in the mean time, that he and his own Houſhold may be free to uſe the old form, and Common-Prayer Book. As to the Militia, he yields it for ten years, and that afterwards it may return to him. The Covenant his Majeſty is not ſatisfied in, but would have ſome of his own Miniſters ſent to ſatisfie his ſcruples therein. The Great Seal he will ratifie, and he to have it for the future as formerly. For the City of London he grants what is deſired; ſpeaks much in behalf of thoſe that took his part in the War. He will call home the Prince, and deſires to come to London, that he may the better give ſatisfaction to the Parliament, and they to him. To the ſeventh and eighth Propoſition his Majeſty will aſſent; and to the ninth, after he ſhall be further ſatisfied how the Penalties therein levyed ſhall be diſpoſed of. To the tenth for an Act againſt Papiſts he will conſent, and propounds to paſs a general Act of Oblivion, and free pardon to all on both ſides; and this in ſhort is the ſum of the Letter. The Houſe of Peers upon reading this Letter, referred the ſame to a Committee, and the Commons appointed to take the ſame into Conſideration on Thurſday following.

As to Church Government.

As to the Militia.

As to the great Seal.

As to the City of London.

As to the Papiſts and Oblivion.

Letters from the Commiſſioners of Parliament with the Army.

Letters were this day read from the Commiſſioners now with the Army, purporting they had ſent alſo the laſt reſults of the Houſes, for the addition of fourteen days pay more, and the Act of Indempnity to the Officers, and ſo to the ſeveral Regiments, and were almoſt ready to make return of what they had from them; the buſineſs being very weighty, of ſuch concernment, that it equalled, if not exceeded any in which they had formerly been intruſted; could not poſſibly be ſooner prepared being of many particulars, and therefore they deſired to know the Houſes pleaſure, that they might attend them with it. The Commons upon Debate thereof, paſſed ſeveral Votes to this purpoſe, viz.

That their buſineſs exceeds the weight of any that ever they were entruſted with.

That all the Forces of this Kingdom, not ſubſcribing for Ireland, be Diſbanded, except Garriſons.

That all the Forces of this Kingdom not ſubſcribing for the Service of Ireland ſhall be Diſbanded, excepting thoſe for the Garriſons, and that it ſhall be referred to the Committee at Derby-Houſe, to conſider of the time and manner of Diſbanding them.

The Parliament deſires the General to go to the Army.

That the General, if it may ſtand with his health, be deſired forthwith to repair to the Army.

That a Letter ſhould be written to the Commiſſioners in the Army, to ſend up any one or two of them to the Houſe, to give an an account of their Proceedings in the Army, excepting Field Marſhal Skippon, who is to be left there to advance the Service for Ireland.

Succeſs in Ireland by Lord Inchiquin.

A Letter was read this day in the Houſe, from the Lord Inchiquin, confirming the former Relation of his taking in of Dungarvan, Drummany, and Caperqueen in Ireland; deſiring Ammunition to be ſpeedily ſent to him.

Proviſions for him.

After the reading hereof, they ordered that a Train of Artillery ſhould be ſpeedily ſent over to the Lord Inchiquin, for the Service of Munſter.

That 150 Draught Horſes, and twenty Waggons be ſpeedily ſent over.

That it be referred to a Committee at Derby Houſe, to ſend for Amunition from ſuch Places as may beſt be ſpared, for the Service of Ireland.

That a Letter of Thanks be ſent to the Lord Inchiquin, for all his faithful Services, and in ſpecial for this.

May 19. 1647.

Confeſſion of Faith.

THE Houſe this day, according to former Order, debated the Confeſſion of Faith preſented from the Aſſembly, and ſpent the whole day therein; paſſing particularly from the firſt Paragraph to the eleventh of the firſt Chapter.

They ordered this Debate to be reaſſumed Friday next.

This day the Houſe paſſed the Liſt of the Ships for this Summer's Expedition.

May 20. 1647.

THE Houſe this day heard the Report of the Committee of Goldſmith's Hall.

Francis Newport, Eſq; his Compoſition.

Francis Newport, Eſquire, his Fine was reported; it amounted according to that Committee's Proceedings, to the ſum of 9400 and odd Pounds.

* A Petition to the Commons as the Supream Authority, One of the Petitioners committed for Words.

A Petition was this day preſented, in the behalf of many Citizens of London, in proſecution of a * former Petition. After debate thereof, the Houſe was informed that Mr. William Browne, one of the Petitioners, ſhould ſay Words tending much to the diſhonour of the Houſe; that he ſhould ſay, being very importunate for an Anſwer to the Petition, that they had waited many days, and would wait no longer, but take another Courſe; upon which a Member asking his Name, he ſhould reply in theſe Words, Time may come when I may ask you your Name. He was called in as a Delinquent, kneeled at the Bar, and avowed the Petition. Mr. Speaker asked him, Whether he ſaid thoſe Words? He denied them, but ſaid it was thus, That time may come, that your Name may be given in. Mr. Speaker then acquainted him, at the ſecond calling in, that the Houſe was ſatisfied of the ſpeaking of the Words, by Members of the Houſe.

Votes concerning the Petition directed to the Commons the Supream Authority, order'd to be burnt.

The Houſe debated the Petition, and Voted, 1. That it was a high breach of Priviledge. 2. That it was ſeditious. 3. That this Petition, and the former, Intituled, The humble Petition of many thouſands, &c. ſhould be burnt at the Exchange in Cornhill, and the Palace Yard at Weſtminſter, Saturday next.

The Petitioners were called in, and were acquainted what a ſenſe the Houſe had of that Petition, and their former; and did conceive the Petitioners did not do it out of any diſſatisfaction to the Parliament, but as being miſs-led by others, deſiring them to be careful in not agitating in Petitions of that Nature for the future.

The Houſe of Peers ſent a Meſſage to the Commons for their concurrence, to ſend a Congratulatory Letter to the Arch-Duke Leopald in Flanders, and for the ſettling of Embaſſadors for a ſetling of Correſpondency there.

Their Lordſhips likewiſe this day took into conſideration the King's Majeſty's Letter, which was read, and inſiſted upon the firſt part, viz. his Majeſty's Deſire to come to London, and that he may give ſatisfaction to the Deſires of the Parliament, and they to his. The Votes of the Houſe, for his Majeſty's coming from Holmby, were read, and their Lordſhips, after Debate, put it to the Vote, whether his Majeſty ſhall remove to Oatlands, (which is ſixteen Miles from London, and ſome few Miles beyond Hampton Court,) and it was Voted, the King ſhall come to Oatlands, ſo ſoon as the Houſe can be made ready, and that it be prepared for his Majeſty accordingly; and that the Concurrence of the Houſe of Commons be deſired therein: But the Houſe of Commons have not concurred, nor as yet done any thing touching this buſineſs.

The King's Letter debated for his coming nearer to London.

This day a Sermon was Preached at Blackfryars Church, before the Provincial Aſſembly of Miniſters and Lay Elders of London; after which they aſſembled at the Convocation Houſe at Paul's, Dr. Gouge being Moderator. They are to ſit and adjourn at pleaſure as a Provincial Synod, for ſettling the ſeveral Claſſes in the Province of London, and removing all Obſtructions therein. This day his Excellency, Sir Tho. Fairfax, according to the Order of the Houſe, went from London towards the Army.

May 21. 1647.

THIS day both the Houſes paſſed the Ordinance of Indempnity for things done by Sea or Land, during the late Troubles and Wars, which being more large than ordinary, the Reader may ſee it more fully in Print; yet for ſome ſatisfaction, take the following Abſtract.

THE Lords and Commons taking notice, that divers well affected Perſons have been ſued, indicted, proſecuted, or moleſted, and others are likely to be ſued, for Acts done by Authority of Parliament, during theſe late Wars and Troubles, do Ordain and Declare, That no Perſon, for any thing done or acted by Authority of Parliament, for the ſervice or benefit thereof, by Sea or by Land, ought to be ſued, indicted, proſecuted, or moleſted for the ſame; and that every ſuch Perſon ſhall be fully acquitted and diſcharged of all Actions, Suits, Indictments, Informations, Proſecutions, Judgments, Executions and Moleſtations whatſoever for or by reaſon of the ſame; and all Judges, Juſtices, Sheriffs, Mayors, Bayliffs, Jurors, Officers or Miniſters of Juſtice whatſoever, are required to take notice thereof, and duly to obſerve the ſame. And for the eaſe of all ſuch Perſons, who are or ſhall be ſued, indicted, proſecuted, or moleſted for any ſuch act or thing as is aforeſaid, it is ordained, That in every Action or Indictment wherein they ſhall be ſued, it ſhall be lawful for them to plead the general Iſſue.

Arch-Duke Leopald, to viſit him.

The Houſe of Commons this day conſidered of the Meſſage from the Lords, whereof one part was, to deſire the concurrence of the Houſe, to an Order for Sir Peter Killegrew to go with a Letter from both Houſes, to congratulate the Arch Duke Leopald, the Emperor's Brother, who is lately come to the Government of Flanders; to the end that Amity and Affection may be continued between theſe two Kingdoms.

Sir Peter Killigrew.

The Houſe hereupon ordered to agree with the Lords in this Meſſage, and that Sir Peter Killegrew ſhall go with this Congratulatory Letter.

The Houſe referred the conſideration of this Letter to a Committee, to be reported to the Houſe with ſpeed.

Sir Peter was referred to the Committee of the Revenue, to be ſatisfied his Diſburſements in his late former Journies.

He was referred likewiſe to a Committee, to be furniſhed with Accommodation for this Embaſſy.

Mr. Brown, Clerk in the Lord's Houſe, had his Name forged to an Act of Parliament.

The Houſe then took into conſideration another part of their Lordſhips Meſſage, that Mr. Browne, Clerk of the Parliament, had his Name lately forged to a pretended Act of Parliament; and that this Writing remained in the hand of a Member of that Houſe. Ordered, that the ſaid Writing ſhould be delivered to Mr. Browne, that he may examin this Forgery, that ſo the Parties concerned may be repaired, and Mr. Browne vindicated.

Gentry of Northamptonſhire complain of heavy Preſſures.

A Petition was preſented by the Gentry of Northamptonſhire, of the heavy Preſſures that Country lay under. This Petition was read, and ordered to be debated on Thurſday next.

The Petitioners were called in, and Mr. Speaker acquainted them, that the Houſe was very ſenſible of their heavy Preſſures, and gave them Thanks for their conſtant good Affections to the Parliament and Kingdom, and that their Petition was ordered to be ſpeedily debated.

Some of the Commiſſioners of the Army being come this day to the Houſe, they made a report of their Proceedings in the Army, and of the deſires of the Army, of which mention was made before, and a Declaration of the Army to clear Proceedings. And afterwards Mr. Speaker, by Command of the Houſe, gave them Thanks for this good Service, and their great pains therein; and ordered, that the reſt of the Commiſſioners ſhould have Thanks when they returned.

Commiſſioners ſent to the Army report their Proceedings.

They then inſiſted upon the deſires of the Army; and upon debate ordered,

Votes on the Report made.

1. That the Soldiers Arrears ſhould be ſpeedily audited, and a viſible Security given them for ſo much of their Arrears as ſhall not be paid off upon disbanding.

To pay Arrears upon disbanding, and viſible Security.

2. That an Ordinance ſhould be drawn, to make good the Declaration of both Houſes, for Apprentices of London and other Corporations, to have their time of Freedom allowed them that have ſerved in the Wars for the Service of the State.

Apprentices, who have ſerv'd in the Wars, to have their Freedom allowed.

3. That an Ordinance ſhall be drawn, for not preſſing of ſuch Soldiers as have voluntarily ſerved in theſe Wars, for any ſervice beyond the Seas.

That Soldiers ſhall not be preſſed to ſerve beyond Seas.

4. That an Ordinance ſhould be drawn for providing for a ſufficient Maintenance for Widows, maimed Soldiers, and Orphans, in all the Counties of the Kingdom.

Widdows and maimed Soldiers.

As to the point of Vindication of the Army from that Aſperſion publickly laid upon them, of ſending to the King to join with them, and alſo concerning the Declaration put forth againſt them, and to be repaired, concerning the Impriſonment of ſome of their Officers, The Houſe referred it to a further Conſideration, and the Debate of this particular to be on Tueſday next.

Vindication of the Army againſt their ſending to the King.

Some Citizens Petition, before mentioned, directed to the Commons the Supream Authority, was this day burnt at Weſtminſter and the Old Exchange, as was ordered by the Houſe.

The Petition to the Commons, the Supream Authority, burnt at Weſtminſter, &c.

This day Intelligence came from the Army, that ſince the Commiſſioners went up to London with the Grievances of the Army, and a Declaration of their Proceedings, all the Officers are repaired to their ſeveral Quarters, and that Friday the General, Sir Tho. Fairfax, came to the Head-Quarters at Walden, to the great Content and Joy of the Army: That all are quiet, and their Expectations great of the Pleaſure of the Parliament concerning their Grievances, being in things relating to them as Soldiers.

The General's return to Saffron-Walden.

But beſides this, we had further Intelligence this day, concerning a Letter in Ciphers, from Mr. Aſhburnham to the King at Holmby; which Letter was intercepted by Captain Abbots, a Captain of Dragoons in the Army, and is now unciphered; by which it appears, that Mr. Aſhburnham adviſed the King to forbear to make any abſolute Agreement with the Parliament, for now that the Peace beyond Sea, between the King of Spain and the United Provinces was almoſt concluded, the King might rely on the aid of 40 or 50000 Men; with ſome other Paſſages. The Letter is brought up, and delivered to the Parliament.

Succeſs againſt the Gourdens in Scotland.

THE Affairs of Scotland, as to the ſubduing the Enemy there, goes ſucceſsfully on. Hen. David Leiſley, having already cleared the North of the Gourdens, is returned within thirty Miles of Edenburgh with his Army, intending againſt Kilketto in the Lord of Argyle's Country, and the Weſt of Scotland, as it's believed, with whom will go the Lord Argyle. The inacceſſible paſſage gives that very difficult.

Of the affairs of Ireland from Cheſter, May 21. they write thus.

To ſend ſome Forces for Ireland, to preſerve Trim under the Command of Col. Fenwick.

The Commiſſioners having now opportunity of Wind, reſolve for Dublin with ſuch Forces as they have ready. It is reported the Rebels are drawn towards Trim, of which Colonel Fenwick is Governour; for better preſerving whereof, the Lord of Ormond hath ſent 100 Horſe with Pick-axes and Shovels, being deſirous to preſerve as long as may be that, and what elſe he holds, in hopes that an Army for the Field may come out of England yet before all is loſt, and that Army under an active and ſtirring Chieftain, otherway time being much ſpent, it will be a great Deſtruction to Engliſh Bodies and Treaſure.

Succeſs in Ireland by Colonel Conway.

Colonel Edward Conway, the Lord Conway's Son, returned to his Quarters at Liſſne-Gerney, in the Province of Ulſter, the 29*th* of April laſt, with a Party conſiſting of 300 or 400 Horſe, and 400 Foot, drawn out of the Regiments of the Lord Claneboye's, Sir John Clotworthy's, and Colonel Conway's own Regiment, and out of Colonel Hill's Regiment of Horſe, and other Troopers; they marched into the Rebels Quarters in the Countries of Louth and Monaghan near Carrakin Roſſe, met with five Companies of the Enemies Foot, and two of their Troops, whom they beat and purſued two or three Miles, and kill'd divers of them, and took a great Prey of lean Cows and Horſes, about a 1000 in number; and the ſame Party intends the next week to make another Expedition into another part of the Enemies Quarters, although they lie about 50 Miles diſtant from our Garriſon.

Intelligence as to Jerſey.

That the Governour did underſtand, That the Rebels of that Iſland which are at London, have procured Purſes from the Parliament to invade Jerſey; and that therefore he would have him to prepare againſt them, and he will take care to ſend him ſpeedy relief, and ſupplies from France, and that he ſhould baniſh all thoſe who ſtand for the Parliament, and to impoſe a new Oath on the Inhabitants; that the Deputy Governour hath Cloathed all his Souldiers in Red-Coats, with the Cloath that was taken going for Ireland, which was brought thither by his Frigots.

More Intelligence of Peace between Holland and Spain, to be ſuddenly concluded.

More Foreign News which is writ from the Hague, May 24. Things are ſo far compoſed, and each now ſo well underſtand the other, that upon the matter Peace with Spain is reſolved by all, and will ſuddenly be concluded; which as it's very ſadly apprehended by the French, becauſe they thereby become Defendants in Flanders, being but 14000 ſtrong, the Arch-Duke 10000 Horſe, and 20000 Foot, and Beſieging Armentiers, which is not taken, only they hope to carry it by the 28*th* of this inſtant, as they give out; likewiſe it puts them upon a ſudden Reſolution to agree with Spain, for which end Monſieur Servient is haſtening to Munſter, matters being there in as good forwardneſs, as between the States and Spain; if this ſhould produce a general Peace, and ſo great a Souldiery thereby vacant of Imployment, who knows how they might be engaged by a little Mony, which no doubt their Maſters would give to be rid of them.

News from beyond Seas, that the Army and Parliament are falling out.

At the Hague there is great talk of the Parliament in England, and their Army falling out, and great wonder at it; as the Affairs of Ireland and others related to England ſtands. The Elector of Brandenburgh is taking his leave here, and going for Cleave with his Princeſs; the Prince of Orange goes along with him, and entertains him at his Houſe by the way as he paſſes. He intends to be Sworn in the Province of Gelder, Zutphen, Overiſſelfrize, &c. what the Latitude of his Power will be, will be conſidered of.

Upon a motion in the behalf of Torrington in the Weſt, for ſome relief for the building of that Church, which in the heat of the Fight with the Lord Hopton there was blown up; it was voted to be referred to the Committee of the Weſt, to take it into Conſideration, and to report it to the Houſe.

The General removes his Quarters from Walden to Edmunds-Bury.

This day from the Army came Intelligence, That his Excellency, Sir Tho. Fairfax, was removing his Head Quarters from Walden, to St. Edmunds-Bury in Suffolk, that ſo he might be nearer the Horſe, and the better take notice of their deportment, to prevent any Diſtempers in the Army, and that the Souldiery might be acquainted of the Houſe of Commons late proceedings, in relation to the grievances of the Army; his Excellency writ a Letter to the ſeveral Regiments, in theſe words.

For the Officer in Chief with the Regiment of Colonel ——

The General's Letter to the Officer in chief with every Regiment, that the Souldiers forbear any further Actings without their Officers.

Intelligence of a Petition of ſome Officers in the Army to the General.

Further Intelligence of a Petition of divers Officers in the Army, preſented to his Excellency at Saffron Walden, May 23. which for better ſatiſfaction was thus verbatim.

The Petition it ſelf followeth.

To his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax, the Petition of divers of your Excellency's Officers.

After their humble thankfulneſs for thoſe notable ſucceſſes God hath bleſſed them with, under your Excellency's Conduct, and acknowledgment of your eminent Diligence, unwearied Induſtry, and exemplary Forwardneſs in the Publick Service; they have thought it neceſſary at this time in all humility, to preſent to your Excellency their ſenſibleneſs of ſome aſperſions caſt upon them, as if they aimed more at private Emoluments, than your Excellency's and the Armies Honour, or the Souldiers Advantage, thereby alienating the affections of their Souldiers from them, and rendering them leſs capable to ſerve the Publick.

They therefore humbly beſeech your Excellency not to receive any Impreſſions from theſe Imputations, but that you will be pleaſed to reſt aſſured, that as they can be out-done by none in their Fidelity to the Parliament, and Conſtancy to thoſe Principles they firſt undertook their Service upon, ſo neither in the high eſteem of your Excellency's Perſon and Conduct, nor in theſe deſires, That the Army be diſpoſed of with moſt Advantage to the Kingdom, and with the Honour and Satisfaction of the Souldiers, profeſſing that they will by all lawful means endeavour their good and welfare as their own, and as their Judgments guide them to believe they ought to defend, not to direct the proceedings of thoſe by whoſe Authority they were raiſed. Subſcribed by Colonel Sir Robert Pye, Colonel Graves, Colonel Sheffield, Colonel Butler, Colonel Forteſcue, and many Officers of the Army.

That 10 l. per week ſhould be paid to the ſaid Lord out of the Revenue, till further Order.

The Houſe was informed, That ſome of the Members of the Militia of the City had ſomething to preſent to the Houſe, they were called in, and one of them preſented to the Houſe ſome Informations and Deſires, and the Grounds of thoſe Deſires to have the Sum of 12000 l. more than was formerly ordered, for maintenance of their Guards.

12000 l. ordered to the Militia of London for the City Guards.

The Houſe conſidered thereof, and agreed to it; and ordered that this 12000 l. ſhould be advanced upon the Security of the laſt 200000 l. in courſe.

Saturday, the Houſes ſate not. From the Army we had thus much further, That his Excellency, Sir Tho. Fairfax, removed his Head-Quarters from Walden to Bury on Tueſday laſt, the better to adviſe adviſe what is fitteſt to be done to keep the Army from Diſtemper. That the Votes of the Houſes on Tueſday laſt, for the time of their Disbanding, with eight Weeks Pay, are come to the Army, but they generally ſeem unſatisfied therewith, and ſay there is fifty ſix Weeks Pay behind due to them; and conceive they ſhould be better rewarded for their unwearied Pains and Hazards for the Parliament and City. But the General, to prevent what in him lies all Diſtempers in the Army, hath ſent for all his Officers to Bury, to adviſe what is to be done; and we hope all things will be quieted, and the great deſign and aim of thoſe, who would too gladly bring the Army into diſorder, come to nought.

Intelligence that the Soldiers conceive 8 weeks to disband is not ſuitable to 56 weeks due.

The General ſends for his chief Officers to Bury.

Major General Mitton, and the Committee for North-Wales, have, after their great Pains and Care, ſetled the Diſtempers of the Soldiers that were there, and have disbanded all their Foot; and prepared a Regiment of betwixt 700 and 1000 of them for Ireland. They marched to the Water-ſide to take Shipping the beginning of the laſt Week.

For the Foot in North-Wales, 700 for Ireland.

Saturday, May 29. 1647.

THE great expectation of the Kingdom now is concerning the Army; from whence Intelligence comes to this purpoſe; And firſt from St. Edmunds-Bury, the General's Head-Quarters, we had this day Intelligence to this purpoſe; His Excellency having thought it requiſite, for the better knowledge of the Temper of the Soldiers, in relation to disbanding, to call a Council of War at Bury; accordingly the Officers met there on Saturday, about 200 in all. The General firſt communicated unto them the Votes of both Houſes concerning the Time of disbanding ſeveral Regiments; and having adviſed them to a compliance with the Order of Parliament, and uſed ſeveral Perſwaſions thereunto,

Time of Disbanding.

The Council of War firſt had a Preſentation made of the Condition of each Regiment, and of ſuch Companies whoſe Officers were there. Upon the Reſult, it was put to the Queſtion, Whether by what they had obſerved in their Regiments, the Votes then read were ſatisfactory or no as to the Soldiers? It was reſolved in the Negative by all, [except Lieutenant Colonel Jackſon, Major Gooday, Captain Highfield, Captain Lieutenant Knight, Lieutenant Hayden, and another] the Reaſons were,

Votes of Parliament diſſatisfactory.

1. That the Sum Voted of eight Weeks Pay, was not a conſiderable part of their Arrears. 2. That no viſible Security was given for what ſhould not now be paid. 3. That nothing was done for Vindication, and that they being declared Enemies, and ſent home, they might hereafter be proceeded againſt as Enemies, unleſs the Declaration were recalled. After this a Petition was produced and read, which had been that Morning preſented to the General, in the name of the private Soldiers of the Army, Horſe and Foot, deſiring his Excellency to appoint a general Rendezvous of the Army before their disbanding; it being an occaſion of amazement to them to hear ſome of the Army ſhould be disbanded ſo ſuddenly as Tueſday next, before all their Grievances were redreſt. This was not then proceeded upon; but to prevent Diſorders, and for a more readineſs to ſuppreſs them, a Reſolve paſſed by the Council of War, that the Quarters of the Army ſhould be contracted nearer to the Head-Quarter, the matter of the Rendezvous being referred till the Afternoon; in the mean time Com. Gen. Ireton, Col. Lilburne, Col.

Reaſons why the Votes are unſatisfactory.

That the Quarters of the Army be contracted.

Okey, Col. Rich, and Col. Hariſon, were appointed to draw up ſome Heads of Advice, to be preſented to the General by the Council of War, and it was reſolved upon the Queſtion in the affirmative, by all, [except five or ſix Officers.] The reaſon of this was, that conſidering how much the Army is agrieved and diſcontented, the matter of drawing to the general Rendezvous was accordingly reſumed in the Afternoon. At preſent it was thought there was a neceſſity for the Officers to comply with the Soldiers, who, as indeed was intimated, would have a Rendezvous without their Officers, which would be tumultuous and of dangerous conſequence, the ſpoil of the Country, and deſtructive to the Kingdom. After this, having before appointed a Declaration or Advice to be drawn up, to be preſented to the General, as their Opinions of the ground and reaſons of a Rendezvous, it was read, and paſſed by all except four or five; and further, that his Excellency ſhould be deſired to repreſent the condition of the Army to the Parliament; that they would be pleaſed to reſume the Condition of things voted on Tueſday laſt, and to ſuſpend any preſent Proceeding upon them; as alſo ſome Satisfaction as to Grievances of the Army, together with the things propoſed in the Concluſion of the Narrative from the Officers; and that they would be pleaſed to give ſome Reſolution to each of them.

The Soldiers inclined to Rendezvous without their Officers.

That the Soldiers grievances may be conſidered.

A Copy of the Souldiers Petition to the General, was as follows.

The Soldiers Petition to the General, againſt being disbanded apart; and againſt the word Enemies, reflecting on the Army.

To his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax, Knight, Captain General of the Forces raiſed by the Authority of Parliament, The humble Petition of the Soldiers of the Army, preſented to his Excellency at a Council of War, held at St. Edmunds-Bury, on Saturday, May 29. 1647.

Humbly ſheweth,

THAT we your Petitioners, conſidering the late Order for disbanding the Army, without redreſſing our Grievances, vindicating the Army, or calling to acconnt ſuch Perſons who have been Intenders, Contrivers, and Promoters of our Deſtruction; which, being but reaſonable, we humbly conceive we may juſtly expect, and ſhould not be deny'd judged before our Disbanding. Conſidering alſo the ſtrange, unheard of, and unuſual way of disbanding us apart, one Regiment from another, contrary to the Example of other Armies disbanded in this Kingdom; which Poſture renders us ſuſpicious to the Kingdom, to whom, for ſome of our Complaints, though humble and juſt, we have already been declared Enemies; and to whom, for ought we know, the reſt of our doings may be preſented with the ſame Conſtruction. We your Petitioners humbly beſeech your Excellency, you would be pleaſed to appoint a Rendezvous ſpeedily for the Army, and alſo to uſe your utmoſt Endeavours that it be not disbanded before our ſad and preſſing Grievances be heard, and fully redreſſed; which if not done before disbanding, we humbly conceive we ſhall be enforced upon many Inconveniencies, which will of neceſſity ariſe, when we, though unwillingly, ſhall be neceſſitated, for avoiding of Deſtruction like to fall on the whole Army, if not prevented, to do ſuch things our ſelves; which if your Excellency, out of your Wiſdom and Prudence ſhall prevent, by granting our juſt Deſire in a way of Order, we ſhall abundantly rejoyce in it, and be with Chearfulneſs enabled by it to ſubſcribe our ſelves,

Your Excellency's and the Kingdom's innocent and faithful Servants, whoſe Names are hereunto annexed, being Agitators in behalf of the ſeveral Regiments.

Tueſday,

Tueſday, June 1. 1647.

LEtters were this day read in both Houſes from his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax; the Letter, verbatim, was thus.

The General's Letter to the Houſe of Lords, that he communicated the Votes of Parliament to the Army, May 30.

My Lord,

YOUR Lordſhip's Letter of the 28th I received yeſterday, with the Votes of both Houſes incloſed therein; before the receipt thereof, I had called the Officers unto a general Council of War, to adviſe concerning the Tranſaction of the buſineſs, and prevention of Inconveniencies thereupon; and when they were in Conſultation, I communicated your Lordſhip's Letter, and the Votes therein ſent, unto them: After much time ſpent in debate thereof, this incloſed was delivered unto me by the Officers, as the Reſult of the Council of War; which being of vegreat Concernment, I thought it my Duty to haſten unto your Lordſhips. It is no ſmall Grief of Heart unto me, that there ſhould be any Diſſatisfactions betwixt the Parliament and the Army, and that the late Votes did not give Satisfaction. I beſeech God to direct your Lordſhips to proceed with Wiſdom, that things may be determined in Love, and this poor Kingdom free from further Diſtraction; which is the earneſt deſire of

But it gave not ſatisfaction.

Your Lordſhips moſt humble Servant,

Bury, May 30.

Thomas Fairfax.

Mr. Speaker,

HAving called the Officers of the Army to St. Edmunds-Bury, I communicated unto them Yeſterday the Votes of both Houſes, and a Letter of the Houſe of Peers ſent therewith, concerning the disbanding of the Army; after long Conſultation had thereof, this incloſed was delivered unto me, as the Reſult of the Council of War, where the Officers were very many and unanimous: Which being of Importance, I held it my Duty to haſten the ſame unto you, being much perplexed in my Thoughts, that Diſſatisfaction betwixt the Parliament and the Army ſhould rather increaſe than leſſen. I intreat you, that there may be ways in Love and Compoſure thought upon; I ſhall do my Endeavours, though I am forc'd to yield to ſomething out of Order, to keep the Army from Diſorder, or worſe Inconveniencies. I deſire you to take ſome ſpeedy Reſolution for the compoſing of things, whereby the Kingdom may be happy in a timely Deliverance from further Diſtraction; for the effecting whereof, I cou'd be content to be a Sacrifice, as the laſt Service you can have from

Your moſt Faithful and humble Servant,

Bury, May 30.

Ducres*, and Colonel Strode, be added to this Committee, and the care of this buſineſs is more particularly referred unto Mr. Bulkley.

Thurſday, June 3, 1647.

THIS day the Houſe proceeded further upon the buſineſs of the Army, and paſſed ſeveral Votes, That an Ordinance be brought in for authorizing the Aſſignments of any Officers Debenters, and for making of it a good Debt to the aſſigned; and that ſuch Officers as are attending the Committee of Accompts, be protected from Arreſts from Debt, during the time of their attendance on the ſaid Committee, provided it doth not exceed two Months.

That ſuch Officers as are in Priſon, ſhall have their Accompts firſt audited, and their Arrears firſt paid them.

are Stated, and whoſe Accounts are in Stating, to be advanced upon the Credit of the Moity of the Commiſſioners at Goldſmiths-Hall, and paid to the Committee, where Colonel Birch, and Mr. Goodwyn have the Chairs, to be by them Diſtributed, in ſuch Proportions as thoſe two Committees, who are joyned as to this buſineſs, ſhall think fit.

That the Declaration dated —— Declaring againſt the Army, be raiſed out of the Journal of the Houſe, and accordingly it was done; and further Ordered, That the Lords be deſired to race it out of their Journal alſo.

This day we had further by Letters from the Army, to this purpoſe.

On Tueſday June 1. The General received two Letters from the Committee at Derby-Houſe, the one to be at Chelmſford as that day, and renewed their Deſires to have the Life-Guard there, which was done 60 Miles off; and withal that the Parliament did expect the obedience to Disbanding, as alſo to their Orders for ſending the Train immediately to London; in anſwer to all which, the General deſired to be excuſed, giving them to underſtand, That he had written to the Parliament, and expected their Pleaſure upon the reſult of War. From Chelmſford we underſtood, on Tueſday, That the General's Regiment of their own accord, were come away with their Colours and Drums nearer the Army. Captain Highfeild's men took away their Colours againſt the Captain's conſent. The Lieutenant Colonel and Major meeting them with Orders, adviſed them to receive the General's Orders (which they had indeed with them) and bid them march like Souldiers, but they were ſo earneſt upon the buſineſs (you ſee then the Officers do not altogether lead them) that they bid them both to go to Chelmſford, there was Mony enough to Disband them. The Lieutenant Colonel and Major went to Chelmſford to the Commiſſioners.

Friday, June 4. 1647.

A Second Ordinance was this day in the Houſe of Commons, to give ſatisfaction to the Army in point of Indempnity, being more copious than the former, which was read, and referred to a Committee choſen for that purpoſe. They were likewiſe to prepare an Ordinance of Oblivion, and report it to morrow Morning to the Houſe.

The Commiſſioners of the Great Seal was Ordered to be continued till forty days after the Term.

The Ordinance for hearing the Cauſes in Chancery, was Ordered to be continued that time.

A Letter this day came from the Parliaments Commiſſioners at Holmby, with an encloſed Note delivered in by Cornet Joyce. Captain Titus, that brought this Letter, being at the door, was called in, and declared the manner of the Carriage of the Party of Horſe that came to Holmby to remove the King.

Captain Titus was Ordered 50 l. to buy him a Horſe.

A Meſſage this day came from the Lords, deſiring the Commons concurrence to an Order for recalling the King's Children to the City of London, and likewiſe a Letter to be ſent to his Excellency.

The Houſe agreed to the Order for recalling the King's Children, dren, and the King's Children are accordingly come to London, and to the Letter they would ſend Anſwer by their own Meſſengers.

Two Members of the Houſe, being diſcontented, withdrew; which the Houſe taking notice of, ſent the Serjeant at Arms for them, and they coming into the Houſe were enjoyned to keep the Peace.

Saturday, June 5. 1647.

THIS day more Letters came from the Commiſſioners with his Majeſty, of the taking away of his Majeſty, and the Commiſſioners from Holmby by a Party of the Army; which was thus. On Friday night laſt, a Party of Horſe, ſent from the Committee of Troopers in the Army, came to Holmby; where, after they had ſecured the Guards, they demanded his Majeſty. The Commiſſioners being much amazed at it, demanded of them what Warrant they had for what they did? But no further account they were to give at preſent they ſaid, but thus; That it was the Senſe of the Army. When they came to his Majeſty, ſome Diſcourſes paſt, and his Majeſty demanded ſeveral Queſtions of them, as Security for his Perſon and Attendants, &c. which they promiſed ſhould be done; and about two or three a Clock on Friday in the Afternoon his Majeſty went from Holmby, and the Commiſſioners along with him, with this Party towards the Army; but before they went, his Majeſty delivered a Meſſage to the Earl of Dumferling, to bring to the Houſe, whereof more hereafter.

Friday night his Majeſty lay at Huntington, and we hear not that he is gone further yet.

Mr. Walford that brought the Commiſſioners Letter, was called into the Houſe of Commons, and declared the manner of the buſineſs, and had a 100 l. given him for this and his other Services.

Sir Robert Pye this day had the thanks of the Houſe for bringing off his Troop, and his Officers thanks likewiſe, 200 l. was Ordered to be paid them for their preſent neceſſity, and referred to the Committee of Ireland to aſſign them Quarters. The like Monies and Quarters Ordered for Colonel Graves's Regiment.

The Houſe then alſo Ordered 1000 l. for the twenty Officers, and 80 Common Souldiers that are come from the Army; and the Committee for Ireland to aſſign them Quarters.

The additional Ordinance for further Indempnity of the Souldiery, was this day again reported and aſſented unto.

Likewiſe a Declaration paſt the Commons, for calling in the Declaration of both Houſes about the Army, and was ſent up to the Lords for their concurrence.

The Treaſurers at Chriſt's Church were Ordered to pay the 10000 l. charged on Goldſmiths-Hall, for the payment of Souldiers late in the Service, to be iſſued out by Order of the Committee, where Mr. Goodwyn hath the Chair; the Lords agreed to the Votes concerning the Army.

The Commons upon further Debate Ordered, That all the Members of the Houſe ſhould attend the Houſe forthwith, notwithſtanding they had leave from the Houſe to go into the Country, and this Order to be ſpeedily ſent to all the Members that are abſent.

An. 1642.

A Conference was this day deſired by the Scotch Commiſſioners, and a Committee of both Houſes, upon the great Affairs of both Kingdoms; and a Conference was had accordingly.

The Lord Dumferling at this Conference acquainted them with the Meſſage he had from his Majeſty to both Houſes, which was but ſhort, and to this purpoſe.

1. That his Majeſty was unwillingly taken away by part of the Army.

2. That he deſired both Houſes to maintain the Laws of the Land.

3. And that tho' his Majeſty might ſign many things in this Condition, yet he would not have them to be believed, until he had given further notice to the Houſe.

The Houſe, upon occaſion of this, and other immergent buſineſs, ordered to ſit to morrow (though the Lord's Day) at four of the Clock, and that Mr. Marſhal ſhould be deſired to pray before them.

The Militia of the City of London ſate this day very cloſe, upon the Military Affairs of the City.

From the Army this Evening we had further Intelligence by Letters, to this purpoſe.

Friday, June 4. The Rendezvous of the Army was held near Kenford, ſix Miles from Bury; ſeven Regiments of Foot and ſix of Horſe appeared; Colonel Whaley's being before diſperſed towards Holmby, (by the General's Command) upon this day's Intelligence, that our Party of Horſe had ſecured his Majeſty; the General gave notice of this to the Commiſſioners, and hath ſignified the ſame to both Houſes, deſiring to know their further Pleaſure: He hath likewiſe ſent them the Grounds, encloſed in the Letter, from the Soldiers to himſelf, for their undertaking the ſame of themſelves, which were chiefly, That they had intimation of a Deſign, which they were able to make good, (of ſome) to ſurpriſe him. Colonel Graves is diſcharged from that Employment, and Colonel Whaley in his place. At the Rendezvous a Petition was preſented to the General, in the Name of the Soldiers of the Army; the ſubſtance was, That they could not be ſatisfied with their Arrears, or other Returns, unleſs they had aſſurance that their Enemies ſhould not be their Judges (for the future;) and that 'tis believed they will inſiſt upon. The General went to every Regiment, and expreſt himſelf with much Judgment and Moderation, aſſured the Soldiers, That the Parliament took notice of their civil and fair Carriage, and had taken a courſe for ſatisfying their Arrears, and doubted not but they would anſwer their other Grievances; adviſed them to Moderation, and to behave themſelves with Diſcretion, and not to fall into any Diſtempers or mutinous Expreſſions againſt the Parliament. It is not to be expreſt with how much Joy, and how many Acclamations his Excellency was entertained by the Army, each Regiment ſhouting as he paſſed by them; the General ſtaid 'till night in the Field, viewed and took order for Ground to be allotted to each Regiment (Horſe and Foot) to quarter in that Night; and himſelf came to a ſmall Town of Kenford, and went not to bed, but only lay down to take ſome reſt.

Kenford, near Bury, June 5. at 3 in the Morning.

An humble Repreſentation of the Diſſatisfactions of the Army, in relation to the late Reſolutions for ſo ſudden Disbanding; ſhewing the Particulars of their former Grievances, wherein they did remain unſatisfied, and the Reaſons thereof.

Unanimouſly agreed upon, and ſubſcribed by the Officers and Soldiers of the ſeveral Regiments at the Rendezvous near New-market, on Friday and Saturday, June 4. and 5. Preſented to the General, to be by him humbly repreſented to the Parliament, viz.

WHereas upon the Report made to the Houſe of Commons on Friday, May 21. concerning the Grievances of the Army, that Houſe was pleaſed to paſs ſeveral Votes, ſeeming to tend towards the Satisfaction of the Army in ſome Particulars; and on the Tueſday following (May 25.) to paſs divers Reſolutions upon a Report from the Committee at Derby-Houſe, concerning the disbanding of the Foot of this Army, each Regiment apart, at ſeveral times and places. We humbly declare, That the ſaid Votes of Friday do come far ſhort of Satisfaction, (as to the ſaid Grievances) or to the Deſires propoſed by the Officers in the Concluſion of their Narrative. And that the latter Votes of Tueſday, importing a Reſolution of disbanding the Army in part, before equal Satisfaction be given to the whole in the Grievances, or ſo much as any Conſideration had of ſome others, as are moſt material; and alſo before any effectual Performances of that Satisfaction, which the Votes of Friday ſeemed to promiſe as to ſome of the Grievances; we cannot but be much unſatisfied and troubled at it, as in the Particulars following we have cauſe.

Firſt, The Proportion of but eight weeks Arrears to be paid at disbanding, as it is unreaſonably ſhort of what is moſt due, and what we conceive may be paid, or might eaſily have been provided, ſince the Parliament had the Kingdom ſo long cleared, all Trading and Commerce opened, vaſt Sums of Money brought in upon Delinquents Compoſitions and otherwiſe, and great Foundations of Security in their Hands, (beſides thoſe formerly engaged for the Scotts.) And as it is but a mean Reward for all our Labours, Hardſhips and Hazards in the Kingdom's Cauſe, and a very ſlender Supply to carry us to our homes, in a Condition ſuitable to the Parliament's Honour and our Succeſs; and much leſs to enable thoſe that have left good Trades, or other ways of livelihood, and ſuffered much in their Trades or Stocks by ſo doing, to ſet up again in their former Callings and Conditions; ſo it is but little (if any thing) more than what hath been due to us, ſince that time that we firſt went about to have petitioned for our Arrears, and ſo not to be accounted in Satisfaction towards former Arrears, which the Petition was meant for.

Secondly, In the Orders given for the ſtating of our Accompts, giving Debentures for our Arrears by the Committee of the Army, we find no Conſideration or Regard had of our Arrears incurred in the former Army or Services; which to the moſt of us are much greater than thoſe under the new Model, intended to be ſtated by the Committee for the Army; (as the Narrative of the Officers, Printed by miſtake under the name of their Declaration) did intimate before.

Thirdly, We cannot but conſider, that (whatever the Officers expectances upon Debentures may prove) the private Soldier may well make little account of whatever part of his Arrears he receives not before disbanding, as the Reaſons expreſt in the Narrative do ſhew. And whereas we hear of ſome Inſtructions paſt in an Ordinance for ſtating of Arrears, we underſtand that they direct 3 s. a week to be abated to Foot Soldiers for Quarter; which being 6 d. or 8 d. per diem above the rate they ſhould have paid for themſelves, if they had timely had Pay wherewithal, it ſeems very hard the poor Soldier ſhould allow Intereſt for the forbearance of his own Due.

The like diſproportion we find in the Abatements to Serjeants of Foot, for their Quarters. In the Abatement for Quarters to Officers of Horſe and Dragoons, we find one third part of the whole Pay to them due, both for themſelves and their Horſes, is to be defalkated, though the full Pay for their Horſes is not allowed in the Account, unleſs they make it appear by Muſters that they kept their full Numbers; and the third part of their full Pay amounting to the half or near the half of their preſent Pay, ſeems an unreaſonable Allowance for Quarters, eſpecially in the caſe of Captains and Field Officers.

We find alſo no Proviſion made for private Soldiers of Horſe and Foot, or any Officers in Commiſſion or not in Commiſſion, in relation to any Quarters diſcharged by them; but all ſuch are abſolutely to abate the reſpective Rates for Quarters during their whole time, whether they have paid Quarters for any part of their time or no. Whereas we know aſſuredly, and can make appear, That all of them, during their Service in this Army, (and moſt of them in their Service in the former Armies) have really diſcharged their Quarters, for a very great part of the Pay received they were bound to have done; having, without reſpect to that, many times paid freely as far as their Money would hold out, partly out of deſire not to be burthenſome at all to the Country as far as they could, and partly upon expectation (grounded upon the many Promiſes, and often renewed, of conſtant Pay for the time to come) that Money would come in time to pay them off, and reimburſe them their full Pay again, without Defalcation for Quarters. We find it alſo provided, That no Trooper is capable of Allowance or Debenture for Arrears, unleſs he deliver in ſuch Horſe and Arms with which he hath ſerved, or a Certificate that ſuch Horſe and Arms did not appertain to the State, or elſe was loſt in actual Service; which extends to the total taking away from them thoſe Horſe and Arms of the States which they have uſed and preſerved in the Service, contrary to the Favour allowed, and never (that we know of) denied in the disbanding of any other Army: And if that, being but a matter of Favour, the Horſe-men in this Service be thought unworthy of it, and muſt for account of their Arrears rebate for ſuch Horſe and Arms as upon disbanding they thought to have been given them; yet it ſeems hard, that ſuch as cannot deliver in thoſe States Horſes and Arms, which at disbanding they ſo underſtood to be their own, and ſo perhaps have ſold or otherwiſe diſpoſed of, ſhould for that loſe their whole Arrears, or be incapable of Account or Debenture for any part thereof.

Fourthly, The viſible Security for what Arrears ſhould not be paid at diſbanding, (which the Votes of Friday, May 21. ſeem to promiſe) as it ſtands propounded in the Votes of Tueſday, May 25. appears not to be either a Security ſufficient, or to us viſible.

1. Becauſe that Security of the Exciſe in courſe, propoſed for the Arrears of private Soldiers and inferior Officers, is known to be already preingaged for vaſt Sums, amounting to above a Million, that are to take place before thoſe Arrears; nor do we know certainly, that the Exciſe (which is yet but temporary) will be continued for ſo long time, as till our Arrears ſhall come out in courſe after the preceding Engagements ſatisfied.

2. Becauſe that Security propoſed for Officers Arrears, viz. the Profits ariſing out of Delinquents Eſtates, in the firſt Exception (eſpecially) being limited to ſuch as are not already diſpoſed of, it doth not appear what they will amount unto, or what the Pre-ingagements or Pre-diſpoſures by the Parliament may be, or what incumbrances of Debts, or limitations of Eſtates (as they were in the hands of the Owners) may be upon the ſame; none of which we would be any occaſion to defeat or avoid, ſo as to have the Curſes and Grudges of defrauded Creditors or ruined Families to lye upon us or our Poſterities.

3. Neither the one Security nor the other, are yet, for ought we find, or could well before the appointed times of disbanding, be ſo ſettled by Ordinance to the uſes propoſed (as the other Securities for Monies borrowed by the Parliament have been) which we conceive requiſite to render the ſame indeed viſible Security.

The two firſt of theſe Reaſons we ſhould not urge ſo much, if we did not ſee other matters of Security within the Kingdom, that would be much more clear, (as Cathedrals and their Revenues, Forreſt Lands, &c.)

Fifthly, The Ordinance voted to exempt from Preſſing, (firſt) is not, for ought we underſtand, brought in and paſſed before the appointed Disbanding. Next, by the Vote it ſeems not to intend the exempting of Voluntier Horſe-men from being preſt for Foot Service. And laſtly, We underſtand not how it can be effectual to particular Soldiers, (when diſperſt about the Kingdom, and ſojourning or travelling, where perhaps their former relation to this Army, or Condition as Voluntiers in it may not be known, or not credited upon their Words) unleſs the Ordinance intended ſhall provide, That a Teſtimonial of their Service, under the General's, or their reſpective Field Officers or Captains Hands (which they might ever carry about or keep by them) ſhall be their ſufficient Diſcharge from any Preſs, (if they ſhall fall under it.) And whereas ſuch Teſtimonials cannot eaſily be got by them after diſbanding, the ſaid Votes for ſo ſudden diſbanding, and at ſuch Diſtances, do not mention or admit any thing of that kind more than Paſſes from the Commiſſioners to carry them home.

Sixthly, The Ordinance voted to give Apprentices the benefit of their Time ſpent in the Parliament's Service, as alſo that for the Maintenance of maimed Soldiers, and the Widdows and Children of Men ſlain in the Service, were not brought in and paſſed before the appointed Diſbandings, nor do we yet hear that they are, though we hope they will be.

Seventhly, The Ordinance paſſed for Indempnity, ſeems to make but ſlender Proviſion for our Quiet, Eaſe, or Safety, in relation to things done in the War as Soldiers.

1. Becauſe the things it provides for throughout the Ordinance, comprized only in theſe Terms, (viz.) Things done by virtue of any Ordinance of Parliament, or for the Service and Benefit of the Parliament; We conceive, that upon every Treſpaſs, or other thing done in the War (which we may be queſtioned for) it will be very chargeable and difficult either to derive a clear Authority for the ſame from the Ordinance of Parliament, or to bring Proofs ſufficient to make up ſuch a conſtructive Concluſion, as that it was for the Service and Benefit of the Parliament; eſpecially to do this ſo fully, as to meet with all the Evaſions and Eluſions of a ſubtle Lawyer; or to convince the Senſes of a Country Jury, whom we know not by what Rules or Meaſure they may go, in judging what was for the Service and Benefit of the Parliament, or what not; perhaps ſome of them may be of that mind, That it had been for the Service and Benefit of the Parliament to have had no War at all, or to have had fewer or no ſuch Garriſons or Forces as ſome of us have been engaged in. In ſum, We cannot think it ſafe to be left to the Senſe or Conſtruction of a Country Jury, concerning the Exigencies of War, or Duty of a Soldier, upon ſo doubtful an Iſſue: We ſhould rather think, that the old Iſſue, which (as we underſtand) ancient Laws have provided for in ſuch caſes, (viz. whether the thing were done Tempore in Loco Belli) was much more clear and ſure; and an Act or Ordinance of Oblivion for all Treſpaſſes or other things ſo done by Soldiers in this War, would be moſt ſafe and ſatisfactory.

2. That the Proviſion in the ſaid Ordinance now paſt for relief, by complaint to a Committee of Parliament at London, (which ſeems to be meant for ſaving of Charges to Poor men) we doubt will prove a very remote help, and far more chargeable for a poor Soldier Impriſoned or Arreſted in the Country, than the former. And though we highly honour that Committee named in the Ordinance, (for the Major part of it) yet we confeſs we ſhall be ſorry that our relief (if it may otherwiſe be provided for) ſhould be the occaſion of ſetting up more Arbitrary Courts than there are already, with ſo large a Power of impriſoning any Free-men of England, as the Ordinance gives to that Committee; Let the Perſons intruſted appear at preſent never ſo juſt and faithful, or though all the Committee were as good Patriots, as we hold the Major part to be.

3. In the matter of Accompts we are wholly left (as before) to the mercy of the Committee for Accompts, and their Sub-Committees, whoſe Conſtitution (in moſt Counties) being at leaſt of Neuters, diſaffected to the War, and conſequently to the Soldiery, and whoſe vaſt and Arbitrary Power to vex, delay, Fine and Impriſon at their own pleaſure or Judgment, any that they can bring within the compaſs of Accomptants, and to proceed upon their own Judgment of the default, to ſequeſter, ſell, and diſpoſe of his Eſtate, as upon a Commiſſion of Bankrupt (we confeſs) we tremble to think of, more than of any Enemie. And though we are as zealous as any to have all men brought to any accompt, for what may clearly be accounted for; (as Treaſurers, Keepers of Stores, Sequeſtrators, or ſuch like Accomptants) yet we cannot but think is hard for us, or others the Parliaments Soldiers, to be required to ſo ſtrict Accompts for all things received, taken, and uſed in the War, by our ſelves or any under our Command, (tho' but temporarily upon a part, for many of which things neither we nor any other that minded the publick Service, and have been engaged in hazardous Services, where many have loſt thoſe Accounts they did keep, can give or could keep ſo ſtrict Account, or for want of ſuch Accounts to be ſo cruelly vexed and proſecuted, even to utter undoing, as any Man that's Accountable for any thing may be, and divers of the Parliaments moſt faithful and active Servants in our condition have been before our Eyes. And though we would not wiſh that any Soldiers or Officers, who have by plunder or other injury to the Countrey, abuſed the Name of the Parliaments Service, and converted any thing they have taken or received to their own private Benefit or Advantage, (more then for neceſſary ſubſiſtence or ſupplies) ſhould go away with it, in being exempted from Accompt. Yet we cannot but think is reaſonable and neceſſary, That for thoſe many others that have not done ſo, but have employed all faithfully for the publick Service, ſuch Proviſion ſhould be made, as what Arms, Ammunition, Horſes, Furniture, or other things received or taken by them, they could not keep or cannot give a clear and diſtinct Account for, it ſhould be ſufficient for their diſcharge, if they make Oath, That they have not imbezzeled or wittingly converted to their private Benefit any part thereof; more than what things or to what value they do or ſhall (for ſaving of their Oath) charge upon themſelves in their Accompts.

We find another thing mainly neceſſary for our and other mens Indempnity, (for which there is no Proviſion at all made in this Ordinance) viz. That all Acts of Council, or Courts of War, either in Cenſure or Diſcharge of any Perſons, for any Cauſe ſubject to their Judgment, and the Warrants of the General, or Chief Commander, for Execution or Remiſſion of ſuch Cenſures, may be valid and good, both as to the Juſtification of thoſe that have been employed in Execution of ſuch Cenſures, and alſo the full and final acquittal of the Perſons ſo diſcharged or remitted.

Eighthly, Though thoſe Officers of the Army at ſeveral times ſent for, or ſent up to attend the Parliament as Delinquents, have been indeed diſcharged, (for which we render our thanks, and acknowledge the Parliaments Juſtice in the diſcharge) yet for men of ſuch Credit and Integrity, to have their Names brought ſo highly into publick queſtion or ſuſpicion, and the Cauſe not known (which might make it imagined greater) to be kept long in attendance under that notion, and not obtain by their daily ſolicitations to know their accuſers, or any charge, and (for one of them) to be made a Priſoner, ſearched and ſent up ſo far in a diſgraceful manner, without Authority (againſt the right both of a Soldier and Subject) and at laſt to be only diſmiſt, (without any word of Vindication or Clearing) ſeems but a ſlender Reparation.

Ninthly, There hath yet been nothing declared by the Parliament (as in the Narration or Declaration of the Officers was deſired) to clear us as to our right of Petitioning, or to clear the ſenſe and intention of the Parliament in their Order for ſuppreſſing the Petition, or the ground of their Cenſure in the Declaration againſt it; Though we think no Man can deny the Matter of the Petition to be juſt, and the Parliament's Proceedings ſince upon the Heads of it does imply as much. And if our Liberty of Petitioning for our Due be denyed us now, and the attempting of it render'd ſuch a Crime, (as by the ſaid Order and Declaration appears to be, while the Ground or Intentions of them ſtands not explained otherwiſe) we cannot but expect the ſame or worſe hereafter, not only to our ſelves (when being diſbanded and diſperſed, we ſhall have the like occaſion to petition as private and ſingle Men) but alſo to all the free-born People of the Land in the like caſe. And ſo this Precedent (if it ſtand good) would extend, in the conſequence of it, to render all Soldiers under this Parliament the worſt of ſlaves, and all Subjects little better. And though there have been of late, in other Caſes, too much dangerous Precedents of ſuppreſſing Petitions, and puniſhing or cenſuring the Petitioners, yet (we think) few or none ſo full and clear againſt all juſt Liberties as this in our Caſe, whoſe Petitions was not, as many (that yet have been received with large Thanks) without any foundation in real Grievances or Dues, tending and ſerving merely to the-clare the Petitioners Opinions and Inclinations, in relation to matters of State, (then in transaction, or intended to be put on in the Parliament;) nor yet subject to any of those Exceptions, which at other Petitions (seeming better grounded, more neceſſary or concerning than the former, and yet rejected) might be. But ours, not medling with matters of State, with Proceedings of Parliament, or any Bodies Concernments but our own, tended but to obtain our particular Dues, (often promiſed, dearly and juſtly earned, long forborn,) and ſome of which (viz. the matter of Indempnity) we could not, (without danger of utter Ruin) want after disbanding; and theſe but deſired in an humble and ſubmiſſive way, without any Language ſcandalous or offenſive, or any other particular Exception (for Matter or Form) that we have ever yet been told of, or could any way learn; ſo as though we are willing to believe the Parliament was miſ-informed, abuſed, or ſurpriſed in the buſineſſes, (as the Narrative doth expreſs;) yet we cannot hitherto underſtand from whence ſuch Proceedings againſt ſuch a Petition, or againſt us for it, could ariſe; except (in thoſe that moved the Parliament thereunto) from ſome Principles of Malignants Envy or Diſlike againſt us the Petitioners, for the things God hath done by us, carrying them (above all other Conſiderations of juſt or unjuſt, dangerous or ſafe) to this end as the greateſt good, that this Army muſt not paſs with that Reputation God hath given it; but muſt (upon any occaſion that could be catched hold on) have a Diſhonour put upon it, and by Diſcontents and Provocations be put into Diſtemper, ſo as to do ſomething that might render it odious, or bring a Blemiſh upon it.

Tenthly, The Declaration yet ſtanding in force, and nothing Publiſhed by the Parliament to clear the Army from the Cenſure it thereby lies under, there remains a brand of Ignominy upon this Army to Poſterity. And thoſe Soldiers who have proceeded to act any thing in purſuance of their juſt Deſires in that Petition, or in repreſentation of their juſt Grievances thereupon; as alſo thoſe Officers that have any way concurred with, or countenanced, or not deſerted them therein, remain ſubject to queſtion, and to the higheſt Cenſure that may be, for ſo doing.

Joyce fetched his Majeſty the next day after.

Eleventhly, Were all other our Grievances duly conſidered, yet nothing be done to the diſcovery or cenſure of thoſe that have wronged the Army, and abuſed the Parliament, to the procuring of ſuch Proceedings againſt us, in relation to ſo juſt and innocent Petition, but that the ſame Perſons remain ſtill in the ſame Credit and Power; we appeal to all reaſonable Men, what hopes, either of Right or Safety, we, (when disbanded and diſperſed) or any private Man, can hereafter promiſe to himſelf in the like Caſe? Let every honeſt Engliſh Man lay his Hand on his Heart, weigh our Caſe, and make it his own, (as in conſequence it is) and then judge for us and himſelf.

1. We may confidently ſay, never any private Man had or can have any thing more clearly due to him, than what we went about to petition for, nor could ſeek it in a more regular, humble, or inoffenſive way, (as hath been ſhewed before.) Now for a private Man, petitioning for his Right in ſuch a way, to be denyed, or fail of his Right (in Courts where Corruption ſways) is perhaps not rare; yet for ſuch a Man to be deterred or interdicted beforehand from ſuing for his acknowledged Right, (we think) is not uſual in Courts ſufficiently corrupt. But not only to be denied his Right, and the liberty to petition it, but withal by a Cenſure (no leſs than Capital) to be expoſed to a Forfeiture of Eſtate, Liberty, Life and all, for but going ſo to ask what he conceives, and the Court it ſelf will not deny to be his Due, and this without ever asking or hearing what he can ſay in his Excuſe, would carry ſo high a face of Injuſtice, Oppreſſion, and Tyranny, as we think is not eaſie to be exampled in the Proceedings of the moſt corrupt and arbitrary Courts, towards the meaneſt ſingle Man. Now if we have found Men of thoſe deſperate Principles and Confidence, to attempt, and in that Credit and Power to carry on ſuch Proceedings againſt an Army, (ſtanding then in full Strength, in Reputation, and ſome little Merit alſo) and to engage the Authority of Parliament therein, whoſe preſent Power hath, under God, been upheld and newly eſtabliſhed through that Army; What can we or any honeſt Man expect hereafter as private Perſons, if the ſame Men ſhall continue to be our Judges, or in the ſame Credit and Power, when we are disbanded,

An. 1647.

(as now) we ſay what good can be expected, or what ill may not be expected in any future Caſe, that ſhall croſs the Pride, Paſſions, or Intereſts of ſuch men, of whoſe unjuſt Principles and deſperately Tyrannical Spirits, we have in this Caſe had the moſt perfect taſte that can be imagined, we have both here and before plainly remonſtrated our Caſe in this particular, as it ſtands, appearing to thoſe that underſtand not upon what grounds, and in what manner ſuch things were carryed in the Parliament in relation to the Petition: We are ſtill willing to believe the Parliament hath been ſome way ſtrangely miſinformed, ſurprized, or otherwiſe abuſed in the buſineſs (as was expreſſed before in that Narrative) We are ſtill tender of the Parliament Priviledges, but we ſhall yet hope and deſire, That the wiſdom of the Parliament would find how to diſengage the Honour of the Parliament, from the deſperate practices of ſuch Incendiaries, and cauſe them to be diſcovered and cenſured, ſo far as may ſecure the Parliament from being again ſo abuſed, and both us and the Kingdom from the like or worſe Oppreſſions or Dangers by them (which is the utmoſt ill we wiſh them) And if herein our belief or hopes from or concerning the Parliament do fail us, we ſhall be ſorry; but yet the Caſe and Conſequence is ſtill as it is, or the more ſad to us and the Kingdom. And having in this particular expreſſed both the Caſe and Conſequence very plainly, we leave it at the Parliaments door, until they ſhall be pleaſed to fix the blame on thoſe particular Perſons, that have abuſed them herein as before.

Twelfthly and laſtly, We find nothing as yet done, or thought of for Reparation or Vindication of the Army, in reference to the many ſcandals caſt upon it, or to Puniſh or Diſcountenance the Authors and Publiſhers, though divers of them be ſufficiently known.

Joyce ſeiſed his Majeſty the next day after.

A Solemn Engagement of the Army under the Command of his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax, read, aſſented unto, and Subſcribed by all Officers and Souldiers of the ſeveral Regiments, at the general Rendezvous near New-Market, on the 5th of June, 1647.

WHereas upon the Petition intended and agreed upon in the Army in March laſt, to have been preſented to the General for the obtaining of our due and neceſſary Concernments as Souldiers; the Honourable Houſe of Commons being unſeaſonably prepoſſeſt with a Copy thereof, and (as by the ſequel we ſuppoſe) with ſome ſtrange Miſrepreſentations of the Carriage and Intention of the ſame, was induced to ſend down an Order for ſuppreſſing the Petition, and within two or three days after, upon further miſinformation and ſcandalous Suggeſtions, of the like or worſe Nature, and by the indirect practices of ſome malicious and miſchievous Perſons (as we ſuppoſe) ſurprizing, or otherwiſe abuſing the Parliament, A Declaration was publiſhed in the Name of both Houſes, highly cenſuring the ſaid Petition, and declaring the Petitioners, if they ſhould proceed thereupon, no leſs than Enemies to the State, and Diſturbers of the Publick Peace; And whereas at the ſame time and ſince, divers eminent Officers of the Army have been brought into queſtion and trouble about the ſaid Petition, whereby both they and the reſt of the Officers were diſabled, or diſcouraged for the time from further acting or appearing therein on the Souldiers behalf; And whereas by the aforeſaid proceedings, and the effects thereof, the Souldiers of this Army (finding themſelves ſo ſtopt in their due and regular way of making known their juſt Grievances and deſires to and by their Officers) were enforced to an unuſual (but in that Caſe neceſſary) way of Correſpondence and Agreement amongſt themſelves, to chuſe out of the ſeveral Troops and Companies ſeveral men, and thoſe out of their whole number, to chuſe two or more for each Regiment, to Act in the Name and behalf of the whole Souldiery of the reſpective Regiments, Troops, and Companies, in the proſecution of their Rights and Deſires in the ſaid Petition, as alſo of their juſt Vindication, and writing in reference to the aforeſaid proceedings upon and againſt the ſame, who have accordingly acted and done many things to thoſe ends, all which the Souldiers did then approve as their own Acts. And whereas afterwards (upon the ſending down of Field Marſhal Skippon, and thoſe other Officers of the Army) my that were Members of the Houſe of Commons, to quiet Diſtempers in the Army; freſh hopes being conceived of having our deſires again admitted to be made known and conſidered in a regular way, and without Inch Miſrepreſentations as formerly, the Officers of the Army (except ſome few Diſſenting Officers) did again joyn in a Repreſentation of their common Grievances, and the Officers (except as before) did agree upon a Narrative Account of the Grounds, riſe, and growth of the Diſcontents of the Army, and their proceedings in relation thereunto, with an Overture of the beſt Expedients to remove or ſatisfie the ſame, both which were preſented to the ſame Members of the Houſe, and by them reported to the Houſe; and whereas the Parliament having thereupon voted, and Ordered ſome particulars only towards ſatisfaction of our Grievances, hath ſince procceeded to certain Reſolutions of ſudden Disbanding the Army by pieces, which Reſolutions being taken, and to be executed before full and equal ſatisfaction be given to the whole Army in any of the Grievances, before effectual performance of that ſatisfaction in part which the preceding Votes ſeemed to promiſe as to ſome of the Grievances, and before any Conſideration at all of ſome others moſt material (as by the reſult of a general Council of War on Saturday, May 29.) was in general declared, and is now more fully demonſtrated in particular, by a Repreſentation thereupon, and agreed unto by us: We all cannot but look upon the ſame Reſolutions of Disbanding us in ſuch manner, as proceeding from the ſame Malicious and Miſchievous Principles and Intentions, and from the like indirect Practices of the ſame Perſons abuſing the Parliament, and is as the former proceedings againſt us before mentioned did, and not without Carnal and Bloody Purpoſes (for ſome of them have not ſtuck to declare or intimate) after the Body of the Army ſhould be Disbanded, or the Souldiers divided from their Officers: Then to queſtion, proceed againſt, and execute their malicious Intentions, upon all ſuch particular Officers and Souldiers in the Army, as had appeared to Act in the Premiſes in the behalf of the Army; and whereas upon a late Petition to the General from the Agitants, in behalf of the Souldiers (grounded upon the preceeding Conſiderations) relating to the ſame Reſolutions of Disbanding, the ſame general Council of War, to prevent the danger and inconveniences of thoſe Diſturbings or Tumultuous Actings, or conſequences which the Diſſatisfaction and Jealouſie, thereupon alſo grounded, were like ſuddenly to have produced in the Army, to adviſe the General, firſt to contract the Quarters of the Army, and then to draw the ſame to an orderly Rendezvous for ſatisfaction of all, and that his Excellency would immediately ſend up to move and deſire the Parliament to ſuſpend any preſent proceeding upon the ſaid Reſolution of Disbanding, to reſume the Conſideration of the Grievances and Deſires ſent up from the Army, and not to Disband it in pieces, before juſt and equal ſatisfaction be given to the whole; And whereas ſome of the Regiments appointed for Disbanding, upon notice thereof, withdrawing themſelves from the Quarters adjacent to the appointed Rendezvous, and drawing towards the Head Quarters; and the contracting their Quarters according to the ſaid advice of the Council of War.

We the Officers and Souldiers of ſeveral Regiments hereafter Named, are now met at a general Randezvous, and the Regiments appointed as aforeſaid to be Disbanded, have not appeared, nor can appear; but are reſolved not to appear at the reſpective and ſeveral Randezvous, appointed as aforeſaid for their Disbanding, and divers other things have been done by ſeveral other Parties or Members of the Army, neceſſarily relating to the good and concernment of the whole in theſe Affairs: Now foraſmuch as we know not how far the Malice, Injuſtice, and Tyrannical Principles of our Enemies, that have already prevailed ſo far to abuſe the Parliament, and the Army (as is aforementioned) in the paſt proceedings againſt the Army, may further prevail to the danger and prejudice of our ſelves, or any Officers or Souldiers of the Army, or other Perſons that have appeared to act any thing in behalf of the Army; or how far the ſame may further prevail to the danger or prejudice of the Kingdom, in raiſing a new War or otherwiſe: Therefore for the better prevention of all ſuch dangers, prejudices, or other inconveniences that may enſue, and withal for better ſatisfaction to the Parliament and Kingdom concerning our deſires of conforming to the the Authority of the one, and providing the good and quiet of the other in the preſent Affairs of Diſbanding; and for a more aſſured way whereby that Affairs may come to a certain iſſue (to which purpoſe we herein humbly implore the preſent and continued aſſiſtance of God, the Righteous Judge of all) We the Officers and Souldiers of the Army ſubſcribing hereunto, do hereby declare, agree, and promiſe to and with each other, and to and with the Parliament and Kingdom as followeth.

1. That we ſhall chearfully and readily Diſband, when thereunto required by the Parliament, or elſe ſhall many of us be willing (if deſired) to engage in further Services either in England or Ireland, having firſt ſuch ſatisfaction to the Army in relation to our Grievances and Deſires heretofore preſented, and ſuch Security, That we of our ſelves (when Diſbanded, and in the Condition of private men) or other the free-born People of England (to whom the conſequence of our Caſe doth equally extend) ſhall not remain ſubject to the like Oppreſſion, Injury, or Abuſe, as in the Premiſes have been attempted and put upon us while an Army, by the ſame mens continuance in the ſame Credit and Power (eſpecially if as our Judges) who have in theſe paſt proceedings againſt the Army, ſo far prevailed to abuſe the Parliament and us, and to endanger the Kingdom; and alſo ſuch Security that we our ſelves, or any Member of this Army, or others, who have appeared to act any thing in behalf of the Army, in relation to the Premiſes before recited, ſhall not after Diſbanding be any way queſtioned, proſecuted, troubled, or prejudiced for any thing ſo acted; or for the entering into, or neceſſary Proſecution of this neceſſary Agreement; (we ſay) having firſt ſuch Satisfaction and Security in theſe things, as ſhall be agreed unto by a Council, to conſiſt of thoſe General Officers of the Army (who have concurred with the Army in the Premiſes) with two Commiſſion Officers, and two Souldiers to be choſen for each Regiment, who have concurred and ſhall concur with us in the Premiſes, and in this Agreement; and by the major part of ſuch of them, who ſhall meet in Council for that purpoſe, when they ſhall be thereunto called by the General. That without ſuch Satisfaction and Security as aforeſaid, we ſhall not willingly Diſband, nor Divide, nor ſuffer our ſelves to be Diſbanded or Divided.

2. And whereas we find many ſtrange things ſuggeſted or ſuſpected to our great prejudice, concerning dangerous Principles, Intereſts, and Deſigns in this Army, as to the overthrow of Magiſtracy, the ſuppreſſion or hindering of Presbytery, the Eſtabliſhment of Independent Government, or upholding of a general Licentiouſneſs in Religion, under pretence of Liberty of Conſcience, and many ſuch things; We ſhall very ſhortly tender to the Parliament a Vindication of the Army from all ſuch ſcandals, to clear our Principles in relation thereunto, and in the mean time we do diſallow and diſclaim all purpoſes or deſigns in our late or preſent proceedings, to advance or inſiſt upon any ſuch Intereſt; neither would we (if we might and could) advance or ſet up any other particular Party or Intereſt in the Kingdom (tho' imagined never ſo much our own) but ſhall much rather (as far as may be within our Sphere or Power) ſtudy to promote ſuch an Eſtabliſhment of common and equal Right and Freedom to the whole, as all might equally partake of, but thoſe that do, by denying the ſame to others, or otherwiſe, render themſelves incapable thereof.

23 Caroli.

A true Impartial Narration, concerning the Armies preſervation of the King: By which it doth appear, that the Army doth intend the Good Life, Property and Liberty of all the Commons of England.

FEllow-Commoners, conſidering with our ſelves how variouſly thoſe men will Report, that endeavour to carry on their Deſigns, though it be to the Ruin and Deſtruction of others, who are their Fellow-Commoners, and have as juſt a right and propriety to the Liberties and Freedoms of the Nation as themſelves. And conſidering alſo how miſinformation may ſeduce you, and draw you away from the knowing of things in their true unmixt Nature, and conſequently from acting and walking accordingly, ſo that not only our ſelves may be drawn by ſuch Miſrepreſentations of things, into inexpreſſible, extraordinary Sadneſſes, Miſeries, and Calamities, but alſo you into perpetual irrecoverable Servitude and Bondage, even in a moment of time, before you or we are aware of. And alſo conſidering, that certain of the Houſe of Commons, have ſold the Record of Magna Charta (which doth demonſtrate the Subjects Rights, Liberties, and Properties) for 10000 l. ſo that it might never be uſed again, as we can (we hope) evidently prove; ſo that by it you may ſee their Deſign. Therefore we (who have fought for you in the ſight of the Sun, and for your Liberties and Proprieties as well as our own; and have been faithful to you in the apprehenſions of all rational men, and thoſe that will not lie againſt their own Souls, or walk contrary to the Teſtimony of their own Conſciences) cannot chuſe but with reciprocal tenderneſs preſent unto you truly, briefly, and clearly, without partiality, the Nature of the buſineſs concerning the King's Majeſty and us at Holdenby, June 4. 1647.

On Wedneſday Cornet Joyce went to the Bowling-Green, where his Majeſty was at Bowls within a Mile of Holdenby; the cauſe of the Cornet's being there, was to prevent the King's being conveyed away in a ſecret manner, which was juſtly ſuſpected to be done by ſome that were with his Majeſty. Cornet Joyce, an appointed Agent by the Army, obſerving a ſudden alteration, in perſwading the King to go to my Lord Spencer's to Bowls, when the King had reſolved before to go two Miles further; and at the King's taking Horſe, Colonel Graves and a Scottiſh Lord whiſpered, and were more than ordinary earneſt in their privacy, which did occaſion jealoſie at that opportunity; after the King had been at Bowls one hour, Graves queſtioned a Souldier, and asked him from whence he came; the Souldiers Anſwer was, from Oxford, and that he had been lately with the Army. Then Graves asked if the Army was not contented with the Ordinance of Indempnity, and the Votes of Parliament. The Souldier Anſwered no, and that it would in no way ſecure them; and gave Graves a Reaſon; becauſe many of their Follow Souldiers, and thoſe that had acted for the Parliament, were moleſted notwithſtanding it; and what a ſad thing will it be to conſider, that the Souldiery ſhall taſte of the Parliament's Judges cruelty, notwithſtanding their good Services, and the preſerving of the Heads of ſome men in the Parliament: And therefore judge how much below the light of Nature theſe men live, and how much they exerciſe themſelves in Tyranny, when they will not do good unto thoſe that do good unto them. Then Graves asked him more News, and ſaid, he need not be afraid; but he ſaid he was not afraid of him, or any Man in the Kingdom, for he had done nothing that he knew of to make him afraid; and he further ſaid, he would deal ingeniouſly with him, and tell him the truth of any thing he ſhould ask him. Then Graves asked, if he did not hear of a Party of Horſe, he anſwered he did more than hear of a Party, for he ſaw them the day before within 30 Miles of Holdenby: This made Graves tremble, as if he had been guilty of ſomething he had done or intended to do; otherwiſe why ſhould he afterwards, and the Scottiſh Lord his Confederate, have run away, when no Man intended to do them the leaſt hurt in the World. But the Scottiſh Lord went to London, and hath notoriouſly wronged the King, and the Party alſo that did ſecure his Majeſty's Perſon for the Peace and Safety of the Kingdom, as was declared at large before a thouſand Witneſſes; ſo that

An. 1647. that by it you may ſee the deſign of a cunning Scott, and what ſuch will do to get Mony and Honour, even againſt King and People.

Further for the Security of the King's Perſon, the Party marched towards Holdenby, and when they came to the Houſe, the Commiſſioners ſent one Captain Middleton to know of us what we came for, and what we would have, and who commanded? Anſwer was made him, All commanded. Then Captain Middleton replyed, If you have any thing to do here, the Commiſſioners would know what it is, and deſired they would ſend in to the Commiſſioners one or more to certifie what was the Intent of coming thither. Whereupon Cornet Joyce, by unanimous Conſent of the Party, went in to the Commiſſioners, and told them the truth of their coming thither, which was to ſecure his Majeſty's Perſon, and to protect them; there being a ſecret deſign, as they were informed, to convey or ſteal away the King, and to raiſe another Army to ſuppreſs this under his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax: Likewiſe he ſaid, he knew no other way to keep this Kingdom from Blood, or another War, but by the preſent Security of the King's Perſon, and that he may be no more miſs-led; and if he were, that the Kingdom was utterly undone for ever. If this be all, ſaid the Commiſſioners, it is well done.

But after it, Cornet Joyce ſpake more to the Commiſſioners, and told them, he did humbly conceive that there were ſome who did delay Juſtice, and ſeek only to diſband the Army, who were raiſed for the defence of the juſt Rights, Properties, and Liberties of the Subject, and the bringing of all unjuſt Men to condign Puniſhment, ſuch who did endeavour to ſubvert the fundamental Laws of the Kingdom: And he ſaid he did believe, that there were ſome who did endeavour to pull down King and People, and to ſet up themſelves; and who they were, the Commiſſioners and the World may judge and ſee by their Actions.

Whereupon he took his leave of the Commiſſioners for a while, leſt the King ſhould be diſturbed in his Bed-Chamber. Then Major General Browne went to the King, and did aſſure his Majeſty of the truth of the buſineſs, and deſired his Majeſty not to be troubled, for no hurt ſhould come unto him, for they were all civil Gentlemen; and his Majeſty ſhould find it ſo. After this was done, the Cornet went to the Commiſſioners again, and deſired them to give him Orders, he being willing to obey them, becauſe they were appointed by the Parliament to be there to that end. Then Major General Browne ſaid, Come again by and by, and we will give you Orders; in the mean time ſet your Guards, and place your Sentinels; which Direction of his we followed, and told him and the reſt of the Commiſſioners, if they would give us Orders, I would obey them, provided they were juſt, and for the Security of the King's Perſon. All this being done, it grew towards Noon. After that, Cornet Joyce deſired the Soldiers to mount to Horſe, and told them they ſhould all go to Quarters; at which word of Command all was done: And the ſaid Cornet was to give in a relation to the Commiſſioners of his coming, and the Grounds in writing, and did; but, becauſe of the multiplicity of buſineſs, could not give it in that form as otherwiſe he might, if he had time.

All this being done, all was quiet in the ſaid preſent Security of his Majeſty, until Tidings came that Graves was gone quite away; and thereupon it was ſuppoſed he was (and thought himſelf alſo) guilty, or elſe he would have ſtayed, but none could tell what was become of him; and ſome of his damming Blades did ſay and ſwear, they would fetch a Party; which Party could not be from the Army, but muſt be from ſome other place. And therefore to prevent Diſturbance and Blood, and for the Peace-ſake of the Kingdom, all declared unanimouſly, that they thought it moſt convenient to ſecure the King in another place, from Perſons as could cunningly or deſperately take him away contrary to Order; which was endeavoured very earneſtly (as we are informed) by ſome that are Enemies to the Peace of the Kingdom, and the Proſperity of the Army.

But another cauſe of Jealouſie was, not knowing the Reſolutions of thoſe who quartered Soldiers, and pretended for Ireland.

And further to give all ſatisfaction to the whole Kingdom, and to the real effecting of a buſineſs of ſuch Concernment, the Soldiers ſent Cornet Joyce to the Commiſſioners at ten of the Clock at Night, who deſired the Commiſſioners to let the King know he would ſpeak with him: Some of the Commiſſioners being unwilling, held the Cornet in diſcourſe about half an hour, until the King was aſleep in his Bed; yet notwithſtanding the ſaid Cornet could not be contented till he had ſpoken with the King, it being the only way and means to prevent Trouble for the future, and Blood that might come upon the face of the Kingdom; and therefore the ſaid Cornet judged it in his own Conſcience requiſite to ſpeak with him at that Opportunity, and therefore he offered the Commiſſioners to go with them with as much gentleneſs and tenderneſs as he could, to tell his Majeſty ſomething for his and his Kingdom's good; which was to take him from thence, there being a ſecret deſign to ſteal and convey away his Majeſty's Perſon, to ſide with ſome who pretend Juſtice, and deceive the Kingdom, and obſtruct the Relief of poor diſtreſſed Ireland; intending to break the Army in pieces now under the Command of Sir Thomas Fairfax our General, and to raiſe another Army to carry on their Deſign, and that all rational Men may ſee it by the Actions of ſome Men, (as Stappleton, Glynne, Greene, Erle, and others) who ſaid, It's now come to that, that they muſt ſink us, or we ſink them. But more was ſpoken by the ſaid Cornet, but this in brief. I was willing to let all paſs without giving a Relation, until I heard that the Scottiſh Lord had falſely told the Parliament of our Proceedings with the King, who ſaw or heard it not; for he was not within a Mile of the Court, when all theſe forementioned Paſſages were: For the Scottiſh Lord, as we are informed, reported that the King was taken away againſt his Will. For although the King told Cornet Joyce before the Commiſſioners, he was unwilling to go with us, yet he ſaid, That ſuch Reaſons might be produced that might prevail with him, and then he did proteſt nothing ſhould ſtay him, but he would go whether the Commiſſioners would yea or no. And Reaſons were given accordingly, which did prevail with his Majeſty to promiſe to go the next Morning, and he gave a Confirmation of his willingneſs, by ſaying to the Cornet, He ſhould be the more willing to go, if the Cornet would promiſe him ſome things which he ſhould propound. The Cornet ſaid he would, if they were juſt and warrantable in his Underſtanding, and deſired his Majeſty that he might hear the things. Then his Majeſty ſpake before the Commiſſioners, and ſaid, Mr. Joyce I have this to propound unto you. May it pleaſe your Majeſty I am willing to hear, ſaid Cornet Joyce, but am ſorry I have diſturbed you out of your Sleep; but the King ſaid, No matter, if you mean me no hurt; and then ſpake, viz. If you will promiſe me that I ſhall have no hurt, ſaying, you may take away my Life if you will, having the Sword in your hands. This Anſwer the Cornet made, That the Parliament had declared to preſerve his Majeſty's Perſon, and that they being the Parliament's Army ſhould not but endeavour the ſame; only they did deſire to ſecure him from being taken away, leſt he ſhould be at the Head of another Army, and ſo this Kingdom involved into danger. And all this was ſaid in anſwer to his Majeſty's firſt Propoſition.

The ſecond was, That he would not be forced to any thing againſt his Conſcience by us. He anſwered, That he would be unwilling to force any Man againſt his Conſcience, much leſs his Majeſty; and alſo ſaid, That he hoped he was ſenſible of thoſe that did endeavour to force Men againſt their Conſciences, and yet delayed to do Juſtice or ſettle the Kingdom, for which they were ſent; and did endeavour to diſband or break this Army in pieces, who ſought nothing but Juſtice, as will appear hereafter to all the World. Pray God it may, ſaid the King.

Obſerve, None will oppoſe this Army but guilty Conſciences, and they will fly in our Faces, or raiſe an Army againſt us. Saith the Marginal Note.

Thirdly, He demanded whether yea or no he ſhould have his Servants with him, and whether he ſhould be provided for like a Man in his Place; and that he had been courteouſly uſed by thoſe Commiſſioners that were with him, as ever he was by any. The Cornet anſwered, That he ſhould endeavour as far as in him lay, to ſhew him all juſt and due reſpect; and that he might be no otherwiſe attended on than before, the Cornet deſired the Commiſſioners of Parliament to go with the King, and diſcharge that Truſt impoſed on them, and the Soldiery ſhould aſſiſt them ſo long as they were juſt and honeſt. Then ſaid the King, I will willingly go along with you, if the Soldiery will confirm what you have promiſed me; the King believing I had ſaid nothing but what they would ſtand to. All this being ſpoken at ten a Clock or eleven at Night: And when the King had done propounding theſe Queſtions to the Cornet, he gave his word to be ready by

by ſix the next Morning, to hear if the Soldiers would confirm what I had promiſed, and if they would he would willingly go with us; for it was ſo bad an Air, that he could never be ſo well as he had been, and if he were once gone, he would be unwilling to come back again to that Place any more: Many other Reaſons he had which he gave not. According to his Promiſe he came in the Morning at ſix of the Clock, where he found all the Soldiers ready mounted to march with him; but before he would march, he deſired to ſpeak the ſame things to the Soldiers, which he ſpake over-night to the Cornet, to ſee if they would confirm what he ſaid and had promiſed; which they did with one conſent: And before the Soldiers the King was pleaſed to aſk the Cornet, what Commiſſion he had to ſecure his Perſon? Then ſaid the Cornet, If the Parliament had ever made an Order that the Army ſhould not have ſecured the King's Perſon, he ſhould not have dared to do what he had done; but he being informed his Majeſty was to be conveyed away, which, if not prevented, might have cauſed another War, and involved the whole Kingdom in Blood again; this was the only cauſe of our ſecuring the King's Perſon. This Anſwer did not ſatisfie the King; but he asked what Commiſſion I had for doing that I did? I told his Majeſty, the Soldiery of the Army; or elſe I ſhould not have dared to have done what I have; and conceiving it to be the only way to bring Peace to England, and Juſtice with Mercy, which is the thing which all honeſt Men will deſire, and none will hinder but ſome guilty Conſciences, who by their Will ſeek to deſtroy both King and People, to ſet up themſelves. Yet the King was not ſatisfied with this, but asked, Whether I had nothing in Writing from Sir Thomas Fairfax our General, to do what I did? The Cornet deſired the King he would not aſk him ſuch Queſtions, for he did conceive he had ſufficiently anſwered him before. Then ſaid the King, I pray Mr. Joyce deal ingenuouſly with me, and tell me what Commiſſion you have? The Cornet's Anſwer was, Here is my Commiſſion. Where, ſaid the King? He anſwered, Here. His Majeſty again asked, Where? He anſwered, Behind me; pointing to the Soldiers that were mounted; and deſired his Majeſty that that might ſatisfie him. Whereupon the King ſmiled, and ſaid, It is as fair a Commiſſion, and as well written as he had ſeen a Commiſſion written in his life; a Company of handſom proper Gentlemen as he had ſeen a great while. But what if I ſhou'd refuſe yet to go with you, I hope you would not force me? I am your King, and you ought not to lay violent hands on your King; for I acknowledge none to be above me here, but God. Then ſaid Mr. Joyce, Our Deſires are not to force your Majeſty, but have humbly intreated your Majeſty to go with us, and not only your ſelf but the Commiſſioners, and to this end, that the Commiſſioners might diſcharge that Truſt impoſed on them as honeſt Members of Parliament. Then ſpake one of the Commiſſioners of Parliament, and ſhewed us a Paper; what was therein we ſaw not. They all ſpake to us in order, the laſt that ſpake, as I remember was Major General Browne, who ſaid the Commiſſioners had an Order of Parliament to look to the King at Holdenby; and if he had Strength we ſhould have had his Life, before we ſhould have brought the King away. Indeed, ſaid the Cornet, you ſpeak like a faithful and gallant Man; but he knew well enough he had not Strength, and therefore he ſpake ſo boldly. Major General Browne ſaid further, But ſince it is ſo, I muſt do what you will have me, being not able to reſiſt you. Then ſpake Cornet Joyce further, We came not to have the Blood of any Man, but for Peace; and did hope ſhould manifeſt it to all the World, for he ſought Peace with all Men as much as in him lieth; and further ſaid, They were Servants to the Parliament and Kingdom, and had ſerved them faithfully ever ſince the beginning of this War, or elſe more Heads had been cut off before this time: And if the Soldiers had been ordered not to ſecure his Majeſty, they would not have dared to have done it, becauſe they were Servants to the State, as well as the Commiſſioners; they did what they did to keep the Kingdom from Blood and a ſecond War, which if not prevented might unhappily have come upon us ſuddenly; as you may ſee is the Endeavour of ſome Men, who pretend to be the King's and Kingdom's beſt Friends. After this the King was going away, but turned and ſaid, Now, Gentlemen, for the place you intend to have me to? Mr. Joyce anſwered, If it pleaſe your Majeſty, to Oxford.

The King replyed, That is no good Air.

Mr. Joyce ſaid, Then to Cambridge.

The King did not like that, but ſaid he liked New-market; it was an Air that did very well agree with him.

And it was granted by Mr. Joyce he ſhould go thither.

Then the King asked Mr. Joyce, how far he intended to ride that Night?

And Mr. Joyce anſwered, As far as your Majeſty can conveniently ride.

The King ſmiling, ſaid, I can ride as far as you, or any Man there. But he concluded to talk of that, and his Accommodation, privately; and ſo he courteouſly took his leave of the Company, and was going, and one whiſpered him, and he turned back, and heard the Commiſſioners ſpeak to the Company thus in order. Firſt my Lord Mountague ſpake, and ſaid, Gentlemen, we are intruſted by both Houſes, (ſhewing in his hand a Paper, the Authority they had) and deſire to know, whether all the Party do agree to what Mr. Joyce hath ſaid?

And they cryed, All, All.

And he having ſpoke low, Sir John Cooke ſeconded him with a loud Voice, and added, That as the Parliament had intruſted them, had he but Forces to withſtand the Party, he would have done it with his Life. And Mr. Crew ſaid the ſame.

And Major Brown ſpake laſt to the ſame purpoſe, but added ſomething more than the reſt: Saying, it was not the firſt time that he had been at the Head of a Party, and that they knew not the Law; and he durſt affirm that ſcarce two in the Company, although they cryed All, All, knew what the Gentleman had delivered to the King. And therefore he ſaid with a loud Voice; all that are willing the King ſhall ſtay with us, the Commiſſioners of Parliament, let them ſpeak. And all the Party cryed, None, none. Then ſaid he, I have done. Only the Souldiers ſaid, We underſtand well enough what we do. Now let all the World judge what is done, and who is in fault, and who they are that ſeek War, and no Peace nor Juſtice.

One Word more, Fellow-Commoners. Dear Friends and Fellow-Commoners, We the Soldiery under his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax, do deſire to ſpeak one Word to you all, that ſo you may ſee and know our very Hearts, ſo far as we know them our ſelves: And that our earneſt Deſires are for Peace in this our native Land and Kingdom, and being more ſenſible than many thouſands are, how deſtructive another War will be, if not our utter Ruin and Undoing. The Words we ſhall ſpeak to you are, To prevent War, and to find out thoſe that have of late ſent that Scottiſh Lord, who went from Holdenby to London, and from thence into France; and another Scotch Lord into Scotland, all this to bring another Army into England; and we ſhall be able to make it appear to you hereafter, who are the chief Actors therein.

Dear Friends and Fellow-Commoners, let us not be like to thoſe who have ſet their Hands to the Plough and look back; but let it appear to all the World we are againſt another War, and for Peace, Mercy, and Juſtice, without delay. Now look about you, and be not deluded any longer, leſt the Scott ſell the King for more Money, and others oppreſs the Kingdom, and put the Kingdom's Treaſure into their own Pockets, or ſend it out of our Kingdom, as if they were preparing to go after, for fear they ſhould be found out. This we ſpeak, that ſo you may have a care of this glorious Kingdom; your Shipping being now in thoſe Mens Hands who have done you moſt wrong, and if not looked after by you, may ſuddenly let in a foreign Enemy to over-run you all, and raviſh your Wives, and roaſt your Children alive, as thoſe bloody-minded Men in Ireland have done; and this will be our caſe if you awake not ſuddenly. I have done, a word to the wiſe is ſufficient, and reſt, Yours and the Kingdom's Faithful Servant 'till Death, for England's Liberty againſt Tyranny, &c.

An. 1647.

To the Right Honourable, Excellent, Worthy, and Pious Sir Thomas Fairfax, General over thoſe Forces raiſed in behalf of the Countries Rights and Liberties.

The Petition of the well-affected in the County of Eſſex.

Humbly Sheweth,

THAT your Petitioners being not a little ſenſible of thoſe growing Evils, which are like to over-ſpread this Kingdom, unleſs the Mercy of God prevent (which after ſo much exhauſting our Eſtates, loſs of Lives, Engagements of our Perſons to regain this poor Nation to an Enjoyment of its Rights and Liberties) and yet like to flow upon us by thoſe which have been our open Enemies, or elſe a Party of pretended Friends, inſomuch that your poor Petitioners, and all the well-affected in the Country, have juſt cauſe to fear; that after we have, by the bleſſing of the Almighty upon this Army, been reſcued from many oppreſſions which lay heavy upon us, We are now like to be Vaſſallaged and enſlaved in the Norman Laws, and Prerogative Clutches of an Ambitious Party in the Nation.

And likewiſe taking into Conſideration, That there is no Remora to ſtop the proceedings of violent men againſt us, but this preſent Army under your Honourable Conduct, whoſe conſtant Fidelity and faithful Reſolutions, together with the bleſſing from above, have hitherto abaſhed the Enemies of our Peace and Safety, and gained the favour of all thoſe who are the true Friends to a free Nation.

Theſe things, Right Honourable, ſinking deep into our ſpirits, we thought it meet and convenient to repreſent our thoughts unto you; And ſo much the rather, in regard the Petitions of the free-born Nation, have been rejected by thoſe which we have intruſted for the receiving them, yea, Ordered to be burnt by the Hands of the Common Hangman; inſomuch that we have no where elſe to appeal but unto your Excellency, from whom, under God, we expect ſome redreſs of our Miſeries. Our humble Deſires to your Excellency therefore are,

Firſt, That before you Diſband the Army, you would be pleaſed to conſider the ſad Condition which is like to befal the free-born People of England, and likewiſe our preſent Vaſſallage we groan under.

Secondly, That you would be pleaſed to mediate with the Parliament in our behalf, and to uſe all ſuch means which you in your Honourable Wiſdom ſhall think convenient, to ſettle Affairs in a fair and peaceable way, ſo that all that Renown which Providence hath hitherto Crowned your endeavours withal, may not now at laſt be blaſted with the Intentions and crafty Machinations of yours and the Kingdoms Enemies.

Thirdly, That your Excellency would be pleaſed in no caſe to admit of Diſbanding, till ſuch time as you ſee theſe and the Kingdom's juſt and legal Requeſts imbraced. If thus, Right Honourable, God ſhall draw forth your heart to act for us, we ſhall ſhall for ever engage our ſelves your Servants in the Vindication of your juſt proceedings, and ever pray for your Honourable Safety.

This Petition was preſented to his Excellency at the Rendezvous of the Army at Triplo-Heath near Royſton, with the ſubſcription of above a thouſand of the Inhabitants.

CHAP. XV.

Proceedings in Parliament from June 3. 1647. to July 5.

Munday, June 7. 1647.

THE Letter aforeſaid, from his Excellency, was this Day read again and debated in both Houſes (informing briefly) that

The General's Letter in brief concerning the King's coming to the Army.

‘On Saturday, being June the 5*th*. at a Rendezvous near Newmarket, with intent to go and Quarter about Cambridge, he got knowledge, that the Soldiers at Holmby had, on Friday, brought His Majeſty thence by conſent; and that He lay at Hinching-Brook, near Huntington, at the Houſe of Colonel Montague (a Member of the Houſe of Commons, and of the Army.) The Night following lay there alſo, and would be at Newmarket the next Day. And that the ground of the Soldiers removing His Majeſty was, from an apprehenſion of Forces gathering to fall upon them, and force the King out of their hands; and fearing their want of Strength to keep him (not knowing Colonel Whalley was coming towards the King with his Regiment) they ſecured the King. The General ſent Colonel Whalley towards Huntington, with order, that where-ever he met His Majeſty and the Commiſſioners, to deſire them to come no further that way, but rather to return, and ſuffer him to guard them back to Holmby. After which, for prevention of Danger, two Regiments more were ſent towards Evening, to reinforce Colonel Whalley. Colonel Whalley certified the General, That His Majeſty was come within four Miles of Cambridge, and not willing to come to Holmby, Quarter was taken up for him at Sir John Cutt's Houſe at Childerſey: Upon this notice, the General ſent Sir Hardreſs Waller, and Colonel Lambert, to deſire the Commiſſioners to think of returning to Holmby; but the Commiſſioners refuſed to act in diſpoſing the King. This being the truth, the General profeſſes for himſelf, and is confident for the Officers about him, and the body of the Army, that this remove was without their deſire or privity.

The Commiſſioners refuſe to act in diſpoſing the King.

‘The King not willing to go back, and the Commiſſioners unwilling to meddle, a Guard of truſty Men are put about His Majeſty, under the Command of Colonel Whalley, for which the General will be reſponſible, that they ſhall ſecure His Majeſty's Perſon from danger, and prevent any miſchief by a new War, and proteſts it is his deſire, and he finds the ſame in the Army, viz. to ſtudy to ſettle a firm Peace, and the Liberties of the People cleared and ſecured, according to the many Declarations by which they were engaged in the late War: And the Parliaments ſpeedy and effectual application to theſe, would conduce to a chearful unanimous Diſbanding; and whatever may be ſuggeſted or ſuſpected, yet he aſſures, the ſence of the Army is clear from oppoſing Presbitery, or to have the Independent Government ſet up, or to hold a Licentiouſneſs in Religion, or to advance any particular Party or Intereſt, but to leave all ſuch to the Wiſdom of the Parliament.

To ſecure the King to prevent a new War.

That the Army is clear from ſiding with any Party, Presbiterian or Independent.

The Commons debated this buſineſs of the Army, and at laſt agreed, that new Commiſſioners ſhould be ſent down to the Army, to acquaint them what the Houſes had done further, in ſatisfaction of their Grievances, and to perſwade them to a compliance with the Orders of Parliament; and Inſtructions were ordered to be drawn up to this purpoſe: In all which the Lords alſo concurred, and the Commiſſioners were diſpatched away this Afternoon. The Commiſſioners are theſe, viz. the Earl of Nottingham, Lord Delaware,

New Commiſſioners ſent to the Army.

Sir

An. 1647.

Sir Henry Vane, Junior, Field Marſhal General Skippon, Mr. Scowen, Mr. Povey.

Mr. Marſhal, and Mr. Carryll are diſcharged of their Attendance upon His Majeſty and Commiſſioners.

A Faſt appointed for both Houſes only.

Some Debate there was about a Faſt for the Members of Parliament only; and accordingly it was ordered by the Commons, that their Houſe ſet apart next Wedneſday for a Day of Humiliation, That God would be pleaſed to give them one Heart and one Mind in carrying on the great Work of the Lord: And Mr. Marſhal, Mr. Strong, and Mr. Whitaker, are appointed to Pray and Preach with them in their own Houſe. The Lords likewiſe joined with the Commons in obſerving this Faſt, and appointed other Miniſters to preach before their Lordſhips in their Houſe.

A Petition from the City, delivered by Sheriff Edmunds, which follows at large.

June 8. 1647. A Petition from the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council of London was brought down to the Houſe of Commons this Day; and the Houſe being informed thereof, and that the Sheriffs of the City of London, divers Aldermen, and other Citizens of London, were at the Doors, they were called in, and Sheriff Edmunds acquainted the Houſe, that they were commanded by the Lord-Mayor, Court of Aldermen, and Common-Council to deliver a Petition to the Houſe; the which, the Petitioners being withdrawn, was read, and likewiſe a printed Ordinance annexed of Jan. 17. 1645. for the raiſing of Horſe for the defence of the City of London, and for ſearching and apprehending of Papiſts, and other ill-affected Perſons. The Petition is as follows, viz.

To the Honourable the Houſe of Commons aſſembled in High Court of Parliament.

The humble Petition of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London in Common-Council aſſembled.

Humbly Sheweth,

June 8. 1647. A Petition from the City for the raiſing of Horſe to prevent ſhedding of Blood.

THat as your Petitioners acknowledge the Parliament of England to be the ſupreme Judicature of the Kingdom, from whom the Subjects of this Nation have found ſhelter in Danger, and relief in Diſtreſs; ſo now your Petitioners having (with the whole Kingdom) a great ſhare and intereſt in theſe Priviledges, do therefore at this time humbly, yet earneſtly, preſent theſe their important deſires to this Honourable Houſe.

Firſt, That all honourable ways and means may be uſed to prevent the further effuſion and ſhedding of Chriſtian Blood; and to that end, that all juſt ſatiſfaction may be given to the Army, and all other Soldiers who have adventured their Lives for the defence of this Parliament and Kingdom. That though the condition of your Affairs do not enable you to give full ſatiſfaction at preſent, yet that their Accounts may be adjuſted and put into a certain way of Payment, to the quieting of many thouſand diſcontented Perſons, which we humbly conceive will be much to the Glory of God, the Honour of the Parliament, and Quiet of the Kingdom.

Secondly, That according to our Allegiance, the Covenant and Agreement of both Nations, His Majeſty's Royal Perſon may be preſerved, and ſo diſpoſed of, that the Parliament of both Kingdoms may have free acceſs unto him, that thereby a right Underſtanding may be obtained between them: And ſo both this Church and Kingdom, after all our Heavy Sorrows and Sufferings, may enjoy the bleſſing of a well-grounded and long deſired Peace, whereby this Kingdom may be the better enabled to ſend ſpeedy relief and help to miſerable bleeding Ireland.

Thirdly, That for the better defence and ſecurity of the Parliament and City in theſe tumultuous and troubleſome Times, this Honourable Houſe will be pleaſed to renew ſo much of an Ordinance of Parliament of the 19th of January 1645. as concerneth the raiſing, maintaining, and ordering of Horſes, and power of making Searches (a Copy whereof is hereunto annexed) whereby the Committee of the Militia of London, and Pariſhes mentioned in the Weekly Bills of Mortality, may be the better enabled to ſuppreſs all tumultuous Aſſemblies, and to prevent any dangers that may happen to the Parliament and City.

And as this City, from the beginning of theſe Troubles, have faithfully adhered to the Parliament, ſo we are reſolved by the Bleſſing of God, never to deſert the ſame, but with the utmoſt of our Lives and Eſtates will ſtand and fall, live and die with the Parliament of England, according to our Covenant.

And the Petitioners ſhall pray, &c.

Ordinance to that effect.

The Houſe debated this Petition, and voted, That an Ordinance be brought in on Thurſday Morning next, according to the deſires of the Petitioners, and it is referred to Mr. Recorder, Mr. Grimſtone, Mr. Gott, and Mr. Hill, or any two of them, to prepare and bring in this Ordinance accordingly; and care of the buſineſs is more particularly referred to Mr. Gott. The Petitioners were again called in, and Mr. Speaker, by the command of the Houſe, expreſſed to them the true ſenſe that Houſe had of their conſtant good Affections for this Parliament, and that no alteration whatſoever can work any change in their Duty and Love; for which he is to give them the hearrieſt Thanks from this Houſe.

Thanks returned to the City, for ſending a good Guard to the Parliament.

That he was further commanded to take notice of the Lord-Mayor's, and the Committee of Militia's, ready compliance with the Order of that Houſe in ſo ſeaſonable ſending down a very good Guard, for which he was likewiſe to return Thanks to the Lord-Mayor, and the Committee of the Militia, who are very ſenſible of the tumultuous and diſtempered Humours that are now ſtirred; and therefore doubts not but of themſelves (to whom they do refer it) they will take care that ſuch convenient Guards may be appointed to attend the Houſes, as may preſerve them from any diſturbance or interruption in their Counſels: As to the requeſt of the Petitioners, touching an Ordinance to the Purpoſes therein mentioned, they have done ſomething in it, and have put it into a way for further conſideration at their meeting.

This Day the Declaration paſſed both Houſes for making void the former Declaration of the 30th. of March, concerning the Army, which take at large as follows.

June 10. 1647. This Morning at a Council of War it was judged inconvenient, and ſcarce poſſible, to draw to morrow early enough to diſpatch any thing; therefore it is appointed on Thurſday Morning at Nine of the Clock; and in regard of His Majeſty's going to Newmarket; it was thought fit by the Council of War, that the place of Rendezvous might be altered from Newmarket-Heath to Triploe-Heath, five Miles from Cambridge. And this in brief was the ſubſtance of the Intelligence.

Paſſages between the King, the General, and his Officers.

There came Letters alſo this Day to the Houſe, from the Commiſſioners with the King; and alſo a Narrative of the Paſſages betwixt His Majeſty and his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax, and the Commiſſioners, June 7. at Childerley; the ſum whereof briefly thus, viz.

THe General, Lieutenant General Cromwel, Commiſſary General Ireton, Lieutenant General Hammond, and divers other Officers of the Army, went to the Lady Cuts's Houſe (according to His Majeſty's deſire, being June 7.) When they came there the King went into the Garden, and the General and his Officers and Commiſſioners, went together, and conferred upon the whole carriage of the buſineſs. The Commiſſioners ſeem'd to be much unſatisfied; Whereupon the King coming up again, the General and the Commiſſioners came to him, and alſo Cornet Joyce (who was the Man that managed that Action of ſecuring the King,) was called before them all; the King charged them all, ſaying, 'That Joyce ſaid he had the Commiſſion of 'the whole Army for what he did, and by conſequence had the General's; 'he being the principal part of the Army. The Cornet replied, and did avow, 'That he told His Majeſty that he had not the General's Commiſſion, 'when the King did particularly demand of him: Whereupon the King publickly ſaid to the whole Company, 'That it was true indeed, he did ſay ſo; 'and it was likewiſe true, all the Gentlemen that were mounted on Horſeback did cry out, giving their approbation to what he had ſaid; but, ſaith 'the King, I was notwithſtanding perſwaded, that he could not venture to 'attempt ſuch a thing as to bring me away, for it was Treaſon, but that 'he had the countenance of greater Perſons. Then it was much preſſed by ſome of the Commiſſioners againſt Cornet Joyce, that he deſerv'd to loſe his Head for what he had done in bringing the King and the Commiſſioners away, without their conſent. Whereupon Cornet Joyce replied, 'May it 'pleaſe your Majeſty, As to the Armies warranting my Proceedings, let it 'be drawn to a Rendezvous, let me appear there before them, and let the 'Queſtion be put, whether they approve of my Action in removing His 'Majeſty from Holmby, if three or four Parts of the Army do not approve 'what I have ſaid, I will be content to be hanged at the Head of the Army. He further added, 'That the King gave His conſent to come, and ſaid, 'He would go whether the Commiſſioners would or no. Yea, ſaid the King and the Commiſſioners, 'You told us, that we ſhould go, and it was 'in vain for us not to conſent. But, ſaid the King, (Joyce, though it be 'great Treaſon in what you have done) yet I will pardon it now I am 'come: I had the promiſe of thoſe Gentlemen to be conveyed to Newmarket, and therefore I expect to go to Morrow to Newmarket. Whereupon, after ſome other Diſcourſe, the General promiſed he ſhould go. Upon which, His Majeſty prepared for Newmarket, and the General went to Cambridge: And accordingly after His Excellency came back to Cambridge, he ſent Colonel Whalley (after ſome debate with the Officers) to guard His Majeſty and the Commiſſioners to Newmarket; and accordingly, His Majeſty (June 8.) went from Childerley, but not through Cambridge, but by Trumpington.

pington. For ſome reaſons there was much preparations for His Majeſty, by ſtrewing the Streets, cuting down of Boughs, and preparing for Bonfires.

The Rendezvous of the Army is appointed to be this Day at Triploe-Heath, and not at Newmarket-Heath, by reaſon of the King's being there.

The Faſt kept.

Wedneſday June 9. 1647. This Day both the Lords and Commons kept a ſolemn Faſt in their Houſes, and appointed Mr. Arrow-Smith, Mr. Palmer, Mr. Vines, and Mr. Herle, to Pray and Preach in the Houſe of Peers, and Mr. Marſhal, Mr. Whitaker, and Mr. Strong, in the Houſe of Commons.

Their Lordſhips choſe a Committee of Lords to conſider of all the Grievances of this Kingdom, and preſent them to the Houſe.

A Conference for Arrears to Officers in the Earl of Eſſex's Time.

The Lords ordered to deſire a Conference with the Commons, to conſider of a way for the payment of ſuch Officers as have ſerved the Parliament formerly, when the Earl of Eſſex was General; and that have ſince freely and willingly disbanded, upon the Orders of the Houſe, without care taken for their Arrears; for want whereof divers Officers have periſhed, not having ſufficient ſubſiſtance.

Country Committees.

Their Lordſhips alſo ordered to put the Commons in mind of a former Meſſage for the putting down of Country Committees.

Self-denying Ordinance maintained.

The Houſe alſo this Day reaſſumed the Debate of the Self-denying Ordinance, and paſſed ſeveral Votes, to this purpoſe, viz.

That Firſt, ſuch Members as having any Office, Place, or Sequeſtration granted to them by one or both Houſes of Parliament, to be void.

Self-denying Members to refund.

Secondly, That the benefit ſuch Members have received, the ſame being the firſt Vote for this Self-denying Ordinance be paid into the Chamber of London, and diſpoſed as both Houſes ſhall appoint, for the uſe of the Common-wealth.

That ſuch Members be referred to the Committee of Accounts, to account for what benefit they have received.

That the Lands and other Eſtates of all Members of the Houſe, be liable to the Law for payment of Debts.

That all Petitions and Informations that ſhall be preferred againſt Members of the Houſe, for any cauſe whatſoever, be ready on Tueſday next.

They to receive no Reparation till Publick Debts be ſatisfied.

That no Member ſhall hereafter receive any reparation for Damages by theſe Times, till the publick Debts of the Kingdom be ſatisfied.

Another Letter of the General's, of His Majeſty's going to Newmarket, which is the ſame in effect as before.

This Day another Letter from his Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax, dated from Cambridge, June 8. was read, the purport is as follows, viz.

Mr. Speaker,

IN my laſt I promiſed to ſend you by the next, an Account of the Proceedings and Reſolutions of the Army at the late Rendezvous. I have ſent you the ſame in two Papers, unanimouſly agreed upon there by both Officers and Soldiers. I find in one of them divers things with your later Proceedings, ſince the reſolution of Disbanding, may have given ſatisfaction unto. But the Army having then no knowledge thereof, it was thus paſſed, and delivered to me, and I cannot but ſend it to them: You may ſee what they then did remain unſatisfied in. Underſtanding that His Majeſty, and your Commiſſioners were much ſtreitened and diſcommoded in the Houſe at Childerſley, I went thither Yeſterday to adviſe with your Commiſſioners about the diſpoſal of His Majeſty, for more conveniency to himſelf and them, than that Place did afford: The Commiſſioners were pleaſed wholly to refuſe giving of any Advice or Opinion at all in the buſineſs; and therefore the King declaring His Reſolution not to go back to Holmby, unleſs he were forced; yet complaining much of the inconveniency he ſuffered where he was, and preſſing for a remove to Newmarket, and your Commiſſioners not judging it inconvenient for him to be there, I ordered Colonel Whalley this Day to attend His Majeſty and the Commiſſioners thither with a truſty and ſufficient Guard of two Regiments of Horſe, which accordingly was this Day done, and His Majeſty, with the Commiſſioners, gone to Newmarket, but not through Cambridge. This buſineſs taking up the whole time Yeſterday, and it being neceſſary His Majeſty ſhould be diſpoſed of before the place of Rendezvous could well be reſolved on, this Morning, at a Council of War, it was judged inconvenient, and ſcarce poſſible to draw to a Rendezvous to Morrow, early enough to diſpatch any thing; therefore it is appointed on Thurſday Morning at Nine of the Clock; and in regard of His Majeſty's going to Newmarket, it was thought fit by the Council of War, that the place of Rendezvous might be altered from Newmarket Heath to Triploe-Heath, five Miles from this Town. I ſhall take care that your Commiſſioners, if they come to Newmarket, may have notice of this alteration from the former appointment. I remain

The General's Letter to the Lord-Mayor.

To the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council of the City of London.

Right Honourable and Worthy Friends,

Having by our Letters, and other Addreſſes, preſented by our General to the Honourable Houſe of Commons, endeavoured to give ſatisfaction of the clearneſs of our juſt Demands: And alſo in Papers publiſhed by us, remonſtrated the Grounds of our Proceedings in proſecution whereof: All which having been expoſed to publick view, we are confident have come to your hands, and at leaſt received a Charitable Conſtruction from you: The ſum of all which our Deſires, as Soldiers, are no other, than a deſire of ſatisfaction to our Demands, as Soldiers; and reparation upon thoſe who have, to the utmoſt, improved all opportunities and advantages, by falſe Suggeſtions, Miſrepreſentations, and otherwiſe, for the deſtruction of this Army, with a perpetual blot of Ignominy upon it, which we ſhould not value, if it ſingly concerned our own Particulars, being ready to deny our ſelves in this, as we have done in other Caſes for the Kingdoms good; but under this pretence finding no leſs involved in it, than the overthrow of the Priviledges both of Paliament and People, wherein rather than they ſhall fail in their Deſigns, or we not receive in the Eyes of all good Men what is juſt, endeavoureth to engage the Kingdom in a new War, and this ſingly, by thoſe who when the truth of theſe things ſhall be made to appear, will be found the Authors of theſe Evils that are feared, as having no other way to protect themſelves from Queſtion and Puniſhment, but by putting the Kingdom into Blood, under pretences of the Honour of, and their Love to the Parliament; as if that were dearer to them than us; or as if they had given greater Proof of their Faithfulneſs to it than we. But we perceive, that under theſe Veils and Pretences they ſeek to intereſt their deſign in the City of London, as if that City ought to make good their Miſcarriages, and ſhould prefer a few ſelf-ſeeking Men before the welfare of the Publick; and indeed we have found theſe Men ſo active to accompliſh their Deſigns, and to have ſuch apt Inſtruments for their turn in that City, that we have cauſe to ſuſpect they may engage many therein, upon Miſtakes, which are eaſily ſwallowed in times of ſuch prejudice againſt them, that have given (we may ſpeak it without Vanity) the moſt publick Teſtimony of their good Affections to the Publick, and to that City in particular.

For the thing we inſiſt upon as Engliſhmen, and ſurely our being Soldiers hath not ſtript us of that Intereſt, although our malicious Enemies would have it ſo: We deſire a Settlement of the Peace of the Kingdom, and of the Liberties of the Subject, according to the Votes and Declarations of Parliament, which, before we took up Arms, were (by the Parliament) uſed as Arguments and Inducements to invite us, and divers of our dear Friends out; ſome of which have loſt their Lives in this War; which being by God's Bleſſing finiſhed, we think we have as much right to demand, and deſire to ſee a happy Settlement, as we have to our Money, and the other common Intereſt of Soldiers, which we have inſiſted upon. We find alſo the ingenious and honeſt People in almoſt all the Parts of the Kingdom where we come full of the ſence of Ruine and Miſery, if the Army ſhould be diſbanded, before the Peace of the Kingdom, and thoſe other things before-mentioned have a full and perfect Settlement.

We have ſaid before, and profeſs it now, We deſire no alteration of the Civil Government.

We deſire not to intermeddle with, or in the leaſt to interrupt the ſettling of the Presbyterial Government. Nor do we ſeek to open a way to licentious Liberty, under pretence of obtaining eaſe for tender Conſciences. We profeſs as ever in theſe things, when the State have once made a Settlement, we have nothing to ſay but to ſubmit or ſuffer; only we could wiſh, that every good Citizen, and every Man that walks peaceably in a blameleſs Converſateon, and is beneficial to the Commonwealth, may have Liberty and Encouragement; it being according to the juſt Policy of all States, even to Juſtice it ſelf.

Theſe, in brief, are our Deſires, and the things for which we ſtand, beyond which we ſhall not go; and for the obtaining of theſe things we are drawing near your City; profeſſing ſincerely from our Hearts, we intend not evil towards you, declaring with all Confidence and Aſſurance, that if you appear not againſt us in theſe our juſt deſires, to aſſiſt that wicked Party, that would embroil us and the Kingdom, nor we, nor our Soldiers ſhall give you the leaſt Offence: We come not to do any act to prejudice the being of Parliaments, or to the hurt of this, in order to the preſent Settlement of the Kingdom; We ſeek the good of all, and we ſhall here wait or remove to a farther diſtance, there to abide, if once we be aſſured that a ſpeedy ſettlement of things be in hand, until they be accompliſhed; which done, we ſhall be moſt ready, either all of us, or ſo many of the Army as the Parliament ſhall think fit, to Disband, or go for Ireland; and although you may ſuppoſe that a rich City may ſeem an inticing Bait to poor hungry Soldiers to venture far to gain the Wealth thereof, yet, if not provoked by you, we do profeſs rather than any ſuch evil ſhould fall out, the Soldiers ſhall make their way through our Blood to effect it; and we can ſay this for moſt of them, for your better aſſurance, that they ſo little value their Pay, in compariſon of higher Concernments to a publick Good, that rather than they will be unrighted in the matter of their Honeſty and Integrity, which hath ſuffered by the Men they aim at, and deſire Juſtice upon, or want the ſettlement of the Kingdom's Peace, and theirs, with their Fellow Subjects Liberties, they will loſe all; which may be a ſtrong aſſurance to you, that it's not your Wealth they ſeek, but the things tending in common to your and their Welfare, that they may attain: You ſhall do like Fellow-Subjects and Brethren, if that you ſollicite the Parliament for them on their behalf.

If after all this, you, or a conſiderable part of you, be ſeduced to take up Arms in oppoſition to, or hindrance of theſe our juſt Undertakings, we hope, by this Brotherly Premonition, to the ſincerity whereof we call God to Witneſs, we have freed our ſelves from all that ruin which may befal that great and populous City, having thereby waſhed our hands thereof. We reſt,

Your affectionate Friends to ſerve you,

From the Army we had further Intelligence, by Letters, to this purpoſe, viz.

The Army kept a Faſt at Cambridge.

Wedneſday laſt there was a Faſt kept in St. Mary's in Cambridge, to deſire a Bleſſing upon the preſent Affairs of the Kingdom. There preached before his Excellency Dr. Hill, Mr. Saltmarſh, Mr. Peters, and Mr. Seaman; Providence ſo ordered it, that they all pitched upon one point, The Reconciliation of things in Love: They performed their Duties with much Zeal and Affection. The Commiſſioners came that Evening to Cambridge, the General went and waited on them; they communicated to him and his Officers the Votes of both Houſes, deſiring his Advice for the communicating of them to the Army.

The Army drawing to a Rendezvous.

The Votes read unto them.

Select Officers return Anſwer.

Thurſday Morning the General and his Officers met, and agreed upon the Way; and accordingly that Afternoon, the Army being drawn up to a Rendezvous, upon a plain Ground within Four Miles of Royſton, the Commiſſioners and the General firſt riding round the Army, which indeed was a very gallant Body both of Horſe and Foot; yet there were Five Regiments of Foot, and 1400 Horſe abſent: They began firſt with the General's Regiment of Horſe, to whom the Votes were read: Then Major General Skippon made a ſhort Speech to the Regiment, moving, that the Votes might take a deep Impreſſion upon them for the advantage of the Kingdom. Then an Officer of the Regiment returned this Anſwer, ‘That the ‘Regiment did deſire, that there might be an Anſwer returned, after ‘the peruſal of the Votes, by ſome ſelect Officers and Agitators, ‘whom the Regiment had choſen; and that it was the Motion of ‘the Regiment.

The Officers deſired the General and the Commiſſioners to give leave to aſk the whole Regiment, if this were their Anſwer? To which the whole Regiment cried, All, All.

A Queſtion propoſed.

Then he put the Queſtion, That if any Man were of a contrary Mind, they ſhould ſay No? and not one Man gave his No: The Agitators, on the behalf of the Soldiers, preſs'd to have the Queſtion put, Whether that Regiment did acquieſce, and were ſatisfied with the Votes? But in regard the other way was the more orderly, and they might after peruſal proceed more deliberately, the Queſtion was laid aſide; and indeed had it been put, it would not have received one Voice in the Affirmative, ſuch was the unanimity of the Officers and Soldiers in that Regiment. And this brief Account may ſerve for the ſeveral Regiments, Horſe, Foot, and Dragoons this Day at the Rendezvous. I forgot to tell you, That after the Commiſſioners had done reading the Votes, and ſpeaking to each Regiment, and received their Anſwer, the Regiment cried out, Juſtice, Juſtice.

Juſtice, Juſtice.

Officers and Soldiers who withdrew, refuſed to be accepted again.

One Paſſage there was amongſt the Dragoons, Some of the Officers who had deſerted the Army, made a pretence to go for Ireland, came to the Regiment, deſiring to be received again; but the Regiment adviſed them to withdraw from off the Field, otherwiſe they would diſgrace them in the face of the whole Army.

This Night the Head-Quarters are at Royſton.

Eſſex Petition not to disband till, &c.

This Day in the Field there was a Petition delivered to the General, in the Name of many well-affected People in the County of Eſſex, which you may ſee at large in June Five and Six. In brief, the purport is, ‘That in regard of the preſent unſettled Condition ‘of the Kingdom, and the deſign of many to deprive the Subject of ‘their Liberty, they would not conſent to the Diſbanding of the ‘Army, nor any part thereof, till there were a general Settlement of ‘things in the Kingdom.

22 Caroli I.

Saturday, June 12. 1647. Upon the Rumour of the Armies near approach to the City, the Militia of London ordered all the Trained-Bands to be raiſed on pain of Death; but upon a further Underſtanding they were all diſmiſſed again, only ſtrong Guards ſet about the Line.

On pain of Death Trained-Bands to their Arms.

An Order likewiſe was for all within the City to ſhut up their Shops, which ſome did for a time, but opened them again, and all things continued very peaceably in the City. And this Day the Common-Council of London came to a Reſolution to ſend a Letter to the General and Officers of the Army in anſwer to theirs, with the Houſes approbation; and alſo to ſend down ſome of their Members to treat with the General and Officers, that a right Underſtanding, and a fair Correſpondence may be between the City and the Army.

A Committee ſent from the City to the Army for a right underſtanding.

The Names of thoſe ſent to the Army from the City, are included in the Order of the Common-Council, which follows the Letter now to be mentioned, viz.

To His Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax, Knight, General of the Forces raiſed by the Parliament, and the reſt of the Worthy Commanders.

Right Honourable and Worthy Commanders,

The Anſwer of the Lord-Mayor &c. to the General, &c. June 12.1647.

Y*Our Letter dated at* Royſton, the 10th. of this Inſtant June, We, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons in Common-Council aſſembled, have ſeriouſly peruſed, and preſented a Copy thereof to each Houſe of Parliament; and for your and our farther Satisfaction, We have ſent a Committee of Aldermen and Commons, with this our Anſwer thereunto; and to prevent all miſunderſtanding between that ſo well-deſerving Army and this City. We take notice by that Letter, of your drawing near this City with your Army, for the obtaining your Deſires as Soldiers, and as Engliſhmen; and of what you do, and do not intend thereby; more eſpecially, that you come not to do any Act to prejudice the being of Parliaments, or to the hurt of this, in order to the preſent Settlement of the Kingdom; and of your declaration, ‘That if we appear not againſt you in thoſe your juſt Deſires, to aſſiſt ‘thoſe that would embroil you and the Kingdom in a new War; that you intend ‘no evil towards the City, nor that you or your Soldiers ſhall give it the leaſt ‘Offence. But we deſire that in regard your Approaches may, contrary to your Intentions, be an occaſion to increaſe the Price of Victual, and to diſcontented Perſons to make ſome ill uſe thereof in raiſing of Tumults, That you will be pleaſed to take it into your further Conſideration, and in order to your own Reſolution concerning this City's ſafety, to forbear Quartering within Thirty Miles thereof, which we ſhall look upon as a ſpecial Evidence of the ſincerity of your Intentions expreſſed in your Letter. We cannot paſs by that Expreſſion of yours, to hazard your own Blood for our Preſervation; nor can we return you more real Thanks for it than this, to declare our Reſolutions, that the very thought of engaging this Kingdom in a new War we unanimouſly deteſt; and that we intend no evil to you, but only defend the Parliament and our ſelves againſt any unlawful Violence; for prevention whereof, leaſt it ſhould happen (though you never intended it) we have, by the direction of Parliament, and for our own ſafety, put our ſelves in a poſture of defence, but not with the leaſt Intention to do any prejudice to that Army, whom God hath made ſo eminent an Inſtrument of our Deliverance and Safety. And we do diſavow the raiſing of any Forces, or taking up of any Arms, in oppoſition to, or with intent to hinder the obtaining of your juſt Demands; yea, ſo far have we been, and ſhall be from that, that both before and ſince the receipt of your Letter, we have made our humble Addreſſes to the Parliament for the obtaining thereof, which we ſhall not fail to proſecute as occaſion ſhall preſent; only this requeſt we earneſtly make in the name of the City, that you will be careful when you deſcend into Particulars, to deſire no more than what ſhall be juſt and reaſonable, and in ſuch a way as may conſiſt with the Honour, Power, and Priviledge of Parliament, Liberty of the Subject, and the ſafety of the City and Kingdom; and we ſhall appeal to God, and to the preſent and future Generations to judge of your and our Performance, according to the ſeveral Engagements.

Die Sabbati, June 12. 1647. The Houſe being informed, That divers Aldermen, and Citizens of the City of London were at the Door, they were called in, and Mr. Alderman Fowke acquainted the Houſe, ‘That they were commanded by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons in Common-Council aſſembled, to preſent unto this Houſe their ſence, upon a matter of very great Importance; they having again conſidered of the General's Letter unto them, and have made an Anſwer to it, which they have thought fit to acquaint this Houſe with, and to deſire their approbation of ſending it to the Army.

The Aldermen and the Gentlemen of the City being withdrawn, the Letter was read.

That this Houſe doth approve of the Cities ſending this Letter to the Army in the way they propoſe.

The Anſwer of the Lord-Mayor, &c. to the General, &c. June 12. 1647.

The Aldermen and Citizens were again called in, and Mr. Speaker, by Command of the Houſe, acquainted them, That the Houſe had conſidered of their Deſires, and of the Letter preſented by them, and are very ſenſible of their good Affections to the Peace, and good of the Kingdom, and honour of the Parliament; for which he was commanded to give them Thanks.

Commune Concilium tenetum in Camera Guild-Hall, Civitatis London, duodecimo die Junii, 1647.

ACcording to an Order of this Court, made this Day, the Committee therein appointed, viz. Mr. Alderman Warner, Mr. Alderman Fowke, Mr. Alderman Gibbs, Mr. Alderman Viner, Chriſtopher Packe, Major, Chamberlain Thomas Noel, Colonel Thomas Player, Major Hitchcocke, Robert Lowther, Richard Waring, and Walter Pell, did preſent the draught of an Anſwer to the Letter received from His Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax, and other Commanders of the Army, which was here openly read, and after Debate upon every particular Clauſe therein, the ſame was approved of by this Court. And thereupon it is ordered, That the ſaid Committee ſhall make their Addreſſes forthwith to both Houſes of Parliament, and acquaint them with the Common Councils Intention to ſend the ſaid Anſwer unto the ſaid Army, by the ſaid Committee, thereby to prevent all miſunderſtanding and further effuſion of Blood; and that they will vouchſafe to take into their ſpeedy and ſerious Conſideration the juſt deſires of the Army, and give ſuch fit Remedies thereunto, as in their Wiſdoms ſhall be thought fit. And this Court doth hereby give Power and Authority to the ſaid Committee to repair with all Expedition unto the Army, and preſent the ſaid Anſwer unto His Excellency, and to give and receive ſuch further ſatisfaction concerning the Matter contained in the ſaid Anſwer, as occaſion ſhall require, and to preſent the deſire of this Court, that His Excellency, and other the Commanders of the ſaid Army, will have a ſpecial care for the preſervation of His Majeſty's Royal Perſon, whilſt he remaineth with them.

The Parliaments Information of the Armies advance.

The Houſe of Commons this Day read a Letter from their Commiſſioners in the Army, giving them an Account of their Proceedings, and the Armies advance near London, and ſent likewiſe incloſed Copies of the Three Petitions from Eſſex, &c. which is at large in June five and ſix; the Suffolk and the Norfolk being the twelfth, will be here at large: All preſented to the General not to disband the Army, till the general Grievances be redreſt; which Petitions were read in the Houſe, and laid aſide. The Norfolk Petition is as follows, viz.

To His Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax, Knight, Captain General of the Parliament Forces.

The humble Petition of the peaceable and well-affected Inhabitants of the Counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, together with the City and County of Norwich, earneſtly endeavouring after the Proſperity of the Parliament, and the Peace of the Kingdom.

Sheweth,

June 12.

THat whereas your Excellency has been appointed Commander in Chief over theſe free Commons of England, that have been invited by the Parliament to ſtand up in defence of themſelves and Fellow-Subjects in time of imminent danger, againſt all Arbitrary Government, Tyranny, and Oppreſſion; and that the Parliament has, by divers Declarations, Remonſtrances, and Proteſtations, engaged themſelves both to God and the Kingdom, to endeavour to the utmoſt to maintain the ancient Government of this Kingdom, and to preſerve the Rights and Liberties of the Subjects, and to lay hold on the firſt opportunity of procuring a ſafe and well-grounded Peace; notwithſtanding all which, there is now an appearance of a moſt horrid deſign to ruine the native Liberties of the Subject, whereby Diſcontents are fomented in the Hearts of the People, and the Kingdom like to be divided into Factions, to the imminent danger of embroiling us yet again in Blood: And from the Policy of the Complotters of this deſign, we humbly conceive have already proceeded thoſe ſad Obſtructions of our free Addreſſes to the Parliament, in repreſenting our Grievances, and making humble Offers to their Wiſdom of juſt Remedies, which have impoſed this neceſſity upon us, humbly to implore

Your Excellency's Aſſiſtance to mediate with the Parliament in the behalf of us, and all the free Commons of England, for the ſpeedy and peaceable eſtabliſhment of thoſe our Native Liberties, which have now coſt the Kingdom ſuch vaſt Expence of Blood and Treaſure; That all Obſtructions that lay in the way to hinder the Addreſſes of the free Subjects of England to the Parliament, in repreſenting their Grievances, Fears, Doubts, and Jealouſies; as alſo offers of Remedy might be ſo ſpeedily removed, as that a firm Peace and Union might be yet again enjoyed in our diſtracted Kingdom, according to the Intentions of the Parliament frequently declared, Engagements of the Army, and the ardent Expectations of all the well affected in the Kingdom.

And your Petitioners ſhall ever pray, &c.

This Petition was preſented to His Excellency at St. Albans, the 12*th* of June preſent, with the Subſcription of Fourteen hundred of the Inhabitants.

Theſe Petitions aforenamed were read in the Houſe, and laid aſide.

Intimation of a deſign to ſecure Newcaſtle againſt the Parliament.

A Letter from Newcaſtle, Signed Jo. Coſans, directed to Alderman Adams, and from him delivered to a Member of the Houſe of Commons, was this Day preſented to the Houſe and read, intimating, ſome deſign of a Party in the Town to ſecure that Town againſt the preſent Government. The Houſe, upon Debate hereof, ordered to refer the Letter to a Committee of Safety; and that a Copy of this Letter ſhould be ſent to Field-Marſhal Skippon, now with the Army.

More Commiſſioners to go to the Army.

The Houſe further ordered, that Mr. Scowen and Mr. Povey, Commiſſioners for the Army, ſhould ſpeedily repair down to the Army. And in reſpect the deſires of the Army are not yet known particularly, or what they intend to inſiſt upon, the Houſe upon ſerious debate hereof have ordered to ſend down more Commiſſioners to them, and to enlarge their Inſtructions; and to that purpoſe they nominated Sir Thomas Widrington, and Colonel White to be Commiſſioners to go down to the Army.

To know particularly their deſires.

And an additional Inſtruction paſſed the Houſe, that the Commiſſioners in the Army ſhould uſe all the beſt ways and means they can to know of the Army, what their particular Deſires are, and what will give them ſatisfaction; and this Additional Inſtruction was ſent to the Lords, and they concurred therein.

An Order was made for fifty Barrels of Powder to be ſent to Plimouth, and fifty Barrels more to Pendennis.

Anſwer to the Army not advancing, to have a Months Pay.

Letters were this Day brought to the Houſe from the General, Sir Thomas Fairfax, one to the Lords, and another to the Commons, giving them to underſtand, that he had this Day received the Letters from both Houſes, concerning not advancing with his Army within forty Miles of London, but that the Army was advanced near St. Alban's before the receipt of that Letter, and doubted not but to give a good account of the reaſons of their advance thither, and deſired a Months Pay might be ſent down to pay the Army, that they might not be burthenſome to the Country, or take Free-Quarter, but there was nothing upon this Letter then done.

The Houſe ſate very late this Night, and had preſented them a Copy of the Letter to be ſent from the City to the General, and Officers of the Army, which they approved of and ſent to the Lords for their Concurrence; and after this Adjourned, and ordered to ſit to Morrow after Evening Sermon.

Lord's-Day, June 13. 1647. Sir Thomas Widdrington and Colonel White, according to the Order of the Houſe, went from London by Three this Morning towards the General at St. Alban's.

The Houſe ſate after Sermon.

After Evening Sermon both Houſes ſate a while (as was before ordered) and they received a Letter from the Commiſſioners at St. Alban's, giving to underſtand, That Sir Thomas Widdrington, and Colonel White were come thither, and had acquainted the General and Officers with the additional Inſtructions, and that they would give a further account hereof to the Houſes with all ſpeed.

Some of the Militia and Common-Council of London came down to the Houſe alſo this Evening for their Approbation to the Letter to be ſent to the Army, but the Houſe of Peers having adjourned a little before they came, the buſineſs was put off till to Morrow.

A Months Pay for the Army.

The Army, we underſtand, renew their Deſire for a Months Pay, that they may not be burthenſome to the Country, and that they will comply with the Votes of the Houſe, not to draw their Quarters nearer London, than twenty Miles, without firſt giving notice to the Parliaments Commiſſioners thereof.

The King for certain (whatever other Reports are) is ſtill at Newmarket.

A Declaration in Vindication of the Parliament.

Monday, June 14. 1647. The Lords ſent a Meſſage to the Commons, deſiring that a Declaration might be drawn up to the Kingdom what the Houſes hath done, and what they will do for the further eaſe of the Subjects of this Nation; what ſatisfaction they intend to give the Soldiery of the Kingdom; and what courſe they intend for the ſettling the Peace of the Kingdom.

Their Lordſhips having appointed a Committee for this purpoſe, deſired a proportionable Number of the Houſe of Commons to join with them therein, which was aſſented unto.

In what Place it was fit to have the King.

Another Meſſage this Day came from the Lords, deſiring that it may be referred to this Committee to draw the forenamed Declaration, to conſider what place is fit and convenient to have the Perſon of the King to be brought unto, that ſo they may have the joint compliance of both Kingdoms, for the ſettling of a ſafe and well-grounded Peace.

The Houſe had much Debate thereof, and after a long diſpute, it was ordered, that the Houſe would ſend anſwer by their own Meſſengers.

A Petition of many peaceable Officers.

A Meſſage this Day came from the Lords, recommending the Petition of many peaceable Officers, which Petition was read, and much debate had thereupon; and it was ordered a Declaration ſhould be drawn up to the Kingdom, what ſatisfaction they have given to the Soldiers, and what further ſatisfaction they intend to give them. And that hereafter none ſhould preſume, upon pain of Death to meet in ſuch a tumultuous way as they have done.

Not to meet in a tumultuous way.

A Committee was appointed on purpoſe to draw up this Declaration.

The Houſe hereupon appointed ſeveral Members of the Houſe to acquaint the Petitioners with the ſence of the Houſe upon this Petition, and what diſlike the Houſe hath of the manner of their aſſembling.

A Guard alſo for Weſtminſter.

Hereupon it was ordered, that the Militia of the City ſhould be deſired to ſend a conſiderable Guard to the Houſe.

That Captain Falconbridge, and Captain White ſhould be required to bring the Trained-Bands of Weſtminſter for the Guard of the Houſe.

City Commiſſ-

This Morning early the Commiſſioners from the Council of the City of London, ſet out with three Coaches and their Attendants on Horſeback towards St. Alban's, with the Anſwer to his Excellency's and the Officers Letters.

Declaration of Vindication.

The Houſe of Peers ſent a Meſſage to the Commons for a Committee of both Houſes, to conſider of a Declaration to be publiſhed to the Kingdom what the Army hath demanded, what is offered, &c. to which the Commons concurred, ten Lords and twenty Commoners are of the Committee.

Propoſitions.

The Lords cauſed the Propoſitions to be read in their Houſe, and ſent a Meſſage by two Judges to put the Commons in mind of the former Meſſage concerning the King. The Houſe ordered to ſend Anſwer by Meſſengers of their own.

Weſtminſter-Hall and the Palace full of Officers and Soldiers.

The Commons heard the Reports of the Conference with the Scots Commiſſioners concerning the King, and then being acquainted that there were divers of the Parliaments old Officers and Soldiers in the Hall and Palace, ordered to ſend to deſire them to withdraw.

That the Forces of Kilketto are returned to Ulſter.

Letters from Dublin, June 9. preſent, give to underſtand, All or moſt of that Force late in Scotland with Kilketto, are for certain Landed in Ulſter: They came in fifteen Veſſels, which they run upon the Sands near Candrum, in the Iſle of Lecall, and marched away uninterrupted towards Charlemont, two Boys only were left in the Barque, who ſay they were 800 in Number. Some Letters ſpeak, that when the Party was defeated, which occaſioned the flight of the reſt; there were 400 Foot taken, where the greateſt part were hanged, which terrified much the reſt.

The Commiſſioners from Parliament, and Forces, landed at Dublin.

The Commiſſioners Landed at Dublin, Munday the 7th. after four Days plying at Sea; with them, Colonel Jones, Captain Meredith, Captain Parſons, making in all 450 Horſe, but all in good Equipage; likewiſe Colonel Kingſton's Regiment of Foot, upwards of 700, which with Captain Row, and Captain Ward's Company, Colonel Moor's, and Colonel Auſtin's Recruits made the Foot upwards of 1000; all were joyfully received by Thouſands. The buſineſs is followed cloſe by the Commiſſioners; firſt with the Marqueſs, which is near ended, the punctilio ſtood upon may ſuſpend, not alter any thing. Some of the late-come Soldiers have been unruly in diſordering ſome Maſs-Houſes, going in triumphant Proceſſion with the Copes and other Trinkets, which much diſcontented the Papiſts, cauſed many of their Clergy to depart with Bag and Baggage: To avoid this it was moved, that the Soldiers might be drawn to a Rendezvous to Exerciſe, but that was foreſeen; The Field Officers being ſent among them they were quiet.

Sir Charles Coote's Succeſs.

The Defeat given by Sir Charles Coote is confirmed, the number ſlain was not ſo many as was expreſſed, but the Booty greater; yet all agree 600 were ſlain.

Want of Proviſion, &c.

The Parliaments Soldiers in Lecal, are in great want of all things, eſpecially Shoes, Stockings, and Boots, which are not here to be got for Money.

Lord Taffe and Lord Digby to break the Independant Army.

The Lord Digby plays leaſt in ſight, alſo the Lord Taffe, their great expectation lies wholly in breaking of the Independant Army (as they call it.)

It appears by Letters intercepted, and after printed by the Iriſh, the Parliament of Dublin, the Lords Spiritual as well as Temporal, with the Commons, have firſt decreed, and have beſtowed a Viſit Congratulatory upon the Commiſſioners, to welcome their good Arrival.

Lord Inchiqueen's Succeſs.

Letters from Admiral Crowther, now in Waterford-Bay, dated the 7th. paſt, gives us notable Service done by my Lord Inchiqueen: The manner thus: ‘The Lord Preſident being deſirous to take all Advantages upon the Rebels, ſent a Party about 500 to fall in between ſome Cattle belonging to Waterford, which in the Day time went abroad, at Night were brought into a Peninſula for ſafety, which ſucceeded accordingly; they of Waterford ſally out, and are beaten, near 103 Slain and Wounded, many Priſoners taken, 3000 Head of Cattle, 2000 Sheep. They of Waterford have ſo ſmarted by this, that they have made an Act of Common-Council not to Sally out any more. This Sea-Town hath no natural Iriſh in it, nor would admit any during theſe Troubles. The Preſident ſince took a Town and Caſtle called Killin Thomas, within three Miles of Waterford.

The Perſon of the King to be brought to Richmond.

This Day, being June 15. 1647. The Houſe of Commons reaſſumed the Debate of the further diſpoſal of the King's Perſon, and ſome Votes paſt for his removal to Richmond; to which likewiſe the Lords concurred; and theſe enſuing Orders were agreed upon by both Houſes, viz.

June 15.

Die Martis, 15. Junii, 1647.

ORdered by the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, That the General be required to deliver the Perſon of the King to ſuch Perſons as both Houſes ſhall appoint, to be placed at Richmond, under ſuch Guards, and in ſuch manner as they ſhall think fit, to the intent, that the Propoſitions agreed upon by both Kingdoms may be ſpeedily preſented to His Majeſty, for the ſettling of a ſafe and well-grounded Peace.

Ordered by the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, That the Perſons to whom the General is required to deliver the Perſon of the King, to be placed at Richmond, ſhall be the Commiſſioners formerly appointed to receive the Perſon of the King at Newcaſtle, or to any three of them.

Ordered by the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament, That the Guards appointed to receive the Orders and Directions of the Commiſſioners, in attending and guarding the Perſon of the King, ſhall be Colonel Roſſiter and his Regiment.

Ordered by the Lords aſſembled in Parliament, That theſe Orders be forthwith printed and publiſhed.

John Brown, Cler. Parl.

Colonel Birch.

The Accounts of Colonel Birch, a Member of this Houſe, was this Day reported to the Houſe, and approved of, and ordered he ſhould have the Publick Faith for Four Thouſand Nine Hundred and odd Pounds, in ſatisfaction of his Demand upon this Account.

The Houſe ordered, That the Officers that have not their Accounts ſtated, and are in Town, ſhall have a Months Pay of their Arrears for their Subſiſtance.

Soldiers Accounts.

That thoſe in Town, whoſe Accounts are ſtated, ſhall have ſix Weeks preſent Subſiſtance.

Loco & tempore Belli. Immunity.

It was referred to the Committee of Indemnity to conſider of ſuch Officers as are under reſtraint for any thing done Tempore & Loco Belli, to diſcharge them if they ſee cauſe, and to diſcharge ſuch others that ſhall be Arreſted or Impriſoned for the future.

Colonel Graves Forces were ordered this Day a Months Pay.

Soldiers diſſatisfaction.

This Day Letters were read in both Houſes from the Commiſſioners with the Army, thereby giving to underſtand, That the Votes concerning thoſe that would come away from the Army, did much diſtaſte the Soldiery, and that there would be ſudden Anſwer given by the General and Army to what was contained in their additional Inſtructions, whereof he would give the Houſe timely notice.

City will raiſe no Forces againſt the Army, but pray they may withdraw.

And accordingly the Commons received a Letter from the Commiſſioners late at Night, with a Declaration encloſed. The Common-Council had alſo another brought by their Commiſſioners, much Love expreſt, a good Correſpondency deſired, no Forces to be raiſed by the City; and a Copy of the Declaration, which was read in the Court of Common-Council; and a Letter was ordered to be returned by the ſame Commiſſioners, with leave from the Houſes to aſſure them of no Forces raiſing againſt them; and that they move the Parliament for Moneys to pay the Army, that they may withdraw further from the City. The Declaration is at large as follows, viz.

An. 1647.

June 14.
This Declaration, &c. treats concerning the juſt and fundamental Rights and Liberties of themſelves and the Kingdom, with ſome humble Propoſals, viz. That the Houſe may be purged from Delinquents, &c.

The Armies Declaration at large.

A Declaration, or Repreſentation from His Excellency Sir Thomas Fairfax, and of the Army under his Command.

Humbly tendred to the Parliament.

THat we may no longer be the diſſatisfaction of our Friends, the ſubject of our Enemies Malice, (to work Jealouſies and Miſrepreſentations upon) and the ſuſpicion (if not the aſtoniſhment) of many in the Kingdom, in our late or preſent Tranſactions and Conduct of buſineſs, we ſhall in all faithfulneſs and clearneſs profeſs and declare unto you, thoſe things which have of late protracted and hindred our disbanding, the preſent Greivances which poſſeſs our Army, and are yet unremedied, with our Deſires as to the compleat ſettlement of the Liberties and Peace of the Kingdom, which is that Bleſſing of God, than which (of all worldly things) nothing is more dear unto us, or more precious in our Thoughts, we having hitherto thought all our preſent Enjoyments, whether of Life, or Livelihood, or neareſt Relation, a Price but ſufficient to the purchaſe of ſo rich a Bleſſing, that we, and all the free-born People of this Nation may ſit down in quiet under our Vines, under the glorious adminiſtration of Juſtice and Righteouſneſs, and in the full poſſeſſion of thoſe Fundamental Rights and Liberties, without which we can have little hopes (as to humane Conſiderations) to enjoy either any Comforts of Life, or ſo much as Life it ſelf, but at the pleaſures of ſome Men ruling meerly according to Will and Power.

It cannot be unknown what hath paſſed betwixt the Parliament and the Army, as to the Service of Ireland. By all which together, with the late Proceedings againſt the Army, in relation to their Petition and Grievances, all Men may judge what hath hindered the Army from a ready engagement in that Service, and, without further Account or Apology, as to that particular, than what Paſſages and Proceedings themſelves, already made publick do afford. We do appeal to your ſelves, whether thoſe Courſes, to which the Parliament hath (by the Deſigns and Practices of ſome) been drawn, have rationally tended to induce a chearful and unanimous undertaking of the Army to that Service, or rather to break or pull the Army in pieces with Diſcontent and Diſhonour, and to put ſuch Diſobligations and Provocations upon it as might drive it into Diſtemper; and indeed diſcourage both this Army and other Soldiers from any further engagement in the Parliaments Service. And we wiſh all Men would, with us, upon the whole Carriage, ſeriouſly conſider, whether (in the Intentions of thoſe who have by falſe Informations and Miſrepreſentations, put the Parliament upon ſuch ways) the timely and effectual relief of Ireland, ſeem really to have been intended, or rather, with the breaking or disbanding of this Army, to draw together, or raiſe ſuch other Forces, and of ſuch a Temper, as might ſerve to ſome deſperate and deſtructive Deſigns in England. For which, beſides the probable ſuſpicions from their carriage of the buſineſs, we have before-hand, in the tranſaction thereof, had more than hints of ſuch a deſign, by clear Expreſſions to that purpoſe, from many of the Officers of the Army, that have been perſwaded, and appeared moſt forward to engage as for Ireland, on the Terms propoſed. And that ſuch a deſign hath all along been driven, ſeems now too evident, by the preſent diſpoſing of thoſe Forces that have been engaged for Ireland, by the endeavours of ſome to gain a Power from the Parliament, of ordering thoſe Forces for ſome Service in England: And by the private Liſtings of Men for Service there, without any publick Authority of Parliament. And all this, by the ſame Perſons who have all along appeared moſt active and violent in the late proceedings againſt the Army.
